There is about to be constructed between Manchester and Liverpool, says The London Sphere, an electric express mono-rail track which will be the pioneer high-speed railway in the world. When the bill was brought before Parliament cautious persons prophesied failure, but after the committee had heard evidence of prominent engineers, who expressed their opinion that travel at 110 times an hour was quite possible and safe on the mono-rails, Parliament authorized the construction of the line, which will probably be the forerunner of a host of subsequent mono-rails on which we shall travel at high speed in perfect comfort and with no reasonable chance of accident. The engineers are Mr. F. B. Behr and Mr. R. Elliott-Cooper, who propose to run single cars on the single-rail track at a speed of 110 miles an hour, the cars running every ten minutes. The length of the line will be about thirty-four and one-half miles, and the cars will take twenty minutes instead of the forty to forty-five minutes taken by the present fastest express trains run by three railway companies. The patentees of this high-speed mono-rail is Mr. F. B. Behr, who has devoted himself to this form of travel for many years past. Some little while ago, in connection with the Brussels exposition, Mr. Behr built an experimental mono-rail on which very high speeds were attained. The commissioners appointed to report on the line by various Governments expressed their opinion that speeds of 100 miles an hour and over would be quite feasible on such a track, that cars could run round sharp curves with no possibility of derailment, and that the passengers would feel no ill-effects from such rapid travel. The earlier mono-rails built by Mr. Behr were steam lines, and many of these exist in various parts of the world and give every satisfaction. Mr. Behr's idea in building the Manchester and Liverpool mono-rail is to convince the railway companies of the advisability of laying down special mono-rail tracks solely for the express passenger traffic, thus leaving the present ground tracks for slow passenger and goods traffic. Engineers are agreed that average speeds of over seventy miles an hour are impossible on the curves found on existing railways. The construction of a special mono-rail track would enable very high speeds to be reached with perfect safety, and would do away with that "mixture of speeds" which renders the problem of dealing with express, slow and goods traffic one of ever-increasing difficulty to the railway companies. The mono-rail tracks would be laid alongside the existing two-rail ground tracks, or the cars could be run overhead if so desired. The mono-rail electric cars, which are expected to move at the rate of 100 miles an hour, will be slung very low down on the trestle rail, the propulsion being obtained on the top rail by upright wheels. Side rails will be employed to steady the car and render derailment impossible. The line of route from Manchester to Liverpool will run through part of Eccles, Warrington and Garston, but it is not intended to have stations at these points. There will be two lines of rail—an up and a down line—on which express cars will run.

Tristan d'Acunha.

A Blue Book has just been issued, containing "Further correspondence relating to the Island of Tristan d'Acunha." The present publication completes the series formerly brought down to February, 1897. It contains a number of notes and reports on the island, compiled by the captains of passing vessels, the latest of which, by Lieutenant Watts-Jones, commanding H.M.S. Thrush, bears date January, 1903. The question of removing the community from Tristan d'Acunha to Cape Colony, and of abandoning the island, has been under the consideration of the Colonial Office for some time. From some points of view the existence of a population in this lone spot has its advantages, as wrecks are not infrequent, and the islanders invariably render every aid in their power to shipwrecked sailors. But, on the other hand, the responsibility of safeguarding the future of the people is considerable, and it may not always be possible in future to tell off a man-of-war for the purpose of visiting the island annually. The subject of removal was broached to the people themselves, and the great majority expressed their willingness to go, only one man and two elderly women demurring. The islanders stipulated, however, that they should receive compensation for their cattle and sheep—a matter of a few hundreds of pounds altogether. The island, indeed, seems to be quite an Arcadia, and as there is no cable and no postoffice it might easily be regarded as an ideal holiday resort.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Lost chances never leave any trail.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Much talk, many lies.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These comes from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickason, farmer, Dutton, writes; "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

All trails are long to the lazy.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Joaquin Miller on "Race Suicide."

President Roosevelt in swaddling clothes, suspended by ribbons from the bill of a stork, furnishes the illustration for the cover of a new poem, in ten cantos by Joaquin Miller, entitled "As It Was in the Beginning." In the "prefatory postscript" the poet writes:

"When, like a sentinel on his watchtower, the President, with his divine audacity and San Juan valor, voiced the real heart of the Americans against 'race suicide,' I hastened to do my part in my own way, ill or well, in holding up his hands on the firing line. . . . I venture this new book with confidence, not only because it is right, proper, clean, courageous, but now seems opportune. 'Let the galled jade wince!' I give no quarter and ask none, except pardon for errors incident to great haste. I cry aloud from my mountain top, as a seer, and say: The cherry-blossom bird of Nippon must be more with us, else another century and prolific Canada, like another Germany from the North, may descend upon us and take back train loads of tribute. We are coming to be too entirely Frenchish."

That the poem is truly Rooseveltian in its strenuousness may be gleaned from these stirring stanzas of canto IX.:

God's pity for the breasts that bear
A little babe, then banish it
To stranger hands, to alien care,
To live or die as chance sees fit.
Poor, helpless hands reached anywhere,
As God gave them to reach and reach,
With only helplessness in each!
Poor little hands, pushed here, pushed there,
And all night long for mother's breast.
Poor, restless hands that will not rest
And gather strength to reach out strong
To mother in the rosy morn!
Nay, nay, they gather scorn for scorn
And hate for hate the lorn night long—
Poor dying babe! to reach about
In blackness, as a thing cast out!

God's pity for the thing of lust
That bears a frail babe to be thrust
Forth from her arms to alien thrall,
As shutting out the light of day,
As shutting off God's very breath!
But thrice God's pity, let us pray,
For her who bears no babe at all,
But gayly leads up Fashion's Hall
And grinning leads the dance of death.
That sexless, steel-braced breast of bone
Is like to some assassin cell,
A whited sepulchre of stone,
A graveyard at the gates of hell,
A mart where motherhood is sold,
A house of murders manifold!

A few stanzas further on the poet says:

And oh, for prophet's tongue or pen
To scourge, not only, and accuse
The childless mother, but such men
As know their wives but to abuse!
Give me the brave, child-loving Jew,
The full-sexed Jew of either sex,
Who loves, brings forth and nothing recks
Of care or cost, as Christians do—
Dulled souls who will not hear or see
How Christ once raised his lowly head
And, as rebuking, gently said,
The while He took them tenderly,
"Let little children come to me." . . . .

Hear me this prophecy and heed
Except we cleanse us kirk or creed,
Except we wash us word and deed
The Jew shall rule us, reign the Jew.
And just because the Jew is true,
Is true to nature, true to truth;
Is clean, is chaste, as trustful Ruth
Who bore us David, Solomon—
The Babe, that far, first Christmas dawn.

Q.—And you are satisfied they would not do anything wrong? A. No, I know them and I know their signatures.

Q.—Let us see how some of them get their work in. You knew the enumerators, and you knew they were all honorable men, of course, or you would not have appointed them? A.—Well, I appointed those I thought were suitable to do the work.

Q.—You felt so satisfied that you were prepared to put your name to the affidavit, being satisfied that it was true because their names were there; as a matter of fact, is not that the truth? A.—I suppose what I did think was that what I had to have was to get their signatures.

Q.—You were down in Deseronto, I see by the account, to instruct the enumerators?? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you in Deseronto men you did not instruct, because you wrote the Department. I have your letter of the 18th July? A.—I instructed them all in Deseronto, but I know some came to Belleville when I was instructing the Thurlow enumerators.

Q.—You gave two days apiece in Deseronto? A.—Yes.

Q.—And they could not take in all you told them there and had to go to Belleville? A.—Some of them came up to Belleville to get further instruction while we were instructing the Thurlow enumerators.

Q.—How many enumerators had you in Deseronto? A.—Seven, I think.

Q.—How many of these had brains enough to take in the instructions in two days and how many were so stupid that they had to have an additional day in Belleville? A.—Some of them stayed. The men in Deseronto work in factories, work in important works, and could not get all off at the same time that I advertised I would be there. They came in and stayed a while and then came to Belleville. Q.—Then the reason they had to come to Belleville was that they would not come to you, they were attending their own business and would not come to you? A.—That is not altogether correct.

Q.—Explain, then, why it was that the enumerators could not all learn their lesson in two days? A.—They could not be there all the time from the position they occupied.

Q.—Oh, the enumerators in Deseronto had other business to attend to? Do I understand you to say when you went to Deseronto and gave two days to these enumerators some of them were so busy they could only stay an hour or two? A.—Yes.

Q.—And therefore had to go up to Belleville? A.—Two, I think, did.

Q.—The Deseronto enumerators were such busy men they could not attend to the instructions for two days, and therefore came up to Belleville to get further instructions, is that correct? A.—Yes.

Q.—If you look up the accounts of the Deseronto enumerators you will find some of them charged three days and expenses during the time they were receiving instructions, although they all live in Deseronto? A.—Coming to Belleville?

Q.—No, but every one of them charged. You have a copy of the account there. A.—Yes, I have.

Q.—Well, take one of them there, take Maloney. He charges for two days receiving instructions, one dollar for returning and revising books and for expenses during instruction, stationery, etc., three dollars. Now what expenses would this man have during his two days' instructions? It is not a charge coming to Belleville; what expense would he have; he was living at home in Deseronto? A.—I think he paid some postage and perhaps freightage on books or something.

Q.—But he does not ask for that; this is for "expenses for instruction, stationery, etc., $3.00." Now what expenses can a man have in Deseronto, during his instruction, for which he was paid $3.00 a day? A.—Well, the men made up their accounts.

Q.—I did not ask you that; what expenses could they have? A.—I took the amount of work that they had to do in each place and I know some of them spoke to me about—

Q.—I know that is what you did, but tell what expenses had they? A.—I do not know what it was unless some of them spoke to me about having to employ an interpreter, some French—

Q.—Didn't you speak plain enough English; they did not want an interpreter to understand you? A.—When they pressed for their accounts I took and made it up on the forms that were furnished and done the best I could with them to satisfy them—

Q.—I think you did; I do not think there is an item you could put in that you did not. A.—What I thought would make it all right for them.

Q.—Come back to the question; what expenses could these enumerators have in Deseronto? A.—I do not remember what were their expenses. I put it under that head.

Q.—Did you draw up these bills? A.—I conferred with them.

TORTURING DISFIGURING

Skin, Scalp and Blood Humours

From Pimples to Scrofula From Infancy to Age

Speedily Cured by Cuticura When All Else Fails.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in Eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in acne and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. This complete local and constitutional treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning and scaly humours of the skin, scalp and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent and economical cure when all else fails.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.

The Iron Pillar at Delhi.

The famous iron pillar of Delhi is dealt with in Cassier's Magazine. The pillar is a solid shaft of wrought iron, 16 inches in diameter, and of a length that is variously reported. The total length is from 48 to 60 feet underground and above, including a capital of 3½ feet. The pillar contains about 80 cubic feet of metal, and weighs about seventeen tons. The metal is, of course, charcoal iron, made directly from ore in small billets, but how it was welded up no one can tell, as no record exists of any early method of dealing with great masses of wrought iron. An inscription roughly cut or punched upon the column states that Rajah Dhara subdued a people in the Surdhu, named Vahlikos, and obtained with his own arm an undivided sovereignty on the earth for a long period. The date of the inscription has been referred to the third or fourth century after Christ, but on this authorities are at variance.

Why There are No Blue Roses.

A knowledge of one simple law in nature may save the flower-grower days and weeks of hard and unavailing labor in attempting to produce that famous chimera of the botanists—the blue rose. The law is simply this: The three colors, red, blue, and yellow never all appear in the same species of flowers; any two may exist, but never the third. Thus we have red and yellow roses, but no blue; red and blue verbenas, but no yellow; yellow and blue in the various members of the violent family, but no red. Other examples of this rigid law could be cited, but the above are sufficient. The botanist or floriculturist who really understands his business never attempts to produce a blue rose of a red violet.—St. Louis Republic.

A Holiday in Bed.

Two hospital nurses adopted a novel method of spending their two weeks vacation. They hired a cottage in the country, and an old woman to attend them. From the moment they entered the door until the time for departure came they were never seen, and the village people naturally concluded that there was some mystery connected with them. Some even thought of consulting the police on the subject. On their way to the city they called on a clergyman to give him a trifle for his charities, and explained the secret. They were nurses, and had spent their whole time in bed. Accustomed to sleep in such snatches as they could get, their notion of a holiday was a period of long and undisturbed repose.

A Feat in Photography.

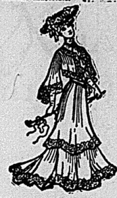
Photography has had many triumphs. One of the latest is associated with the name of Professor Macey, famous for his feats in instantaneous work. He has just succeeded in photographing a dragon-fly on the wing—an operation which necessitated an exposure of only one twenty-five thousandth of a second. The photographic part of the performance is wonderful enough, and surely some credit should be awarded to the man capable of accurately dividing a second into twenty-five thousand parts. Certainly a man who can compute the twenty-five-thousandth part of a second can compute anything.—Photogram.

Bank Notes for Fuel.

A novel spectacle of a steamer's furnaces being fed with bank notes, says an exchange, was recently witnessed at a Mediterranean port. Forty-five sacks of the apparently valuable paper were tossed into the furnace, under the longing eyes of the stokers, who stood restively by with an evidently burning desire to possess themselves of at least a handful of that which they somewhat inelegantly styled "rum fuel." The notes were canceled notes of the Bank of Algiers, whose manager superintended the operation of their absolute combustion.

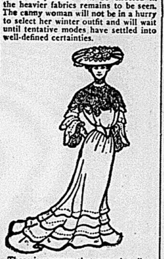
Fall Fashions.

Already gossip about fall fashions is in the air and wise heads are debating as to whether this summer mode will endure or whether that one will end with the warm weather. The indications, says The New York Sun, point to logical development in fashions. We have not yet exhausted the effects possible along the line to which we have given approval, and the chances are that the coming winter modes will be the prevailing summer ones translated into heavier materials.



The translation, however, will not be an easy one, for the shirrings, puffings, flouncings, ruchings, etc., so fascinating in sheer summer fabrics will not lend themselves to zibeline and cloth and velvet.

Of course, house frocks and evening frocks for winter will be in materials soft enough and sheer enough to adapt themselves to any handling, but just what compromise will be effected in the heavier fabrics remains to be seen. The canny woman will not be in a hurry to select her winter outfit and will wait until tentative modes have settled into well-defined certainties.

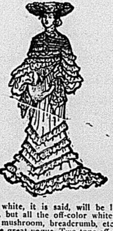


There is a rumor that severely tailored street frocks will forge to the front once more, though the dressy creation which French dressmakers call a tailor gown will still be needed for more formal wear. With this severe tailor frock, if prophecy is fulfilled, will come a reaction against the plaited walking street and the unlined skirt.

A many-gored skirt—having as many as seventeen gores and rippling in somewhat exaggerated fashion around the feet—will have a prominent place and will be lined and stiffened around the bottom. Of the coat to accompany this skirt little that is definite is told save that it will be severe in lines and finish, have the conventional tailor turn-over collar and mannish sleeves and vary in length to suit the wearer.

But, as has been said, all this is in the air as yet and may never materialize. More authentic is the information about colorings for the coming season, for the manufacturers have already out their sample cards and from them one can gather a few foundation facts.

Brown, particularly in the dark shades, but ranging all the way to lightest fawn, is prominent. Foliage greens and clear emerald shadings, blue, in the corn flower shadings, geranium and poppy reds, the reddish purples called fuchsia, dahlia, plum and aubergine (egg plant), the clear silvery greys—these are all in evidence in the samples, and among the more delicate shadings the pastel tints hold their own.



Pure white, it is said, will be less popular, but all the off-color whites—oyster, mushroom, breadcrumb, etc.—will have great vogue. Two-tone effects will be pushed in wool fabrics and French manufacturers threaten us with mixtures of bright colors, which they call cake walk mixtures.

Broadcloth is being largely ordered, and zibeline in countless varieties will be a feature of the season. Scotch plaids and the soft-lined, subdued French interpretations of tartan plaid will appear again.

In trimming nothing startlingly new is announced so far. New developments of the dangling ornaments, fringes, cut out appliques, embroideries of all sorts are promised, and lace will be much used, although it is confidently asserted that the day of the Cluny and antique craze is past.

Watching the Money Market.

The course of the British money market is being watched with anxious interest by those responsible for the finances of Australia, says The London Mail. Four of the States are in want of further loans so soon as there is a prospect of floating them on the London market. The neediest of all the borrowers is New South Wales, whose Government is accused of spending no less than £30,000,000 of borrowed money in a little over four years, and using loans, on the admission of the Minister of Public Works, to stave off a crisis. She wants £4,000,000. Victoria needs £1,100,000 immediately, and must shortly obtain a further £5,547,000 by hook or by crook to pay off an old loan which matures on January 1, 1904. Queensland wants £2,600,000, though she is now of all the Australian States the most heavily weighted with debt. Western Australia has placed at home a loan of £4,750,000, but the other Australian States are not likely to be able to follow her example, for, as a Victorian Minister recently remarked to a deputation; it was out of the question to think of borrowing £5,000,000 in Victoria. The last in the list is South Australia, who needs £500,000, which will ultimately have to be obtained from London. Recent analyses of the various Australian debts show that the dead-weight debt, making all deductions for productive works, is now as much per head as the national debt of England. Another unfavorable symptom is that the population of Victoria has actually declined in the year 1902. Until great economies are effected in the government and administration, and until the extravagant outlay on public works ceases, the prospects for the British investor cannot be considered roseate.

The British Book Market.

If the British book market is not as flourishing as it might be, says The London Graphic, English writers may draw some consolation from the fact, as shown by statistics in the current number of The Author, that they are selling a great many more books abroad than they did five years ago. The book exports of 1902 weighed over fifty thousand hundredweight more than those in the year before the war, and this additional quantity represented a money value of nearly three hundred thousand pounds. The books sent to the United States last year, worth in all £371,417, showed an increased value of nearly seventy thousand pounds over those in 1898—a significant development when it is remembered that the practice of copyrighting, and therefore of printing, English books in the United States is becoming more and more common, and that consequently export figures are far from indicating the full value of the American market. After our transatlantic cousins the next best foreign buyers — though longo intervallo—are Germany, France, and, remarkable to say, Japan. It is interesting to note that while our imports of books during the war naturally fell off considerably, the book exports to foreign countries and to the colonies went up during those years by leaps and bounds. It is also noteworthy that among the colonies Canada alone shows a decrease in the value of the books she imports from us—a circumstance attributed partly to the proximity of the United States, and partly to the enterprise of Canadian publishers in issuing editions of their own.

Aberdeen's New House.

The Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, who have been in London most of the season, are building a new house for themselves on their Aberdeenshire estates. It is in a different part of the country from their chief seat, Haddo, which gives the title to their eldest son, Lord Haddo. On one occasion Mr. Gladstone visited it, and it has, of course, associations with another Prime Minister, the fourth Lord Aberdeen. He was Premier about the time that Queen Victoria and Prince Albert first went to Balmoral. Lord Aberdeen has a second estate towards that beautiful quarter of Aberdeenshire, and he is replacing the old mansion on it with a new one. As it happens, a neighboring proprietor is Sir John Clark, whose father, Sir James Clark, the eminent physician, had a large voice in determining on Deeside for a Royal residence. The west coast of Scotland had been thought about, but Queen Victoria and Prince Albert accepted Sir James' view in favor of the Aberdeenshire Highlands as having a drier and more bracing climate.

Arnold and Pond.

When Matthew Arnold as a young man saw Hepworth Dixon's books in the shop windows, he could not help exclaiming with pride that he, too, was an author. Later in life when he was a celebrated author, meet for the American lecture market, he told Major Pond, in perhaps something of the same spirit of irony, that they were both public men. If Arnold was guilty of irony, Major Pond turned its edge by countering with the compliment that Arnold had celebrity, but himself only notoriety. Notorious has come to have a bad connotation, and in that bad sense, at all events, the epithet could not be applied to Major Pond's conduct of his queer business. Though it has to be confessed that he stood to literature somewhat in the relation that Barnum stood to less austere shows, it must likewise be admitted that he did the business courteously and considerately as well as successfully, and earned the regards of his clients. Nor was it a class of clients that was always easy to manage. For most self-respecting men of letters, in England at all events, probably share Carlyle's dislike of lecturing—that mixture, as he called it, of the prophet and the play-actor.—

Life is a mission; duty its highest law.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto.

A WELL KNOWN ALBANY MAN.

Recommends Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

About eighteen months ago Mr. W. S. Manning, of Albany, N. Y., widely known in trade circles as the representative of the Albany Chemical Co., was suffering from a protracted attack of Diarrhoea. "I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," he says, "and obtained relief. cheerfully recommend this medicine to those similarly afflicted." Sold by all druggists.

LITTLE ARTICLES OF DRESS.

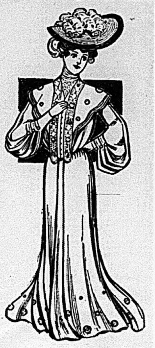
Elastic Belts, New Fans and Veils Seen in the Shops.

The neck ruffles, stoles, little capes or whatever one may chose to call them are very smart and are calculated to set off the lines of the figure. The foundation may be of any fluffy material, caught here and there with little bunches of ribbon, artificial flowers, etc.

The wide elastic belt is also a feature of the season, and it is especially designed for wear with the short sack coat effects so much in vogue. One of the newest is of gold and silver elastic worked in a Russian design and held in place by jeweled clasps and slides.

Veils are simpler in texture and less closely figured than formerly. Pale blue chiffon veils are much affected with plain sailor hats.

Washable gloves are worn by all smart women during the hot weather.



TAILOR MADE OF RED CHEVIOT.

The favorite glove, however, for those who have dainty hands is made of silk in black or white, with double finger tips and snug fitting wrists.

Pretty fans are being sold in the shops. They are made to resemble when open bunches of flowers or a huge single flower, and they are most effective when worn with a gown which they match.

The simple tailor made sailor shape is being revived and is just the thing for outdoor summer wear.

The tailor made in the cut is of deep red cheviot trimmed with ecru and black applications of velvet and lace.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Simple and Chic Hats Worn by Well Dressed Women.

In millinery the brownish ecru shades still hold their own.

one, and for those who may not wear it the French sailor is designed in different sizes and trimmings.

The smart hats nearly all tilt off the face, but are brought well to the front to throw a shadow into the eyes.

A chic way of trimming a French sailor is to encircle the crown with a wreath of small flowers held together with a ribbon bow.

Scarlet touches in a rather deep shade appear on much of the white millinery.

The ecru hat trimmed with a single ecru ostrich plume is very pretty worn with a pongee gown.

The sailor shape of white linen simply trimmed with folds of china silk or a white breast is always smart and becoming.

In the cut are shown the latest bolero and a smart hat of coarse yellow straw.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

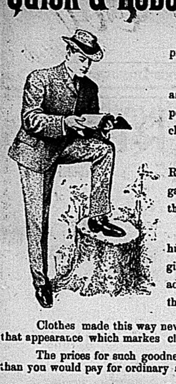
Quick & Robertson's for Fine Clothes



There's no use of disputing the fact that this store stands pre-eminent in this city as the store for Men's Fine Clothes.

With our large and pleasing varieties, up-to-date styles, and good making, we've won the trade of every man, and especially the trade of those men who are particular about the clothes they wear.

And why shouldn't we? You can't find a store that has, Ready-Made, such exclusive styles in suitings and summer garments as we are showing and everyone of them is from the best British and Canadian Mills.

Then, too, every garment is built to come up to the our high standard—built by the best makers who know how and do give close attention to important parts of tailoring—such as adjusting the collars, shaping the shoulders, proper placing of the sleeves and stays and making of the button holes.

Clothes made this way never lose their shape. And by so doing we have overcome that appearance which markes clothes as being Ready-Made.

The prices for such goodness you'd expect to be high but they are not—are no more than you would pay for ordinary sorts elsewhere.

STRATHCONA LOST CUP.

Irondequoit Won the Fifth and Deciding Race For the Canada's Cup Thursday, by 1 Minute, 22 Seconds.

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Irondequoit of Rochester won the fifth and deciding race yesterday over the triangular course in the lake, defeating the Royal Canadian Yacht Club's Strathcona by 1 min. 22 secs. There was a good wind from the south-southwest. The challenger gained 25 secs. at the start, and on the seven-mile beat to windward made another gain of 1 min. 13 secs. On the close to the second mark it was practically a toss-up, the challenger, according to official figures, losing 1 sec. The last leg was a close reach, and the enemy made another gain of 10 secs.

An enormous fleet followed the racers around the course, and at the finish the victors and vanquished were alike cheered to the echo. The crews of the rival yachts saluted each other with three times three soon after crossing the line. The members on the Niagara gave rousing cheers on passing the challenger and defender, Capt. Hannan returned the compliment by modestly doffing his cap.

Last night Commodore Jarvis said he had nothing to complain of. He enjoyed the match and was pleased at the apparent increased interest in the pastime. In conclusion Mr. Jarvis said:

"The best boat undoubtedly won. Yachts should be built capable for all breezes, and Irondequoit has clearly proven herself the best. Capt. Hannan is the best skipper I have ever sailed against."

The trophy was presented last night to Commodore Van Voorhies at the Island Clubhouse, and the historic mug will go aboard Irondequoit to-day, when she will sail home, calling at Niagara.

The R.C.Y.C. will likely challenge again for the cup in order to have the race sailed next year. The matter will be taken up at an early meeting of the Sailing Committee.

Vesuvius Causing Alarm.

Rome, Aug. 14.—Vesuvius is again causing intense alarm in the surrounding region, the eruptions of the volcano being very heavy yesterday. From a fresh opening at the base of the principal crater two streams of lava are issuing, which within a few hours covered a wide tract of ground. One stream is going swiftly towards the Village of Ottajano, the direction taken by the famous eruption of 1872. The whole district around the volcano is shaken by frequent earth shocks and a panic prevails.

30 DAYS' SUSPENSION FOR DRIVER GEROW.

Judges Were Not at All Satisfied With His Driving of Lady Hamburg.

Fine Attendance at Races Yesterday Afternoon—All Events Won in Straight Heats.

There was an excellent attendance at the races yesterday afternoon — much larger than on the first day. The Belleville Driving and Athletic Club should certainly be satisfied with their patronage. Some disappointment was caused by the absence of the band, which had been advertised to appear, but the management and the musicians, it seems, could not agree as to terms. Taking it all in all, yesterday's races were not so satisfactory as those of Wednesday; though be it understood that no blame can possibly be attached to the management for that. They had the events on the programme, and it was not their fault if all three of the races were won in straight heats, thus shortening up the afternoon's enjoyment as well as making things rather monotonous. But it was not the straight heats which bothered some of the spectators so much as the suspicion that some of the events were not run on the level. There surely appeared to be a large-sized nigger in the fence on a few occasion, and one old Picton gentleman in the stand was expressing his opinion, in vigorous language, of the driver of Lady Hamburg for not taking the pole sometimes when he had the chance. The driver in question, Gerow, was disciplined by the judges, but we are anticipating. The free-for-all seemed to be a fairly run race, but big Jim Wilson easily had the heels of his field. The running race was decidedly unsatisfactory. Demanton, in each heat, got the best of the start by a good two or three lengths, winning, in each instance, by something less than that. The starter may have done his best, but hundreds of people on the grounds were ready to swear that it was a very poor attempt at a fair start, and people who had bought Glesseg in the pools were putting up the biggest kind of a "roar." Anyone who saw the race must admit they had an exceedingly large-sized kick coming. It is a pity that these kind of things happen, for they don't help the racing game. It was an ideal afternoon, though a little too cool for fast time. The watches marked 2 o'clock exactly when Starter Smith rang his bell for the first event, the 2.30 trot, for which there were four entries, viz., Jubilee, b.g., M. J. Denniston, Coldwater; Lady Hamburg, b.m., Ashley Stock Farm; Lord Russell, jr., b.h., Geo. W. Bell, Kingston, and Symbol, b.g., T. H. B. Purdy.

First heat.—They got off to a fair start, and Lord Russell ran most of the way round the first time. Jubilee and Lady Hamburg trotted finely, the former especially showing nice form. For a while Lady Hamburg seemed to be in a pocket. Russell kept on breaking and eventually passed under the wire on the run, half a length ahead of Jubilee. The judges very properly gave the heat to Jubilee, putting Russell back to last place.

Second heat. -- Jubilee and Lady Hamburg made a splendid race for three-quarters of the distance, trotting side by side best part of the way. Then Lord Russell challenged, but the best he could get was third place, the three horses being nearly abreast at the wire.

Third heat.—It now looked like straight heats for Jubilee, and in the pools he was selling at 3 to 10. The start was a good one, Jubilee going away in front, and for half a mile Lady Hamburg kept right at his quarter. Coming up the stretch the first time the Coldwater horse seemed to be fagged and everyone expected to see Lady Hamburg pass him, but she didn't. Beginning the second turn the Lady was a clear length ahead, and people in the stand said, "Why don't Gerow take the pole?" Just at this time the old Picton gentleman, who had something on the Ashley Stock Farm mare, was using language which might easily have caused the grand stand to collapse. A quarter of a mile from home Jubilee came away, and won easily by ten yards. Lord Russell, with a fine burst of speed, beating Lady Hamburg for second place. There was a long conversation among the judges, who called Gerow, driver of Lady Hamburg into the stand. Everybody waited eagerly for the announcement. The starter said that on Wednesday the judges had not been satisfied with the way Gerow had driven Lady Hamburg, and had changed her driver. In the heat just ended Driver Gerow had not, in the opinion of the judges, driven the Lady to win, and they had suspended him for thirty days. People expected to hear that bets had been declared off on the race, but they were disappointed. Summary:

2.30 Class; purse $175.

Jubilee	1	1	1
Lady Hamburg	2	2	3
Lord Russell, jr.	4	3	2
Symbol	3	4	4

Time, 2.29 1-4, 2.30, 2.32.

The free-for-all had been eagerly looked forward to, and when people saw that Gipsy Girl, the grey Toronto mare, and Borealton, Mr. Allen's fine old Picton horse, were entered, they thought sure here would be a grand race. And they were not disappointed. Though Jim Wilson, the Guelph horse, won in straight heats he did not by any means have things all his own way. Old Borealton did not behave very well, this hurting his chances, while Sphinx B., the favorite, several times broke badly. The Toronto mare trotted beautifully, and in the third heat for three-quarters of the distance looked like a winner, but the game little grey, which was a favorite with the non-betting crowd, did not appear to have the goods when it came to the finish.

First heat—The start was a beautiful one. Jim Wilson had the pole and led the bunch. Sphinx B. broke badly and was a hundred yards behind before he got down to business again. Jim Wilson led all the way and when half the second circuit had been made old Borealton challenged. Inch by inch he went up and people thought he would pass the Guelph horse. Just as "Bory's" head reached Jim Wilson's shoulder the Picton horse went up in the air. That settled it, and Jim Wilson won the heat easily by ten yards under a pull.

Second heat—Borealton got the worst of the start and Jim Wilson seemed to open out a long lead before the other nags got into their stride. Then Gypsy Girl, trotting like a perfect picture, moved into second place and began to crawl up on the Guelph horse. It was a grand heat, the race being anybody's till the last quarter. In the stretch Jim Wilson pulled away from the grey, and old Borealton came with a rush and was within half a length of the winner at the wire, Gipsy Girl being a good third. This was the best heat of the day, and put the crowd on their tiptoes with excitement.

Third heat—Some Picton people, while not imputing anything crooked to the driver of Borealton, thought he was not well enough acquainted with the horse to do him justice, and asked the judges to put Mr. Ed. Harrington, of Picton, up behind the old chestnut for the next heat. The request was granted. But "Borry's" failure to win did not seem to be his first driver's fault, for in the last heat he was last, and a good way behind, at that. It was said that Mr. Allen's horse had not been worked enough this season to enable him to get out his best speed. They got a good start, and everybody was electrified to see Gipsy Girl take the lead from Jim Wilson right after the first turn. Then the old roan challenged her and they raced side by side. Then Jim Wilson moved up again, and, coming under the wire the first time, the three horses mentioned were abreast. On the back stretch Jim Wilson went away inch by inch and by the time the last turn was reached the race was practically over, the Guelph horse winning under a pull, with the grey mare lengths behind. Summary:

Free-for-all; Purse $250.

Jim Wilson	1	1	1
Borealton	2	2	4
Gipsy Girl	4	3	2
Sphinx B.	3	4	3

Time, 2.23 1-4, 2.22 3-4, 2.21 3-4.

For the running race there were four starters, namely, Demanton, ch.g., Thos. Hereman, Ogdensburg; Glesseg, bl.m., Alex. Murray, Hamilton; Rotha, b.m., P. S. Burrell, Toronto, and Logan Laudeman, b.s., C. Bolander, Goderich. The start was a miserable one, Demanton having the best of it by a long way, the rest being fairly well bunched. The horses finished in the same positions they started in, Glesseg fighting hard with Rotha for second place.

Second heat—The bad start was repeated in the second heat, Demanton again beating the flag by at least two or three lengths. Glesseg made a game fight but could not catch Demanton. It looked as though, with an even start, the Hamilton mare might have got first money. Summary:

Three-quarter mile Run, heats, 2 in 3; Purse $175.

Demanton	1	1
Glesseg	3	2
Rotha	2	4
Logan Laudeman	4	3

Time, 1.18 1-2, 1.18 1-4.

Notes of the Races.

It takes a horse race to catch a crowd.

The officials were the same as on Wednesday.

Borealton's first driver was named Powell, and he hails from Orillia.

There was not so much excitement yesterday as on Wednesday. The finishes were "tamer."

The members of the Belleville Driving Club have reason to be proud of the success of their meet. Whatever grounds there were for criticism could not be directed against the management, who certainly did their best to give everybody their money's worth.

Making a Mockery Of Law and Order.

A MATTER IN WHICH ALL RESPECTABLE PEOPLE SHOULD INTEREST THEMSELVES.

It will be remembered that, some time ago, The Intelligencer commented on the action of the License Commissioners of West Hastings in withdrawing the license from the City Hotel, Front street, a hostelry which has first-class accommodation, all, and more, than the law requires, while they, at the same time, granted licenses to places which had only a shadow of the accommodation required by law, one, in fact, having nothing but a "pull" and an unsavory reputation to recommend it.

The matter dropped at the time, as the City Hotel was given a permit to sell for the time being, with the understanding that the License Commissioners would "see what they could do" towards granting the hotel in question a license for the year.

Now, it seems, the City Hotel has been summarily shut off from selling liquor, and a few facts in connection with the system used by the License Commissioners of West Hastings may prove of interest to our readers.

It seems that, when the licenses were granted, the owner of the City Hotel was told by one of the Commissioners that it was admitted that a certain saloon had no right to a license, but, owing to a feeling of friendship or pity for the parties who kept it, the Commissioners could not find it in their tender hearts to take that license away. It was pointed out that, a short time ago, the City Hotel had had a large sum of money expended on it, the same being done at the suggestion of one of the License Commissioners, who had intimated at the time that there was not even a remote possibility of the license being revoked; also that the City Hotel was a law-abiding place, and was never charged with breaking the License law; that there were at least three places in the city that had been granted licenses which had not the shadow of a legal or moral right to them. The Commissioner in question admitted all this, and then the question arose, "What are you going to do about it?"

The upshot was that the City Hotel was told to go on and do business as usual, and the owner of the City Hotel in the meantime was told to see if he could not get a better place for the parties for whom the Commissioners felt the pity; if so they would shut up the place which they admitted was run in defiance of the law and give the license to the City Hotel.

The saloon in question, it may be stated, is situated in a building which is owned by Mr. D. R. LEAVENS, POSTMASTER, of this city.

The proprietor of the City Hotel, it seems, found that the proprietor of the Victoria Hotel, which is in a building owned by Mr. T. S. Carman, was dissatisfied and willing to sell out. The proprietors of the saloon in Mr. Leavens' building were willing to buy, but they had not the money. Then the owner of the City Hotel offered to loan them $500, which seemed to settle the matter. So far so good. But when Messrs. Carman and Leavens put their heads together and found that the deal meant the loss to the Postmaster of his tenant the scheme was blocked at once. The Commissioners, of course, had to do what they were ordered to do by Mr. Carman, and the City Hotel was put out of business.

Now let us look for a minute at the character of the saloon which the Commissioners were willing to have closed, namely, the one which runs in a building owned by the Postmaster. It is acknowledged that it has not the accommodations required by law, but even if it had, there are other equally strong reasons why its license should be revoked, and here are the reasons:

Clause 91 of the Liquor License Act says that if a hotel is convicted three times within two years of violating the License law the license shall be revoked, providing, mark you, the convictions have been made as first, second and third offences. It is found, by reference to the book kept by the License Inspector, that the proprietors of the saloon kept in Mr. Leavens' building have been fined three times within EIGHT MONTHS, namely, on December 24, 1902; June 20, 1903, and July 23, 1903. But, mark you, again, these convictions were all entered as first offences. Whether Police Magistrate Flint suffers from a poor memory, or whether he made the improper convictions advisedly we know not. However, there are the facts.

Understand, the license MUST be revoked if the offending parties are convicted of a first, second and third offence within two years.

But there is another point. The same clause of the License Act says that the County Judge MAY, if he finds a hotel has broken the law three times within two years, revoke the license of the offending party.

There, it seems, is the solution of this matter, IF THE LICENSE INSPECTOR AND THE COUNTY ATTORNEY WILL DO THEIR DUTY.

If they will not do their duty, and see that the law is obeyed and respected, then surely it is time that lovers of justice and morality took this matter up and made representations to the Minister in authority, at Toronto.

It is time the rule of demagoguism in this city was brought to an end.

OFFICES, NO. 34, Bridge St., - Belleville, Ont.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideratio —more so than most people imagine.

DUTY BEFORE PLEASURE.

Why Mrs. Rivalton Postponed Her Trip to Europe.

"What do you think, Mary?" asked Mr. Rivalton, somewhat indefinitely, as he beamed at his wife across the poised carving knife and fork.

"Why, I don't know of anything, James," responded Mrs. Rivalton expectantly. "What?"

"I've been busy arranging my affairs," said Mr. Rivalton impressively, "and at last I've got 'em in such shape that I can afford the time this summer"—

"Yes, yes, James?" cried Mrs. Rivalton, all in a flutter as her husband paused teasingly.

—"for us to take that long deferred trip to Europe," concluded Mr. Rivalton triumphantly. "We'll be able to get off some time next month."

"Oh!" ejaculated Mrs. Rivalton in a disappointed tone.

"Why, what's the matter, Mary?" asked Mr. Rivalton, dropping the knife and fork with a clatter at this unexpected reception of his announcement and staring blankly at his wife.

Mrs. Rivalton only shook her head dejectedly.

"What on earth's to prevent?" demanded Mr. Rivalton sharply. "You've always been crazy to go. It's been the dearest dream of your life. You've nagged and pestered me to drop my business and go every year since we've been married."

"I know it, and I am wild to go," acknowledged Mrs. Rivalton in the voice of a martyr at the stake. "But—but I heard something only this morning that—that makes it impossible. You may go, James, but I've got to be home here this summer; I've just got to."

"Why, what is it?" inquired Mr. Rivalton anxiously.

"Well," explained Mrs. Rivalton reluctantly, "Mrs. Ayres told me this morning that that aspiring Mrs. Pushington told her in strict confidence that she is going to give a fete champetre some time this summer that will eclipse anything we ever had in this town."

"Why, what of it, Mary?" asked Mr. Rivalton with wide eyed wonder. "You surely can't mean that you'd miss Europe just to go to a lawn party?"

"But you miss the point entirely, James," expostulated Mrs. Rivalton bitterly. "How can I give another one later that 'll make hers look mean and paltry if I don't see for myself how elaborate hers is?"—Alexander Ricketts in New York Times.

A Profound Impression.

"I shall never forget the night I first heard 'Carmen,'" said Miss Flimkins.

"Ah, yes!" answered the musical young man. "Who could forget 'Carmen?' What is your most vivid recollection of that glorious occasion?"

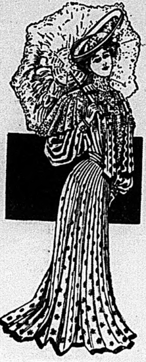
MIDSUMMER MODES.

GOWNS OF LATEST CUT AND COLOR AND SMARTEST ACCESSORIES.

Delicate Tints In the Lead—A Paris Model Veiling Gown—Stunning Boas of Chiffon, Black Velvet and Lace. Splendid Feather Wraps.

The pale hued garments that once daunted the soul of the ordinarily economical woman appear to have lost their terrors, and white, delicate grays, ivory and biscuit tones were never more popular than this season, which should certainly be a fortunate one for the dry cleaners.

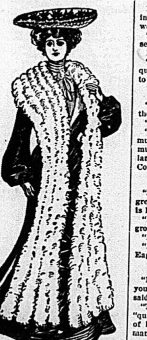


IVORY VEILING GOWN.

The black and white note, also a prominent one, is prettily sounded in connection with a sun ray plaited skirt in the French model here shown. This is a costume of ivory voile strewn with applique medallions of black voile framed in an embroidery edging. The hem of the skirt is sharply defined by an inch wide band of black velvet. The bodice—sun ray plaited, like the skirt—has a vest of ivory accordion chiffon and strapping of black velvet.

Stunning, indeed, are the new chiffon boas and feather boas. The chiffons come all white, in pongee and mauve, or they may be marvelous confections of any of these tints mingled with rose, pale green or blue and narrow black velvet ribbon and lace.

Still more luxurious are the feather wraps and boas, for whose soft beauty becoming is altogether too mild an adjective. These are dreams of loveliness. They are warmer than the chiffon, yet so light that they form a perfect summer wrap for the shoulders of a thin dress on breezy days. There are pelerine boas of white marabou pointed with white ostrich tips and stoles of straight, unshaped marabou. There are collarettes with stole front ends and a stole wrap, as shown, slightly cape shaped. White, black, pale neutral tints and even a soft, deep brown represent some of the colors in feather stoles.



A FEATHER STOLE.

Linen gowns are an important item of the season, with the white coarse woven materials in the lead. There are some pretty tints also in Irish linens, as pink and blue shot with white. Plaited skirts and a sack coat furnish a fashionable model.

Anecdotal.

In a recent parliamentary debate over the question of a museum grant for Wales, much of the discussion, says the London "Chronicle," turned on the fact that Wales is without a capital. This, however, did not daunt a certain Welsh member who got on his feet and, addressing the ministers on the Treasury bench said: "If only you will give us the money we will find the capital."

A vocalist of some reputation was performing at a provincial music hall and rendered "The Song That Reached My Heart," "Whisper and I Shall Hear" and "The Song That Will Live for Ever." Not satisfied with these three songs, the audience tried to encore the vocalist. He approached the footlights and made the following speech: "Ladies and gentlemen when I sang the three songs I have just given in Sheffield, the people presented me with five pounds; when I sang them in Liverpool, the people presented me with a cottage; then, when I sang them in London, they presented me with a row of houses——" "Brick by brick!" cried a voice from the gallery.

Looking Ahead.

"I have been thinking," remarked a thoughtful looking man to a chance acquaintance—"I have been thinking what I shall put my boy to when he is old enough.

"At present I am a little uncertain whether it would not be wise to let him finish his education in Germany, so that he might have the advantage of a continental training and the chances of acquiring another language besides his own. Otherwise I should probably send him to some technical school here, for I am a great believer in handicrafts. My wife talks of giving him a university education, but I don't know. It rather unfits a fellow for anything but a professional career, and they say that all the professions are overcrowded."

The other man agreed.

"Better let him learn a good trade," he said; "electrical engineering or something of that kind. But, by the way, how old is he?"

"Well," replied the anxious parent, "I'm looking ahead a little, of course—he's three months old to-day."

JEFFRIES STILL CHAMPION

He Played With Jim Corbett For Nine and a Half Rounds.

Two Stomach Blows Knocked Corbett Out Early in the Tenth Round—All the Way Through Jeffries Had the Best of the Bout, But Corbett Was Always Game to the Core—An Enormous Crowd.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, played with Jim Corbett for nine rounds and a half last night, and then Corbett's seconds motioned to Referee Graney to stop the fight in order to save their man from needless punishment. The end came shortly after the beginning of the tenth round, when Jeffries planted one of his terrific left swings on Corbett's stomach. The man who conquered John L. Sullivan dropped to the floor, and the memorable scene at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons landed his solar plexus blow, was almost duplicated. This time, however, Corbett struggled to his feet, and again faced his gigantic adversary. With hardly a moment's hesitation Jeffries swung his right and again landed on Corbett's stomach. Jim dropped to the floor, and then it was that Tommy Ryan, seeing that it was all over, motioned to Referee Graney to stop the punishment.

The fight last night demonstrated beyond all doubt that Jeffries stands alone in his class. He showed remarkable improvement in both speed and skill. Corbett, during the first part of the fight, was almost outpointed, and the few blows that he landed on Jeffries apparently were without sting. Jeffries was never in better condition.

The frequency with which he countered Corbett's leads astonished everybody. Corbett, in comparison with the big man alongside of him, looked very light, but was really heavier than ever before. He appeared to have lost some of his old-time speed and skill during the early part of the fight, but this may have been due to Jeffries' marvelous improvement.

At first, Corbett was very cautious, and apparently was outpointed by Jeffries, but later in the fight he warmed up and showed some of his old-time cleverness. From the first, however, it was generally regarded as a hopeless case for Corbett. He made a gallant fight, but he never stood a chance to win.

After the fight was over, Corbett quickly recovered, walked over to Jeffries and shook him warmly by the hand. He said:

"Jim, you beat me fairly. You stand alone. No one can touch you."

Referee Eddie Graney said after the fight that it was a good heavyweight contest.

"Corbett was very clever, but Jeffries was almost equally so, and showed marvelous improvement. He practically out-boxed Corbett during the fight, with the exception of the eighth and ninth rounds. Every blow he landed told, and his superior weight and strength was bound to win in the end."

Timekeeper George Harting stated that the blows that won the fight were a left to the stomach, followed by a right to the same place.

Ten thousand men were seated about the arena in Mechanic's Pavilion at 9 o'clock, representing an expenditure for seating accommodations aggregating $54,000. This is the largest crowd ever assembled at a ringside in the United States, and the third largest sum in dollars and cents ever contested for. The two that exceeded its receipts were the Corbett-Jeffries fight at Coney Island, $66,000, and the Corbett-McCoy at Madison Square Ggrdens, New York, $63,000.

Young Man's Disappearance.

Alliston, Aug. 15.—Henry Mooney, a young man of about 22 years, son of John Mooney of Elm Grove, dropped mysteriously out of sight on Sunday evening, and it is feared he may have committed suicide. He had been engaged as a farm hand with John McMann, but was spending Sunday at his home at Elm Grove. On Sunday he asked his sister for a piece of rope and in the evening he was seen going toward the river with the rope. No trace of him has been found, although all the neighbors have been assisting in the search.

PLOT TO CAPTURE PETREL

United States Fishermen Figuring Out a Big Fight.

Capt. Chau of the Silver Spray Has Not Yet Reported the Matter to Washington, Although War Department Is Fully Cognizant of Affairs on Lake Erie—Incident May Be Made Plea to Abrogate the Lake Gunboat Treaty.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 15.—While as yet the authorities at Washington have not been officially notified by Captain Chris Chau of the Silver Spray of his encounter with the Canadian revenue cutter Petrel, the affair has created intense excitement and feeling among the fishermen along the lake, and it is hard to say just where the matter is going to end. Chau himself says he will go slowly in the prosecution of the case. He consulted with the collector of ports Thursday night and was advised to locate the exact spot of the "battle of Lake Erie," in so far as it refers to the boundary line, before reporting to Washington. Opinion differs as to whether the Silver Spray was in American waters at the time the chase commenced, although Chau himself asserts that the Petrel followed him fully a mile within these waters before the firing and pursuit were discontinued. Public sentiment as a whole is divided, and the trouble may die out unless some of the hot-headed fishermen, who ever since the seizure of the Kitty D. two weeks ago, have been increasing their hatred toward the Canadian fishery protective service, precipitate a serious international controversy.

Plot to Seize the Petrel.

It is openly stated that unless the United States Government takes some action to investigate the Silver Spray occurrence and to have the Kitty D. and other recently confiscated vessels restored, that a nasty clash between the antagonistic interests is bound to occur. There is no doubt that several of the larger fishing boats will be fully armed hereafter and a plot is already formed to capture the Petrel and hold her commander in the near future. Some of the bold enthusiasts are advocating an immediate attack, by night on the Petrel, and it may be difficult to restrain some of the adventurous spirits ready for a fracas with the Canucks. One plan is to ram the Petrel or to induce the Petrel to p an officer or two aboard some American vessel, seize them and then capture the Petrel, and probably scuttle her. Just how the United States Government would treat such an exploit is the matter now under discussion and if it is thought to be feasible and within the pale of the law, the attempt may be made. It is said that hereafter the fishing boats will go in fleets, and if they are armed and fully manned, a combined attack may prove disastrous to the Petrel.

A couple of the crew of the Silver Spray, it now appears, were slightly wounded in the one-sided engagement.

Depends Upon "the Line."

The seriousness of the whole affair, as relating to the probability of its becoming a matter for international argument, will depend altogether upon whether the Silver Spray, at the time the Canadian cutter bore down on her was in Canadian or American waters. On this point, Capt. Chau is himself uncertain.

What It May Result In.

According to a despatch from Washington, it is reported that the War Department is fully cognizant of affairs on the Ontario frontier. It is also stated that the United States revenue cutter Fessenden has been ordered to Erie to investigate the matter, and the Fessenden, it is stated, may be detailed permanently to the waters now patroled by the Petrel. The United States cutter Michigan, it is also said at the State Department, may very soon have urgent business in the vicinity of Buffalo, Erie and Dunkirk. Both of these vessels carry several guns and a number of experienced marines, fully armed. Either boat is fully able to cope with the Petrel, and no American vessels are likely to be seized, or fired upon by the Petrel while they are within sight.

The feeling at the Capitol is that the present trouble will result, in the near future, in the American Government placing a fleet of small gunboats, or torpedo boats, on the Great Lakes, abrogating the old-time treaty prohibiting such vessels on the Great Lakes.

THE CRIMINAL CODE.

The Law on the Crime Discovered in Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 15.—Mrs. David Roy, charged with disfiguring Emma Boyce by throwing carbolic acid in her face, was remanded to jail for a week. The magistrates refused bail, as the offence is a most serious one, and the penalty imprisonment for life. It is alleged that Mrs. Roy knocked her victim down and endeavored to pour the acid down her throat. In the struggle the liquor was spilled and the victim will lose the sight of one of her eyes. The offence may come as an attempt to commit murder, under section 232 of the Criminal Code of Canada.

FUTURE OF THE GOVERNMENT

Never Was More Uncertain at Time of Prorogation Before.

Prorogation of the British Parliament—The King's Speech of Little General or International Interest—The Royal Irish Tour—The Land Bill and the Future Condition of Ireland—Premier Balfour's Closing Address.

London, Aug. 15.—There has probably never been a prorogation of Parliament when the future of the Government was so uncertain as is the case on this occasion. Many believe there will be a dissolution in the autumn though the best information does not support this belief. Mr. Balfour's speech at Sheffield at the end of September is awaited with the keenest interest, as it will contain a pronouncement of policy which will possibly force either the Duke of Devonshire, a pronounced free trader, or Colonial Secretary Chamberlain to resign. The members of Parliament will curtail their holidays—the free food leaguers in order to open the fiscal campaign as speedily as possible, and the followers of Mr. Chamberlain to repel the attack.

After the reading of the King's speech Parliament was prorogued till Nov. 2.

The King's Speech.

The King's speech was of little general or international interest. It referred to the cordiality of His Majesty's reception in Portugal, Italy and France, and to the return visit of President Loubet, whose visit has given rise to a striking exhibition of the feelings of mutual good will which prevail in the two countries."

Dealing with His Majesty's visit to Ireland the speech says: "The warm expression of good will with which I was everywhere received greatly touched me. My visit enabled me to realize how much was being attempted to improve the housing accommodation for the working population, stimulate activity, advance the methods of agriculture, develop technical education, and provide for the sick and infirm. Much remains to be done, but it was with feelings of greatest gratification that I noticed signs of increasing concord among all classes in Ireland, presaging, as for the general welfare."

I hope, a new era of united efforts for the general welfare."

As to the Land Bill.

Referring to the Irish land bill, the speech says it offers inducements to the land owners to continue their residence among their countrymen, and provides facilities for improving the conditions of life in the poorer districts of the west, and adds: 'This reform by removing the ancient causes of social dissension, will I heartily trust, conduct to the common benefit of all my Irish subjects."

Reference was made in the speech to the general anxiety regarding the situation in the European provinces of Turkey, to the great progress made in the work of resettlement and pacification in South Africa, and the improvement in the conditions of agriculture and finance in India.

Premier Balfour's Closing Address.

Both Houses of Parliament assembled early to wind up the business of the session. In the House of Commons Premier Balfour, regarding the complaints that the Government was showing a lack of sympathy with Macedonia, pointed out that one of the deep sources of mischief was the dissensions among the Christians. It was not the Turk alone—deep as his guilt undoubtedly was—who was responsible for the miserable conditions. It would be folly to forget that the Christians committed atrocities on Christians. The Government was still of the opinion that the best policy was to support the Austro-Russian endeavors to improve the administration.

Dealing with the protests against puzzling the House on the fiscal controversy, the Premier said he thought there was no necessity for undue hurry in discussing the matter. There was no pending fiscal question before Parliament, nor would there be one during the currency of the present Parliament.

FIVE WERE DROWNED.

Steamer Mersey Foundered a Little Below Point Oulardes, Quebec.

Quebec, Aug. 15.—News has been received from Point Oulardes, on the north shore below Metis, that the steamer Mersey, from Quebec, with a cargo for Seven Islands, foundered a little below Point Oulardes about 2 p.m. Thursday. Capt. Gagnon, the mate, and another man succeeded in reaching shore after much hardship at 8 o'clock Thursday night. Five of the crew were drowned.

Crushed by a Derrick.

Montreal Aug. 15.—J. L. Stevens, accountant of Montreal west, was killed yesterday at Chambly. The deceased was in the employ of Captain Logan, who has the contract for supplying sand for the repairs that are being made to the Chambly dam by the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company. He was standing on the boat superintending the unloading of the sand when something went wrong with a foot of the derrick, and as a result the whole machinery collapsed, burying Stevens under the ruins. When recovered he was unconscious, and died before a

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

Only the Grafters and Exploiters of the Public, Says Dr. Sproule, See the Necessity For the Road.

Ottawa, Aug. 15.—Mr. H. R. Emmerson of New Brunswick gave an exhibition in the House yesterday of a legislator discounting his chances for coveted political preferment. He has been looked upon as an aspirant and likely candidate for the Cabinet vacancy created by Mr. Blair's retirement. Had he acquitted himself well in his speech on the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme yesterday he would at least be a favorite in the running. As it is he made a rather weak speech, and was not better than a four to one shot last night.

Dr. Sproule, replying to Mr. Emmerson, alluded to the latter's lack of gratitude in speaking disparagingly of the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals. The man to whom above all others he is indebted for the position he occupies to-day.

"I think perhaps the indebtedness is mutual," Mr. Emmerson retorted.

"Well for the sake of human nature I'm glad of it," was Dr. Sproule's reply.

He went on to say that the estimates of the Finance Minister that the outlay involved in the project now before the House was only thirteen or fourteen millions, staggered his comprehension. It was well known that the Government would have to build the eastern section at a cost of $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. How, therefore, could it be said that the obligations involved in the construction of the line from Winnipeg to Port Simpson would cause an outlay of only $14,000,000? The money would have to be borrowed and the Finance Minister's estimate of outlay was like a farmer borrowing $2,000 on a mortgage to improve his property, then declaring that his mortgage only stood him $60 for one year's interest upon it.

Dr. Sproule ridiculed the sinuous course of Mr. Emmerson's speech, and dealing with preceding speakers on the Government side Dr. Sproule said that what appeared to be the strongest arguments in favor of the scheme were those put forward by the Minister of the Interior, but when examined it was found his speech abounded in quotations that were, to say the least, unfair.

Dr. Sproule pointed out the fallacy of the contention that other roads than the Grand Trunk would use the line from Winnipeg to Moncton with their own rolling stock and train crews, and declared Mr. Sifton was equally fallacious in his argument that the construction of new railways benefited existing roads in the same districts.

Dr. Sproule ridiculed the unthinking enthusiasm that had been poured out upon the scheme by Liberals in the House, the first great national undertaking of the Government as it was termed, but, he said, "Only the grafter and exploiter have been pressing for this road, and the same men who worked the Crow's Nest deal, and who hover around the Government to get something out of the safe for which they give nothing in return."

Dr. Sproule proceeded to show that it was the lack of cars and locomotives that caused the blockade last fall, and that with the increased rolling stock and largely increased elevator facilities the crop of this year would be promptly looked after.

A great deal of money had been spent developing the waterways of Canada, but now the country was told that this expenditure was all futile, and that another scheme must be carried through at once, that it was unsafe to wait, to wait even a few months. And this scheme would add to the debt of Canada at least $125,000,000.

The sentiment of the country was rather against subsidizing railways in the future. He challenged the Prime Minister to dissolve the House and go to the country on this question. The Government are not doing it. The appeal would be made after the die was cast, after the obligation had been incurred.

In conclusion, Dr. Sproule presented a calculation which showed that the Government's scheme involved a financial undertaking equivalent to $125 for every family in Ontario, a mortgage which would not be paid off in the next generation.

Mr. Rudolph Lemieux of Gaspe was the next speaker. He strongly supported the bargain.

Oliver Supports It.

Mr. Frank Oliver read a five-minute essay in favor of the project. It began by declaring in favor of Government ownership and proceeded: "But, if we can't get what we want we must get what we can on the best term we can. I therefore support the present arrangement."

Mr. Lennox moved the adjournment of the debate.

Bill Re. Binder Twine.

Ottawa, Aug. 15.—In the Senate yesterday Hon. Mr. Scott moved the second reading of the bill respecting the manufacture of binder twine in Canada. After a long discussion, the bill was read a second time.

HAVE HAD A GOOD THING.

For years a clique of Liberal grafters have been making a good thing out of the binder twine manufactured at the Kingston penitentiary. Tenders for the output of the prison were invited year after year and the same firms were always in line. It did not matter who was successful in securing the twine, so far as the profits were concerned. The small company of favorites divided up the spoils which eventually came from the farmer. Two persons, John Connor, of Ottawa, and Henderson Black, of St. John, have been deeply interested in the purchase of prison-made twine, with the result that no matter how the purchases were made, Connor invariably got possession of it, and as the prices paid were very low, he has managed to do fairly well by the arrangement. This same Connor acted as an agent for the last Government and prior to 1896, was roundly abused by the Liberal party. But after the change came he was even better treated by his erstwhile enemies, who sold him nearly all their twine directly or indirectly, and thus enabled him to get right into the pockets of the wheat grower. It has been a good thing for Mr. Connor, but the farmers do not seem to have had an equally pleasant experience.

GRITS CARE NOTHING FOR THE FARMERS' INTERESTS.

An extraordinary neglect of the interests of cattle raisers was witnessed in the House of Commons recently. Hon. Sydney Fisher brought up a bill for consideration which will regulate the treatment of cattle affected by contagious and infectious diseases. The measure provides for a fixed rate of remuneration to be paid to owners when cattle are destroyed. The Government benches were almost empty throughout the discussion, and the only Liberal who spoke to the question was the Minister of Agriculture. The other representatives supporting the administration did not consider it worth while to look after the interests of the farmer. On the Conservative side of the House keen interest was taken in the bill. It was impressed on the Minister that the amount of damages proposed to be paid to farmers is inadequate, and under the pressure brought to bear upon Mr. Fisher, he consented to allow the question of remuneration to stand over until it received further consideration. The Conservative party by taking this action has done the farmer signal service, and a better pecuniary arrangement will probably result for those whose cattle may be destroyed.

TROTTING.

The Ashley Stock Farm and the Races

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—At the races in Belleville on Thursday, the 13th inst., the starting judge, F. Smith, made the erroneous statement from his place that Mr. Timlin, who was substituted for Mr. Gerow, driver of Lady Hamburg in the 2.50 class race the day before, on the ground that said mare had not been driven to win in the second heat of said race, had driven Lady Hamburg two seconds faster than Mr. Gerow had, assigning it as one of the reasons for inflicting a suspension of 30 days on the driver of Lady Hamburg.

Why he should make such a statement to the public is very strange, indeed, when the time of the three heats, as announced by himself, was 2.30, and 2.29 1-4. In the second heat Mr. Gerow was close up in the finish at 2.30, while Mr. Timlin, driver in the third heat, after whipping and punishing the mare all the way of the mile, so that the ridges were plainly seen the next morning, and at no place in the whole mile was he within several lengths of the winner, finishing not nearer than eight or ten lengths behind the winner, whose time was given at 2.29 1-4, Lady Hamburg finishing under the wire in 2.32, as timed by Mr. Allen, of Picton, owner of the winner, just two seconds slower than Mr. Gerow drove in the previous heat. Had Mr. Gerow been driving the third heat in the 2.50 class and never got any closer to the winner than Mr. Timlin he would have been fined or suspended for not trying to win.

The starting judge had the bad sense to say that the Association was entitled to the thanks of the Ashley Stock Farm for the splendid manner in which Mr. Timlin had driven Lady Hamburg, but I submit that the Association should be punished with a fine for putting an enemy behind the Ashley Stock Farm mare to drive in the race. I may say the Ashley Stock Farm was more than thankful that the mare was not injured and ruined, for in said heat she caught her quarter boot by the reckless manner of the driver in devoting his whole time in whipping and beating the dumb animal, instead of trying to encourage and assisting her otherwise, and had the quarter boot not given away would have dumped her on her head and himself out of the sulkey. More than one voice was heard to say what a shame to punish the mare as he did.

Through the painstaking of Mr. Gerow Lady Hamburg has been educated and developed to go all her races since the 25th May without the use of hopples and without making a break since, which is remarkable under the punishment given her by Mr. Timlin, who, if he had acted the part of a gentleman, would have refused to have driven here, not being on friendly terms with the Ashley Stock Farm.

I would ask how it is that the starting judge made himself so officious in what he considered the judges should do? The opinion of many was that he went a long way beyond his duties, indicating to the judges what he should do with a driver, and what they should do, as his duties ceased in each heat after the word "go" was given.

In Watertown, N.Y., the Association have found it policy to fix a place on the opposite side to the judges stand for starting judge, so that he cannot influence the judges. Would it not be well to do likewise?

Ashley Stock Farm,
H. ASHLEY, Man.

P.S.—If the judges believed a wrong had been done to persons who may have invested in the race, why did they not declare all bets off and save any person who may have invested, rather than inflict a suspension on a driver? It appears evident the penalty was inflicted at the suggestion of the starting judge.

Baby Will Become a Joy in the Home if Fed on

LACTATED FOOD

There should be no difficulties, no fears, no heart sorrows about baby, if you are willing to be guided by the wisdom of able physicians and experienced mothers. If your little one is sickly and delicate, it should be nourished at once on Lactated Food, a food which combines all the properties of healthy breast milk.

Lactated Food now so universally used, is a perfect substitute for mother's milk. It is predigested; it does not produce irritation as other prepared foods do; it never fails to subdue inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and is always retained on the weakest stomach.

There is absolutely no trouble, dear mother, when your baby is fed on Lactated Food; it becomes happy, contented and bright; it will sleep well, and will safely pass through all the common and fatal summer maladies. Give Lactated Food a trial; once used, you will have no other. All druggists sell it.

THAT FLAG INCIDENT.

THE "MISCREANT" WRITES TO A TRENTON PAPER.

The following appears in the current issue of the Trenton Courier:

To the Editor of the Courier.

My attention was called to the article in the Toronto papers of Saturday last relating to my being fined by the magistrate for shooting at the American flag on the steamer Varuna. The article is entirely erroneous; I did not express any sorrow for my act beyond the fact that I was sorry that I was guilty of an infraction of one of the Town By-laws (so the magistrate told me of firing off guns within the corporation, and which I learn is incorrect, as such is not the offence governed) and for this offence I was fined. I was told that if I agreed to this the fine would not be made public, but I was surprised to see the splendid lecture of the Magistrate in print. I think, sir, that he might have been better occupied in devising remedies to put down the common abuses in town and not in giving erroneous and self-glorifying articles to the Toronto press.

Yours truly,
W. J. POTTER.

SLOWLY DYING FROM CATARRH.

Thousands are in this terrible condition, but don't realize their danger. If you have the slightest taint of catarrh would it not be wise to commence Catarrhozone treatment now and be perfectly cured in a short time? This pleasant remedy cures without the use of drugs, atomizers or snuffs. You inhale the medicated vapor which spreads to all parts of the breathing organs, kills the germs and heals the inflamed surfaces. Catarrhozone clears the throat and nose instantly, and never fails to cure the most obstinate catarrhal, lung and throat troubles. A trial will demonstrate the value of Catarrhozone, which sells for $1.00, small size 25c, at druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. Good Sense.

Good sense is a fund slowly and painfully accumulated by the labor of centuries. It is a jewel of the first water, whose value he alone understands who has lost it, or who observes the lives of others who have lost it. For my part, I think no price too great to pay for gaining it and keeping it, for the possession of eyes that see and a judgment that discerns.

More Glasses Are Worn

Now-a-days than ever before. No doubt of it. People used to think that the wearing of glasses should be put off as long as possible—that it was an old age necessity only.

We know more now. We apply every known agency for the relief and care of eye sickness — and there are in use to-day methods which weren't heard of even ten years ago.

Now we commence to right eye sight just as soon as it commences to go wrong. Now, school children by the hundreds use glasses. And it's wise and proper.

CHAPTER I.

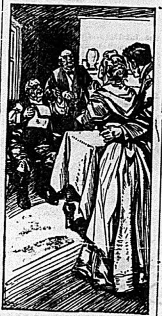
THE young man stood in the field road giving directions to a robust negro who was plowing the corn, which in parallel rows stretched on to the main road a quarter of a mile distant.

It was a beautiful day. The sun was shining brightly, but the atmosphere had dropped a dim veil over the nearby mountain. Even the two storied farmhouse, with its veranda and white columns, to which the field road led up a gradual slope, showed only its outlines. However, Alan Bishop, as he steadied his gaze upon the house, saw the figure of an elderly woman come out of the gate and with a quick step hurry down to him. It was his mother. She was tall and angular and had high cheek bones and small blue eyes. She had rather thin gray hair, which was wound into a knot behind her head, and over it she wore only a small red breakfast shawl, which she held in place by one of her long hands.

"Alan," she said, panting from her brisk walk, "I want you to come to the house right off. Mr. Trabue has come to see yore pa again, an' I can't do a thing with 'im."

"Well, what does he want with him?" asked the young man. His glance was on the plowman and his horse. They had turned the far end of the corn row and were coming back, only the nodding head of the animal being visible beyond a little rise.

"He's come to draw up the papers fer another land trade yore pa's makin'. He's the lawyer fer the Tompkins estate. Yore pa tried to buy the land a yeer ago, but it wasn't in shape to dispose of. Oh, Alan, don't you see he's goin' to ruin us with his fool notions? Folks all about are a-laughin' at him fer buyin' so much useless mountain land. I'm powerful afeerd his mind is wrong."



"Listen to nothin'," thundered Bishop.

"Well, mother, what could I do?" Alan Bishop asked impatiently. "You know he won't listen to me."

"I reckon you can't stop 'im," sighed the woman, "but I wish you'd come on to the house. I knowed he was up to some'n'. Ever' day fer the last week he's been ridin' up the valley an' rollin' an' tumblin' at night an' chawin' ten times as much tobacco as he ort. Oh, he's goin' to ruin us! Brother Abner says he is buyin' beca'se he thinks it's goin' to advance in value, but sech property hain't advanced a speck sense I kin remember an' is bein' sold ever' yeer fer tax money."

"No, it's very foolish of him," said the young man as the two turned toward the house. "Father keeps talking about the fine timber on such property, but it is entirely too far from a railroad ever to be worth anything. I asked Rayburn Miller about it, and he told me to do all I could to stop father from investing, and you know he's as sharp a speculator as ever lived; but it's his money."

There was a paling fence around the house, and the inclosure was alive with chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks and peafowls. In the sunshine on the veranda two pointers lay sleeping, but at the sound of the opening gate they rose, stretched themselves lazily and gaped.

"They are in the parlor," said Mrs. Bishop, as she whisked off her breakfast shawl. "Go right in; I'll come in a minute. I want to see how Linda is makin' out with the churnin'. La! I feel like it's a waste o' time to do a lick o' work with him in thar actin' like a child. Ef we both go in together, it'll look like we've concocked somethin', but we must stop 'im ef we kin."

Alan went into the parlor on the left of the wide, uncarpeted hall. The room had white plastered walls, but the ceiling was of boards planed by hand and painted sky blue. In one corner stood a very old piano with pointed, octagonal legs and a stool with haircloth covering. The fireplace was wide and high and had a screen made of a decorated window shade tightly pasted on a wooden frame. Old man Bishop sat near a window and through his steel framed nose glasses was carefully reading a long document written on legal cap paper. He paid no attention to the entrance of his son, but the lawyer, a short, fat man of sixty-five with thick black hair that fell below his coat collar, rose and extended his hand.

"How's Alan?" he asked pleasantly. "I saw you down in the field as I come along, but I couldn't catch your eye. You see, I'm out after some o' your dad's cash. He's buying hisse'f rich. My Lord, if it ever does turn his way he'll scoop in enough money to set you an' your sister up for life! Folks tell me he owns mighty near every stick of timber land in the Cohutta valley, an' what he has he got at the bottom figure."

"If it ever turns his way," said Alan. "But do you see any prospect of its ever doing so, Mr. Trabue?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders. "I never bet on another man's trick, my boy, and I never throw cold water on the plans of a speculator. I used to when I was about your age, but I saw so many of 'em get rich by paying no attention to me that I quit right off. A man ought to be allowed to use his own judgment."

Old Bishop was evidently not hearing a word of this conversation, being wholly absorbed in studying the details of the deed before him. "I reckon it's all right," he finally said. "You say the Tompkins children are all of age?"

"Yes, Effie was the youngest," answered Trabue, "and she stepped over the line last Tuesday. There's her signature in black and white. The deed's all right. I don't draw up any other sort."

Alan went to his father and leaned over him. "Father," he said softly and yet with firmness, "I wish you'd not act hastily in this deal. You ought to consider mother's wishes, and she is nearly distracted over it."

Bishop was angry. His massive, clean shaven face was red. "I'd like to know what I'd consult her fer," he said. "In a matter o' this kind a woman's about as responsible as a suckin' baby."

Trabue laughed heartily. "Well, I reckon it's a good thing your wife didn't hear that or she'd show you whether she was responsible or not. I couldn't have got the first word of that off my tongue before my wife would 'a' knocked me clean through that wall."

Alfred Bishop seemed not to care for levity during business hours, for he greeted this remark only with a frown. He scanned the paper again and said, "Well, ef thar's any flaw in this I reckon you'll make it right."

"Oh, yes, I'll make any mistake of mine good," returned Trabue. "The paper's all right."

"You see," said Alan to the lawyer, "mother and I think father has already more of this sort of property than he can carry, and"—

"I wish you and yore mother 'd let my business alone," broke in Bishop, firing up again. "Trabue heer knows I've been worryin' 'im fer the last two months to get the property in salable shape. Do you reckon after he gets it that away I want to listen to yore two tongues a-waggin' in open opposition to it?"

Trabue rubbed his hands together. "It really don't make a bit of difference to me, Alan, one way or the other," he said pacifically. "I'm only acting as attorney for the Tompkins estate and get my fee whether there's a transfer or not. That's where I stand in the matter."

HARD ON THE BABIES.

One of the first effects of a hot wave, particularly in towns and cities, is a pronounced increase in the number of deaths of infants. Even in the open country the suffering of the helpless little ones would move the hardest heart. Stomach trouble and diarrhoea are the foes most to be dreaded at this time and every mother should appreciate the necessity of careful diet and attention at the first sign of these troubles. Medicine should never be given to check diarrhoea except upon the advice of a physician. A diet limited almost entirely to boiled milk and the use of Baby's Own Tablets will cure almost any case and keep baby in health. Mrs. W. E. Bassam, of Kingston, Ont., writes:

"When my little girl was about three months old she suffered with vomiting and had diarrhoea constantly. I did not find any medicine that helped her until we began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. After giving her the tablets the vomiting and diarrhoea ceased and she began to improve almost at once. Since then whenever her stomach is out of order or she is constipated we give her the Tablets, and the result is always all that we desire. They are the very best medicine I have ever used for a child."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent postpaid at twenty-five cents a box, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

Flowers a Bride Should Carry.

The flowers the bride shall carry, writes Martha Coman in "Leslie's Weekly," is a question to be decided by her own individuality, for every girl has her favorite, and her wedding day is a welcome opportunity to make her choice a public one. The bride's bouquet is not invariably of pure white, though the paler colors are more effective and much more acceptable than the deeper ones of red or pink. Lilies of the valley made up into one of the beautiful shower bouquets are about as appropriate for the fair maiden as anything, though there are innumerable combinations possible in the way of orchids and violets.

The shower bouquet is rarely successfully turned out by an amateur, and those persons who save the last sweet service of personally arranging the bride's flowers for their own fingers had best not attempt much in the way of a shower. But the palest of pink roses or the beautiful bride roses are at hand and can be easily arranged. The sweet, old-fashioned white lilac is a most acceptable flower to use when the bouquet is put together by loving hands rather than by busy professional ones, and it lends itself easily to an admirable result.

White orchids combined with the delicate green of the Farleyenes fern make a stunning bouquet, especially when the whole is tied lavishly with broad, soft velvet ribbon that matches exactly in shade the delicate petals of the rare exotic. This flower and fern, put together in the form called the "Princess Plume" bouquet, is a most beautiful and effective accessory to the bride's attire.

The violet cuff bouquet was a fad for a time, as was also the Du Barry collarette of the same modest but popular flower. The collarette and cuff effects were generally used only for the bride's attendants, the bride herself carrying a huge shower bouquet of white violets. Leghorn hats of white, lavishly decorated with pink roses and tied on with broad streamers of ribbon to match, are very pretty for bridesmaids, and it is then a most effective idea to have the attendants carry only large bunches of waving, feathery, maidenhair fern. Wild sweet-brier roses and apple blossoms are very lovely for floral decorations, but they are rather difficult to manage when it comes to the bouquets, and so they are both more popular for wall and aisle decorations.

A New Avenue of Pleasure.

My friend was holding a book not quite three inches from his nose, says a correspondent, and rapidly turning the leaves. I suggested that he do his dusting at a rather greater distance:

"You have made a slight mistake," said he. "I am not house-cleaning. I allow dust and cobwebs on my bottles only—not on my books."

"Then this rite of yours—" I began.

"That is the word," said he, pausing a moment to taste what I had said. "It is a rite, and only the elect, the knowing, are worthy to witness it."

"Seal me of the tribe," said I.

"I fear you could not understand," answered he, shaking his head doubtfully. "But listen, I was perfume hunting on the works of Charles Lamb. You came upon me as I was enjoying the aroma of Volume III.—the first Elia essays, you will remember. The two volumes of letters are also rather rare, but somehow this is the most delicate in odor of the entire set. Try it," he added, generously, handing over the volume. I sought to remember how he had held it.

"Nearer the nose," said he; "you're quite out of range." I adjusted the book to his satisfaction.

"And now you're ready for turning." I passed the three hundred pages rapidly in review before my waiting sense of smell.

"Your thumb touch is not delicate," exclaimed he with some impatience. "You bear on too hard. Just see how you've blunted the edge of the leaves. They should be sharp as a razor. Once again." I exerted myself to please him.

"That's good," said he. "Isn't it delicious?"

"I was so busy with the machinery of the thing that I forgot to try for the scent," I had to confess in some embarrassment. "And now, finally." This time I had mastered the mechanism, and was receptive to the message of the leaves.

"Well," said he, as I hesitated.

"Why, I get a subdued dusty and musty odor," replied I. "What else, indeed?"

"I, too, had to serve my apprenticeship," said he, in a tone of disappointment. "But if you have the stuff in you, there will come a time when this will be to you the rarest fragrance. Nature is well enough in its way, with flowers and foliage and the breath of cattle, but this is altogether finer, and makes its appeal to a more highly developed sense. Take the Bohn Library—publishers of Addison, Ricardo, Adam Smith. Of course, each book of theirs gives out its own peculiar whiff, but everything they publish comes up to a high standard. You appreciate that this perfume is not something applied to the completed book, as your maid puts cologne on her pocket-handkerchief. It is the very essence of the book. It is the product of binding, and leaves, and cover, and print—the perfect blend of the workmanship. Only the English can come at it. American books have too businesslike a smell. They are done in haste—machine made, and not put together by loving hands. I can always analyze the odor of them into its separate elements. The glazed paper, the glue, are irrepressible."

"It must take long training," said I, making ready to depart.

"The time is well spent," replied he, as he took down a volume of "The Spectator," and lovingly sampled it.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Lost chances never leave any trail.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Much talk, many lies.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These comes from stomachic troubles. Want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression and reviving the flagging energies.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

Weak Heart, Sudden Death

MANY FALLING BY THE WAY BECAUSE OF THIN BLOOD AND WEAK HEART ACTION.

Scarcely a newspaper but contains the report of some sudden death resulting from heart trouble. With the blood in proper condition the heart repairs its own waste and throbs on day after day and year after year. By enriching and purifying the blood Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents and cures palpitation of the heart, irregular beating, weak heart action and all similar derangements. It ensures healthful and vigorous action of all the vital organs. Note your increase in weight while using it. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase are on every box. 11

Cruel Backaches

PAINS THAT MAKE THE SUFFERER'S LIFE MISERABLE.

Dr Williams' Pink Pills Never Fail to Relieve and Cure Ailments of This Kind.

Mrs. Walter Book, wife of the postmaster at Silverdale, is well known to all the residents of that locality, and the family is well known throughout Lincoln county where they have resided, and been identified with its history for four generations. In speaking of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, Mrs. Book says: "In giving my testimony I do so frankly and without reserve, as I am convinced of the complete reliability of the pills. For a couple of years I had been troubled with a severe pain in my back which sometimes extended to the stomach and gave me great distress. At times I was completely incapacitated with it. I felt much discouraged because I had been treated by a good doctor and had taken a number of advertised medicines without obtaining a cure. Finally, I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and almost from the first I noticed an improvement, and by the time I had used five boxes the old complaint was a thing of the past and I was feeling better than I had for years. I keep the pills in the house and whenever I feel the need of a medicine take a few and always find them a splendid tonic and regulator of the system."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest blood builder and nerve tonic in the whole wide world. That is a fact beyond dispute—and it accounts for the fact that there is no corner in the whole civilized world where some sufferer has not been cured by building up the blood by these pills. There is no other medicine so widely used, and there is no trouble due to poor, watery blood, or weak nerves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will not cure. Protect yourself by seeing that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEWS FROM THE CHIEF.

ARRIVED AT GLASGOW ON AUGUST 3. AFTER A GOOD PASSAGE.

Following are some extracts from a letter received from Chief Newton: On Board SS. Lakonia of the Donaldson Line, and now Passing Loch Foyle, Ireland, which I Called at 32 Years ago, Monday, August 3rd, 1903, 10.15 a.m.

We have had a very good passage and I feel much stronger for the sea voyage. I have had no sea sickness, but felt a little out of sorts, but I took advice of friends and went on deck. I am quite an old sailor and have never missed a meal. It has been quite cold coming across. It is beautiful weather on deck now and expect to be at the dock at Glasgow this evening. Capt. Wm. McNeill, of this ship, is master, and a fine man he is, tries to make you at home and a great story-teller. I think he could give our friend A. McGinnis a good run for his money telling stories. We expect to leave Glasgow by train for my old home Tuesday evening, so expect to arrive there Wednesday p.m. I forgot to say that the first land sighted this a.m. was Torey Island, a good name, eh? With kindest regards to all.

FERROL IN SUMMER

Those who are prevented by want of time, or lack of means, or both, from going to the mountains or the seaside during the heated term, often feel the need of a concentrated and easily assimilated food to afford proper nourishment when ordinary food cloys the appetite and clogs the digestion.

To combat the depressing and enervating effects of hard work in hot weather there is nothing like FERROL. Do not imagine that because FERROL contains Cod Liver Oil, it is therefore unsuited for summer use. Nothing could be more erroneous. FERROL is a food quite as much as a medicine; it is, moreover, a highly concentrated food and so scintifically prepared that it is almost ready for instant absorption. It therefore furnished the most valuable nourishment without impairing the digestion in the slightest.

When the hot weather comes, and you begin to feel languid, depressed and unfit for business, just try FERROL. You will find it pleasant to take, easy to digest and absolutely infallible in its results.

Delegates Departing.

His Worship Mayor Graham, Col. Ponton and Mr. J. W. Johnson, leave to-night for Montreal to attend the meeting of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire to be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. In addition to the daily morning and afternoon sessions from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the delegates will attend a reception of the Montreal Board of Trade on Monday evening, a reception by Lord Brassey, president, on his celebrated ocean yacht, "the Sunbeam" on Tuesday or Wednesday evenings, and a banquet at the Windsor Hotel on Thursday evening, at which 500 guests are expected to be present. Belleville's Board of Trade will move seven resolutions, several of which have been favorably commented on by the press of Canada. The city and district will, we believe, be worthily represented, and there need be no cavilling at the size of the deputation, nor at the fact that they are to stay at the Windsor Hotel, for the delegates pay their own expenses of the trip, and have plenty of good work to do.

Right conduct is connected with right views of life.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto.

RECOMMENDED BY PHYSICIANS.

Pond's Extract

Over fifty years a household remedy for Burns, Sprains, Wounds, Bruises, Coughs, Colds and all accidents liable to occur in every home.

CAUTION—There is only one Pond's Extract. Be sure you get the genuine, sold only in sealed bottles in buff wrappers.

He that doeth the kindness hath the nobler pleasure of the two.

HAVE YOU

Weakness of the Back?
Pains and Aches in the Region of the Kidneys?
Irregularity of Bowel or Kidney Action?
Feverishness? Chilly Sensations? Puffiness Under the Eyes?
Brick-dust Deposit or Cloudiness of Urine?
Dropsy of the Ankles or Wrists?

These are the danger signals which testify that the kidneys are not doing their work of expelling uric acid from the blood.

Unless these organs are brought into a healthy condition, the blood will be poisoned more and more. Some form of Rheumatism is likely to follow, and Diabetes or Bright's Disease of the Kidneys may result. You must act at once. Disorders of the kidneys brook no delay. One share of Common, par value $100, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share if prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

COAL

PROPERTY IN FULL OPERATION

Company owns 9,600 acres of coal property known throughout the coal trade as the New Campbellton Colliery, located on Bras D'Or Bay, County of Victoria, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia. Mine is fully equipped, producing and marketing tons of coal a day at a net profit of $1.00 a ton. Improvements are now being made that will increase the output to over 1,000 tons a day. On present output, figuring 300 working days in year, the net result will more than pay interest on entire issue of preferred, with output of 1,000 tons a day net result will be $300,000 per annum.

IRON

RICHEST ORE IN THE WORLD

Company owns in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances, 4000 acres of iron ore deposit, located Natashquan (tidewater) situated on North shore of Gulf of St. Lawrence, in the County of Saguenay, province of Quebec.

Deposits contain 20,000,000 tons of ore ABOVE SEA LEVEL ALONE.

Quality of ore is highest ever discovered, running from 69 per cent to 72 per cent in metallic iron.

More orders for the sale of this ore has been received by the Campany than can possibly be accepted, and at a price netting the Company a profit of $2 a ton F. O. B. vessels at Company's docks.

The secret of the excellent baking and roasting qualities of the Imperial Oxford oven is found in the diffusive flue—an improvement which no other range possesses.

This flue draws fresh air from the floor, superheats it and delivers it into the top of the oven through perforations which diffuse it evenly to front, sides and back. This gives a uniform heat throughout the oven, resulting in uniformly cooked food.

It is simple to prove the fuel economy of the heat-diffusing flue of the

When your oven is at baking heat block up the inlet and you will find the temperature of the oven will drop immediately, just like an ordinary range, unless the fire is stirred and more fuel added.

The fuel economy and cooking perfection of the Imperial Oxford Range is equalled by no other range on the market.

Pleasures of the Table.

G. H. Ellwanger, author of "The Pleasures of the Table," an account of gastronomy, reminds us that Sardanapalus, last of the Assyrian kings, offered a guerdon of a thousand pieces of gold to him who would produce a new dish. "Eat, drink, amuse thyself: all else is vanity," was his maxim, and the precept he desired to have engraven on his tomb. It is recorded that Mark Antony, more than usually pleased with his dinner, sent for the cook and presented him with a city of 35,000 inhabitants.

In England 400 or 500 years ago, people took four meals—breakfast at seven, dinner at ten, supper at four, and livery at eight. Since then, from an early hour in the morning the principal daily meal has advanced equally in France and England through every hour from ten in the forenoon until ten at night. In France in the thirteenth century nine in the morning was the dinner-hour; Henry VII. dined at eleven. In Cromwell's time one o'clock had come to be the fashionable hour, and in Addison's day two o'clock, which gradually became adjourned until four. Pope found fault with Lady Suffolk for dining so late as four, saying young people might become inured to such things, but as for himself, if she would adopt such unreasonable practices he must absent himself from Marble Hill. Four and five continued to be the popular dining-hour among the better classes until the second decade of the century, when dinner was further postponed, from which period it has steadily continued to encroach upon the evening.

The clergy have been always bulwarks of good living. Ellwanger tells a story of a French wedding dinner at which the officiating pastor was present. After every course he raised his glass and exclaimed "My children, with this you must drink some wine." The turn of dessert arriving, he repeated his injunction for the tenth time, again setting the example himself. "Pardon, Monsieur le Cure," one of the guests interrupted, "but with what do you not drink wine?" "With water, my son!"

Of Bignon's famous Paris restaurant Mr. Ellwanger revives these capital legends:

"Fifteen francs for a peach?" enquired Prince Narischkin; "they must be very scarce." "It isn't the peaches that are scarce, mon prince; it is the Narischkins." "Monsieur Bignon, a red herring at two and a half francs! It seems to me that is excessive." "But these prices are marked in your interest," rejoined the restaurateur. "It is the barrier I have established between my clients and the vulgar. Why do you come here? To be among yourselves, to avoid embarrassing or compromising surroundings. If I changed my prices the house would be invaded, and you would all leave."

Another patron who complained of a sauce was asked, "Did you dine here last evening?" "No," he replied. "That is the trouble, then; you spoiled your taste in the other restaurant." Still another guest objected to the charges on his bill comparing it with an identical breakfast of a few days previous, which amounted to eighteen and a half francs, whereas the breakfast in question was charged twenty-one francs eighteen centimes. "I will investigate the mistake," said Bignon, who, with the two bills, proceeded to his desk, returning shortly afterwards "It is very true, monsieur, that a mistake was made in your favor last Monday; but I make no claim for restitution!"

Inspired By the Muse.

He was calling on a young lady and had been talking against time for several hours, not noticing that she was, to say the least, slightly wearied.

"Do you know," he said, after completing a monologue of several thousand words, and thinking a little flattery would be appreciated, "while talking to night, I have felt as if I were inspired by one of the Muses. And which one do you think it is?"

He looked searchingly into her beautiful face. The modest blush for which he was watching proved to be a wide yawn, which grew wider as she answered:

"I guess the Muse that inspires you to-night must be Euterpe."

He didn't really know anything about mythology, so he couldn't tell just what she meant. But when he got home he took down his encyclopaedia, and there in cold type, staring him in the face, he saw:

"Euterpe—The Muse who presided over wind instruments."

The Love Cure.

The latest departure in medical treatment, according to an English exchange is "The Love Cure." It appears that certain sensitive natures—perhaps people who are afflicted with inordinate vanity and they are many—wither through the unkindness they meet with in the world. The Love Cure is devised to remedy this. The patients are surrounded with trained nurses who pander to their vanity with assiduity. If the patient is a woman they praise her beauty, her cleverness her taste, they admire her character, and by every conceivable means restore her confidence in herself. Self-confidence is to the things of this world that which Faith is to those of the next; it will "move mountains." The principle upon which the system is based is correct, and, no doubt, many could be treated with considerable success.

Utopia.

In time labor and capital grew into such accord that the workingmen lost no opportunity of showing their appreciation of the fidelity and steadiness of their employers.

As a mark of esteem, at the close of one year, the workingmen unanimously reduced their own salaries.

At the close of the next year they gave a further manifestation of their understanding of the needs of the employing classes by agreeing to work on legal holidays and Sundays without pay.

Of course the natural eventuation eventuated.

Emboldened by the apparent dependence of the laboring element, the employers' union voted a universal strike.

After that the same old effort to bring capital and labor together was resumed. —"Judge."

FINAL CLEARING PRICES.

The results of our buyers' extensive European trip are arriving daily.

Each and every article coming from that part of the world where it can be most advantageously bought.

We are hardly prepared to receive these yet. Summer goods are still here which must vacate our shelving before we can properly accommodate our fall lines.

If seasonable goods marked at very low prices induce buying, we will soon be out of our difficulty.

We have marked all warm weather materials at reductions that should clear goods not half as seasonable and stylish.

Many ladies whose immediate wants were already filled have purchased for the future, realizing in nearly every instance a saving of at least 50 per cent. on goods which will be "in it" as much next season as this.

Multitudes of equally worthy offerings await your inspection—it will be time well spent. Read below.

—A table of fine Wash Goods—Sateens—Prints—Muslins—Ginghams—new designs and colorings, regularly selling at from 10c to 50c, all at.........................Half Price

—Remnants at half marked price.

COLORED BLOUSES REDUCED.

There are many and varied reasons why the quantity of Colored Waists we sell increases each season.

No two women would give all the same reasons. But there are at least three we are confident everyone would give.

Style—Fit—Moderate Price.

We have marked all our "left overs" at three prices to effect a rapid clearance.

Styles and patterns are as desirable as any we have sold. Just the assortment ends. Here they are.

—Fine Colored Print Waists, plain ingrain patterns, cut in latest style were 50c, for..25c

—Fine Gingham, Print and Muslin Waists all colors, were 75c to $1.25, for..50c

—Gingham and Matting Waists, prettily made and trimmed, were $1.00 to $1.75, for..75c

COMING DRESS FABRICS.

Although August is still with us the number of enquiries we have had, as to what the new Fall Dress Goods will be like, convince us that already many are making plans for heavier garments.

The last few days our Dress Goods Section has been busy opening up new materials. To those who can come a visit will apprise quickly what is newest.

The mixed Tweed effects will certainly be leaders. Many in coarse basket weaves.

The Snowflake and tufted materials will also be shown to a greater extent than ever.

We have made preparation for the biggest Dress Goods season in our history.

If stylish materials at lowest cash prices induce buying our expectation will be realized.

—Stylish Tweed and mixed goods for Skirts and suits—very latest designs,....50c to $1.45 yd.

—Handsome Silk and Wool Skirt patterns, ...$15 00

NEW COLLARS AND BELTS.

Careful Buying brings to us a showing in collars and belts which for qualities and pretty styles we have never before equalled at the same Prices.

It is not hard to get belts and collars to sell at low prices. But it is hard to get the Newest in good Qualities to sell at a reasonable figure.

Prettier styles than our present assortment contains we have never shown. The prices are below, you can judge of them.

—Fancy tucked Blue Silk collar trimmed with Honoton Braid—Two medallions in front 25c

—Fancy Green Blue Grey or Pink silk collars tucked and trimmed with fancy Lace—Tab ends with medallions—very pretty 50c

Quick & Robertson's for Fine Clothes

There's no use of disputing the fact that this store stands pre-eminent in this city as the store for Men's Fine Clothes.

With our large and pleasing varieties, up-to-date styles, and good making, we've won the trade of every man, and especially the trade of those men who are particular about the clothes they wear.

And why shouldn't we? You can't find a store that has, Ready-Made, such exclusive styles in suitings and summer garments as we are showing and everyone of them is from the best British and Canadian Mills.

Then, too, every garment is built to come up to the our high standard—built by the best makers who know how and do give close attention to important parts of tailoring—such as adjusting the collars, shaping the shoulders, proper placing of the sleeves and stays and making of the button holes.

Clothes made this way never lose their shape. And by so doing we have overcome that appearance which markes clothes as being Ready-Made.

The prices for such goodness you'd expect to be high but they are not—are no more than you would pay for ordinary sorts elsewhere.

IT IS A PERPLEXING THING.

For the reader of newspaper advertisements to determine what is what. We do not use as large type as some, but we are sure that what we have to say is not the less important to any one who is interested in the subject of clothing at this time. Our summer suits are ready to speak for themselves, if you will but take time to inspect them, and we think you will find no fault with the prices. We are making an immense display of hot weather clothing and furnishings.—Quick & Robertson.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—You assisted them? A.—I had to; some of these bills were a half more.

Q—There is no doubt this point that every one of these enumerators for Deseronto lived in Deseronto. A.—I think so.

Q.—So they could not have expenses during their instruction? A.—I do not remember what they suggested the expenses were.

Q.—Could you suggest to the Committee what they were? A.—Some of these bills were half as much more.

Q.—I do not want to know about that. A.—I listened to the whole thing and fixed it to satisfy all round.

Q.—Then you put down expenses during instruction when you knew they had not any? A.—No, I took down what they told me and put it down there as expenses.

Q.—You wanted to get a certain amount and put it down there as expenses, is that so? A—Well, I suppose that is so.

Q.—Let us go further into this. This man Maloney has "seen the Doctor," etc., and I notice a great many others have seen the Doctor; what is that? A.—They had to go to the doctor to get the diseases people died from in the last year and had to get a statement from the doctor, a certificate about the disease they died of, and who they were and who registered and all that.

Q.—Could they not have got that from the Municipal Clerk? A.—That was the instructions; they could get it, too, but didn't.

Q.—Do not let us waste time; they went to the doctor and they charged $3? A.—For the day, yes.

Q.—I think you said the instructions were to get this information from the Municipal Clerk? A.—They were as well. In the schedule it gives them instructions to get them from the Municipal Clerk and visit the doctors and get them from the doctors.

A.—To confirm them? A.—For the reason that doctors are often in outside municipalities doctoring, as in Deseronto is often the case, and you might have to go ten miles to get the doctor that attended that person.

Q.—The next one is George Houle, who charges expenses re trip to Belleville $2. A—He went up there.

Q.—He was one of those who went up there who was attending his own business when you were giving instructions in Deseronto, and then went up to Belleville to be instructed? A.—He did not do it on account of looking after his own business.

Q.—But he had not been there the whole of the two days? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then he had not enough brains to understand your instructions? A.—I told those who needed more to come up to Belleville and they could revise their work. We had three days to give them. Some of them didn't need it, but a great many did. It was hard to get people who would how to do everything that was asked in these schedules. These people in Deseronto had no horse hire.

Q.—So they ought to be able to make it up some other way? A.—This amount is very small, anyway.

Q.—Then there is Edwards; Edwards is a bright man, Clerk of Court or something? A.—That is his brother.

Q.—He has expenses during instruction trip to Belleville, $3? A.—Yes, he was another one.

Q.—Have you his bill there? A.—Yes.

Q.—First, Edwards gets three days' instruction at $3, $9? A.—Yes.

Q.—And then he charges expenses during his trip to Belleville, $3? A. Yes.

Q.—The rest only got in a day, but he got in three days, and then he charges going to Belleville $3 and railway fare besides, $5? A.—Yes.

Q.—The railway fare is $1.35? A.—Something like that.

Q.—You know yourself it is, and yet this man is allowed $5 expenses going to Belleville for instructions, and you passed that? A.—As I say it was just the same as the other, their expenses were higher than this, they did a lot of work—

Q.—It is not a copper's expense either way. A.—Some of them had to do it anyway.

Q.—Will you suggest, Mr. Hurley, an item of expense that any enumerator in Deseronto had to expend? A.—They would have to expend a great deal more time.

Q.—We are referring to money. Tell me any item of expenditure any of the seven enumerators in Deseronto could have had; suggest it yourself. A.—Time is money.

Q.—Drop time. Tell me any expenditure in cash? A.—I do not know how much in cash, but there was a great deal to do in getting the Deseronto enumerators in shape, because they were mixed up so, away from home, many nationalities, some cannot talk English, and they put in a lot of time and they called them expenses, and that is the best I could make out of the whole thing.

Q.—So because you did not think these men were being paid enough by the Government you allowed this man $5 expenses? A.—That was really his expenses.

COUNCIL WILL NOW TAKE A HOLIDAY.

Adjourned Last Night Till Monday Evening, the 7th of September.

$2,500 Forfeit Money Has Been Placed in the Sinking Fund.

Tax Collector Not Yet Appointed — Will be Only One This Year.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held last evening, and the business transacted, whilst not very important, took considerable time. It was anticipated that a tax collector would be appointed, but the by-law appointing that official was left in abeyance.

The members present were Mayor Graham, Ald. McFee, Panter, Chown, Green Suiman, Marsh and Sinclair.

Communications.

From Sir Gilbert Parker, thanking the Council for the kind resolution recently passed in reference to him.

From Mr. G. H. Allen, Assistant Road Master of the G.T.R., asking the city to rent a grader which they owned.

From Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, calling attention to the bad condition of the sewer at the corner of Front St. and Victoria avenue. If same was not remedied trouble would no doubt ensue.

Committee of the Whole.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on communications, etc., Ald. Panter in the chair.

The communication from Mr. O'Flynn was considered.

Ald. Chown said he understood it was a private drain, but something should be done.

The Mayor suggested that the matter be referred to the Street Surveyor and the Chairman of Public Works. He made a motion to that effect, which prevailed.

Mr. Allen's communication was read, and as that gentleman was present he was allowed to speak. He said that the railway company were making a change in the east end of the yard and they desired a grader. They would not require it for a few days.

The Mayer thought that the company should be allowed to use the scraper free of charge, provided they returned it in as good condition as they received it. He made a motion to that effect, which carried.

Mr. Allen thanked the Council, promising the machine would be taken care of.

Sir Gilbert Parker's communication was authorized to be filed.

Two accounts were passed, namely, J. Gibson and H. Janeway $7.50 each.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

Under the head of introduction of by-laws, Ald. Panter asked if it was absolutely necessary to appoint tax collectors this evening.

Ald Chown thought it was important that the collector or collectors should be named.

Ald. Panter asked how the Council could appoint one of the present tax collectors in view of the by-law which was passed prohibiting a collector having more than one roll in his possession.

Ald. Chown suggested that the by-law to appoint a collector be fixed so as to come into force on the 7th or 8th of September, and this would help the collector to get the roll in his possession at present cleared up. If only one person was appointed collector this could be made conditional in the by-law.

Applications for the position of tax collector were read from Messrs. F. D. Diamond and Jos. Templeton.

The question of appointing one or two collectors was considered.

Ald. Chown thought that but one collector should be appointed, as the remuneration was small when the roll was divided into two parts. Mr. Chisholm had informed him (Ald. Chown) that he would not apply for the position of collector when the rolls was divided, as it did not pay.

Ald. Chown moved, seconded by Ald Green, that but one collector be appointed.—Carried.

Introduction of By-laws.

Ald. Chown introduced three by-laws, namely, one to appoint a collector for 1903 rolls and two to extend the rolls for 1901 and 1902.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws, Ald. Sinclair in the chair.

The By-law to appoint a tax collector was first taken up, but after a brief discussion it was decided to leave it in abeyance until the next meeting of the Council.

Motions.

On motion of Ald. McFee an account of $1.50 for new gas burners for the fire halls was passed.

Ald. Panter moved, seconded by Ald. McFee, that Wharf street be placed in a proper state of repair at a cost of $180.

The mover stated that ex-Ald. Wills had requested the work to be done, as the rolling mills were about to be started and the road needed repairing.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Inquiries.

Ald. Sinclair asked if the Chairman of the Executive had done anything in reference to the $2500 rolling mills forfeit.

All Chown said that he had that day signed the paper for the transfer of the money to the fund designated by the Council. There was also $27.40 interest added.

Mayor Grahma asked if anything was to be done in reference to a civic holiday. The city had not had one in three years. Most places had such a holiday, and the railways would allow return tickets at single fare.

Ald. Sinclair said some time ago it was customary to have a civic holiday, but in recent years Wednesday afternoons, during the summer months, were holidays. In his opinion there were enough holidays.

Ald. Chown thought there would not be much use in having a holiday unless there was some kind of a demonstration to attract people here. There was some talk of having, next year, a reunion of the old Belleville boys.

Ald. Sinclair—"We had a committee to look after this, but it received a black eye from the Board of Trade."

This ended the discussion and on motion the Council adjourned until Monday, September 7th.

Stiff Sentence for Grills

Thomas Grills was yesterday afternoon convicted of assaulting and threatening to do harm to one Mr. Bowers. The parties reside in Hungerford. Judge Fraleck tried the case, and when Grills was convicted sentenced him to one year in the Central Prison. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. Roberts for the accused

THE CAUSE OF DYSPEPTIC PAINS

They arise from the formation of gas, owing to improper digestion. A very prompt and efficient remedy is Polson's Nerviline. It relieves the distention instantly, and by its stimulating action on the stomach, aids digestion. Nerviline cures dyspeptic pains by removing the cause. Nerviline is also highly recommended for cramps, colic, summer complaint and inflammation. Sold in large 25 cent bottles everywhere.

Boy Charged With Arson.

A lad named James Ed. Langman was on trial to-day before Judge Fraleck, charged with arson. It is alleged that the lad set fire to an unoccupied building in the Township of Mayo. The building and some fencing was burned. Case in progress when we went to press. Mr. Anderson prosecuted and Mr. Masson for the accused.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

How it shakes one up, invades sleep, destroys strength, adds a real misery to life. Not the stomach, but the nerves are affected. Starved nerves make the whole trouble. You need Ferrozone because it's a nerve food. It supplies the elements that are needed to make rich, red blood. This is the savings bank of health. The richer the blood in red cells, the richer you're sure to be in health. Ferrozone quickly makes blood, strengthens the nervous system, strengthens the digestive organs and, presto! the nervous disturbance disappears. Sold by all druggists.

HOW FIRES MAY START.

Several Things That Will Cause Spontaneous Combustion.

Damp lampblack will ignite from the sun's rays. The same can be said of cotton waste moist with lard or other animal oil. Lampblack and a little oil or water will under certain conditions ignite spontaneously. Nitric acid and charcoal create spontaneous combustion. New printers' ink on paper when in contact with a steam pipe will ignite quickly. Boiled linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts on cotton waste will ignite in a few hours under a mild heat and will in time create enough heat to ignite spontaneously, says Cassier's Magazine. Bituminous coal should not be stored where it will come in contact with wood partitions or columns or against warm boiler settings or steam pipes. This coal should not be very deep if it is to be kept on storage for a long period. If piled in the basement of a building it should be shallow and free from moisture and under good ventilation. That liable to absorb moisture should be burned first. If on fire a small quantity of water showered on this kind of coal cokes it and retards any great supply of water reaching the fire, thus necessitating the overhauling of the pile. Iron chips, filings or turnings should not be stored in a shop in wooden boxes. The oily waste which is not infrequently thrown among them adds to the danger of fire from this source. The sweepings from the machine shop, if kept on hand, should never be placed over iron shavings. This mass of disintegrated iron is enough to incite heat and combustion. Iron and steel filings and turnings when mixed with oil will ignite spontaneously after becoming damp. A steam pipe against wood will cause the latter to ignite spontaneously after being carbonized, particularly if superheated steam enters the pipe, thus increasing the temperature.

CANCER OPERATIONS A FAILURE

The Constitutional Method, the Only Rational Successful Treatment.

Carefully compiled statistics of operations for cancer, show that fully eighty-five per cent. of those operated on have a recurrence of the disease, usually within a year after the operation is performed, and the result in these cases are rapidly fatal.

By the new method of Constitutional Treatment, the horrors and dangers of the operating table are avoided, and the cancer completely cured. Our simple, vegetable remedy searches out the cancer germs and poisons and eliminates them from the system, and cures the disease in the quiet of your home without pain or inconvenience. Send two stamps to B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., for full particulars.

The Metropolitan Stock Exchange.

INCORPORATED, MASS., 1890.

CAPITAL, $100,000 (Full Paid).

Stocks, Bonds, Grain, Cotton and Provisions bought for cash and immediate delivery, or carried on deposit of satisfactory security.

OFFICES, NO. 34, Bridge St., - Belleville, Ont.
THOS. E. MEPHAM, Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

TURKS OCCUPY KRUSHEVE.

Murderer of Russian Consul Rostkovski Executed, and Russia May Accept $80,000 Indemnity For Widow.

Constantinople, Aug. 15.—The imperial troops have occupied Krusheve, 25 miles north of Monastir, which was recently siezed by the insurgents. A force of 4,000 troops besieged the place and bombarded it with artillery. The fighting with the revolutionists is still proceeding outside the town. The panic continues at Monastir and the shops are closed.

Rostkovski's Murderer Executed.

A settlement of the indemnity for the murder of M. Rostkovski, the Russian consul at Monastir, is imminent. The Government's offer of $80,000 to the widow appears to be satisfactory to Russia. The Russian Government continues to insist on the execution of the murderer.

A court-martial held at Monastir Thursday condemned the gendarme Halim to death for the murder of M. Rostkovski, the Russian consul at Monastir. The sentence was immediately carried out. Another gendarme was sentenced to 15 years penal servitude.

Backing Up Hopelessness.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 15.—The Bulgarian Government is preparing a memorandum to the powers, giving statistics of the acts of oppression by the Turkish officials in Macedonia since the institution of the reform program three months ago, and other evidence in support of Bulgaria's belief in the hopelessness of expecting any good result from the Russo-Austrian reform plan.

BIG BRIBE FOR BOYD.

Former Member For North Grey Tells Why He Did Not Speak Long Ago of $10,000 Offered Him.

Owen Sound, Aug. 15.—Mr. George M. Boyd, the former representative for North Grey in the Legislature, has made the statement from a public platform that immediately previous to the protest trial which was held last November, he was approached and offered a consideration of $10,000 cash and a quarter interest in a valuable timber limit if he would drop the proceedings against the election of A. G. Mackay.

"The story is absolutely true," said Mr. Boyd. "I was actually offered ten thousand dollars to drop the protest against Mr. Mackay last fall. At the time that Mr. Gamey made his exposure in the House, I felt that it was my duty to tell my story then. I was restrained, unfortunately, by two citizens who knew the circumstances of the attempt to bribe me, but who refused then to sustain me in my charge, because this step would involve and disgrace personal friends on the other side of politics."

Beyond this generality, Mr. Boyd would not go at present.

Blow Up the Safe.

Preston, Aug. 15.—The safe at J. Ballantine & Co.'s foundry was blown open by burglars about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, but only a small amount of change and stamps was obtained. The door of the safe was blown clear up through the ceiling, in which it made a big hole, and even broke the scantling overhead. The combination of the safe was written on a card, which hung on the knob of the safe, but no attention was paid to it.

Hot Weather Beauty

The fresh bloom and beauty which is so attractive in women—the beauty of perfect health—falls an easy victim to the enervating heat of summer. The roses fade and a sickly pallor takes its place: nervous headaches leave dark shadows beneath the eyes: the eyes themselves lose their sparkle and lustre: rashes and blotches destroy the fine texture of the skin and almost without warning beauty has fled.

These troubles are but outward manifestations of the effect of hot weather upon the digestive system. With perfect digestion beauty can defy the heat.

"Nerves" lassitude, loss of appetite and the hundred and one troubles that make hot weather almost unbearable are unknown to the person with a sound digestion.

Before beauty has fled: before "nerves" headaches, indigestion, constipation and biliousness overtake you, buy a little box of

IRON-OX

Tiny Tonic Tablets

With them you can defy the heat, escape rashes and blotches, retain your appetite, preserve the roses in your cheeks, or make them bloom where they never bloomed before.

Iron-Ox Tiny Tablets are the best tonic for women and children. Best because they are dainty and gentle. Not a harsh purgative but a safe tonic-laxative. Pleasant to take—very certain in their effect.

Iron-Ox Tablets are a real cure for all derangements of the stomach and digestive organs.

BLOODY TRAIL OF THE TURK

Inhabitants of Unhappy Bulgaria Persecuted For Months.

Terrible Category of Murder, Torture, Incendiarism, Pillage and General Oppression—People Terrorized and Ruined—Appalling Cruelty—People Tortured With Red-Hot Irons—2,000 Bulgarians Shot at Smerdesch.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 17.—The Bulgarian Government has presented a memorandum to the powers setting out at great length the condition of affairs in Macedonia during the past three months, since the Turkish Government undertook to inaugurate the promised reforms. The most precise details, places, dates and names of persons are given in the memorandum, the whole constituting a terrible category of murder, torture, incendiarism, pillage and general oppression committed by the Ottoman soldiers and officials. These particulars were obtained entirely from official sources, such as the representatives of the Bulgarian Consuls and agents of the Bulgarian Government, and, in many instances, the reports made by Turkish authorities. The Bulgarian Government guarantees the absolute truth of every statement and challenges the Porte to disprove a single charge made in the memorandum.

Deeds Different From Words.

The memorandum begins by stating that during the past three months the Ottoman Government has taken a series of measures with the alleged intention of inaugurating the era of promised reform and of assuring peace and tranquility to the Bulgarian population of European Turkey, but which have had the contrary effect of further exasperating this population and reviving the revolutionary movement. Instead of proceeding solely against persons guilty of breaches of the public order, the military and civil authorities have sought every possible pretext to persecute, terrorize and ruin the Bulgarian inhabitants.

Wholesale massacres, individual murders, the destruction of villages, the pillaging and setting fire to houses, arrests, ill-treatments, tortures, arbitrary imprisonment, banishment, the closing and disorganizing of churches and schools, the ruining of merchants, the collection of taxes for many years in advance. such, proceeds the memorandum, are among the acts of the Ottoman Administration of the vilayets of Salonica, Monastir, Uskub and Adrianople.

Best People in Prisons.

The memorandum says that in the town of Salonica itself, the Bulgarian professors of the university, the students and shopkeepers, in fact, all intelligent Bulgarians in the city, have been cast into prison. One hundred and twenty soldiers entered the village of Gorna-Ribnitz, May 19, and tortured to death five men and two women. During the first three weeks of July, 25 villages in the district of Tikvesch were subjected to depredations of the Turkish soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks. The villagers were beaten and tortured; the women violated, and the houses plundered while the Administrative authorities looked on.

In the vilayet of Monastir, artillery bombarded and razed the flourishing town of Smerdesch. At the beginning of July, two Greek bands, with the connivance of the authorities, pillaged Bulgarian villages and murdered many of their inhabitants. In the vilayet of Uskub the entire Bulgarian population has been systematically persecuted since last May. The director of the Normal School at Uskub was imprisoned because his library contained the "revolutionary" works of "Othello" and "Les Miserables." In the districts of Palanka, Koschani, Koumanovo and Gostigar, the prisons are filled with Bulgarian priests, schoolmasters and merchants.

Tortured With Red-Hot Irons.

During June, the soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks terrorized the inhabitants of the Schtif district, torturing the people with red hot irons. Similar atrocities were perpetrated in the vilayet of Adrianople are cited.

Altogether, the memorandum gives particulars of no less than 131 individual and general cases of excesses and outrages committed by the Turkish authorities. In summarizing the specific details of the outrages mentioned, the memorandum declares that wholesale massacres were perpetrated by regulars and Bashi-Bazouks in the Town of Salonica and in several villages, while the scenes of carnage, pillage and incendiarism were very terrible. At Smerdesch, over 2,000 Bulgarians were shot, killed with swords or burned to death. Ov- the churches and schools were set on er two hundred and fifty houses and the churches and schools were set on fire and pillaged, the property taken being sold by the soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks in the neighboring places. Similar scenes occurred in four other villages. The villagers fled to the mountains. Over 3,000 men, women and children fled from the Sanjak of Seres, and even more from the Sanjak of Kirkklisze.

4,500 Taken Prisoners.

It is difficult, says the memorandum, to obtain the exact number of Bulgarians who were imprisoned, mostly on the flimiest pretexts, as when they were released others were immediately arrested. The estimates obtainable give for the vilayet of Salonica, 900 prisoners; for Uskub, 500; for Monastir, 500, and for Adrianople, 550. As information is lacking from many districts in the vilayets, it is thought that without exaggeration, the number of prisoners may be placed at even three times this total. Dealing with other acts of oppression, the memorandum states that the Bulgarian merchants and artisans living in Constantinople and Salonica were ordered to return to their native villages and were not allowed any time or opportunity to dispose of the business or property.

Businesses Utterly Ruined.

Some of these Bulgarians, who with their families had been established for 20 years or more, were utterly ruined. As the order applied equally to professors and schoolmasters, the Bulgarian schools were closed before the end of the school year. The authorities rigorously enforced the same order against the Bulgarian priests. Encouraged by the Ottoman authorities, the Greek bishops and arch-mandrites forced their way into the Bulgarian churches, burned the prayer books and employed menaces to compel the people to acknowledge the Greek patriarch. The Archmandrite of Salonica declared in a recent sermon that the Sultan did not want Bulgarian exarches in his Empire, if they remained they would be exterminated. In addition to the decree banishing the Bulgarian tradesmen from Constantinople and Salonica, the Porte adopted measures to ruin the traders elsewhere. Every possible means was used to install Mussulmans in Bulgarian villages.

Reduced to Serfdom.

On the slightest pretext the Bulgarians were forced to sell their lands to the Turks at any price the latter chose to pay. Bardened with taxes, liable to perfom statute labor for the Turkish land owners, the population is reduced to a state of serfdom. This is one of the principal causes of discontent, and when is added the exactions of the tax gatherers, it is not difficult to understand why the wretched people should revolt from such a despotic Government and servitude.

In conclusion, it asserts that the foregoing exposure once more condemns Ottoman Government, in Europe.

It says: "From sad experience, the Porte must learn that systematic persecution, cruel injustice and bloody repression do not restore order and peace in a country. The Porte accepted in principle the project of reform which it has not put into effect. It has declared that the project is insufficient. Lastly, the Porte formally promised the Bulgarian Government to cease the arrest of Bulgarian priests and schoolmasters, re-open the churches and schools, release the prisoners and punish the officials guilty of exactions; in short, to adopt a policy of justice and amelioration.

Porte Failed All Round.

"Not only has the Porte failed to observe a single one of these promises, but it has enacted sterner measures of repression.

"What must be the result of all this? Tired waiting, the fulfilment of promises of better conditions and driven to despair, the Bulgarian population have thrown themselves into a revolution which is now spreading in an Ottoman province, 150 miles from the Bulgarian frontier.

"The causes of this revolution are to-day known. The responsibility is fixed and the Porte can no longer accuse the Bulgarian principality."

The memorandum has made a strong impression in diplomatic circles. The Austrain diplomatic agent has already called on the Premier to express his anxiety regarding the results that may ensue from its publication. The French and Italian agents also expressed uneasiness, although they took a less gloomy view.

BLACK SEA FLEET SAILS.

Russia Will Exact Satisfaction For Murder of Her Consul.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 17.—A squadron of the Russian Black Sea fleet has been ordered to sail for Turkish waters.

Notification of this move has been telegraphed from Sebastopol to the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople.

The despatch of the squadron is intended to emphasize Russia's intention of exacting complete compliance with her demands as to satisfaction for the murder by a Turkish gendarme of her consul at Monastir.

Refuses $80,000.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The widow of M. Rostkovski, in informing Hilmi Pasha, the inspector general of Macedonia, that she would not accept the indemnity of $80,000 offered by the Porte for the murder of her husband, said she did not want Turkish charity.

SULTAN BUYS ARTILLERY.

British Ambassador Warns Sultan of Serious Macedonian Situation.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The Ottoman Government has concluded negotiations with the Krupp works for 32 batteries of quick-firing field artillery, each of six guns.

Britain Calls Sultan.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The British Ambassador has called the attention of the Porte to the serious situation in Macedonia. He pointed out that grave consequences may attend fresh murders of Consuls or foreign subjects. The Ambassador had an audience with the Sultan on Friday.

Independence by Manifesto.

London, Aug. 16.—The Evening Post states that the Macedonian committee is about to issue a manifesto proclaiming the independence of Macedonia and the establishment of a provisional Government.

Peter's New War Minister.

Belgrade, Aug. 17.—Colonel Solarovics has been appointed War Minister, Prof. Neorisavleivics Finance Minister, Prof. Ruzseit Minister of Public Instruction, and Michael Govanovics Minister of Justice, in the place of the holders of those portfolios who resigned Aug. 12, because it was stated they refused to consent to the military credits unless all the state officials who enjoyed the late King Alexander's confidence were dismissed.

A New G.T.P. Idea.

Winnipeg, Aug. 17.—Ex-Mayor Howland of Toronto writes a long letter to The Tribune, urging that the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill should not pass without having been submitted to the people by referendum.

Died While Bathing.

Harrow, Aug. 17.—Mr. Hart of Detroit, who was summering at Oxley, on Lake Erie, died suddenly Saturday afternoon from heart failure, while bathing in three feet of water.

Buggy Struck by Train.

Guelph, Aug. 17.—A man named Clarence McDonald, son of the postmaster at Schaw Station, C.P.R., met with what may be a fatal accident on crossing the G.T.R. at Gordon street, by being struck by the 6 o'clock train. His buggy was smashed, and the horse badly hurt. Mr. McDonald was thrown out, his leg broken, and he was internally injured. He was taken to the General Hospital.

HISTORY MAKERS GATHER

Fifth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of British Empire.

Six Hundred Delegates Already Present in Montreal, One Hundred More Than at Previous Meeting of the Organization—Lord Strathcona a Striking Personality in an Animated Scene—The Voting Strength.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—Six hundred prominent representatives of the commercial interests of the Empire were assembled in Montreal last night. The occasion is the fifth congress of Chambers of Commerce of the British world, and it bids fair to become a history-making event. The convention will meet in Windsor Hall at 10 o'clock to-day. It is significant that one hundred more delegates are present than at any previous meeting of the organization.

A fact even more pregnant with possibilities for the colonial connection on this side of the water is that in the two decades of the existence of the association this is the first meeting held outside of England. It is a concession to the conspicuous position Canada has assumed in point of commercial supremacy.

An Animated Scene.

The lobby of the Windsor last night presented an animated scene, for many of the delegates are accompanied by their ladies. A striking feature of the informal levee last evening was the presence of Lord Strathcona, the honorary president, who observed with evident satisfacwho observed with evident satisfaction the splendid array of delegates representing the Dominion. There are 230 of these exponents of all that is best in the Western world, but the pity of it is that the full number will not be admitted to the convention hall to-day. Secretary Murray said last night that the Canadian delegates were to blame for this exclusion. They failed to get their names in on time, and every available seat is filled. Perhaps thirty will be excluded. But as votes are accepted by the commercial bodies present and not by individual delegates, the Dominion will lose nothing in actual voting strength. There are 53 Canadian Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce represented. The United Kingdom boasts of 68 such organizations, with large lists of delegates. There are 150 from England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

Great Interest Aroused.

Many reporters of the press of England and the colonies and the States are present. The great dailies of New York, Washington and Boston have a staff of trained reportorial men, supported by several editorial commenters, present. Numerous magazine writers and independent syndicate news men from England and the States, are picking up entertaining stories for their people in all parts of the continent.

SALISBURY'S CONDITION GRAVE.

Advanced Kidney Trouble Makes His Death Seem Near.

London, Aug. 17.—The grave condition of Lord Salisbury is due to advanced kidney trouble, and he is not expected to outlive the month. Dropsy developed recently, and the patient's body was so swollen that he was unable to sit except in his special chair, the least movement being difficult.

The condition of the late Premier for some weeks has been such that the usual summer visit to Beaulieu has been abandoned. It recently became necessary to carry him from room to room.

No Papal Secretary.

Rome, Aug. 17.—As Cardinals Agliardi and Satolli both persist in their refusal of the office of Papal Secretary of State, Mgr. Merry del Val will act as such until the first Consistory is held, in October or November. At that time the Bishop of Padua, a very learned prelate and the bosom friend of the Pope, will be created a cardinal, and it is probable that he will then become the Secretary of State.

Alaska Boundary Commission.

London, Aug. 17.—The first session of the Alaska Commission will be held on Sept. 3 at the Foreign Office, when the date will be set for the oral argument, either a week or a fortnight or three weeks later. Senators Lodge and Turner are expected to join Secretary Root and ex-Secretary Foster when they arrive, at the end of August.

Engine Cleaner Terribly Scalded.

Hamilton, Aug. 17.—Hiram Belfrey, who lives on the Plains road, and who is employed in the G.T.R. roundhouse, was terribly scalded Saturday evening. He was under an engine cleaning it when hot water came pouring out, scalding him about the arms, chest, neck and face. He was taken to the city hospital.

Found Drowned.

Toronto, Aug. 17.—The body of Albert Murray of 35 Napier street, who has been missing since Tuesday, was found floating in the cut, at the foot of Cherry street, on Saturday. He was 53 years of age, and a carpenter, and was engaged on some work on the sandbar. An inquest will be held.

THE CRUISER PETREL'S CHASE

No Official Report by the Captain to Minister of Marine.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine Could Not Reach Petrel by Wire—Apparently Capt. Dunn Regards Chase of Silver Spray of Trivial Importance—Capt. Chau Has Found Out That He Was in Canadian Waters and Abandons Claims.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—The Department of Marine and Fisheries is still without an official report from Captain Dunn of the fishery cruiser Petrel, upon the chase of the American fishing tug Silver Spray. On Friday Hon. Mr. Prefontaine wired to Port Stanley asking Capt. Dunn to forward him a brief account of the matter by telegraph, but the message was undelivered, the Petrel not being in port. The duties of the cruiser in patrolling the boundary line in Lake Erie kept her pretty well employed, so that it is not easy to determine her exact whereabouts for the purpose of communication.

The fact, however, that the master of the Petrel did not forward a report to the department immediately indicates that Capt. Dunn regarded the chase of the Silver Spray as a very trivial occurrence. Certainly the thrilling stories telegraphed to the press from Erie, Pa., are looked upon as being mainly fabrications. The talk of united action upon the part of the American poachers to capture the Petrel is, of course, not taken seriously. However, as that cruiser has proved too slow to do effective work in rounding up the poachers, the Government will in all probability put a speedier vessel on duty in Lake Erie before many days.

Capt. Chau Abandons His Case.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 17.—The contemplated case of Capt. Christopher S. Chau against the Canadian Government for the action of the patrol boat Petrel in firing upon the fishing tug Silver Spray on Wednesday, when the vessel was alleged to have been in Canadian waters will be dropped. Skipper Chau was advised by Collector of the Port Brown to ascertain his exact location at the time of the trouble before taking the matter to the United States authorities. He has done so, and last night stated that he was over the line. The statement is also made by one of the captains of the fishing fleet that nearly all of the tugs were over the boundary, and that the Silver Spray was at least two miles beyond the American waters.

EDITOR PIRIE GONE.

The End Came on Saturday Night—Grief and Ill-Health.

Hamilton, Aug. 17.—A. F. Pirie, editor and proprietor of The Dundas Banner, died Saturday night at 1 o'clock. It was about the same hour, just one week ago, that he placed a revolver at his temple and shot himself through the brain. He was conscious for a few minutes at a time several times since, but made no explanation of the deed.

He was very successful in his business, and had plenty of money at the time of his death. Grief over his wife's death and ill-health are what are held responsible.

The dead editor was 52 years of age. He has lived in Dundas ever since 1889. His father was the publisher of The Guelph Herald, and it was there that Mr. Pirie made his first start in newspaper work. He was afterwards editor of The Toronto Telegram, and The Montreal Star.

This family survives him: Fraser, Elsie, Goldie and Jean, all of tender years; Charles N. Pirie, a brother, lives in Toronto.

The funeral will take place this afternoon.

Police Saved His Life.

Buffalo, Aug. 17.—Jack Glenister, the Boston swimmer, who said he would dive from the Cantilever bridge and swim the rapids below Niagra Falls yesterday, left yesterday afternoon with the avowed intention of performing the feat that cost Capt. Webb his life. When Glenister appeared a police sergeant ordered him to leave the Falls at once. The officer boarded a car with Glenister and escorted him to the city line, the latter returning to Buffalo. Glenister says he will swim the rapids some day this week.

Vesuvius Eruption Grows.

Naples, Aug. 17.—The eruption of Vesuvius, somewhat increased to-day. The stream of lava flowing the crater is divided into two branches. The longer reaches a distance of 2,600 feet in the direction of the Village of Ottajaub, and the other is now 2,300 feet towards Pompeii. There is no immediate danger.

150 Killed in Alps.

London, Aug. 17.—The death toll in the Alps this season has been very large. Already more than three hundred accidents have been recorded, resulting in the loss of 150 lives. No district has escaped.

No Closed Season.

Windsor, Aug. 17.—The Canadian Government has passed an Order-in-Council abolishing the close season for whitefish in the waters bordering on Essex County.

Dr. Tupper Gets Divorce.

New York, Aug. 17.—Dr. C. O. Tupper, formerly of Canada, has secured a divorce from his wife.

THE REASON WHY.

Heals the throat, cures the cough, makes breathing easy,—that's why Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is prescribed by physicians for bronchitis, acute or chronic. It is pleasant to take, agrees with the stomach, and is better than emulsions made from fish oils or other fats.

DR. OILLE DEAD.

Well Known St. Catharines Citizen Passes at the Age of 73.

St. Catharines, Aug. 17.—One of St. Catharines' most enterprising citizens in the person of Lucius S. Oille, M.D., died Saturday morning at his late residence on Queen street at the age of 73 years, after an illness of several months. The late Dr. Oille entered public life as a councillor for St. Andrew's Ward in 1868, and was elected to the mayoralty in 1878. He also was chosen warden of the County of Lincoln for one term. He took an active part in the work of establishing the civic waterworks system, and was chairman of the Water Commission for a number of years. He was one of the promoters of the Niagara Central Railway, and the local street car line between this city, Merritton and Thorold, which was then operated by horse power, and was later transformed into an electric line, being the pioneer trolley line in Canada. For a number of years he was president of the Board of Trade. Dr. Oille built the Grand Central Hotel, and many other buildings in this city, and at one time was one of the largest property owners. Deceased was born in the Township of Pelham on Oct. 6, 1830.

BLOODY TRAIL OF THE TURK

Inhabitants of Unhappy Bulgaria Persecuted For Months.

Terrible Category of Murder, Torture, Incendiarism, Pillage and General Oppression—People Terrorized and Ruined—Appalling Cruelty—People Tortured With Red-Hot Irons—2,000 Bulgarians Shot at Smerdesch.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 17.—The Bulgarian Government has presented a memorandum to the powers setting out at great length the condition of affairs in Macedonia during the past three months, since the Turkish Government undertook to inaugurate the promised reforms. The most precise details, places, dates and names of persons are given in the memorandum, the whole constituting a terrible category of murder, torture, incendiarism, pillage and general oppression committed by the Ottoman soldiers and officials. These particulars were obtained entirely from official sources, such as the representatives of the Bulgarian Consuls and agents of the Bulgarian Government, and, in many instances, the reports made by Turkish authorities. The Bulgarian Government guarantees the absolute truth of every statement and challenges the Porte to disprove a single charge made in the memorandum.

Deeds Different From Words.

The memorandum begins by stating that during the past three months the Ottoman Government has taken a series of measures with the alleged intention of inaugurating the era of promised reform and of assuring peace and tranquility to the Bulgarian population of European Turkey, but which have had the contrary effect of further exasperating this population and reviving the revolutionary movement. Instead of proceeding solely against persons guilty of breaches of the public order, the military and civil authorities have sought every possible pretext to persecute, terrorize and ruin the Bulgarian inhabitants.

Wholesale massacres, individual murders, the destruction of villages, the pillaging and setting fire to houses, arrests, ill-treatments, tortures, arbitrary imprisonment, banishment, the closing and disorganizing of churches and schools, the ruining of merchants, the collection of taxes for many years in advance, such, proceeds the memorandum, are among the acts of the Ottoman Administration of the vilayets of Salonica, Monastir, Uskub and Adrianople.

Best People in Prisons.

The memorandum says that in the town of Salonica itself, the Bulgarian professors of the university, the students and shopkeepers, in fact, all intelligent Bulgarians in the city, have been cast into prison. One hundred and twenty soldiers entered the village of Gorna-Ribnitz, May 19, and tortured to death five men and two women. During the first three weeks of July, 25 villages in the district of Tikvesch were subjected to depredations of the Turkish soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks. The villagers were beaten and tortured; the women violated, and the houses plundered while the Administrative authorities looked on.

In the vilayet of Monastir, artillery bombarded and razed the flourishing town of Smerdesch. At the beginning of July, two Greek bands, with the connivance of the authorities, pillaged Bulgarian villages and murdered many of their inhabitants. In the vilayet of Uskub the entire Bulgarian population has been systematically persecuted since last May. The director of the Normal School at Uskub was imprisoned because his library contained the "revolutionary" works of "Othello" and "Les Miserables." In the districts of Palanka, Koschani, Koumanovo and Gostigar, the prisons are filled with Bulgarian priests, schoolmasters and merchants.

Tortured With Red-Hot Irons.

During June, the soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks terrorized the inhabitants of the Schtif district, torturing the people with red hot irons. Similar atrocities were perpetrated in the vilayet of Adrianople are cited.

Altogether, the memorandum gives particulars of no less than 131 individual and general cases of excesses and outrages committed by the Turkish authorities. In summarizing the specific details of the outrages mentioned, the memorandum declares that wholesale massacres were perpetrated by regulars and Bashi-Bazouks in the Town of Salonica and in several villages, while the scenes of carnage, pillage and incendiarism were very terrible. At Smerdesch, over 2,000 Bulgarians were shot, killed with swords or burned to death. Over the churches and schools were set on er two hundred and fifty houses and the churches and schools were set on fire and pillaged, the property taken being sold by the soldiers and Bashi-Bazouks in the neighboring places. Similar scenes occurred in four other villages. The villagers fled to the mountains. Over 3,000 men, women and children fled from the Sanjak of Seres, and even more from the Sanjak of Kirkklisze.

4,500 Taken Prisoners.

It is difficult, says the memorandum, to obtain the exact number of Bulgarians who were imprisoned, mostly on the flimiest pretexts, as when they were released others were immediately arrested. The estimates obtainable give for the vilayet of Salonica, 900 prisoners; for Uskub, 500; for Monastir, 500, and for Adrianople, 550. As information is lacking from many districts in the vilayets, it is thought that without exaggeration, the number of prisoners may be placed at even three times this total. Dealing with other acts of oppression, the memorandum states that the Bulgarian merchants and artisans living in Constantinople and Salonica were ordered to return to their native villages and were not allowed any time or opportunity to dispose of the business or property.

Businesses Utterly Ruined.

Some of these Bulgarians, who with their families had been established for 20 years or more, were utterly ruined. As the order applied equally to professors and schoolmasters, the Bulgarian schools were closed before the end of the school year. The authorities rigorously enforced the same order against the Bulgarian priests. Encouraged by the Ottoman authorities, the Greek bishops and arch-mandrites forced their way into the Bulgarian churches, burned the prayer books and employed menaces to compel the people to acknowledge the Greek patriarch. The Archmandrite of Salonica declared in a recent sermon that the Sultan did not want Bulgarian exarches in his Empire, if they remained they would be exterminated. In addition to the decree banishing the Bulgarian tradesmen from Constantinople and Salonica, the Porte adopted measures to ruin the traders elsewhere. Every possible means was used to install Mussulmans in Bulgarian villages.

Reduced to Serfdom.

On the slightest pretext the Bulgarians were forced to sell their lands to the Turks at any price the latter chose to pay. Burdened with taxes, liable to perfom statute labor for the Turkish land owners, the population is reduced to a state of serfdom. This is one of the principal causes of discontent, and when is added the exactions of the tax gatherers, it is not difficult to understand why the wretched people should revolt from such a despotic Government and servitude.

In conclusion, it asserts that the foregoing exposure once more condemns Ottoman Government in Europe.

It says: "From sad experience, the Porte must learn that systematic persecution, cruel injustice and bloody repression do not restore order and peace in a country. The Porte accepted in principle the project of reform which it has not put into effect. It has declared that the project is insufficient. Lastly, the Porte formally promised the Bulgarian Government to cease the arrest of Bulgarian priests and schoolmasters, re-open the churches and schools, release the prisoners and punish the officials guilty of exactions; in short, to adopt a policy of justice and amelioration.

Porte Failed All Round.

"Not only has the Porte failed to observe a single one of these promises, but it has enacted sterner measures of repression.

"What must be the result of all this? Tired waiting, the fulfilment of promises of better conditions and driven to despair, the Bulgarian population have thrown themselves into a revolution which is now spreading in an Ottoman province, 150 miles from the Bulgarian frontier.

"The causes of this revolution are to-day known. The responsibility is fixed and the Porte can no longer accuse the Bulgarian principality."

The memorandum has made a strong impression in diplomatic circles. The Austrain diplomatic agent has already called on the Premier to express his anxiety regarding the results that may ensue from its publication. The French and Italian agents also expressed uneasiness, although they took a less gloomy view.

BLACK SEA FLEET SAILS.

Russia Will Exact Satisfaction For Murder of Her Consul.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 17.—A squadron of the Russian Black Sea fleet has been ordered to sail for Turkish waters.

Notification of this move has been telegraphed from Sebastopol to the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople.

Refuses $80,000.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The widow of M. Rostkovski, in informing Hilmi Pasha, the inspector general of Macedonia, that she would not accept the indemnity of $80,000 offered by the Porte for the murder of her husband, said she did not want Turkish charity.

SULTAN BUYS ARTILLERY.

British Ambassador Warns Sultan of Serious Macedonian Situation.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The Ottoman Government has concluded negotiations with the Krupp works for 32 batteries of quick-firing field artillery, each of six guns.

Britain Calls Sultan.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The British Ambassador has called the attention of the Porte to the serious situation in Macedonia. He pointed out that grave consequences may attend fresh murders of Consuls or foreign subjects. The Ambassador had an audience with the Sultan on Friday.

Independence by Manifesto.

London, Aug. 16.—The Evening Post states that the Macedonian committee is about to issue a manifesto proclaiming the independence of Macedonia and the establishment of a provisional Government.

Peter's New War Minister.

Belgrade, Aug. 17.—Colonel Solarovics has been appointed War Minister, Prof. Neorisavleivics Finance Minister, Prof. Ruzseit Minister of Public Instruction, and Michael Govanovics Minister of Justice, in the place of the holders of those portfolios who resigned Aug. 12, because it was stated they refused to consent to the military credits unless all the state officials who enjoyed the late King Alexander's confidence were dismissed.

A New G.T.P. Idea.

Winnipeg, Aug. 17.—Ex-Mayor Howland of Toronto writes a long letter to The Tribune, urging that the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill should not pass without having been submitted to the people by referendum.

Died While Bathing.

Harrow, Aug. 17.—Mr. Hart of Detroit, who was summering at Oxley, on Lake Erie, died suddenly Saturday afternoon from heart failure, while bathing in three feet of water.

Buggy Struck by Train.

Guelph, Aug. 17.—A man named Clarence McDonald, son of the postmaster at Schaw Station, C.P.R., met with what may be a fatal accident on crossing the G.T.R. at Gordon street, by being struck by the 6 o'clock train. His buggy was smashed, and the horse badly hurt. Mr. McDonald was thrown out, his leg broken, and he was internally injured. He was taken to the General Hospital.

HISTORY MAKERS GATHER

Fifth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of British Empire.

Six Hundred Delegates Already Present in Montreal, One Hundred More Than at Previous Meeting of the Organization—Lord Strathcona a Striking Personality in an Animated Scene—The Voting Strength.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—Six hundred prominent representatives of the commercial interests of the Empire were assembled in Montreal last night. The occasion is the fifth congress of Chambers of Commerce of the British world, and it bids fair to become a history-making event. The convention will meet in Windsor Hall at 10 o'clock to-day. It is significant that one hundred more delegates are present than at any previous meeting of the organization.

A fact even more pregnant with possibilities for the colonial connection on this side of the water is that in the two decades of the existence of the association this is the first meeting held outside of England. It is a concession to the conspicuous position Canada has assumed in point of commercial supremacy.

An Animated Scene.

The lobby of the Windsor last night presented an animated scene, for many of the delegates are accompanied by their ladies. A striking feature of the informal levee last evening was the presence of Lord Strathcona, the honorary president, who observed with evident satisfacwho observed with evident satisfaction the splendid array of delegates representing the Dominion. There are 230 of these exponents of all that is best in the Western world, but the pity of it is that the full number will not be admitted to the convention hall to-day. Secretary Murray said last night that the Canadian delegates were to blame for this exclusion. They failed to get their names in on time, and every available seat is filled. Perhaps thirty will be excluded. But as votes are accepted by the commercial bodies present and not by individual delegates, the Dominion will lose nothing in actual voting strength. There are 53 Canadian Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce represented. The United Kingdom boasts of 68 such organizations, with large lists of delegates. There are 150 from England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

Great Interest Aroused.

Many reporters of the press of England and the colonies and the States are present. The great dailies of New York, Washington and Boston have a staff of trained reportorial men, supported by several editorial commenters, present. Numerous magazine writers and independent syndicate news men from England and the States, are picking up entertaining stories for their people in all parts of the continent.

SALISBURY'S CONDITION GRAVE.

Advanced Kidney Trouble Makes His Death Seem Near.

London, Aug. 17.—The grave condition of Lord Salisbury is due to advanced kidney trouble, and he is not expected to outlive the month. Dropsy developed recently, and the patient's body was so swollen that he was unable to sit except in his special chair, the least movement being difficult.

The condition of the late Premier for some weeks has been such that the usual summer visit to Beaulieu has been abandoned. It recently became necessary to carry him from room to room.

No Papal Secretary.

Rome, Aug. 17.—As Cardinals Agliardi and Satolli both persist in their refusal of the office of Papal Secretary of State, Mgr. Merry del Val will act as such until the first Consistory is held, in October or November. At that time the Bishop of Padua, a very learned prelate and the bosom friend of the Pope, will be created a cardinal, and it is probable that he will then become the Secretary of State.

Alaska Boundary Commission.

London, Aug. 17.—The first session of the Alaska Commission will be held on Sept. 3 at the Foreign Office, when the date will be set for the oral argument, either a week or a fortnight or three weeks later. Senators Lodge and Turner are expected to join Secretary Root and ex-Secretary Foster when they arrive, at the end of August.

Engine Cleaner Terribly Scalded.

Hamilton, Aug. 17.—Hiram Belfrey, who lives on the Plains road, and who is employed in the G.T.R. roundhouse, was terribly scalded Saturday evening. He was under an engine cleaning it when hot water came pouring out, scalding him about the arms, chest, neck and face. He was taken to the city hospital.

Found Drowned.

Toronto, Aug. 17.—The body of Albert Murray of 35 Napier street, who has been missing since Tuesday, was found floating in the cut, at the foot of Cherry street, on Saturday. He was 53 years of age, and a carpenter, and was engaged on some work on the sandbar. An inquest will be held.

THE CRUISER PETREL'S CHASE

No Official Report by the Captain to Minister of Marine.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine Could Not Reach Petrel by Wire—Apparently Capt. Dunn Regards Chase of Silver Spray of Trivial Importance—Capt. Chau Has Found Out That He Was in Canadian Waters and Abandons Claims.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—The Department of Marine and Fisheries is still without an official report from Captain Dunn of the fishery cruiser Petrel, upon the chase of the American fishing tug Silver Spray. On Friday Hon. Mr. Prefontaine wired to Port Stanley asking Capt. Dunn to forward him a brief account of the matter by telegraph, but the message was undelivered, the Petrel not being in port. The duties of the cruiser in patrolling the boundary line in Lake Erie kept her pretty well employed, so that it is not easy to determine her exact whereabouts for the purpose of communication.

The fact, however, that the master of the Petrel did not forward a report to the department immediately indicates that Capt. Dunn regarded the chase of the Silver Spray as a very trivial occurrence. Certainly the thrilling stories telegraphed to the press from Erie, Pa., are looked upon as being mainly fabrications. The talk of united action upon the part of the American poachers to capture the Petrel is, of course, not taken seriously. However, as that cruiser has proved too slow to do effective work in rounding up the poachers, the Government will in all probability put a speedier vessel on duty in Lake Erie before many days.

Capt. Chau Abandons His Case.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 17.—The contemplated case of Capt. Christopher S. Chau against the Canadian Government for the action of the patrol boat Petrel in firing upon the fishing tug Silver Spray on Wednesday, when the vessel was alleged to have been in Canadian waters will be dropped. Skipper Chau was advised by Collector of the Port Brown to ascertain his exact location at the time of the trouble before taking the matter to the United States authorities. He has done so, and last night stated that he was over the line. The statement is also made by one of the captains of the fishing fleet that nearly all of the tugs were over the boundary, and that the Silver Spray was at least two miles beyond the American waters.

EDITOR PIRIE GONE.

The End Came on Saturday Night—Grief and Ill-Health.

Hamilton, Aug. 17.—A. F. Pirie, editor and proprietor of The Dundas Banner, died Saturday night at 1 o'clock. It was about the same hour, just one week ago, that he placed a revolver at his temple and shot himself through the brain. He was conscious for a few minutes at a time several times since, but made no explanation of the deed.

He was very successful in his business, and had plenty of money at the time of his death. Grief over his wife's death and ill-health are what are held responsible.

The dead editor was 52 years of age. He has lived in Dundas ever since 1889. His father was the publisher of The Guelph Herald, and it was there that Mr. Pirie made his first start in newspaper work. He was afterwards editor of The Toronto Telegram, and The Montreal Star.

This family survives him: Fraser, Elsie, Goldie and Jean, all of tender years; Charles N. Pirie, a brother, lives in Toronto.

The funeral will take place this afternoon.

Police Saved His Life.

Buffalo, Aug. 17.—Jack Glenister, the Boston swimmer, who said he would dive from the Cantilever bridge and swim the rapids below Niagra Falls yesterday, left yesterday afternoon with the avowed intention of performing the feat that cost Capt. Webb his life. When Glenister appeared a police sergeant ordered him to leave the Falls at once. The officer boarded a car with Glenister and escorted him to the city line, the latter returning to Buffalo. Glenister says he will swim the rapids some day this week.

Vesuvius Eruption Grows.

Naples, Aug. 17.—The eruption of Vesuvius, somewhat increased to-day. The stream of lava flowing the crater is divided into two branches. The longer reaches a distance of 2,600 feet in the direction of the Village of Ottajaub, and the other is now 2,300 feet towards Pompeii. There is no immediate danger.

150 Killed in Alps.

London, Aug. 17.—The death toll in the Alps this season has been very large. Already more than three hundred accidents have been recorded, resulting in the loss of 150 lives. No district has escaped.

No Closed Season.

Windsor, Aug. 17.—The Canadian Government has passed an Order-in-Council abolishing the close season for whitefish in the waters bordering on Essex County.

Dr. Tupper Gets Divorce.

New York, Aug. 17.—Dr. C. O. Tupper, formerly of Canada, has secured a divorce from his wife.

THE REASON WHY.

Heals the throat, cures the cough, makes breathing easy,—that's why Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is prescribed by physicians for bronchitis, acute or chronic. It is pleasant to take, agrees with the stomach, and is better than emulsions made from fish oils or other fats.

DR. OILLE DEAD.

Well Known St. Catharines Citizen Passes at the Age of 73.

St. Catharines, Aug. 17.—One of St. Catharines' most enterprising citizens in the person of Lucius S. Oille, M.D., died Saturday morning at his late residence on Queen street at the age of 73 years, after an illness of several months. The late Dr. Oille entered public life as a councillor for St. Andrew's Ward in 1868, and was elected to the mayoralty in 1878. He also was chosen warden of the County of Lincoln for one term. He took an active part in the work of establishing the civic waterworks system, and was chairman of the Water Commission for a number of years. He was one of the promoters of the Niagara Central Railway, and the local street car line between this city, Merritton and Thorold, which was then operated by horse power, and was later transformed into an electric line, being the pioneer trolley line in Canada. For a number of years he was president of the Board of Trade. Dr. Oille built the Grand Central Hotel, and many other buildings in this city, and at one time was one of the largest property owners. Deceased was born in the Township of Pelham on Oct. 6, 1830.

JEREMIAH NOT ALONE.

ANOTHER GRIT "BOOKKEEPER" ALLOWED 28 DAYS' HORSE HIRE IN 21 DAYS.

As the investigation before the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons proceeds, more light is thrown upon the manner in which Grit Census Commissioners and Grit Census enumerators manipulated their accounts so as to pay themselves well for the work which they were supposed to do.

Following is further evidence of how Grit Commissioners and Grit enumerators of the Hurley type got even with the Government who made promises which they did not fulfil, after reading which the taxpayer will no longer wonder why the taking of the census in 1901 cost double what it did in 1891:

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 13.—Mr. A. P. McDougall, Census Commissioner for West Middlesex in 1900, was examined before the Public Accounts Committee this morning. He received his instructions from Mr. McKelcan, of London, and had a letter promising him four dollars per day remuneration for his work. He did not get what he was promised but received $258 in all. He claimed $468, including 74 days' work. He was only allowed $159 for time. He claimed $29 for instructing his enumerators, but could only account for ten days on examination. "The other days I laboured amongst my enumerators continuously," he said.

Mr. Robert Wilson, of Strathroy, managed to get 28 days of horse hire during the 24 days of April, 1901. Witness admitted that deducting Sundays there could only have been 21 days, and could not account for the odd seven days; but supposed Mr. Wilson put them in his account, "and I allowed them." There was also an addition of $15.70 to this enumerator's account, which witness swore was in his writing, but it is so long ago that he could not remember. Mr. Caddy also was allowed extra days, and witness had added an amount to the account, but remembered nothing. Additions to the amounts claimed by enumerators, had been made in witness' handwriting as follows: Cullenthorpe, $36.70; Chisholm, $8.75; Milton R. Brown, $48; John Bull, $15; but when asked why he had added them he merely answered, "I remember nothing about them," and smiled.

Mr. Neil Smith, a tailor of Glencoe, enumerator in a village, was allowed 28 days' horse hire, "because he said he was entitled to it."

Charge after charge was inquired into and all dismissed by witness with the answer: "He put it in his account and I thought it was correct"; in one case "I thought he was an honest man" being added.

He did not look upon horse hire as expense or believe it was so intended. He did not remember enquiring into the accuracy of any charge made by any of the enumerators, nor any reason why he made the additions to certain enumerators bills.

One must, after reading the above and similar cases which have been dragged to light during the investigation before the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons, come to the conclusion that Grit Government officials do not consider it wrong to manipulate their accounts so as to get more than they are entitled to. Unfortunate state of political morals truly.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Two more days, and our old friend, Sir Tea Lipton, will know what future has in store for him this time. Here's lashings of luck to Lipton!

• • •

The worthy baronet recently made public a letter which he had received from a Staten Island man, who really seems to have good grounds for hoping the Shamrock will win this time. The letter was as follows:

"Sir Thomas—I am an Irishman and I have an Irish wife. Our windows overlook the bay. When your Shamrock I. came over here my wife rose to the occasion and presented me with a son. When Shamrock II. arrived she again rose to the occasion and presented me with a daughter.

"When your third Shamrock came she again recognized the occasion by presenting me with a son, to whom I hope you'll stand godfather. But I do earnestly hope you'll get that cup this time, for if you bring another Shamrock over here I'll be a busted man.

"If, however, you do have hard luck, for heaven's sake don't come back after the cup with a schooner, for if you do the old woman will make it out as her duty to present me with twins on that occasion."

Belleville educational institutions are to be congratulated on the good showing made by them in the recent matriculation exams. The fact that a Belleville High School pupil, Mr. H. J. Coon, captured the Chancellor's $200 scholarship in Queen's University, Kingston, and another, Mr. J. F. Kenney, stood third on the list for Toronto University, capturing an Edward Blake scholarship worth $186, shows that the faculty of our High School are doing excellent work. This might well be made a note of by a few detractors. It is also pleasing to note that Mr. F. W. Rathman, of Albert College, stood sixth on Toronto University's list, capturing an Edward Blake scholarship worth $128. The Intelligencer heartily congratulates these bright young men, and hopes for them a career of usefulness commensurate with their ability.

The Hamilton Times' carnival number is a fine publication. The illustrations are good and the subject matter very readable. In fact, the whole thing is quite up to the Times, which is saying a good deal.

Fourteen thousand people used the free swimming baths in Toronto last week, and, so far as can be learned, the waterworks system didn't lose a customer.

King Edward publicly thanked the newspaper men who followed him in his recent tour through Ireland, which shows that the King, exalted though his position is, appreciates a useful power when he sees it.

Two prominent political workers in this city have made a peculiar bet, namely, that inside of a year Hon. G. W. Ross will be deposed from power. One thing is sure, Ross is afraid to bring on the bye-elections, and with good reason. Taking everything into consideration, it begins to look as though our friends the Grits, both in Ontario and throughout the Dominion, were "up against it," as the boys would say.

Are we going to have any kind of a celebration on Labor day? At present it looks as though the only hilarity will be a meeting of the City Council, who are booked to come together again on that date, after their long rest.

"What constitutes a good witness?" was the subject discussed by a city minister last night. Well, now, that depends. In the opinion of Hon. Mr. Stratton, a good witness is one who can "forget some things." Some people might think Mr. Hurley was a good witness, though he never opened his mouth but what, as the Irishman said, he put his foot into it.

• • •

Large numbers of people went to Manitoba to-day to harvest the wheat crop, careless of the fact that Belleville's phenomenal weed crop is suffering from over-ripeness and no man wields the sickle!

• • •

The Pope says the Irish are very dear to him. Considering that he is soon going to hand them $50,000,000, John Bull can say they are very dear to him, too.

• • •

A glance at the list of delegates to the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, now meeting in Montreal, impresses one with the fact that our three Belleville delegates are in fairly swift company. But they can be depended on to bear themselves with dignity and prove an honor to the city they represent.

• • •

The telegraphic report says that some thirty of the Canadian delegates may, owing to lack of room, be excluded from the convention hall. We know one or two of the Belleville delegates who won't be excluded without a pretty stiff argument.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE.

Lacrosse results on Saturday: Toronto 5, Nationals 7; Brantford 8, Port Hope 4; Tecumsehs 2, Oshawas 0; Capitals 11, Cornwalls 0.

Jeffries' share of the receipts at the recent prize fight was $32,750, Corbett getting $10,909.

Pitcher Briggs, of the Toronto Baseball Club, has won ten straight games.

Shamrock Third and Reliance will be officially measured on Wednesday, when the question of time allowance will be settled. It is expected that Reliance will have to allow Shamrock something like two minutes.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

MUSKOKA'S POPULARITY.

The following voluntary testimonial of the Muskoka region and Royal Muskoka Hotel was received at the Grand Trunk General Offices recently from one of the most prominent doctors in New York City, who was sojourning for a few weeks in that district:—

"I take pleasure in recommending the "Muskoka" region as a health resort of the first class. Its altitude, dry atmospheric conditions, and water supply free from infection, make it particularly beneficial.

"The Royal Muskoka Hotel, a hotel perfect in all its appointments, adds materially to the comfort of the tourist."

The thousands of people who are now enjoying the summer months in the "Highlands of Ontario" are profuse in their praise of that part of the country, as a summer resort, and consider it the finest on the continent.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP YESTERDAY.

Bridge Street.

"What constitutes a Good Witness?" was the subject discussed by the Rev. Dr. Crothers at Bridge St. Church last evening. There was a good congregation. The Rev. gentleman's text was from Acts, 5th chap. and 32nd verse:

"And we are thus witnesses of these things, and so is the Holy Ghost, whom God had given to them that obey him."

During the service Mr. Jessop sang a solo with much effect, entitled "Flee as a Bird," and Miss Mabel Vermilyea sang a solo in the anthem, entitled "Seek Ye the Lord."

Baptist.

In the absence of the pastor, Mr. W. A. Leavitt, student pastor of the Picton Mission, occupied the pulpit yesterday, and his discourses were much appreciated. In the evening his text was from Genesis, 2nd chapter and 18th verse.

John Street.

Rev. A. W. R. Whiteman, of Toronto, preached at both services at this church yesterday, in the absence of the pastor. In the evening the Rev. gentleman's text was from St. Luke, 23rd chapter and 33rd verse:

"And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary there they crucified Him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left."

During the taking of the offertory Mrs. Jas. Grant sang a solo, entitled "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

St. Thomas'.

At the morning service Rev. Mr. Bogert officiated, preaching from Luke, XIX. chapter, 41st and 42nd verses:

"And when he was come near he beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes."

St. Andrew's.

At St. Andrew's Church yesterday the Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean, occupied the pulpit and gave two well thought out discourses. In the evening Mr. J. P. Pratt sang "God's Slumberland."

Holloway Street.

In the absence of the pastor of Holloway Street Church yesterday, the Rev. G. H. Copeland, of Port Perry, a former pastor of the Tabernacle, conducted the services. His discourses were much appreciated.

Died in Ottawa.

Mr. Allan Mott, of this city, received a telegram this morning announcing the death of his brother-in-law, Mr. W. S. Appleby, of Ottawa, which occurred last evening. Deceased was about 45 years of age, and leaves a wife and family. Mr. Appleby was known to many in the city, having been here several times.

IT IS A PERPLEXING THING.

For the reader of newspaper advertisements to determine what is what. We do not use as large type as some, but we are sure that what we have to say is not the less important to any one who is interested in the subject of clothing at this time. Our summer suits are ready to speak for themselves, if you will but take time to inspect them, and we think you will find no fault with the prices. We are making an immense display of hot weather clothing and furnishings.—Quick & Robertson.

VALUABLE TIME SAVED.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and, when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cure bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

More Glasses Are Worn

Now-a-days than ever before. No doubt of it. People used to think that the wearing of glasses should be put off as long as possible—that it was an old age necessity only.

We know more now. We apply every known agency for the relief and care of eye sickness — and there are in use to-day methods which weren't heard of even ten years ago.

Now we commence to right eye sight just as soon as it commences to go wrong. Now, school children by the hundreds use glasses. And it's wise and proper.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening. We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment—a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers—no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is—everything the best with prices low.

CHAPTER I.

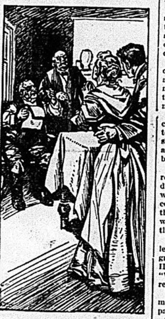
THE young man stood in the field road giving directions to a robust negro who was plowing the corn, which in parallel rows stretched on to the main road a quarter of a mile distant.

It was a beautiful day. The sun was shining brightly, but the atmosphere had dropped a dim veil over the nearby mountain. Even the two storied farmhouse, with its veranda and white columns, to which the field road led up a gradual slope, showed only its outlines. However, Alan Bishop, as he steadied his gaze upon the house, saw the figure of an elderly woman come out of the gate and with a quick step hurry down to him. It was his mother. She was tall and angular and had high cheek bones and small blue eyes. She had rather thin gray hair, which was wound into a knot behind her head, and over it she wore only a small red breakfast shawl, which she held in place by one of her long hands.

"Alan," she said, panting from her brisk walk, "I want you to come to the house right off. Mr. Trabue has come to see yore pa again, an' I can't do a thing with 'im."

"Well, what does he want with him?" asked the young man. His glance was on the plowman and his horse. They had turned the far end of the corn row and were coming back, only the nodding head of the animal being visible beyond a little rise.

"He's come to draw up the papers fer another land trade yore pa's makin'. He's the lawyer fer the Tompkins estate. Yore pa tried to buy the land a yeer ago, but it wasn't in shape to dispose of. Oh, Alan, don't you see he's goin' to ruin us with his fool notions? Folks all about are a-laughin' at him fer buyin' so much useless mountain land. I'm powerful afeerd his mind is wrong."



"Listen to nothin'," thundered Bishop.

"Well, mother, what could I do?" Alan Bishop asked impatiently. "You know he won't listen to me."

"I reckon you can't stop 'im," sighed the woman, "but I wish you'd come on to the house. I knowed he was up to some'n'. Ever' day fer the last week he's been ridin' up the valley an' rollin' an' tumblin' at night an' chawin' ten times as much tobacco as he ort. Oh, he's goin' to ruin us! Brother Abner says he is buyin' beca'se he thinks it's goin' to advance in value, but sech property hain't advanced a speck sense I kin remember an' is bein' sold ever' yeer fer tax money."

"No, it's very foolish of him," said the young man as the two turned toward the house. "Father keeps talking about the fine timber on such property, but it is entirely too far from a railroad ever to be worth anything. I asked Rayburn Miller about it, and he told me to do all I could to stop father from investing, and you know he's as sharp a speculator as ever lived; but it's his money."

There was a paling fence around the house, and the inclosure was alive with chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks and peafowls. In the sunshine on the veranda two pointers lay sleeping, but at the sound of the opening gate they rose, stretched themselves lazily and gaped.

"They are in the parlor," said Mrs. Bishop, as she whisked off her breakfast shawl. "Go right in; I'll come in a minute. I want to see how Linda is makin' out with the churnin'. La! I feel like it's a waste o' time to do a lick o' work with him in thar actin' like a child. Ef we both go in together, it'll look like we've concocked somethin', but we must stop 'im ef we kin."

Alan went into the parlor on the left of the wide, uncarpeted hall. The room had white plastered walls, but the ceiling was of boards planed by hand and painted sky blue. In one corner stood a very old piano with pointed, octagonal legs and a stool with haircloth covering. The fireplace was wide and high and had a screen made of a decorated window shade tightly pasted on a wooden frame. Old man Bishop sat near a window and through his steel framed nose glasses was carefully reading a long document written on legal cap paper. He paid no attention to the entrance of his son, but the lawyer, a short, fat man of sixty-five with thick black hair that fell below his coat collar, rose and extended his hand.

"How's Alan?" he asked pleasantly. "I saw you down in the field as I come along, but I couldn't catch your eye. You see, I'm out after some o' your dad's cash. He's buying hisse'f rich. My Lord, if it ever does turn his way he'll scoop in enough money to set you an' your sister up for life! Folks tell me he owns mighty near every stick of timber land in the Cohutta valley, an' what he has he got at the bottom figure."

"If it ever turns his way," said Alan. "But do you see any prospect of its ever doing so, Mr. Trabue?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders. "I never bet on another man's trick, my boy, and I never throw cold water on the plans of a speculator. I used to when I was about your age, but I saw so many of 'em get rich by paying no attention to me that I quit right off. A man ought to be allowed to use his own judgment."

Old Bishop was evidently not hearing a word of this conversation, being wholly absorbed in studying the details of the deed before him. "I reckon it's all right," he finally said. "You say the Tompkins children are all of age?"

"Yes, Effie was the youngest," answered Trabue, "and she stepped over the line last Tuesday. There's her signature in black and white. The deed's all right. I don't draw up any other sort."

Alan went to his father and leaned over him. "Father," he said softly and yet with firmness, "I wish you'd not act hastily in this deal. You ought to consider mother's wishes, and she is nearly distracted over it."

Bishop was angry. His massive, clean shaven face was red. "I'd like to know what I'd consult her fer," he said. "In a matter o' this kind a woman's about as responsible as a suckin' baby."

Trabue laughed heartily. "Well, I reckon it's a good thing your wife didn't hear that or she'd show you whether she was responsible or not. I couldn't have got the first word of that off my tongue before my wife would 'a' knocked me clean through that wall."

Alfred Bishop seemed not to care for levity during business hours, for he greeted this remark only with a frown. He scanned the paper again and said, "Well, ef thar's any flaw in this I reckon you'll make it right."

"Oh, yes, I'll make any mistake of mine good," returned Trabue. "The paper's all right."

"You see," said Alan to the lawyer, "mother and I think father has already more of this sort of property than he can carry, and"—

"I wish you and yore mother 'd let my business alone," broke in Bishop, firing up again. "Trabue heer knows I've been worryin' 'im fer the last two months to get the property in salable shape. Do you reckon after he gets it that away I want to listen to yore two tongues a-waggin' in open opposition to it?"

Trabue rubbed his hands together. "It really don't make a bit of difference to me, Alan, one way or the other," he said pacifically. "I'm only acting as attorney for the Tompkins estate and get my fee whether there's a transfer or not. That's where I stand in the matter."

"But it's not whar I stand in it, Mr. Trabue," said a firm voice in the doorway. It was Mrs. Bishop, her blue eyes flashing, her face pale and rigid. "I think I've got a right—and a big one—to have a say so in this kind of a trade. A woman 'at's stayed by a man's side fer thirty odd yeer an' raked an' scraped to he'p save a little handful o' property fer her two children has got a right to raise a rumpus when her husband goes crooked like Alfred has an' starts in to bankrupt 'em all jest fer a blind notion o' his'n."

"Oh, thar you are!" said Bishop, lifting his eyes from the paper and glaring at her over his glasses. "I knowed I'd have to have a knockdown an' drag out fight with you 'fore I signed my name, so sail in an' git it over. Trabue's got to ride back to town."

"But whar in the name o' common sense is the money to come from?" the woman hurled at her husband as she rested one of her bony hands on the edge of the table and glared at him. "As I understand it, thar's about 5,000 acres in this piece alone, an' yo're a-payin' a dollar a acre. Whar's it a-comin' from, I'd like to know? Whar's it to come from?"

Bishop sniffed and ran a steady hand over his short, gray hair. "You see how little she knows o' my business," he said to the lawyer. "Heer she's raisin' the devil an' Tom Walker about the trade, an' she don't so much as know whar the money's to come from."

"How was I to know?" retorted the woman, "when you've been tellin' me for the last six months that thar wasn't enough in the bank to give the house a coat o' fresh paint an' patch the barn roof."

"You knowed I had $5,000 wuth o' stock in the Shoal River cotton mills, didn't you?" asked Bishop defiantly and yet with the manner of a man throwing a missile which he hoped would fall lightly.

"Yes, I knowed that, but"— The woman's eyes were two small fires burning hungrily for information beyond their reach.

"Well, it happens that Shoal stock is jest the same on the market as ready money, up a little today an' down tomorrow, but never varyin' more'n a fraction of a cent on the dollar, an' so the Tompkins heirs say they'd jest as lieve have it, an' as I'm itchin' to relieve them of the'r land it didn't take us long to come together."

If he had struck the woman squarely in the face, she could not have shown more surprise. She became white to the lips and with a low cry turned to her son. "Oh, Alan, don't—don't let 'im do it. It's all we have left that we can depend on! It will ruin us!"

"Why, father, surely," protested Alan as he put his arm around his mother, "surely you can't mean to let go your mill investment which is paying 15 per cent to put the money into lands that may never advance in value and always be a dead weight on your hands! Think of the loss of interest and the taxes to be kept up. Father, you must listen to"—

"Listen to nothin'," thundered Bishop, half rising from his chair. "Nobody axed you two to put in. It's my business, an' I'm a-goin' to attend to it. I believe I'm doin' the right thing, an' that settles it."

"The right thing," moaned the old woman as she sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands. "Mr. Trabue," she went on fiercely, "when that factory stock leaves our hands we won't have a single thing to our names that will bring in a cent of income. You kin see how bad it is on a woman who has worked as hard to do fer her children as I have. Mr. Bishop always said Adele, who is visitin' her uncle's family in Atlanta, should have that stock for a weddin' gift ef she ever married, an' Alan was to have the lower half of this farm. Now, what would we have to give the girl—nothin' but thousands o' acres o' hills, mountains an' gulches full o' bear, wildcats an' catamounts—land that it ud break any young couple to hold on to, much less put to any use. Oh, I feel perfectly sick over it!"

There was a heavy, dragging step in the hall, and a long, lank man of sixty or sixty-five years of age paused in the doorway. He had no beard except a tuft of gray hair on his chin, and his teeth, being few and far between, gave to his cheeks a hollow appearance. He was Abner Daniel, Mrs. Bishop's bachelor brother, who lived in the family.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, shifting a big quid of tobacco from one cheek to the other. "Plottin' agin the whites? Ef you are, I'll decamp, as the feller said when the bull yeerlin' butted 'im in the small o' the back. How are you, Mr. Trabue? Have they run you out o' town fer some o' yore legal rascallity?"

"I reckon your sister thinks it's rascality that's brought me out today," laughed the lawyer. "We are on a little land deal."

"Oh, well, I'll move on," said Abner Daniel. "I jest wanted to tell Alan that Rigg's hogs got into his young corn in the bottom jest now an' rooted up about as many acres as Pole Baker's plowed all day. Ef they'd a-rooted in straight rows an' not gone too nigh the stalks, they mought 'a' done the crap more good than harm, but the'r aim or intention, one or t'other, was bad. Folks is that away. Mighty few of 'em root—when they root at all—fer anybody but the'rse'ves. Well, I'll git along to my room."

"Don't go, Brother Ab," pleaded his sister. "I want you to he'p me stand up fer my rights. Alfred is about to swap our cotton mill stock fer some more wild mountain land."

In spite of his natural tendency to turn everything into a jest—even the serious things of life—the sallow face of the tall man lengthened. He stared into the faces around him for a moment; then a slow twinkle dawned in his eye.

"I've never been knowed to take sides in any connubial tussle yet," he said to Trabue in a dry tone. "Alf may not know what he's about right now, but he's Solomon hisse'f compared to a feller that will undertake to settle a dispute betwixt a man an' his wife—more especially the wife. Geewhillikins! I never shall forget the time old Jane Hardeway come heer to spend a week an' Alf thar an' Betsy split over buyin' a batrack fer the hall. Betsy had seed one over at Mason's at the campground an' determined she'd have one. Maybe you noticed that fancy contraption in the hall as you come in. Well, Alf seed a nigger unloadin' it from a wagon at the door one mornin', an' when Betsy, in feer an' tremblin', told 'im what it was fer he mighty nigh had a fit. He said his folks never had been above hangin' the'r coats an' hats on good, stout nails an' pegs, an' as fer them umbrella pans to ketch the drip, he said they was fancy spitboxes, an' wanted to know ef she expected a body to do the'r chawin' an' smokin' in that windy hall. He said it jest should not stand thar with all them prongs an' arms to attack unwary folks in the dark, an' he toted it out to the buggy shed. That got Betsy's dander up, an' she put it back agin the wall an' said it 'ud stay thar ef she had to stand behind it an' hold it in place. Alf wasn't done yet. He 'lowed ef they was to have sech a purty trick as that on the hill it had to stay in the best room in the house, so he put it heer in the parlor by the piano. But Betsy took it back two or three times, an' he larnt that he was a-doin' a sight o' work fer nothin' an' finally quit totin' it about.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Lost chances never leave any trail.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Much talk, many lies.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

All trails are long to the lazy.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

"I want to advertise for a runaway husband," said the woman with the resolute face. "I suppose that's the proper thing to do."

"How do you want it to read?" asked the clerk at the advertising counter.

"I ought to give a description of him, oughtn't I?"

"Yes, if you want him identified."

"Well, make it something like this: 'Lost—From the premises of the undersigned, a small, common looking man, with a little tuft of hair on his chin'—got that down?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"'Rather hump shouldered, never looks anybody straight in the eye, walks with a kind of slouch'—got that?"

"Yes."

"Just as you please about that, ma'am."

"Well, I don't care whether he comes back or not, you understand. I only want to do the customary thing. You may offer a reward of 25 cents. Put it among the want ads. I guess that's all. How much?"

"That will be—"

The Up-to-date Chirography.

Gladys Helene Montague, her transparent gold ochre hair glittering in the sunlight, sat at her mahogany desk writing her answer to Reginald Fitzmaurice's proposal. Gladys's chirography was of the fashionable young ladies' seminary style, with three characters to perform the duty of twenty-six.

"My Dearest Girl: Your answer has made me the happiest man in the world. How did I dare to hope that you would stoop to bless such as I? I pray God that I may be worthy of you, my darling. I long to press you to my heart. Ever thine, Reginald."

"My Dear Miss Montague: On Wednesday I sail for Europe. If at any time you should change your mind, a word from you will bring me to your side. My address will be Brown, White & Co., London. Faithfully yours, Reginald Fitzmaurice."

"Dear Gladys: After a sleepless night spent in the vain endeavor to decipher your note, I have written these two answers. Will you kindly return immediately the one which does not fit the occasion? I cannot stand this strain much longer. Your anxious Reginald."—Detroit "Free Press."

The Straw Hat Business.

The traveling salesman for the wholesale hat houses start out with straw hats for the next season before the last of the straw hats worn hereabouts have been put aside; the first to go start about the 1st of September. The straw hat season in the South opens on March 1; at some extreme points earlier. Wholesale deliveries in the South begin in January, and they are mostly completed by the middle of February. The active season in straw hat manufacturing runs from September to about the middle of April.—New York Sun.

TIMELY TOPICS

It looks like old times to see so much bustle around the rolling mills. Quite a little staff down there already.

* * *

In point of interest, our new story seems destined to run a close second to the report of Mr. J. R. Hurley's examination before the Public Accounts Committee at Ottawa. There may not be much love or adventure in the Hurley stuff, but it bears evidence of being mixed up with a good deal of romance.

* * *

The Intelligencer regrets to see that it can look for no journalistic assistance in this city in fighting the battle of right in connection with the recent license outrage. The Grit paper, so far, has said this in regard to the matter:

* * *

However, respectable Liberals are not slow in expressing their opinion as to the matter. "The action of the Commissioners," said one Liberal gentleman, "is indefensible. And the worst of it," he went on in a ruminative tone, "is that it is not doing the party any good in this district." Which is as true as any remark ever uttered by the late G. Washington.

* * *

There is talk of a petition being circulated to request the Government to take some action in the matter, and it might well be done. Surely, if the Hon. Provincial Secretary were notified of the true state of affairs in this city he would take some steps to have justice done!

Foot Elm Keeps The Feet Fit

FEET NEVER CAUSE DISCOMFORT WHEN FOOT ELM IS USED.

A man (or woman either) is not fit for work if his feet bother him. Can't give your mind to your duties if your feet are hot, sore, aching, blistered or chafed, or if you have a painful corn or burning bunion distracting you.

The only reliable remedy for all these foot troubles is Foot Elm. It has wonderful soothing, healing, antiseptic properties. It puts your feet in fit shape to bear the burden of the body without causing distress or discomfort, and its daily use keeps them fit.

Accident, Not Murder.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—Detective McCaskell of Montreal, after interviewing a number of people, leans to the opinion that Donaz Mathieu of Hull met death by accident at Fort Coulonge, rather than by murder as at first supposed. The mother of the boy and Dr. Ouimet of Hull stoutly maintained that the boy was murdered, but the evidence of the foreman of the shanty and others go to prove death by drowning.

Magistrate Knocked Down.

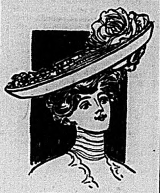
Windsor, Aug. 17. — Magistrate Bartlet was knocked down by a horse and hurt Saturday. He is 88.

FOR WARM DAYS.

Hats of Rough Straw—Pretty Linen Costumes.

Cherries and currants are quite popular on the rough outing hats, and hats in burnt or champagne straw are decorated with a little coarse lace and clusters of foliage.

Linen canvas makes up charmingly with touches of ingrain embroidery and smart strappings. The pale pastel blue looks well with dark blue and yellow embroidery on a white background. Biscuit canvas is charming with red embroidery. Little tasseled motifs are shown in cotton for wash gowns, and the pale biscuit and beige tints accord well with the coarse lace used on such costumes.



BEIGE SAILOR HAT.

Although the blue gown trimmed with green is no longer modish, yet a pale green lawn or batiste gown is charming with a blue hat, and the prettiest blue hat is of rough straw, with plenty of light grass green foliage and blue silk cornflowers. A gown of pale blue green cambric is also effective with a deep willow green straw trimmed with pale blue forgetmenots and a deep purple iris or two.

The ruffle is no more, but last season's cape ruffle with longer ends is the fashionable "stole" of the present season. Three or four frills headed with lace or a flat collar put on to form a heading is sufficiently deep to widen the shoulders in the accepted style, and with long ends decorated with frills, ruchings or ribbon, and sometimes with all three, the stole is complete. Some of the newest stoles have capes with numerous frills, and these are already copied in common lace and will have but a brief reign. Flat stoles of ostrich and marabou feathers are very handsome. These have many tails and are altogether fussy and becoming.

The illustration shows a sailor of beige colored straw trimmed with cherries.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

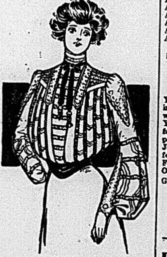
GRASS LAWN AND ALPACA.

The Former Makes Smart Dresses and the Latter Model Coats.

An unlined coat of white alpaca is pretty for sailing or seashore wear.

Motoring coats are very smart in pale biscuit or ivory shades, with a chic little collar of velvet, white moire or white kid.

The craze for red is growing in favor. There is a good deal of distinction to it, and its wearing qualities are good. The deeper shades are the most fashionable and also combine best with the ecru tints in straw which are the fad this year.



FOULARD WAIST.

A good many Parisian dressmakers are turning out skirts of plaited grass lawn with blouse bodices and large collars, adding at the neck and waist a touch of grass green or old rose. These are sure to have a fair share of popularity, owing to the rage for biscuit and fawn shades.

Grass lawn can look very charming for a simple frock, combined with entre-deux of coarse lace around the hem of the skirt and a wide lace collar.

Panne or plush ribbon, fancy and brocaded, is accounted a novelty and is quite a host in itself for trimming purposes. A belt of it worn the other day was in a rich shade of green, with a delicate gray cloth costume, fastening in front through an immense square buckle of plain dull gold. These buckles, by the way, large, massive and severely plain, carry the mind back to the Stuart period. They are details accounted smart in Paris and seem to fit in with peculiar aptness to the style of the gathered skirt and waist bodice. Black belts with these great dull gold buckles are immensely chic and are to be worn with all manner of toilets, silk alike with cloth.

WONDERS OF RADIUM.

Terrific Force in a Tiny Particle of the New Chemical.

Radium is one of the rarest things upon earth and is never found in the pure state. It must be dissociated from the other substances with which it is combined by long, tedious and costly chemical operations. It is obtained from a mineral called pitchblende, found in Bohemia, and during the two or three years that have elapsed since its discovery by Mme. and M. Curie of Paris they have succeeded in separating out of tons and tons of pitchblende less than two pounds of radium. That is all that exists uncombined in the world, and even that is not the pure thing. It is mingled with more or less barium, says Collier's Weekly.

The Curies do possess, however, one tiny bit of chemically pure radium. It weighs about half a grain and is said to be of the size of a buckshot. M. Curie has declared that he would not sell it for 100,000 francs. If he and his wife have a monopoly of this precious substance they are not getting rich out of it. The demand is not active. Half a grain of impure radium in a little tube is offered in Paris for $5,000.

A thief who should run off with a bit of radium as big as a small diamond would find that he had caught a Tartar. If he kept it in his pocket it would produce an inflammation that might cost him his life. If he held it near his eyes he could easily lose his sight. If he handled it much his fingers would get sore and might have to be amputated. M. Curie is quoted as saying that he would not venture into a room containing a kilogram of pure radium, for if he did he would probably lose his skin, his eyesight and his life.

It gives off light also. Pure radium shines in the dark, although it is not hot like a flame; but, most wonderful of all, it constantly projects into space around it streams of invisible corpuscles, smaller than atoms, with a velocity as great as 100,000 miles per second.

It is this marvelous and ceaseless bombardment of its surroundings that makes radium so dangerous to handle. The infinitely minute partitions cannot, of course, be seen, but they affect photographic plates, and it was in that manner that the existence of these inexplicable radiating streams was first demonstrated.

A Grim Joke.

The value of a joke often depends upon the viewpoint of the people who hear it. There was an interesting incident during the recent meeting of the American Orthopedic association at the Arlington, when one of the members was describing an operation which resulted in the death of the patient. He told all about the first symptoms of a case of hip disease and of the operations that were performed. It seemed that there were elements of the case that were not known at the time of the operations.

"But," he said, elucidating the subject with the greatest candor and showing that the doctors interested in the case finally triumphed by securing a complete understanding of the matter, "the mistake was discovered at the autopsy."

The intense interest of the assemblage of doctors was not interrupted by even a twitch of a single risible.

Short Surnames.

An investigation to discover the shortest surname seems to show that Mr. By possesses it. Of course there are others equally short in pronunciation though weighted with a superfluous letter. Such is the name of Dr. Goe, the recently retired Anglican bishop of Melbourne. George Ade, the writer, belongs to the list. Nye is another example. The premier of New South Wales, Sir John See, has certainly established a record for brevity in this connection among prime ministers. Short surnames naturally suggest long ones. Scotland seems to supply a fair share of the latter. Gentlemen who in these busy times have to write Featherstonehaugh or Osbaldistine at the ends of their letters are certainly entitled to sympathy. There is an Irish chieftain, too, whose signature is McGillicuddy of the Reeks.

A Floating Academy of Science.

An indication of a new tendency in scientific study is furnished by the plan of the Geographical Society of Baltimore to send this summer to the Bahama islands a ship carrying a staff of fifty persons, who will study the geology, geography, botany, zoology, climatology, physics and medical and hygienic conditions of those islands. The ship specially chartered for the purpose will be fitted and equipped as the home and laboratory of the party during the entire trip.

When to Write.

In his recent brochure on Zola, M. Faguet of the Academie Francaise says: "Zola began to write too soon. Every man who writes before he is thirty and who does not devote the golden age of his life, from the twentieth year to the thirtieth, to reading, observing and thinking, without writing a line, runs the risk of having no brain and of being but a journeyman author. There are some exceptions, but they are rare."

In 1882 a picture, entitled "The Holy Family," was lent to the Bristol (England) Young Men's Christian association, and the owner, a lady (Mrs. Morgan), was willing to accept £10 for it. The offer was not accepted. Mrs. Morgan bequeathed the picture at her death to a Liverpool gentleman, and the head of the Marlborough picture gallery has now estimated its value at about £10,000. The picture is the work of Pietro Cortona.

SELECTIONS

INDIAN SOD HOUSES.

Wichitas the Only Tribe That Understands Building Them.

The finest house ever designed by a redskin is the sod house of the Wichitas, who at present live in southern Oklahoma. They are the only Indians that ever accomplished successfully the erection of a sod structure. Soon they are to abandon these huts and take up their humdrum reservation life in two room frame shacks which the government is building for them. There are only about fifty old men of the tribe alive today who understand the art of building one of these houses so that it will stand.

The government has offered these sod house builders lucrative employment to construct some houses that may be preserved as models of an ancient art, but they refuse, and the huts that used to dot the prairies of the Wichita reservation are now being torn down. The Wichitas are determined that their huts shall not survive them, says the Scientific American.

One can look upon a sod house and fancy it an easy thing to build. But it is not. It is, indeed, most intricate. The turf is gathered early in the spring when it is yet fresh. The sod cutting usually takes place immediately after a rain, and the sod is removed to a thickness of about eight inches. Buffalo grass sod is the only kind that will answer the purpose of the builder. He begins to lay the foundation as does the stonemason, digging away the earth to the depth of about one foot. The grass portion of the chunks of sod is laid to the outside, and the house is built to a height of twelve or fifteen feet in the form of a pointed dome. There is no hole in the top for smoke to pass out. The smoke is carried away through a pipe on the outside ~~of the~~ hut. The door is usually in the south, and there are no windows.

Through each tuft of sod is run a willow wand, and these wands are bound clear round the structure. The grass remains green and will grow if there is plenty of rain. It is not at all uncommon to see the sides of a sod house turn green as spring approaches, just as do the pastures near it. The houses are warm in winter and cool in summer. They never leak. Often the Indians have barns made of the same material. But now the redskins are made to live in frame shacks, and the once famous "grass" house will soon be but a recollection.

Mishaps of a Walker.

E. F. Broad, who won the Stock Exchange walk that gave London something of interest and no great importance to talk about the other week, had never walked fifty miles before at a stretch. When be neared the winning post a zealous policeman took him by the shoulder and shoved him back into the crowd, with the injunction to make way for the winner. But his worst mischance befell him the day afterward, when a report had gained currency that he, with several of his competitors, had succumbed to his exertions. His baggage happened to have been sent to the wrong hotel. After a good sleep he took at the conclusion of the race, a nap something like a day and a half, he set out in search of his baggage and found he would have to be identified. "Oh, no," said the hotel people, "you can't be Mr. Broad. He's dead. We have it on the best authority."

The Sudan.

The Egyptian Gazette says that, while the Sudan will take several years more to develop, there are practically no limits to the possibilities for outside capital which the recovered provinces afford. With great tracts of fertile soil now producing little but jungle and with a water supply only needing scientific storage and distribution to fulfill all requirements, there is no reason why the Sudan should not become one of the world's greatest granaries. "All of these and other treasures are placed at the disposal of humanity at large by the extermination of the dervishes, and British enterprise must have lamentably deteriorated if it hangs back in the competition to cater for the wants of 25,000,000 people."

No Hope For Cuban Cotton.

The appearance of the boll weevil in Cuba is regarded by experts as putting at an end for good whatever hope there may once have been of raising cotton on that island. In Texas the fight against the boll weevils is a hard one, but in Cuba it would be hopeless. In Texas the cold weather checks their spread every year and thus allows the cotton growers to keep them in check. In Cuba, where there is no cold weather, the weevil would flourish the year round. It is recalled that a hundred years ago the cotton industry of Cuba was destroyed beyond all hope by this same insect.

Lithographic Stone In Greece.

One of the rarities of the earth is the fine grained limestone used for making lithographic plates. The quarries at Solenhofen, Germany, are celebrated not only for the excellence of their lithographic stone, but also because remarkable specimens of the extinct flying reptile called the archæopterix have been found imbedded in the stone. News now comes from Athens that large deposits of this stone have been discovered in Thessaly not far from Pharsalia, where Pompey the Great was defeated by Julius Cæsar. Some experts say this Greek stone is superior to the best heretofore known in Europe.

DON'TS FOR PARENTS

The Health of School Children is Paramount.

The health of school children is paramount to every other consideration. When children, particularly girls, between the ages of ten and seventeen exhibit evidences of nervous disorder such as twitching of the face and hands or extreme irritability it is a sure sign either that the school work is too severe or that they are not living under proper hygienic conditions, or both.

In the majority of cases, to conquer the difficulties of arithmetic or grammar or the intricacies of a new language is harder work for the child than are for the business or professional man his every-day vocations. Hence children need constant care, sympathy and encouragement.

Children should spend not less than two hours a day in the open air, and if possible should engage in games requiring both skill and activity. They should not be permitted to attend social parties or public meetings or entertainments on an evening preceding a school day. They should spend in sleep not less than nine and if possible ten hours out of every twenty-four.

The following practices should be prohibited as injurious to health: Study before partaking of food in the morning, the rapid reading of lessons just before the beginning of school sessions, study immediately after the close of school before the mind and body have been rested by play or other suitable change or occupation, study immediately after eating a hearty meal.

The children should have fixed hours for study.

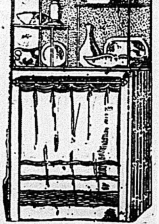
When parents find that their children, after conscientious effort, cannot accomplish the work assigned by the teacher in the time specified in the rule they should at once communicate the fact to the principal of the school and ask diminution of the tasks assigned.

Parents should never urge children to make extra efforts to obtain promotion, nor show annoyance if they fail to obtain promotion. What children need for intellectual and moral progress is systematic work. If for any good reason the child is not promoted or graduated at the end of the term, he should not be reprimanded, but encouraged to try again. Nor should parents by finding fault with the teacher weaken her influence for good.

Cigarette-smoking by growing boys is dangerous alike to the physical, the intellectual and the moral well-being. Parents cannot be too vigilant in preventing their sons from using tobacco in any form, and particularly in that of the cigarette.

Radiator in Disguise.

The uncompromisingly ugly radiator may be prettily disguised during the Summer months, says Harper's Bazar, from which the illustration is taken, by slipping over it a plain pine frame, from whose lower part hangs a curtain like that of a bookshelf. The upper half may be arranged with shelves for bric-a-brac or crockery. If the curtain be made of whiplash or bamboo strings the covering may be left on in Winter as well as in Summer, as the hot air can thus escape. The frame may be stained to match the woodwork of the room.



Easily Remedied.

Dr. Bloomfield, Bishop of London half a century ago, was a man of much wit, and also had a keen appreciation of wit in other people, whatever their walk in life might be.

Once when a new church in his diocese was to be consecrated the Bishop received several letters complaining that the architect of the new church had disfigured the interior and exterior with "useless gewgaw." Consequently the Bishop went down to the little town to make an inspection of the building, and summoned the architect to meet him there."

The Bishop could find nothing amiss with the exterior of the church, nor with the interior, until just as he reached the chancel he looked up and saw four wooden images apparently guarding the pulpit.

"What do those figures represent?" he inquired.

"The four evangelists, my lord," replied the architect.

"They appear to be asleep," said the Bishop.

"Do you think so, my lord?"

"That's the way they look to me," said the Bishop, decidedly.

"John," called the architect to a man who was at work on one of the pews, "bring your chisel and open the eyes of the evangelists."—Youth's Companion.

BRIGHTER TINTS WORN.

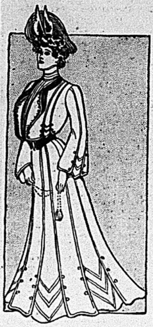
Yellows, Scarlets and Pinks Modish. The Useful Cape Collars.

The wide collar is a boon to amateur dressmakers, for it covers up a multitude of sins.

Challies in quaint pompadour designs make up charmingly and are very useful for cool evenings.

The parasol of the moment is most attractive, with its long handle a la Pompadour, very often incrusted with gems and its chine silk inserted with medallions of lace. The simplest parasol of all has a plain silk cover with rows of ribbon woven in black on a light ground in graduated widths and a long, plain colored handle.

Foulard, the old fashioned fabric, has given way to voiles and a still softer make of silk. For dull days cloths trimmed with taffeta as well as a firmer make of canvas and spotted voile are greatly to the fore.



WALKING COSTUME.

There is a growing tendency toward brighter tints, especially in a soft make of cloth. Scarlet still carries the day, and yellows, pinks and brilliant blues are all tremendously in request.

A wrinkle now resorted to by all the leading blouse specialists is a chiffon veiling to silk underslips, not the costly and hot taffetas of heretofore, but good washing quality, the chiffon lending a soft appearance to any lace that may be inset, while it enhances to an immense extent the value of a muslin blouse.

The picture shows a walking costume of gray. The hat is of white with a scarlet feather.

MILLINERY MODES.

The Indispensable French Sailor. Some Dressy Hats.

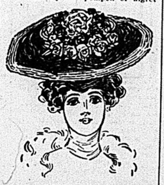
The French sailor is indispensable to the smart woman's wardrobe. The prettiest this year is of rough yellow straw trimmed simply with a wreath of foliage or velvet balls.

Hats of ecru straw are often simply trimmed with an application of coarse lace with ends hanging on one side.

The new tailor made hat tilts up in front and fits closely at the back and sides. It is trimmed only with loops and knots of ribbon.

For dressy wear nothing can equal a hat of white tulle trimmed with a single ostrich plume, although rough straw also looks well for the same purpose.

The ever useful toque of black straw is relieved by the pompon or aigret of black and white and black rough straw. French sailors are tastefully trimmed with blackberries and their shaded foliage.



A SAILOR SHAPE

The transparent hat of lace is not seen so much this year, and the stiff shapes of straw seem to have the preference over millinery made of more fancy materials.

The advent of colored hosiery cannot fail to have been remarked, several shades of dark blue and some amazingly pretty reds, spotted and clocked with black, predominating. There is a rumor that these will be worn with white shoes. White shoes at best are a doubtful acquisition, their one saving grace being found in white silk or lace hosiery. The colored fancy, though, is reasonable with the walking skirt, provided they are privileged to find completion in neat black French kid or patent leather shoes. Nor is the notion at all unpleasing of colored hosiery worn with white frocks, these perchance repeating the tone of some pretty skirt and hat.

The chic sailor shape in the illustration is trimmed with two shades of mull and pink roses.

FINAL CLEARING PRICES.

The results of our buyers' extensive European trip are arriving daily.

Each and every article coming from that part of the world where it can be most advantageously bought.

We are hardly prepared to receive these yet. Summer goods are still here which must vacate our shelving before we can properly accommodate our fall lines.

If seasonable goods marked at very low prices induce buying, we will soon be out of our difficulty.

We have marked all warm weather materials at reductions that should clear goods not half as seasonable and stylish.

Many ladies whose immediate wants were already filled have purchased for the future, realizing in nearly every instance a saving of at least 50 per cent. on goods which will be "in it" as much next season as this.

Multitudes of equally worthy offerings await your inspection—it will be time well spent. Read below.

—A table of fine Wash Goods—Sateens—Prints—Muslins—Ginghams—new designs and colorings, regularly selling at from 10c to 50c, all at........Half Price
—The balance of our French Organdie Muslins—the prettiest and best procurable anywhere for regular prices. Regular 25c to 30c qualities, 15c. Regular 30c to 50c, for........25c.
—Remnants at half marked price.

COLORED BLOUSES REDUCED.

There are many and varied reasons why the quantity of Colored Waists we sell increases each season.

No two women would give all the same reasons. But there are at least three we are confident everyone would give.

Style—Fit—Moderate Price.

We have marked all our "left overs" at three prices to effect a rapid clearance.

Styles and patterns are as desirable as any we have sold. Just the assortment ends. Here they are,

—Fine Colored Print Waists, plain ingrain patterns, cut in latest style were 50c, for........25c
—Fine Gingham, Print and Muslin Waists all colors, were 75c to $1.25, for........50c
—Gingham and Matting Waists, prettily made and trimmed, were $1.00 to $1.75, for........75c

COMING DRESS FABRICS.

Although August is still with us the number of enquiries we have had, as to what the new Fall Dress Goods will be like, convince us that already many are making plans for heavier garments.

The last few days our Dress Goods Section has been busy opening up new materials. To those who can come a visit will apprise quickly what is newest.
The mixed Tweed effects will certainly be leaders. Many in coarse basket weaves.
The Snowflake and tufted materials will also be shown to a greater extent than ever.
We have made preparation for the biggest Dress Goods season in our history.
If stylish materials at lowest cash prices induce buying our expectation will be realized.

—Stylish Tweed and mixed goods for Skirts and suits—very latest designs,....50c to $1.45 yd.
—Handsome Silk and Wool Skirt patterns,........$15 00

NEW COLLARS AND BELTS.

Careful Buying brings to us a showing in collars and belts which for qualities and pretty styles we have never before equalled at the same Prices.

It is not hard to get belts and collars to sell at low prices. But it is hard to get the Newest in good Qualities to sell at a reasonable figure.

Prettier styles than our present assortment contains we have never shown. The prices are below, you can judge of them.

—Fancy tucked Blue Silk collar trimmed with Honoton Braid—Two medallions in front........25c
—Fancy Green Blue Grey or Pink silk collars tucked and trimmed with fancy Lace—Tab ends with medallions—very pretty........50c
—Fine colored silk collar with turnover edge, all trimmed with fine deep valenciennes lace, a very pretty collar........75c
—Fine Black Silk belts—fancy buckles....75 to $1.25

NEW YORK RIBBONS.

To those who prefer the ribbon for neckwear our showing of newest New York creations should prove interesting.

These are in fancy designs which promise to be very popular this season.

Fancy Dots and Stripes, in every desirable color.

Some very pretty Black and White and White and Black ribbons will be appreciated by those who desire such. These are very neat and in better patterns than usually found.

—Fine fancy colored Neck Ribbon in newest dots and stripes, in all desirable colors and White and Black and Black and White, per yard........35c
—An assortment of pretty Neck Ribbons, just received in fancy designs, all colors........15c & 20c

Quick & Robertson's for Fine Clothes

There's no use of disputing the fact that this store stands pre-eminent in this city as the store for Men's Fine Clothes.

With our large and pleasing varieties, up-to-date styles, and good making, we've won the trade of every man, and especially the trade of those men who are particular about the clothes they wear.

And why shouldn't we? You can't find a store that has, Ready-Made, such exclusive styles in suitings and summer garments as we are showing and everyone of them is from the best British and Canadian Mills.

Then, too, every garment is built to come up to the our high standard--built by the best makers who know how and do give close attention to important parts of tailoring—such as adjusting the collars, shaping the shoulders, proper placing of the sleeves and stays and making of the button holes.

Clothes made this way never lose their shape. And by so doing we have overcome that appearance which markes clothes as being Ready-Made.

The prices for such goodness you'd expect to be high but they are not—are no more than you would pay for ordinary sorts elsewhere.

Thought Boy Had Run Away.

Mr. John L. Losee, of Deseronto, was in the city yesterday, looking for his son, aged 15 years, who on Saturday left home, as the parents thought, to go away to the shanty. The boy returned home and stated that he did not intend to go away, only coming as far as this city, where he intended to remain for a few days.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

The Boy Acquitted.

The boy, James Ed. Langman, who on Saturday was tried before Judge Fraleck on the charge of setting fire to an unoccupied house in the Township of Mayo, was honorably acquitted. The evidence was such that it was apparent Langman did not cause the fire which destroyed the building and other surrounding property. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. Masson defended the accused.

Mr. J. M. Hurley's Recent Examination

FULL TEXT OF WHAT TRANSPIRED BEFORE THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

TAKEN BY THE OFFICIAL REPORTER — HOW CENSUS ACCOUNTS WERE MADE UP.

HIS ARDUOUS DUTIES AS FISHERY INSPECTOR — INTERESTING READING.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

A.—Well it is—I do not know that—it would be a day away, hotel bill and railway fare.

Q.—The railway fare would be $1.35 return ticket, and he would only be in Belleville for one meal the way the trains run. A.—Perhaps not. Perhaps he did not get away at six o'clock. We instructed them many a night until ten o'clock.

Q.—Then he would go down at midnight? A.—That would be two days, and hotel bill a day, bus fare, etc.

Q.—Are you prepared to swear George Edwards did go to Belleville? A.—Yes, I know him well.

Q.—You saw him and instructed him, did you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you instruct him while he was there? A.—Oh, yes, he was in with the other men from Thurlow the same day.

Q.—I suppose the Thurlow enumerators would be almost exclusively dealing with farms and cheese factories? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Deseronto industrial establishments? And the ordinary town population? A.—Yes.

Q.—So the instructions of the Thurlow people would not be the same? A.—A great deal would be the same. The instructions would be the same except one of the schedules. They all had the same schedules, but if a man had a farm outside of Deseronto he had to be enumerated in Deseronto. It was all the same.

Q.—That is what I thought originally, but you tried to make out it was so difficult. Some of the men seem to have been much better workers than others. As an illustration look at Clare's from Hungerford. You have Clare's there? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many farms did he examine, 69? A.—70.

Q.—That is changed, 69 or 70. Then out of these 69 farms there would be one for how long? How many days did it take him to do it? A.—I hardly know.

Q.—The sworn statement he makes is 20 days of 24 hours each at $1.50, $30 horse hire. That is it took him 20 days to go over 69 farms, a little over three farms a day. Does that strike you as being a proper account to pay? A.—Yes, they are very large farms and he lives in one of the best sections in that country. There is a great deal of stock on the place and there are three or four cheese factories in his division.

Q.—Do you think an average of a little over three farms a day was hard work for him? Now, on your oath, Mr. Hurley, do you think he was doing his duty to the country and you yours in passing an account for three farms a day? A.—I do not know the circumstances. There are only eight hours to do the work in.

Q.—I do not know. What it says here is, horse hire, 24 hours A.—He was only allowed the man eight hours, but the horse had to put in 24 hours before he got the $1.50. What is meant by that, is, that he could not charge two eight hour days for the horse.

Q.—Do you think that this is a proper average? A.—I hardly know under what circumstances he might be working. He is a good, decent fellow.

Q.—You would not say whether you thought it was fair? A.—I think he would not put in anything else but a fair charge. He worked under different circumstances. Mr. Newton was appointed and Clare was appointed because the other man fell sick. Newton had got all the instructions and we had to give it to him afterwards and he worked under some disadvantage.

Q.—That does not account for the three farms a day. Now, look at this. The next did eighty in the same district. That is Tuft's. A.—They are very different farms there—30 or 40 acres is a farm where Tufts lives.

Q.—Well, it is the same thing. The driving would be trifling. One man went 11 and the other went 3. A.—I found a great many differences in the enumerators, which perhaps looked to me at times strange, but from their explanations and everything I took into consideration I—

Q.—Take Labarge, 117 in 10 days. There is a man with 11 a day. A.—He was assessor of the town the year before and he would be a better man.

Q.—Then there is a difference in the men that accounts for one man doing three farms and the other ten? A.—I think so. Mr. Clare was never in any position at all.

Q.—Then there is Larkin, who started from the beginning and did eighty-six farms. It took him twenty days, that is about four farms a day. How do you account for Larkin doing so much better than Clare? A. Oh, I hardly know. Larkin was assessor three or four times. He has held positions.

THE ROLLING MILLS.

TWENTY MEN ARE NOW ENGAGED IN GETTING THEM IN FIRST-CLASS SHAPE.

A visit to the rolling mills demonstrates that the company who have purchased this manufacturing concern are actively engaged in placing it in first-class shape preparatory to the starting up of the mills. There are at present some 20 workmen engaged about the premises, and activity is apparent on every hand.

The large frame structure, which is the rolling mills proper, is being whitewashed inside and will be painted red outside. The smokestacks will also receive a coat of paint to protect them from rust.

Mechanics and other workmen are busily engaged at the machinery in getting it in good shape for work. A large amount of new and up-to-date machinery will be installed, so that when the mills are started in operation they will produce the best manufactured article possible.

The necessary work of repairs, etc., will, we are told, be pushed forward as rapidly as possible, so as to have the mills in operation at an early date.

BELLEVILLE ENGINEERS IN RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

TWO FREIGHT TRAINS IN A SMASH-UP AT KINGSTON JUNCTION.

A head-on collision occurred at Kingston Junction at an early hour on Sunday morning, between two freight trains, but fortunately no person was seriously injured. Both engines were in charge of Belleville engineers, namely, Wm. Rogers and John Gurney.

The collision, it is alleged, was caused by Gurney running past the semaphore lights. He is reported to have acknowledged his guilt and tendered the company his resignation, which was accepted. A west-bound freight train, hauled by engine No. 831, had just been shunted to a side track to allow a fast freight following to pass, when a heavy freight, east-bound, dashed into the yard and crashed into the west-bound train. Both locomotives were damaged, No. 831 escaping the lighter. No. 855 was almost completely wrecked, as was also the tender. A freight car of the west-bound and four of the east trains were demolished. Two of the latter were reduced to scrap wood, while the other two were damaged beyond repair. One laden with hardware turned over on its side, another filled with scrap-iron turned turtle and went down a twelve foot embankment, the third was laden with cased eggs, both car and cargo being completely lost. The fourth car was filled with coal and was reduced to matchwood.

All the trainmen jumped with the exception of Gurney, and he was somewhat injured. His escape from death was rather miraculous, as he was pinned down by wreckage. The auxiliaries from Belleville and Brockville were despatched to the scene of the accident to clear the track.

CLOTHING ADVERTISING.

There is a great deal of untruth cropping out in the newspapers, some of it in the clothing advertisements. Patrons tell the Oak Hall daily they are disgusted with "this house" and "that house" as they "did this" and "did that," "said this," "said that," etc This store goes right ahead telling the truth about clothing and prices and saying only this:—"If you can do better elsewhere, we don't expect your trade."

MARRIED AT ST. MICHAEL'S.

NUPTIALS OF MR. FRANK TRUIASCH AND MISS MARY DUNN THIS MORNING.

A wedding took place at St. Michael's Church at 7.30 this morning, and a large number of the fair sex were present to witness the ceremony. The bride was Miss Mary Dunn, eldest daughter of Mr. John Dunn, who resides on South John street, and the groom Mr. Frank Truiasch, of Montreal, a former well-known young man of this city, a son of the late Mr. B. Truiasch. Miss Lizzie Dunn, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. James Truiasch, brother of the groom, was best man. Mgr. Farrelly officiated and celebrated the nuptial mass. At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding party and invited friends assembled at the residence of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of. At 1.30 this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Truiasch left for the west and will visit various places of interest before taking up their residence at the Metropolis. The popularity of the bride was attested by the large array of costly and beautiful gifts she received. The numerous friends of the young couple in this city will join with The Intelligencer in wishing them many years of happy wedded life.

OFFICES, NO. 34, Bridge St., - Belleville, Ont.

THOS. E. MEPHAM, Local Manager,
and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE

DIVINE REINFORCEMENTS REQUIRED AT THE CRITICAL PERIODS.

PROMISE OF THE LORD OF HOSTS

"As I Was With Moses, So I Will Be With Thee"—And Victory Is to Him Who Seizes Upon That Promise and Prayerfully Goes Forth to Do His Work Daily in the World.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1903, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—In his sermon the preacher points out the key to a successful life and the secret whereby even seeming reverses may be transformed into triumphs. The text is Joshua i, 5, "As I was with Moses so I will be with thee."

One of the greatest novels written, so considered by many of our best critics, is Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "Les Miserables." Amid all the art gallery of that treasured book the most wonderful description is the word painting by which the denunciator of "Napoleon the Little" pictures the downfall of "Napoleon the Great" at the battle field of Waterloo. When this great master of literature topples over the French colossus, the earth trembles and the dead centuries come forth out of their musty tombs and look on in perpetual wonderment.

In that marvelous recital you can hear the booming of the artillery's guns and the crack of the infantry's muskets and the groans of the dying and the cheers of the charging cavalry, and the tramp of the British lines forming themselves into the unbreakable squares against which the Old Guard flung itself in vain. In it you can see the flushed cheeks and the flashing eyes of a conquering host and the pale, wan, haggard faces of a flying mob.

Yet after all in reading the thrilling story I am impressed not so much by what happened as what did not happen. For many hours the eagle of victory seemed undecided upon which standard to alight. She fluttered this way and that, as though awaiting some one's expected advent to help her to decide. Napoleon himself was waiting, anxiously waiting, for the same helper. Every little while he would take his field glass and scan the surrounding hills and valleys. Every little while he would turn to his field officers and say: "Do you see him? Have you heard any news from Grouchy? We must have reinforcements or we are lost." In the meantime over the hills marched Marshal Blucher with his German reinforcements. That was the decisive event. Victory hesitated no longer. She flew to the standard of Wellington and perched there. The Napoleonic star set in gloom to rise no more in this world. It was the lack of reinforcements at a critical moment which destroyed the French army. It is the lack of divine re-enforcements which may destroy us in the battle of life.

The text tells us of another general who also needed reinforcements. To Joshua was committed the task of conquering a country held by warlike people. To him at the supreme moment comes the assurance of the Lord of Hosts, "I will be with thee. Now, my friends, the same kind of divine reinforcement which came to Joshua when he took command of the Israelitish forces may also be given to us. When God gave him his commission he said, "Joshua, if you will be true to me and fight under my standard I will be with thee as I was with thy predecessor." That divine succor which God gave to Joshua he gave to our Christian fathers; that divine help he will give to us if we will trust him and believe in him and live for him.

Therefore I would inspire every Christian to prayerfully go forth and do what God wants him to do. I would inspire all Christians to live and work with a brave heart, because the results of our future conflicts are as sure as God's promises are sure.

First, God will be with the Christian workers of this present generation. We fight under his glorious banner. David had proved it by experience when he wrote, "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth." Under that banner the church of God has won victories in all ages. Solomon saw it on its march and pronounced it "terrible as an army with banners." He saw it later, triumphant over all evil, entering like a bride into the home of a bridegroom and her lord leading her into the banquet hall and placing over her the banner of love.

Now a banner is not merely a piece of a rag or a flaring bit of fluttering bunting or a dress parade endazzlement. The banner of God is a flag or a standard. It is the symbol of supernal authority. Whoever therefore strikes at God's banners strikes at the divine heart. To-day, in symbol, God wraps about every Christian worker his banner. It is the symbol of protection. It is the symbol of omnipotence. It is the symbol of the atonement. It is the symbol of divine forgiveness. It is the symbol of a glorious and never ending life.

God is with living Christian workers in the continuity of service. He will never allow the gospel work of past generations to die. Christian work has immortality. Like the Government of England it goes on uninterruptedly from generation to generation. When King William IV. breathed his last the Archbishop of Canterbury immediately hurried to the home of a young girl. He knocked at the door of her palace until it was opened. Then he summoned this young girl to arise and come down and meet him. When she entered the parlor he bowed to her, saying: "The King is dead! Long live the Queen!" When that young girl, after she had grown to be an old woman of eighty-six, lay dying the watchers stood anxiously about her bed. As soon as she had breathed her last, and the attending physician pronounced her dead, her eldest son, Edward, was greeted with the acclamation, "Long live the King!" Rulers may come and rulers may go, but the Government goes on, no matter what human hand may grasp the sceptre. Like a true Government, the gospel work of the past generations shall never die. It must live on in the world. It is for us to continue it in our gospel faith and in our Christian lives.

In the fourth chapter of Mark, Christ compares Christian work to a sower going forth to sow. Some of that seed will surely fall upon good ground, which will yield some thirty, some sixty, some a hundred fold. It must reproduce itself multipotently in the human lives of the succeeding generations. When Dwight L. Moody died did his work die? Without doubt Mr. Moody was the greatest evangelist of the past century. His personality not only appealed to sinners, but also to the greatest Christian workers of his day. His voice and pen raised vast sums of money for Christian work. He was a gospel messenger who stirred England and America on his evangelistic tours. He built the famous institutes at Northfield. He gathered among the Massachusetts hills college men as well as ministers in annual conference for prayer and communion with God and for the study of the Bible. Suddenly, aye, as a flash, Mr. Moody was struck down by the death angel. One day on his way to hold great evangelistic services in Kansas City, the next day upon his death bed. What was the result of Mr. Moody's death? Has any great evangelist been found to take his place? "Ah, no," you answer; "not one, not one!" Well, my friend, if no one has been able to take Mr. Moody's place I can tell you this one truth—Mr. Moody when living was never as powerful as Mr. Moody when dead. The Chicago Institute and Moody Church have never been so great as they are to-day. The institutions at Northfield were never doing better work than at the present time. And, what is more, the very summer after Mr. Moody died the mightiest Northfield conference ever known up to that time was held, in spite of the fact that the most eloquent tongue and the best poised brain and the biggest heart Northfield ever produced were lying silent in the grave. Mr. Moody's gospel seed planting yielded forth some thirty, some sixty, and some a hundred fold. It was God's work, and God's work alone.

When Charles H. Spurgeon died did his work die? Oh, no. God is still blessing the mission of the Metropolitan Tabernacle and of the London Pastors' College. He is still blessing the work of Charles H. Spurgeon because it was intrinsically inspired by the Holy Spirit. He is blessing it through Spurgeon's successors. God will raise us up as modern Joshuas if we only live for him. He will bless in our lives the work of the Christian men and women with whom we have come into contact in the past. He will make us an essential link in a great chain of Christian influences which shall reach through all eternity.

God will bless the lives of modern Christian workers even through the death of his servants. Death is often a spiritual pruning hook. It lops off certain branches of the great tree of the human race in order that other branches may better develop and grow. We are all ready to recognize the usefulness of a pruning hook in a temporal sense. Why can we not do this in a spiritual sense? God, I believe, often uses the sharp pruning hook of death to spiritually develop his undeveloped children. He takes away his Moses in order to throw the spiritual responsibilities upon his Joshuas. He says to us one and all: "It is not right for you, oh, young man, to learn to lean upon your father's and mother's spiritual life! You must learn to lean upon my divine arm, and mine alone. And in the leaning I will protect thee and care for thee, as I did for your Christian parents."

God will bless the Christian workers of the present generation because Christ has emphatically and distinctly promised that by the weak things of this world God shall confound the mighty. That means that no child of God is too young to lead sinners to the cross; no Christian's arm is too weak to wield a sickle in God's harvest field; no lip is too dumb to utter a farreaching prayer, if that lip only belongs to a true disciple of Jesus Christ.

We can prove this statement by recounting the history of the famous revival services held among the students of Edinburgh a few years ago. Henry Drummond of blessed memory! Henry Drummond, whose chief mission was given to the redemption for Christ of student life, gave an account of this movement on his last visit to this country. A couple of athletes of the University of Edinburgh were about to sail as foreign missionaries. Their classmates wanted to give them a big farewell. They hired one of the largest halls in the city. As those athletes were about to go forth as missionaries they prepared a big religious service. After these young men had departed a few of the Christian students left in the college came together and decided that they ought to hold such a religious service every week. These services were to be addressed for the most part by the students themselves. A committee was selected and arrangements made. Every student who was asked to address that meeting had to have two characteristics—the one, a pure, noble life; the other, he had to be a man of plain speech. The only bar to an invitation to address that meeting was eloquence. If a man was known to have the "silver tongue" of speech he was compelled to keep a "golden silence." What was the result of these series of meetings, held Sunday in old Edinburgh by plain, unassuming and, in most cases, by "one talent" students? Not only did crowds of students weekly fill the hall, but scores and hundreds of young men were brought to confess Christ. The like of that religious influence had never before been seen in old Scotland, although Edinburgh had been blessed with pulpiteers whose names were famous all around the world.

Then the result of these meetings began to spread. These humble, one talent young men in batches of four and five were sent to other colleges and universities and also to villages and towns. These plain young men, by consecrated Christian lives, not only moved Edinburgh, but also all Scotland and all England and all Wales and, to some extent, religiously influenced the whole world. Mark you, my brother, that religious influence was not started by a Jonathan Edwards or a Robert McCheyne or a Frederick Robertson, but by plain, humble individuals, who were consecrating their lives to Jesus Christ. If God can and did bless those modern Joshuas will he not bless us as individuals if we here and now consecrate our lives to his service and pray and plead and work as we ought to pray and plead and work? He will, my Christian brother. He will, he will. He will, even though we may be physically and mentally weaklings. He will if we will only throw ourselves upon his divine and omnipotent strength.

God will bless the old as well as the young. Oh, how often in religious work I have heard this excuse given: "I believe that I ought to give myself up to religious work, but the trouble is I am too old. I have wasted the best part of my life. I am too old to start life over again." Some people may think you are right in your decision; I do not. Even now there may be a glorious time for you, oh, man, oh, woman, if you will start in Christian work just at the present time. I do not believe it is too late for you to start to serve Jesus Christ; not too late even though for you the hour hand of the clock of time may be pointing to the twelfth hour and the minute hand to five minutes of 12 o'clock.

How old was Moses when he began to lead forth the children of Israel into the wilderness? Was he a young man? No. His hair must have been white. His skin must have been wrinkled. He had almost passed his eightieth milestone of life when he went forth to liberate the children of Israel from Egyptian slavery. How old was Joshua when the mantle of the dead Moses fell upon his shoulders? He had already passed his fourscore years and five. He was already pressing on toward his ninetieth milestone. So God has for you and me, if we only throw ourselves upon his mercy, a mission of Christian usefulness. He has it even though we may be old men and women, with many years of wasted opportunities to our discredit.

By an ex-member of my church I can prove how God can bless a redeemed life which has been cursed by many years of sin. Some time ago a poor woman attended the services of the church of which I was pastor. She wished to join, but the members of the session were very much in doubt about letting her in. She had been for fifteen years a dissolute character. Her face was scarred and seamed with her past debaucheries. She had be her side a drunken husband and two filthily dressed children. The session talked with her and at last decided to place her on probation for six months. At the end of six months she again wanted to join the church, and of course we admitted her. A short time after that woman moved away and left our church. A couple of years ago that woman called upon me. At first I did not know her. Not only had the grace of God cleansed her face, but the marks of dissipation had almost entirely left her countenance. Though she had not what the average artist might call a beautiful face, she certainly had a good, honest, noble, Holy Spirit inspired face. Her whole life was changed. It was now a Christian life of consecrated usefulness. Oo, my brother and sister, no matter how old you may be and how many wasted years are behind, shall not God inspire you and lift you up as he changed that woman's life? Shall not the divine power guard your remaining days as Moses and Joshua's lives were protected?

Nearly every royal order has a royal insignia. In Germany one of the most honorable of orders was that started by King William called "the Order of the Iron Cross." Would that to-day the Heavenly King, instead of an earthly potentate, might place over your heart "the sign of the Iron Cross." May it prove that in his name you have worked and will continue to work divine wonders. Saved by grace, may you always continue to spiritually bless the lives of your fellow men.

Feeding Bull Calves.

Covering the feeding of bull calves it is best to give them a ration that will produce growth giving them health and vigor rather than something that will produce too much fat. Especially is this true if the bull is intended for dairy purposes. A ration of bran or ground oats with a little oil well added will give good results when fed in connection with good timothy hay. It is better that all grain fed them should be ground and feed them lightly at the beginning and gradually increase the feed as they grow older and feed better. Allow him plenty of exercise, as this is one of the most important factors in the proper development of animals intended for breeding purposes.

Bottle Corks of Paper.

One of the latest uses to which paper is put is the manufacture of corks. With the growing scarcity of cork bark, manufacturers cast about for a cheap but satisfactory substitute. A machine was invented, about the size of a sewing machine, which makes corks out of waste paper, which is first reduced to pulp. This machine will make corks of any size, shape or color and stamp the name or trade mark of a firm upon every cork as it is made. It can turn out 300 finished corks a minute. Paper corks are not affected by any sort of oil or acid, and chemists pronounce them superior to the old style in every way.

A bashful young minister was once asked to preach before the students of Wellesley college. His embarrassment when he entered the dining room of College hall for breakfast Sunday morning and found himself the only man among 350 girls was overwhelming. He was asked to say grace and hastily delivered himself of the following: "O Lord, bless this food for our use, and may this meat make us all strong men!"—Good Housekeeping.

About eighteen months ago Mr. W. S. Manning, of Albany, N. Y., widely known in trade circles as the representative of the Albany Chemical Co., was suffering from a protracted attack of Diarrhoea. "I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," he says, "and obtained relief. I cheerfully recommend this medicine to those similarly afflicted." Sold by all druggists.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality. Handsome illustrated publications sent free on application to J. D. HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

CONGRESS OF COMMERCE

Princes of Business From All Over the British Empire.

Congress Will Back Up Chamberlain on His Preferential Tariff Policy and Will Petition For a Commission—Lords Strathcona and Brassey Open the Proceedings in Montreal—Resolutions Carried During the First Day.

Montreal, Aug. 18.—It was a brilliant assembly that confronted Lord Strathcona when he convened the fifth congress of the Chambers of Commerce yesterday. Six hundred princes of trade from every section of the Empire were there. It was the most representative gathering of commercial spirits ever witnessed in the Dominion, and a ravishing bit of color was contributed by the gallery of ladies. The United Kingdom, Australia, South Africa, India, the West Indies, New Zealand and Canada were there in the person of her most progressive merchants.

Upon Lord Strathcona's left sat Lord Brassey, president of the congress, the representative of a family whose name has been identified with some of Canada's big enterprises of half a century ago. Adjoining was Lieut.-Gen. F. Winburn Laurie, C.B., M.P., of the London Chamber, a Canadian, who has so long resided in London as to desire to see the colonial Empire ruled by Downing street.

Mighty Stretch of Empire.

Spreading out from beneath the shield and royal standard, beneath which they stood gathered the delegates, all occupying numbered chairs. Would you have an occular demonstration of the world wide stretch of the British Empire? Then feast your mind's eye upon the spectacle of Sir Edward Buck, the genius of far-off Cawnpore, rubbing elbows with the venerable Hon. W. Ross of Halifax, Prof. W. R. Lang of London, sandwiched in between delegates from Durban, Kimberley and other South African cities; Willis Raymond of New Zealand seated in the same seat with the commercial bodies from the West Indies; the South Australian visitors crowding into the square devoted to the citizens of the Empire from Alexandria and other sections of the far removed Egypt; or the merchants of Victoria and Vancouver contending for a little more room with the commercial bodies from New South Wales, Queensland and the Barbadoes. Nothing could more strikingly illustrate the world force of the British Empire.

Greeted With Applause.

This was the interesting picture that Lord Strathcona viewed as he arose to address the congress. He was greeted with a whirlwind of applause.

Lord Strathcona referred to the progress which had made the discussion of Imperial preferential trade. He said the proposal might involve some rearrangement of the fiscal policy of the United Kingdom, but he did not think it would necessitate any return to protection or result in the burden on the shoulders of our fellow-citizens of Britain being increased to any appreciable extent, if at all it would not be protection in the way in which it was usually interpreted,' but duties on a limited number of articles from countries outside the Empire.

Consolidate the Empire.

Lord Brassey, who followed, said there was one prime object for them all—that was to strengthen and consolidate the Empire. Lord Brassey is a finished speaker and knows how to secure the best effect. He is tall, grey-bearded and of ruddy complexion. With the idea of saving time, the subjects from one to sixteen were referred to a committee, to be acted on to-day, with the hope of eliminating minor resolutions.

LORD BRASSEY, K.C.B.

Chairman of Congress.

Imperial Defence.

The discussion which followed was on Imperial defence. Geo. E. Drummond of Montreal moved two resolutions, introduced by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Montreal Board of Trade, favoring colonial contributions to Imperial defence.

After some discussion Col. Denison, moved an amendment embodying the principle of the Montreal Board of Trade's resolution and that of the Montreal District Chambre De Commerce, which he said was an emblem of the unity of the two races as follows:

"It is resolved that this Congress hereby approve the principle that it hereby approve the principle that it is the duty of the self-governing colonies to participate in the cost of the defence of the Empire. The colonies thus claim the privilege of keeping their own initiative as to the nature and mode of help which they may agree to offer in the future to the British Empire."

The passing of this resolution was greeted with enthusiasm.

Britain's Food.

Lieut.-Col. Denison and J. W. Woods of Toronto, moved that "In the opinion of this congress the food supply of Great Britain can be most safely relied upon by developing the output of her own territories to such an extent as to make her independent of supplies from foreign sources, and to best achieve this end it is more desirable and necessary to divert as far as possible all of her able-bodied surplus population who will make useful citizens to the shores of her dominions across the seas."

The resolution was adopted.

Other Resolutions.

The resolution touching the importation of coolie labor from India was withdrawn without comment.

The motion to urge the Imperial Government to request the French surtax charges to be abolished on shipments passing through French territory was adopted.

The resolution requesting the Imperial Government to grant the most favored nation clause to countries who had extended same to the colonies was passed.

Last night a reception was tendered the visitors at the Board of Trade. The city made the occasion a social event, and several thousand persons were present.

Congress Backs Chamberlain.

The Congress will to-day formally andorse the principles of preferential trade, and petition the Imperial Government to name a commission to investigate the colonial conditions and define the terms. This much was agreed upon last night by the special committee appointed to consider the subject.

The committee met at 11 p.m. The chairman is E. J. Gillespie, chairman of the London Chamber, and there are twelve other members, five representing the United Kingdom and the balance the different colonies. The committee was appointed to arrange the preferential debate for today, and to it was referred the six resolutions touching the tariff reform from as many different sections of the Empire.

The colonials favored amalgamating the six resolutions into one strong motion. The United Kingdom delegates favored preferential relations, but were opposed to pledging the Congress in so radical a manner. After much discussion the resolution agreed upon, to be embodied in their report, formally pledges the convention to the most radical Chamberlain policy and preferential tariffs.

Chamberlain's Position.

London, Aug. 18.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, replying to a request for a short, definite statement of his fiscal proposals, has written as follows:

"I have never suggested any tax whatever on raw materials, such as wool or cotton, and I believe that such a tax would be entirely unnecessary for the purposes I have in view, namely, for mutual preference with the colonies, and for enabling us to bargain for better terms with our foreign competitors.

"As regards food, there is nothing in the policy of tariff reform which I have put before the country that need increase in the slightest degree the cost of living of any family in the country."

U.S. TRADE WITH US.

It Has Reached the High Water Mark—Imports and Exports.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—Trade with Canada in the year just ended reached its high water mark. Both in imports and exports the commerce between the two countries exceeded that in any previous year.

Statistics compiled at the Department of Commerce and Labor show that imports from Canada last year amounted to $54,660,410 and the exports to Canada $123,472,416. By Canada is meant British Columbia, Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

About $38,000,000 of the imports was from Quebec and Ontario, $10,000,000 from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and $6,000,000 from British Columbia. Of the exports $110,000,000 was to Quebec and Ontario, $7,000,000 to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and $6,000,000 to British Columbia.

The imports never before reached so much as $50,000,000 save in one exceptional year, 1881, when they barely touched that figure. In 1902 they were $48,076,124. The exports to Canada never reached so much as $100,000,000 until 1901, when they were $105,000,000. In 1902 they were $100,000,000. The Canadian tariff has given to the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom and most of its colonies a reduction of twelve and a half per cent. in the tariff rates since April, 1897; twenty-five per cent. from August, 1898, to July 1, 1900, and since that date a reduction of thirty-three per cent.

It was during that period that the most rapid growth in the exports from the United States to Canada took place. The exports over the year 1897 increased ninety per cent., while the increase in the total exports meantime has been about forty per cent.

Crops in Manitoba.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—Dr. Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms, who is making his annual tour through the West, wires as follows to the Department of Agriculture: "Crops from Winnipeg to Brandon mostly light. Some good fields of wheat will probably average fifteen to eighteen bushels. Will average better in northern and western portions."

With One Firm 59 Years.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—The death occurred yesterday at his home, 270 Ontario street, of Chas. McCurry, in his 87th year. He was for 59 years an employe of Lyman Bros. & Co., wholesale druggists. He was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to Canada when quite young.

Colony Calls to Colony.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—Agent Jardine, writing from Cape Town, says: All the South African colonies have now agreed to the Bloemfontein Conference tariff, which provides, among its other features, for a preference to Britain.

Kansas City Again Flooded.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 18.—Owing to the rise in the waters of the Kansas River at this point, the James street bridge, the only means of street car communication between here and Kansas City, Kan., was carried away yesterday. Other structures, including the stock yards, and the belt line bridges, are in immediate danger.

Suspicions of Foul Play.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—As a result of Detective Forrest's inquiries after the body of William Murray was found in the Don River, at the foot of Cherry street, on Saturday morning, an inquest was opened last evening by Coroner Greig, and will be continued a week hence. There are strong suspicions of foul play.

Gives $20,000 to the Poor.

Rome, Aug. 18.—The Pope has given $20,000 for distribution among the poor of Rome. His Holiness seems to have quite recovered his health.

40 PERSONS WERE KILLED

Terrible Accident on Lake Tykojarvi in Finland.

Upper Deck of Vessel Conveying People From Church Collapsed—Many Were Also Injured—A Man's Back Broken—Section Foreman at Blyth Pinned Beneath a Wagon—Several Drownings and Some Railway Accidents.

Helsingfors, Finland, Aug. 17.—A terrible accident occurred on Lake Tykojarvi Saturday. The upper deck of a vessel conveying people from church collapsed and forty persons were drowned or killed and many others were injured.

Killed by a Train.

Kentville, N. S., Aug. 18.—The flying Bluenose Express train from Halifax, yesterday ran into a team at Port William's Crossing, killing Louis Messenger of Canard, his horses and smashing his carriage to pieces.

Killed by a Blast.

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Wm. Ramsay, a farmer, was killed yesterday in his hay field, near Otisville, by a stone thrown from a blast on the Erie Railroad, a quarter of a mile away.

KILLED IN A RUNAWAY.

Samuel Smith Meets a Cruel Death Near Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 18.—Samuel Smith met with a horrible death here yesterday afternoon. He attempted to drive down a difficult roadway which runs down to the river bank on the farm of William Bell, in Derby, near the corporation limits with a load of lumber. It is assumed that the lumber slipped forward, and that the horse ran away. At a tree half way down the hill the victim was found with his head jammed to a jelly between the spokes. One of his arms was fifteen feet away, having been torn from his body. Death was instantaneous. Deceased was a former resident of Elmwood, having moved to his present residence last spring. A widow and three daughters, Ettie, Bertha and Laura, survive. Out of a family of eleven, of which the eldest is over sixty, this is the first death. The victim was 55 years of age.

DEATH CAME QUICKLY.

Engineer McGuire of the C.P.R. Thrown in Front of Engine.

Winnipeg, Aug. 18.—Traveling Engineer Ed. McGuire of Rat Portage was killed at Murillo Station last evening. He was testing a new locomotive, which was following a freight. He left the locomotive and climbed upon the top of the caboose, when the train gave a lurch, and he was thrown on the track, directly in front of the locomotive he had just left. Death was instantaneous, the driving wheels cutting the body in two. Mr. McGuire was one of the most popular engineers on the Canadian Pacific, and had recently been promoted to an inspectorship.

Fire Boss Suffocated.

W. J. Davis, fire boss in the Canmore coal mines, was suffocated in an explosion caused by a lamp.

Man's Back Broken.

Stratford, Aug. 18.—The ambulance was called to the station yesterday to meet the 9.35 train from Goderich, on which Thomas Thomson, section foreman at Blyth, was brought here with a broken back for treatment at the hospital. Thomson is in a critical condition, and but slight hopes are entertained for his recovery. He was riding towards his home on the wagon of an egg merchant when the ring bolt broke and the wagon tipped over. Thomson was pinned beneath it and sustained a fracture of the spine.

His Scalp Torn Off.

St. Thomas, Aug. 18.—A G. T. R. section man named Henry Campbell was run over by a train in the station yard at Atwood yesterday. Campbell was working in the yard when a freight train backed down upon him. He had his back to the train and was knocked forward under the cars. His scalp was almost completely torn off, and both legs were broken.

MISTOOK TRAIN ORDERS.

Head-On Collision Between Two Passenger Trains Is Result.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—In a head-on collision between two passenger trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, near Long Lake, yesterday, one trainman was killed, an engineer and fireman were probably fatally injured, and a number of persons were more or less seriously hurt. Several of the victims were buried beneath the mass of wreckage and were removed with great difficulty. A mistake in train orders is given as the cause of the accident.

Boy Drowned in Don River.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—The River Don claimed another youthful victim yesterday. Walter Johnstone, the nine-year-old son of John Johnstone, 6 Home-place, went in swimming with several other boys at the free bathing place, a few hundred yards north of the Winchester bridge at 4.30. The body was found by 6.30 o'clock.

Triple Drowning.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 18.—News has reached here of a triple drowning accident in the Rainy River, near the fort. Two girls named McDonald were bathing in the river, but got beyond their depth. A married sister hurried to the rescue, and in endeavoring to save the little ones, all were drowned.

Five Little Girls Drowned.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 18.—At Lurich Station, Giles County, late Sunday evening, while a party of children, one boy and seven girls, ranging from 8 to 15 years, were boating, the boat capsized and five of the girls were drowned.

Seven Tourists Lost.

Chamounix, France, Aug. 18.—Seven tourists, it was announced yesterday, were killed recently while attempting to climb the Aiguille Grises, behind Mont Blanc, on the Courmayeur side of the mountains.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

Mr. Borden and Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick Expected to Speak To-Day—In the House on Monday.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—The leader of the Opposition will be heard this afternoon on the Grand Trunk Pacific debate, and may be followed by the Minister of Justice. As Mr. Borden is expected to pronounce in a decided manner the attitude of the Conservative party upon the issue, and as Mr. Fitzpatrick is known to have had the drawing up of the agreement in charge and to be thoroughly versed in the details of the scheme, both speeches are looked forward to with great interest. The speakers yesterday were Mr. Lennox and Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes on the Opposition side, and Aulay Morrison and Dr. Russell of Hants, N.S., for the Government.

Postal Rate on Newspapers.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—The Postoffice Department has issued new regulations for carrying out the act of Parliament reducing the rate on newspapers within 300 miles of the office of publication from one-half to one-quarter cent per pound. Free transmission of country newspapers is still allowed. The free delivery offices in which newspapers cannot be delivered with reduced rate of one-quarter of a cent are Vancouver, Winnipeg, London, Brantford, Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, St. John, Fredericton and Halifax.

LASHED TO DEATH.

Cattle Men With Blacksnake Whips Flayed a Sheep Herder.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 18.—Information has reached this city from Dupuyer, a small cattle camp in Northern Montana, of the whipping to death of Joe Sturgeon by fourteen white caps, supposed to be cattlemen. Sturgeon, who was a sheep herder, was forced to surrender at the point of rifles. He was bound, slung across a saddle, taken out on the prairie, stripped of his clothing and bound to a tree. The white caps, with blacksnakes and knotted ropes, flayed the herder until his body hung limp and lifeless. Cattlemen had repeatedly posted notices ordering all sheepmen to leave the vicinity, and all but Sturgeon had moved their flocks to other sections.

THREW BABE INTO RIVER.

Windsor Young Mother Confesses to Having Done Murder.

Windsor, Aug. 18.—Ella Rice, a 19-year-old girl, has confessed to the murder of her infant child. She has been employed for the past three months as a domestic at various city hotels, and formerly lived in Strathroy, where she is well connected. The girl threw her child into the river on the day after its birth, and it was found at the Michigan Central docks by boys swimming. Patrolman Livingston located the mother at the hotel Campus, Detroit, and brought her to this city. She accuses Edward Croden, an employe of Belton's Lumber Yards, York street, London, of being responsible for her trouble.

Alex. Pirie at Rest.

Dundas, Aug. 18.—The remains of the late Alex. Pirie were laid at rest yesterday afternoon beside those of his wife, over whose death he became so despondent. The cortege was one of the largest ever seen here, and was attended by prominent people and newspaper editors from all parts of the country. The services were conducted by the Rev. W. J. Clarke of London, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Maxwell. The pallbearers were J. Ross Robertson, Toronto Telegram; Andrew Pattullo, M. P. P., Woodstock Sentinel-Review; Hon. Thomas Bain, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons; James Summerville, T. H. A. Begue, K.C., and F. D. Suter of Dundas.

Hamilton's Summer Carnival.

Hamilton, Aug. 18.—The first day of the Summer Carnival is over, and it surpassed the wildest dreams of even those who have been expecting wonders. The program was carried out fully yesterday, and everything has gone off like clockwork. Thousands of Old Boys have already arrived, and every train that comes in is bringing more. To-day Toronto's contingent of 1,000 is expected. One of the features in the morning will be the Old Boys' parade. The city never looked more beautiful. It is ablaze with flags, bunting, Chinese lanterns and electric signs.

VERY PLEASANT.

Because it makes the digestion of good, nourishing food easy, Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is prescribed by physicians for wasting diseases. It cleanses the blood and system of impurities and creates firm flesh. Pleasant to take, and agreeable to weak stomachs.

SULTAN CALLS OUT TROOPS

Imperial Irade Presses 52,000 Men Into Active Service.

Composition of the Troops Levied—Roumania Is Getting Large Quantities of Ammunition Ready—Christian Villages in Debre and Okrida Destroyed by Bashi-Bazouks—Russian Fleet on Its Way—Mutilate Women and Children.

Constantinople, Aug. 18.—An imperial irade has been issued calling out fifty-two additiona battalions of troops (about 52,000 men) from the European Provinces of Turkey, in consequence of the spread of the insurrection in Macedonia. These troops comprise twenty battalians of reserves of the first class from the Adrianople and Salonica army corps. The balance are reserves of the second class.

The managers of the railroads have notified the Porte that they disclaim responsibility for the damage done to the line, or for the injuries sustained by officials while the present conditions prevail in Macedonia. A despatch from Salonica says two persons were killed, a number of people were injured and several cars were destroyed by an explosion which occurred yesterday on the railroad between Amatora and Karazonli.

Getting Powder Ready.

Bucharest, Roumania, Aug. 18.—Acting War Minister Bratiano has ordered the Government powder factory and small arms ammunition depot to prepare large quantities of ammunition immediately.

Christian Villages Destroyed.

Sofia, Aug. 18.—A despatch received here from Uskub, says that 600 Bashi-Bazouks, under the command of Albanian chiefs, who are notoriously cruel, have pillaged and destroyed a number of Christian villages in the districts of Debre and Okrida. The Turkish authorities, it is added, connived at the outrages and furnished the Bashi-Bazouks with old uniforms, so that they might appear to be regular soldiers.

The Fleet Has Sailed.

Sebastopol, Aug. 18.—The squadron of the Russian Black Sea fleet, which has been ordered to the Turkish coast, sailed yesterday. It is under the command of Rear Admiral Krueger.

Mutilate Women and Children.

Berlin, Aug. 17.—According to a despatch received by The Frankfort Zeitung, the river near Monastir, Macedonia, is full of the mutilated bodies of women and children, who have been massacred by Bashi-Bazouks.

PORTLAND VS. CANADIAN PORTS.

A report from Portland, Me., says that the people of that city are already preparing to receive the freight which will come over the Grand Trunk Pacific or Cox railway. The press of Portland publishes statements, made by prominent officials of the Grand Trunk, assuring the people of Portland that the promises made by the Canadian Government that Grand Trunk Pacific freight is to go through Canadian ports is all moonshine. The population of Portland, we are assured, is to be doubled as a result of the investment of over $100,000,000 of Canadian money. Already arrangements are being made to furnish additional facilities for handling the freight which is produced on Canadian farms, and in Canadian factories. The all-Canadian route has only one significance to the people of Portland—it is sand in the eyes of the people of Canada.

The Canadian cities which hope to derive benefits from the new transcontinental are held up to ridicule. It is explained that this is another case where Mr. Hays, a thorough-going Yankee, has fooled the green and unsophisticated Canucks. Mr. Hays prided himself with having "gulled" Parliament for a time, and why should he not have a shy at the people? He did the trick on Parliament by simply making false promises. Now the same thing is being done in the case of the Portland and Canadian cities. Thus the Laurier cry of "Canada for the United States" is justified and "Canada for the Canadians" trampled under foot.

Duty faithfully performed crowns the hours with flowers.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A slot machine that would sell postage stamps would be an excellent thing in the Post Office. It would be an accommodation to many people who would like to purchase stamps before the stamp counter opens or after it closes.

The Grit paper still preserves an eloquent silence in regard to the recent license outrage. One thing, too, you can bet your Sunday hat on—The petition asking the Ontario Government to enquire into the license conditions which prevail in this city will not be allowed to lie in the Post Office—not if the Postmaster knows it.

Joseph Pulitzer, of the New York World has given $2,000,000 to Columbia university for a school of journalism. If the proposed school teaches the methods employed by Pulitzer's staff, one of the principal text-books should be "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen."

Last night's Montreal Star contained a cut of ex-Mayor Johnson, of this city, together with a brief biographical sketch, which was published in connection with the Congress of Chambers of the Empire, to which Mr. Johnson is one of Belleville's delegates.

• • •

The Independent London News yielded up the ghost after an existence of eight years. The News gave, as the reason for its failure, that the people of London did not appreciate "independent" journalism. To which the Hamilton Herald, another "independent" paper, replies that the News died because it did not publish as good a paper as either of the two party papers in London, which is just about what we would expect any "independent" paper to say. The fact of the matter, however, seems to be that nowadays people want a newspaper to be one thing or the other. These straddle-the-fence sheets, which consider that 'independence consists in biting one party to-day and scratching the other to-morrow, are about as useful as the weeds which grow along the road, so far as political utility is concerned. During election times they nearly always switch to the support of the party they think will win, and when the piping times of peace comes round again they can be found in their old position, on the fence, with an armful of bricks ready to throw at any politician who happens to pass by. Independence of that kind is too closely allied with hypocrisy to deceive many people, and it seems to have deceived very few, indeed, up in London.

A Creditable Showing.

The Albert College has taken an exceedingly creditable stand at the recent matriculation, scholarship examinations, and also at the June senior matriculation examination, especially when it is remembered that these examinations are open to all High Schools and Collegiate Institutes in the province. Mr. F. W. Rathman, of Belleville, won the Edward Blake Proficiency Scholarship No. 6 and Miss Norma Dafoe, of Madoc, second honors in all subjects but Greek. At the June senior matriculation examination at Toronto University, Miss Iva Horton, daughter of Rev. Gilbert Horton, of Bridgewater, took first place, securing first-class proficiency standing, and Miss Edna Drewry, of Smithfield, took second place, securing second-class proficiency standing. It will be remembered that in 1901 Elmer Luck, of Albert College, won, at the matriculation examination, the second scholarship in two departments and W. J. Carey won the Nichols Memorial Scholarship in English and Moderns at Queen's University.

LACTATED FOOD

MAKES BABIES HEALTHY.

Babies fed on a diet of Lactated Food lose their pinched, puny look almost immediately, their sleep becomes sound and restful, and their pale cheeks and blue lips grow full and ruddy. Hosts of mothers are grateful to Lactated Food for the joy of seeing their pale drooping little ones turn into bright-eyed, babies that eat, sleep and grow in a way to delight a mother's heart.

A trial of only a few days will tell its own story of the great worth of Lactated Food in the increase in baby's weight and by its gain in sturdiness and high spirits.

If your baby is cross, fretful, or peevish, is troubled with constipation, colic or diarrhoea, if its sleep is short and easily broken, if its life is not perfectly healthy, then you may know that its food is disagreeing with it, and that the little one is in danger of disease. Put dear baby at once on Lactated Food and it will grow hearty and strong.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during August, the Grand Trunk Railway System, in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Nav. Co., will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. Train leaves Belleville 7 a.m., Napanee 7.43 a.m. Seven hours' sail through the beautiful 1000 Islands of the St. Lawrence to Alexandria Bay and return. Round trip from Belleville $1.58. Napanee $1.35. altosl

IT IS A PERPLEXING THING.

For the reader of newspaper advertisements to determine what is what. We do not use as large type as some, but we are sure that what we have to say is not the less important to any one who is interested in the subject of clothing at this time. Our summer suits are ready to speak for themselves, if you will but take time to inspect them, and we think you will find no fault with the prices. We are making an immense display of hot weather clothing and furnishings.—Quick & Robertson.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during July and August the Grand Trunk Railway System in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation Co. will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. Train leaves Belleville 7 a.m. Napanee 7.43 a.m. 7 hours sail through the beautiful 1000 Islands of the St. Lawrence to Alexandria Bay and return. A Desperate Character.

First Henpecked Husband—Well, sir, I've been gone and done it. My wife wouldn't give me the latchkey again this morning, so I took it by force—by force, do you hear me?

Second Ditto (admiringly)—Say, old man, don't let my wife hear that. She'll never let me go out with you again.

One He Couldn't Lose.

Peddler—Want to buy an umbrella cheap, boss?

Merchant—No; what's the use? Whenever I buy an umbrella somebody steals it.

Peddler—Well, this one ain't worth stealing.—Exchange.

The Reminder.

"Mamma," said Bennie as there came a brief pause in the conversation on the part of the callers, "isn't it time for you to ask me what I learned at the kindergarten today? If you don't do it pretty soon I'll forget what you told me to say."

Wouldn't Show.

Mistress (greatly shocked)—Is it possible, Mary, you are making bread without having washed your hands?

New Girl—Lor', what's the difference, mum? It's brown bread.

THURLOW RESIDENT DEAD.

DEMISE OF MR. ARCHIBALD GRIER IN HIS 74th YEAR.

Mr. Archibald Grier, a highly respected resident of the Township of Thurlow, died this morning in his 74th year. Deceased was born in Ireland, and came out to this country when but seven years of age. The greater portion of his life was spent in the Township of Thurlow. He was a successful farmer, but owing to ill-health was compelled some four years ago to retire from active work. Mr. Grier was a member of the Methodist church. A widow and one son, Edward, who resides in Texas, survive.

TWENTY YEARS OF BRONCHITIS.

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian" of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used "Catarrhozone," which cured him quickly and permanently. The captain says "Catarrhozone is the best cure for bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. Two months' treatment price $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

More Glasses Are Worn

Now-a-days than ever before. No doubt of it. People used to think that the wearing of glasses should be put off as long as possible—that it was an old age necessity only.

We know more now. We apply every known agency for the relief and care of eye sickness — and there are in use to-day methods which weren't heard of even ten years ago.

Now we commence to right eye sight just as soon as it commences to go wrong. Now school children by the hundreds use glasses, And it's wise and proper.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening. We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

"But that ain't what I started in to tell. As I was a-sayin', old Jane Hardeway thought she'd sorter put a word in the dispute to pay fer her board an' keep, an' she told Betsy that it was all owin' to the way the Bishops was raised that Alf couldn't stand to have things nice about 'im. She said all the Bishops she'd ever knowed had a natural stoop that they got by livin' in cabins with low roofs. She wasn't spreadin' 'er butter as thick as she thought she was—ur maybe it was the sort she was spreadin'—fer Betsy blazed up like the woods afire in a high wind. It didn't take old Jane long to diskiver that thar was several breeds o' Bishops out o' jail, an' she spent most o' the rest o' her visit braggin' on scme she'd read about. She said the name sounded like the start of 'em had been religious and substanch."

"Brother Abner," whined Mrs. Bishop, "I wisht you'd hush all that foolishness an' help me 'n the children out o' this awful fix. Alfred always would listen to you."

"Well," and the old man smiled and winked at the lawyer, "I'll give you both all the advice I kin. Now, the Shoal River stock is a good thing right now, but ef the mill was to ketch on fire an' burn down thar'd be a loss. Then as fer timber land, it ain't easy to sell, but it mought take a start before another flood. I say it mought, an' then agin it moughtn't. The mill mought burn, an' then agin it moughtn't. Now, ef you uns kin be helped by this advice you are welcome to it free o' charge. Not changin' the subject, did you uns know Mrs. Richardson's heffer's got a calf? I reckon she won't borrow so much milk after hers gits good."

Trabue smiled broadly as the gaunt man withdrew, but his amusement was short lived, for Mrs. Bishop began to cry, and she soon rose in despair and left the room. Alan stood for a moment looking at the unmoved face of his father, who had found something in the last clause of the document which needed explanation; then he, too, went out.

CHAPTER II.

ALAN found his uncle on the back porch washing his face and hands in a basin on the water shelf. The young man leaned against one of the wooden posts which supported the low roof of the porch and waited for him to conclude the puffing, sputtering operation, which he finally did by enveloping his head in a long towel hanging from a wooden roller on the weatherboarding.

"Well," he laughed, "yore uncle Ab didn't better matters in thar overly much, but what could a feller do? Yore pa's as bullheaded as a young steer, an' he's already played smash anyway. Yore ma's wastin' breath; but a woman seems to have plenty of it to spare. A woman's tongue's like a windmill—it takes breath to keep it a-goin', an' a dead clam 'ud kill her business."

"It's no laughing matter, Uncle Ab," said Alan despondently. "Something must have gone wrong with father's judgment. He never has acted this way before."

The old man dropped the towel and thrust his long, almost jointless fingers into his vest pocket for a horn comb which folded up like a jackknife. "I was jest a-wonderin'," as he began to rake his shaggy hair straight down to his eyes—"I was jest a-wonderin' ef he could 'a' bent his skull in a little that time his mule th'owed 'im ag'in the sweet gum. They say that often changes a body powerful. Folks do think he's off his cazip on the land question, an' now that he's traded his best nest egg fer another swipe o' the earth's surface I reckon they'll talk harder. But yore pa ain't no fool. No plumb idiot could 'a' managed yore ma as well as he has. You see, I know what he's accomplished, fer I've been with 'im ever since they was yoked together. When they was married, she was as wild as a buck an' certainly made our daddy walk a chalk line, but Alfred has tapered 'er down beautiful. She didn't want this thing done one bit, an' yet it is settled by this time"—the old man looked through the hall to the front gate—"yes, Trabue's unhitchin'. He's got them stock certificates in his pocket, an' yore pa has the deeds in his note case. When this gits out, mossbacks from heer clean to Gilmer 'll be trapsin' in to dispose o' land at so much a front foot."

"It's no laughing matter, Uncle Ab."

"But what under high heaven will he do with it all?"

"Hold on to it," grinned Abner; "that is, ef he kin rake an' scrape enough together to pay the taxes. Why, last yeer his taxes mighty nigh floored 'im, an' the expenses on this county he's jest annexed will push 'im like rips, fer now, you know, he'll have to do without the income on his factory stock. But he thinks he's got the right sow by the yeer. Before long he may yell out to us to come he'p 'im turn 'er loose, but he's waltzin' with 'er now."

At this juncture Mrs. Bishop came out of the dining room wiping her eyes on her apron.

"Mother," said Alan tenderly, "try not to worry over this any more than you can help."

"Your pa's gettin' old an' childish," whimpered Mrs. Bishop. "He's heerd somebody say timber land up in the mountains will some day advance, an' he forgets that he's too old to get the benefit of it. He's goin' to bankrupt us."

"Ef I do," the man accused thundered from the hall as he strode out, "it'll be my money that's lost—money that I made by hard work."

He stood before them, glaring over his eyeglasses at his wife. "I've had enough of yore tongue, my lady. Ef I'd not had so much to think about in thar jest now, I'd 'a' shut you up sooner. Dry up now—not another word. I'm doin' the best I kin accordin' to my lights to provide fer my children, an' I won't be interfered with."

No one spoke for a moment. However, Mrs. Bishop finally retorted, as her brother knew she would in her own time.

"I don't call buyin' thousands o' acres o' unsalable land providin' fer anything except the porehouse," she fumed.

"That's beca'se you don't happen to know as much about the business as I do," said Bishop, with a satisfied chuckle, which to the observing Daniel sounded very much like exultation. "When you all know what I know, you'll be laughin' on t'other sides o' yore mouths. I reckon I'll jest have to let you all know about this or I won't have a speck o' peace from now on. I didn't tell you at fust beca'se nobody kin keep a secret as well as the man it belongs to, an' I was afeered it ud leak out an' damage my interests, but this last 5,000 acres jest about sweeps all the best timber in the whole Cohutta section, an' I mought as well let up. I reckon you all know that ef—I say ef—my land was nigh a railroad it ud be low at five times what I paid fer it, don't you? Well, then, the long an' short of it is that I happen to be on the inside an' know that a railroad is goin' to be run from Blue Lick Junction to Darley. It'll be started inside of the next yeer an' 'll run smack dab through my property. Thar now! You know more'n you thought you did, don't you?"

The little group stared into his glowing face incredulously.

"A railroad is to be built, father?" exclaimed Alan.

"That's what I said."

Mrs. Bishop's eyes flashed with sudden hope, and then, as if remembering her husband's limitations, her face fell.

"Alfred," she asked skeptically, "how does it happen that you know about the railroad before other folks does?"

"How do I? That's it now—how do I?" and the old man laughed freely. "I've had my fun out o' this thing, listenin' to what every crank said about me bein' cracked an' so on, but I was jest a-lyin' low waitin' fer my time."

"Well, I'll be switched!" ejaculated Abner Daniel, half seriously, half sarcastically. "Geewhilikins! A railroad! I've always said one would pay like rips an' open up a dern good, God fersaken country. I'm glad you are a-goin' to start one, Alfred."

Alan's face was filled with an expression of blended doubt and pity for his father's credulity. "Father," he said gently, "are you sure you got your information straight?"

"I got it from headquarters." The old man raised himself on his toes and knocked his heels together, a habit he had not indulged in for many a year. "It was told to me confidentially by a man who knows all about the whole thing, a man who is in the employ o' the company that's goin' to build it."

"Huh!" The exclamation was Abner Daniel's. "Do you mean that Atlanta lawyer, Perkins?"

Bishop stared, his mouth lost some of its pleased firmness, and he ceased the motion of his feet.

"What made you mention his name?" he asked curiously.

"Oh, I dunno. Somehow I jest thought o' him. He looks to me like he mought be buildin' a railroad ur two."

"Well, that's the man I mean," said Bishop, more uneasily.

Somehow the others were all looking at Abner Daniel, who grunted suddenly and almost angrily.

"I wouldn't trust that skunk no furder 'n I could fling a bull by the tail."

"You say you wouldn't?" Bishop tried to smile, but the effort was a facial failure.

"I wouldn't trust 'im nuther, Brother Ab," chimed in Mrs. Bishop. "As soon as I laid eyes on 'im I knowed he wouldn't do. He's too mealy mouthed an' fawnin'. Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth. He bragged on ever'thing we had while he was heer. Now, Alfred, what we must git at is, what was his object in tellin' you that tale."

"Object!" thundered her husband, losing his temper in the face of the awful possibility that her words hinted at. "Are you all a pack an' passle o' fools? If you must dive an' probe, then I'll tell you he owns a slice o' timber land above Holley creek, j'inin' some o' mine, an' so he let me into the secret out o' puore good will. Oh, you all cayn't skeer me. I ain't one o' the skeerin' kind."

But, notwithstanding this outburst, it was plain that doubt had actually taken root in the ordinarily cautious mind of the crude speculator.

Abner Daniel laughed out harshly all at once and then was silent. "What's the matter?" asked his sister in despair.

"I was jest a-wonderin'," replied her brother.

"You are?" said Bishop angrily. "It seems to me you don't do much else."

"Folks 'at wonders a lot ain't so apt to believe ever'thing they heer," retorted Abner. "I was just a-wonderin' why that little, spindle shanked Peter Mosely has been holdin' his head so high the last week or so. I'll bet I could make a durn good guess now."

"What under the sun's Peter Mosely got to do with my business?" burst from Bishop's impatient lips.

"He's got a sorter roundabout connection with it, I reckon," smiled Abner grimly. "I happen to know that Abe Tompkins sold 'im 2,000 acres o' timber land on Huckleberry ridge jest after yore Atlanta man spent the day lookin' round in these parts."

Bishop was no fool, and he grasped Abner's meaning even before it was quite clear to the others.

"Looky heer," he said sharply, "what do you take me fer?"

"I 'ain't tuck you fer nothin'," said Abner, with a grin. "Leastwise, I 'ain't tuck you fer $5,000 wuth o' cotton mill stock. To make a long story short, the Atlanta jack leg lawyer is akin to the Tompkins family some way. I'd bet a new hat to a ginger cake that Perkins never owned a spoonful o' land up heer an' that he's jest he'pin' the Tompkins folks on the sly to unload some o' the'r land, so they kin move west, whar they've always wanted to go. Peter Mosely is a man on the watch out fer rail soft snaps, an' when Perkins whispered the big secret in his yeer, like he did to you, he started out on a still hunt fer timbered land on the line of the proposed trunk line due west vy-ah Lickskillet to Darley, with stop over privileges at Buzzard Roost an' fifteen minutes fer hash at Dog Trot Springs. Then, somehow or other, by hook or crook—mostly crook—Abe Tompkins wasn't dodgin' anybody about that time. Peter Mosely could 'a' run agin 'im with his eyes shut on a dark night.

"You mean to say"—

"I was at Nell Filmore's store when the two met, an' ef a trade was ever made quicker betwixt two folks it was done by telegraph an' the paper was signed by lightnin'. Abe said he had the land an' wouldn't part with it at any price ef he hadn't been bad in need o' money, fer he believed it was chuck full o' iron ore, soapstone, black marble an' water power, to say nothin' o' timber; but he'd been troubled so much about cash, he said, that he'd made up his mind to let 'er slide an' the devil take the contents. I never seed two parties to a deal better satisfied. They both left the store with a strut. Mosely's strut was the biggest, fer he wasn't afeerd o' nothin'. Tompkins looked like he was afeerd Mosely 'ud call 'im back an' want to rue."

"You mean to say"— But old Bishop seemed unable to put his growing fear into words.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

All trails are long to the lazy.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

A Clever Swindle.

Several years ago a "gentleman" alighted from a well-appointed brougham at the door of a London silversmith's shop and purchased a considerable quantity of plate, in payment of which he tendered a one hundred pound note and received a small balance. He carried the plate away with him in the brougham and shortly afterward a "policeman" called at the shop to say that he had heard of the purchase and to inform the silversmith that the note tendered in payment was a bad one. He was glad to add, however, that the thief had been apprehended and requested him to attend at the police station at a certain hour in the afternoon to identify the prisoner. He told the silversmith that it would be necessary for him to give up the bad note to facilitate the preliminary enquiries, and this the latter did, obtaining a formal receipt. On going to the police station the unfortunate shopkeeper found that he had been hoaxed. The "gentleman" and the "policeman" were both members of the light-fingered fraternity, and the note was a good one.

A Deserved Snub.

A United States newspaper tells the following somewhat improbable story:

While in Canada, Lord and Lady Lansdowne pleased the Canadian people by their friendly and unassuming manners, which were in marked contrast to those of former Governors-General and their wives. It is related that at a garrison ball at Halifax the Colonel of the regiment that was giving the dance came up to Lady Lansdowne and said: "Lady Lansdowne, won't you give me a dance, please? I'm tired of dancing with these silly little colonial girls. They have no style. I believe I'm engaged to one of them for the next dance, but you might be kind enough to rescue me." Lady Lansdowne replied, in tones loud enough for everybody to hear, that the Colonel was unfit to associate with any decent people, colonial or otherwise, and concluded: "If this is the way you treat your guests I will relieve you of the presence of one of them at once." Then she ordered her carriage and left the ball.

Worth an Admission Fee.

A new hand at golf lately had an experience which the New York "Sun" describes. The man tried to get to the links early, when no one was there to witness his lack of skill. A caddie followed him to the tee, and offered to go round with him for fifty cents.

"Never mind, son. I'll get along."

With that he made a magnificent swing at the ball and missed it by a foot.

"Say, mister," said the caddie, "I'll go round with you for a quarter."

The player declined, and tried to look self-possessed. He made another swing at the ball, and missed it again.

"Say, mister," said the boy, "I'll go with you for fifteen cents."

By that time the man was "rattled," and struck at the ball three times. The boy, who had retreated some distance, called, "Won't you take me for nothing? I'll go round for the fun of it."

Nautical Britishers generally seem to feel it in their bones this time that the Shamrock Third is going to win. They have what in racing parlance is called a "hunch," which may be classed as one of these unexplainable presentiments which never fail. There was not the same confidence about the first Shamrock, or the second, but this time people who have closely followed the career of Lipton's new boat think he has more than a royal chance to win—they think that in his bright lexicon there is no such word as fail. One thing, anyhow, seems to be pretty sure—if Sir Tom doesn't lift the cup this time he may as well drop the game, at least until the Yanks are willing to adopt fairer conditions than prevail at present.

Chilkat Indians at War.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 18.—The steamer Princess May, from Skagway, brings word of a tribal war among the Chilkat Indians of the Klukwan tribe. For several days a reign of terror was in progress in the valley of the Chilkat. Witchcraft, which generally prevails among these Indians, is said to have been the cause of the trouble. One Indian is reported killed and many badly injured.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dtf

The right is the right, whether good men approve or disapprove.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

TWO MEN.

By ANNIE NATHAN MAYER.

NOTHING had happened—nothing at all. She said it over and over again to herself, as if to persuade herself that it was true. But it was nothing—nothing at all.

She lay back on the steamer chair that was her favorite resting-place, perched high up in the little piazza just outside her bedroom. She closed her eyes wearily to think it all over, while the muffled roar of the breakers coming across the bay reiterated the tiresome phrase—that nothing, nothing at all had happened. She tried to collect her thoughts and discover just what had taken place—this nothing. She had gone to the dinner—her husband had insisted on her going without him—she had met Hobart again, they had chatted during the dinner, in a conventionally superficial way, and then again in a more personal, intimate way on the piazza after the coffee. And he had escorted her home—while the maid who had called for her walked slightly behind. At parting he had looked into her eyes, said "Good night"—told her how pleasant it had been to meet her again, and had asked permission to call some other time, and—and that was all. As she had told herself for the twentieth time, nothing had really happened at all.

Well, what was changed? And what was she going to do now? And why! The deep, regular breathing of her sleeping husband came to her from the closed shutters on her left—the room adjoining hers. Ah, her husband! If he had only been different! How many women, she wondered, had excused themselves thus? Here she was battling with the most serious resolution she had ever struggled with—yes, more serious than that other she had taken a few weeks before—and there he was sleeping as calmly a stone's throw away as if she had never existed. That typified their relation. Or if she had been blessed with a child! She smiled a little, wry smile at the staleness of the excuse—always excuses.

She stared for a while out over across the bay, and almost fancied she could see the dancing white foam beyond the sentinel dunes. Making a great effort, she determined to fight off her growing sluggishness, her longing to drift, determined resolutely to begin from the very beginning, and think it all out for herself.

When she had come down from town she had been so sure of herself, so absolutely convinced that she was right, and that nothing could alter her determination. She had agreed to everything, and Harriman had remained in town to arrange some business matters, and she had planned to be domestic for a few weeks, and then they were to sail quietly away for Europe and begin life all over again. There was to be no scandal, they had gone all over it so often, she was determined to spare her husband's pride—his one vulnerable point—she was to go off to the Massachusetts coast to pay a visit to her sister, and he was to sail for a year's stay in Europe, being over-worked by that last public building he had erected in Tacoma. Her husband would receive a letter, explaining it as quietly as possible, and no one would know until the divorce was granted. Divorces can be arranged so quietly if one knows the ropes, and has the will and the wherewithal to cheat the reporter. Of course, there would be some talk—she had made up her mind there would be some—but she knew she could rely on her husband to do it with as neat despatch as if he were arranging a contest for a cup. Yes, he would spare her, because it would be sparing his name. His name! Yes, she said to herself, dreamily, that was really all he had ever given her. There had been times in the past when she had wondered if it would have made any difference had she been a poor girl and had owed a great deal to him. Would gratitude have been a bond? But she had not had even the luxury of that sentiment. This beautiful Long Island home had always been hers and she had loved every nook and cranny of it long before she had ever met him, while he, even now, cared for it only for the sport of racing fast boats, or now and then going off on a cruise with a jolly stag party and plenty of cold bottles on board.

She had come down four weeks ago with the thought of Harriman stirring her strangely as she went about the place he had loved with her. They had been the most perfect companions the summer before. She had never met a man that so completely gave himself up to the fascination of lower Long Island—even as she had done. He was constantly pointing out to her the beauty of some great white sail silently gliding over what was apparently a green meadow—for the little inlets on which the boats sailed all day long slipped in and out among irregular patches of high swamp grass—or of the sky swept by great white cloud-wings as of angels, or of the sea, ever alike and yet ever changing. They never tired of the racy air—union of brine and pine—the spicy, bestirring air of lower Long Island. They had glided into this intimacy of thought and feeling as innocently as those pure white sails glided before the wind.

Then all at once there had been a shuddering awakening, brought about by some light word spoken by a woman who thought the worst and thought none the less of them—perhaps a little more—for it. The purity of the white sails was gone. They could not bear the usual attitude of the gay set, somehow they were of different calibre, and so they had talked it all over again and again, until at last the following spring had brought its solution—a decision not lightly taken on either side.

She smiled now, alone in the darkness—how well she had conned every argument—they were young, were both their lives to be sacrificed to an ill-considered act of a mere girl? Her husband did not need her, his valet was of infinitely more importance to him, perhaps his horses came next, and then his yacht, and then possibly she—or possibly another—she had long since ceased to care.

How they had protested again and again—Harriman and she—that they were made for each other! They were sympathetic, looked on life and nature from the same vantage point, enjoyed everything together, ah! how they enjoyed! Made for one another? Why, they were one, more united than ever husband and wife had been. Their union would not be a mere yielding to passion—she felt she could not endure that—of course not—it would be a union of intellect, heart, soul—everything. How they had delighted in justifying themselves to each other! How sure they had been that their wrong-doing would be different from that of any other couple in all the centuries that had gone before? This special instance—this one case—(ah, how we all love to deceive ourselves!) Wrong-doing! why it was right-doing! They were the blithest of sinners, the most conscious of well-doers the sun shone on.

So for the past four weeks she had lived in a dream—eaten, slept, talked, driven as usual, but awake only to the one great fact that faced her. There were powerful memories stirring her at every turn of the drive—every irregular inlet, every odor had brought Harriman vividly before her. She was going to him—the struggle was over, another week to be dreamed through and she would be his till death parted them.

Till death parted them—she had heard that before—somewhere from the dim past those solemn words rose with a strange accusation. Why did such thoughts persist to-night? Why bring up again all those harrowing doubts? She had not decided lightly; she was entering into this new relation far more prayerfully, far more earnestly than ten years before as a mere child she had entered into marriage.

Till death—yes, this step must be final. Its finality, its steadfastness, was what separated it from mere—mere—ah! she could not say it. Yet—suddenly she sprang up and paced the little piazza—yes, something had happened after all. That was what had happened, the first shock of doubt had come to her. Doubt—not of him, no, no, she believed in him. He worshipped her, and what was more, he honored her. Of course no other woman would ever believe it, but he honored her for the very sacrifice she was about to make for him. He honored her that she was not the type to deceive her husband. He knew all that the step meant to her. She was positive that his love for her was that clean, honest love which lasts after a woman's hair turns grey. She knew the glow would sweep into his great blue eyes, ten—yes, twenty—years from then at the sight of her, just as they did now.

But doubt none the less—and worse doubt of herself! It had come! She should be thankful, at least, that it had not come too late. The tragedy of doubt afterward—that would have killed her by inches. Better far the doubt now. And how had that doubt entered her Eden? A pair of mocking black eyes answered her. Her hand felt again the slight pressure of an hour ago. She shivered and drew her golf cape closely about her, and turned her head and took some of the rough collar between her teeth. "I won't believe it—I can't. I won't!" she murmured, as she bit savagely at the woolly wrap.

It was all so absurd—positively childish! What had Hobart done? Nothing whatever. He had said nothing at any time that a man may not say to a woman in the same social standing. What had aroused that sudden consciousness, that unexpected spark, as of stone striking stone, flung straight from eye to eye? The slightest tightening of the good-night clasp of the hand, the sharp, quickened breath, and it was all over. She would have thought nothing of it a few years ago. Pshaw! it was nothing. Her anomalous position had sharpened her intuitions, she was morbid and overstrung, perhaps, she scolded herself, she was even growing absurd. And yet the next instant she was telling herself that a contented wife can afford a quickening breath, a flash of sympathy whatever may be called that subtle, elusive sex-consciousness, but a woman who was on the brink of leaving her lawful husband for another man? There was a sudden glimpse of possibilities—a great chasm seemed to open before her—a black defile. Horrible! she covered her face with her hands.

Half an hour later, her one thought was how to tell him. She never could bring herself to confess the truth—to reveal to him the spectre that had arisen between him and her. She knew he would take it all as a lack of trust in him. Ah how that would hurt! He would think she held him as other men, light wooers of the passing moment. But even that was better than to confess it was herself she mistrusted. How she would fall in his eyes! It must be the other, hurt as it would. She rose wearily, and went to her desk. After all, it had come about that it was not to her husband that the difficult letter was to be written.

She wrote rapidly, and nervously scanned one note after another, before tearing it up in passionate disgust. In all, she destroyed four. Then a sudden inspiration came to her—at least a temporary way out of the difficulty:

"Dear Mr. Harriman: I have suddenly decided not to pay that visit to my sister, as I had intended to do next week. So I shall remain at Summertime, where we shall be glad to welcome you at any time."

. . . .

When he came, as she knew he would, there was very little explanation. She had quivered in imagination before the pain in his eyes, the reality could not hurt worse. She implored him to believe that she still trusted him—loved him? Of course, as she always would continue to do. But she could not do it—she was not as courageous as she had thought herself—that was all. He knew it was not all, but he bowed before her decision as he must.

The day before he sailed, they sat talking conventionally in the little summer-house overlooking the bay. Thither came Hobart. She rose politely, introduced the two men, continued to chat in her musical, low voice. The two men felt a frigidity beneath all her vivacity—there was a sense of strain, of a holding-in of some powerful emotion. No one could have named it—yet all three felt its influence.

To Harriman even her voice had changed, hardened as if the muscles in the throat were held in a vice. By a strange intuition he realized that this newcomer had played some part in her decision. Hobart only felt in some vague way that she would never respond to him again as he had felt her respond that one night. He glowered at Harriman and cursed his coming below his breath. The two men watched each other closely, dangerous lights came and went in their eyes. She chatted on without daring to stop, and here and there the men threw in a polite interjection or two. They were club men of the twentieth century. Had they been savages, they would have flown at each other's throats.

"Howdy!" rang out her husband's voice, as, cool and calm in his white yachting suit, he approached with a hand out for either man: "Stay to dinner?"

But neither man accepted. At the gate one man took the road to the left, the other the road to the right. Yet neither man really understood.—[illegible]

WHERE IS OUR GOD?

Rev. Alfred W. H. Hodder, Sixteenth Baptist Church, New York.

Emmanuel—God with us.—Matthew, i., 23.

The secret of joy and peace lies in the fact that we all believe in a present and not an absent God.

It is this which brings comfort to our hearts, which gives us security in the promise of eternal redemption and places before us the loving side of "our Father's" character.

By virtue of this declaration we can more fully realize God with and within the souls of men. Not with us merely in loving mercy or care, or providence, or protection, but with us as one of us. The delight in thinking of what has been done for us in the ages past, for "even from everlasting to everlasting thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations," is enhanced by the thought of what God is now doing—that He still lives and rules and dwells among men, bringing all things to pass for the uplifting of his children to Himself.

Moreover, we are led to rejoice in the larger revelation of God, for each footprint grows more distinct as one follows another. As there have been always in existence the electrical powers of nature, but not revealed fully until man reached intellectual strength sufficient to lay hold upon their energy and utilize them for his best interests, so God has revealed Himself as men grew into larger life and light. More and more God has made Himself known through prophets of old, through the life and words and death of Christ, through saints and martyrs to the cause of righteousness and truth. We rejoice in the fact of "Emmanuel—God with us," written on the page of history and in the hearts of men. Our God lives and dwells among us now.

The thought of "Emmanuel" ought to make us brave. The abiding presence of God should give us courage, faith and hope, for "if God be for us," and with us, "Who can be against us?" No temptation need be too strong to be conquered, no difficulty need be too hard to be surmounted, no sorrow need cause us to bury our hearts and lives in the graves of our loved ones, for it will eventually be with us as with them. "From grief and groan, with a golden crown, close by the throne of God." God in us will graduate our strength for every experience of life through which we shall pass, and omnipotent power will be under every care and burden. Thus we may bravely go into life's work as warriors to battle. Our Father, having taken our cause to His heart, ought to bring a similar action from us in His behalf. For there is a great battle on between righteousness and unrighteousness. The trumpet which musters the warriors soundeth loud and long, and the fight will be stern and desperate between truth and sin. We must take our post, every one, on one side or the other, for "If the Lord be God, follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him." No touch or thought of compromise; no division of the living child, as in the days of Solomon, by a wicked woman; no acceptance of a particle of error, for "if God be for us, who can be against us?" Thus be brave in the word, "Emmanuel—God with us."

The thought of "Emmanuel" ought to make us good and true to each other. The human family is bound together in Him who gives us our daily bread, not only for the body, but for the soul also, and bids us be breakers of bread with our fellowman, helping those who have need to share our blessings. There is a noble family in Italy whose name of Frangipanni means breakers of bread—that is, for the poor. So ought we by the God dwelling nature, if not by name, break bread unto those who are poor in spirit if not poor in body. For thus alone can we give something to Him "who freely giveth us all things."

In this world of sorrow there are some who know not the sweet peace of the indwelling presence of God. Their eyes have become blind by the glare of temporal things; their lives are filled with the husks of this world. Here in this wide world of sin-sick souls the God in us should go out to them. Our Father would dwell in their hearts and lives as in ours. He would have them be "sons of God." But do they see the revelation of God in us? Are our bodies, our commercial transactions, our social circle such that men see the dwelling place of the Most High and covet the blessing we hold? God shows Himself in a multitude of ways and yet is always the selfsame Father. So will He manifest Himself in the varied ways of men, through a wide range of activities from the cup of cold water given "in His name" up to the accomplishment of larger things for men. God revealed in us "to will and do of His good pleasure" is to bring men back to their largest portion. This revelation is in earthen vessels "through whom God aforetime spoke" and speaks to-day. If the night is dark our God's abiding light will enable us to scatter it. If the road be rough and dreary our God, who dwelleth in us, will assist us to make it smooth and plain. If sin has pressed our brother hard our God will provide a way of escape and eternal redemption.

So we need never say, Where is our God? for we live in the comforting assurance of the word, "Emmanuel—God with us."

Municipal Borrowings.

The borrowings of English municipalities are threatening to embarrass the money market seriously, says The London Mail. It was announced yesterday that Nottingham intends to issue £608,000 of three per cent. stock, while Hastings will issue a three per cent. loan of £200,000 at 91. The news caused great dissatisfaction on the Stock Exchange, where the unending stream of corporation loans is regarded with the utmost disfavor. During the past seven weeks British corporations have either borrowed or announced their intention of borrowing about £4,000,000. Most of the recent loans have been anything but a success. Liverpool, it is true, placed its loan, but Liverpool is a favorite and was first in the field.

Store Closed Every Wednesday During July and August at 12 O'Clock Noon.

FINAL CLEARING PRICES.

The results of our buyers' extensive European trip are arriving daily.

Each and every article coming from that part of the world where it can be most advantageously bought.

We are hardly prepared to receive these yet. Summer goods are still here which must vacate our shelving before we can properly accommodate our fall lines.

If seasonable goods marked at very low prices induce buying, we will soon be out of our difficulty.

We have marked all warm weather materials at reductions that should clear goods not half as seasonable and stylish.

Many ladies whose immediate wants were already filled have purchased for the future, realizing in nearly every instance a saving of at least 50 per cent. on goods which will be "in it" as much next season as this.

Multitudes of equally worthy offerings await your inspection—it will be time well spent. Read below.

—A table of fine Wash Goods—Sateens—Prints—Muslins—Ginghams—new designs and colorings, regularly selling at from 10c to 50c, all at................Half Price

—Remnants at half marked price.

COLORED BLOUSES REDUCED.

There are many and varied reasons why the quantity of Colored Waists we sell increases each season.

No two women would give all the same reasons. But there are at least three we are confident everyone would give.

Style—Fit—Moderate Price.

We have marked all our "left overs" at three prices to effect a rapid clearance.

Styles and patterns are as desirable as any we have sold. Just the assortment ends. Here they are.

—Fine Colored Print Waists, plain ingrain patterns, cut in latest style were 50c, for..............25c

—Fine Gingham, Print and Muslin Waists all colors, were 75c to $1.25, for..............50c

—Gingham and Matting Waists, prettily made and trimmed, were $1.00 to $1.75, for..............75c

COMING DRESS FABRICS.

Although August is still with us the number of enquiries we have had, as to what the new Fall Dress Goods will be like, convince us that already many are making plans for heavier garments.

The last few days our Dress Goods Section has been busy opening up new materials. To those who can come a visit will apprise quickly what is newest.

The mixed Tweed effects will certainly be leaders. Many in coarse basket weaves.

The Snowflake and tufted materials will also be shown to a greater extent than ever.

We have made preparation for the biggest Dress Goods season in our history.

If stylish materials at lowest cash prices induce buying our expectation will be realized.

—Stylish Tweed and mixed goods for Skirts and suits—very latest designs,....50c to $1.45 yd.

—Handsome Silk and Wool Skirt patterns, ...$15 00

NEW COLLARS AND BELTS.

Careful Buying brings to us a showing in collars and belts which for qualities and pretty styles we have never before equalled at the same Prices.

It is not hard to get belts and collars to sell at low prices. But it is hard to get the Newest in good Qualities to sell at a reasonable figure.

Prettier styles than our present assortment contains we have never shown. The prices are below, you can judge of them.

—Fancy tucked Blue Silk collar trimmed with Honoton Braid—Two medallions in front 25c

—Fancy Green Blue Grey or Pink silk collars tucked and trimmed with fancy Lace—Tab ends with medallions—very pretty 50c

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. • • • • •

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' • • • • "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. • • •

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

HIS ARDUOUS DUTIES AS FISHERY INSPECTOR — INTERESTING READING.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—He averaged four farms. You say he was an assessor. He is a good man. He is a bright man. A.—Yes, the farms are very large. He has a big field to go over.

Q.—He only did the four farms a day and you mean to say that the difference in the size of the farms would account for the difference between these? A.—Some of them were very thickly settled and it would take a long time to get the stock and everything that some of them have. It would take a man ten times as much time to get some of these farms all fixed up. Where Larkin lives there are poor people, who would have perhaps not more than a team or a cow or two, while in the other cases it is very different. For instance, in the Newton district there are the best farmers in the whole Riding, 200 acre farms, lots of stock. They send their milk to the factories and raise pigs and have so many different things, it would take a man three times as long in a house in his district as it would in the other.

Q.—Then that is the explanation you have, that the farms are so much larger in some districts than others, that you think that would account for the difference in three farms a day for one man and ten or twelve for another? A.—The product of the farm is so much larger and had to be put into so many different schedules in some farms than in other districts.

Q.—And in the one district there would be such a uniformity in farms of that kind that the man would only average three farms a day through the whole twenty days. He would be twenty days driving around and every farm he would strike would be such a first-class farm that he could not do more than three a day. A.—I think that would be—

Q.—You think that is correct? A.—I think it would go a good way to explain it.

Q.—Can you give any other explanation than that? A.—No, I cannot, unless that some could work a little faster than others.

Q.—Looking at your account 4th of June, Deseronto, "Went to Deseronto to get enumerator to sign accounts." Bus Deseronto and Belleville, 50 cents; hotel expenses, $1.00; paid Maloney postage on books shipped to Belleville $1.00. A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, why did you, as a matter of fact, send these books by post to Belleville? You went down to get the enumerators to sign accounts in June and shipped the books to Belleville. A.—There was something that had to be done. I think it was Maloney's book.

Q.—Do you remember posting that to Belleville. Why would you when you had a bus at the station both at Deseronto and Belleville, pay a dollar postage on the books? A.—He sent them to me and I paid for them.

Q.—But you went down there that day. A.—I paid that that day wherever it was either in Belleville or Deseronto.

Q.—You went down to get the books? A.—To get the enumerators' books.

Q.—These were the books you sent to Belleville. A.—I did not send. I perhaps ordered him to send them to me before I had been there.

Q.—And so Maloney had sent you some books before you went there? A.—That may be.

Q.—How do you explain that item? You went down to see the enumerator to get the books and you charged bus hire at both ends. You saw Maloney, and you paid a dollar postage to Belleville. Why not take the books back yourself? A.—I rather paid Maloney, I think, for the books he had paid on that had been shipped to me.

Q.—As a matter of memory, you say that is the case, do you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why would he not pay that in his bill, like the others? Why would you pay that of all items? A.—I was paying that whole thing and I was paying that as we went along.

Q.—Was there any one else that you paid the same way? A.—I do not think there was because it was not necessary to send books. I paid three dollars to send the books out to the enumerators the night before the first of April.

Q.—Now you told us already that after you came to Ottawa you got suggestions as to how the bill should be made up. Who gave you the suggestions? A.—I hunted it out for myself.

Q.—But who gave you the suggestions? A.—I cannot say that any one gave me the suggestions, but I kept getting circulars.

Q.—You didn't keep getting circulars, but I am referring to the accounts after you got to Ottawa. The $135 was made up and you came down here and told me that someone here gave you the suggestion. A. I do not think that someone here gave me the suggestion.

Q.—How did you come to amend the bill after you came here? A.—As I said I kept getting circulars before I left home. I saw that we would be paid by percentage and I had made up that account as we went along and that was made up all along. I made up that account and it had come out about that way and I expected to get $100 to cover expenses, but when my expenses ran over the $100 so much I put in the account without getting the $100 and got my pay for my account. I had found out from other enumerators that such was about the way the thing was going and there was others paid before me. I think the West Hastings man did not have an account as high as the hundred and he took the hundred dollars and did not put in any account.

SPORTING NOTES AND COMMENT.

The following from the Peterboro Review refers to a horse which trotted in the free-for-all at the recent races here. It may be remarked that if Sphinx B. can go in 2.15 1-4 he will have to travel about eight seconds better than he did here:

"At the Driving Park on Wednesday Sphinx B. will try to go a mile in better time than 2.15 1-4. There is a side bet of $200. The race will depend on a good day and good track. The match arose from it being questioned whether Sphinx B. could on this track equal his former time. There will be a running horse to carry him along.

The sailing races on the bay tomorrow afternoon promise to be the best of the series. There will be a number of entries in the yacht, skiff and punt races and some close finishes are anticipated. The whole course can be plainly seen from off Victoria Park.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

A Serious Charge.

A young man whose residence is in the Township of Huntingdon, was arrested last evening and brought to the city. He is charged with committing an indecent assault upon a young lady. It is alleged that the offence took place in the spring of the year. The accused had a preliminary hearing before the Magistrate this afternoon. Mr. Anderson for Crown, Mr. Carnew for private prosecutor and Mr. Masson for the defendant.

VALUE IN CLOTHING.

There is a big difference in stores, in advertising and in merchandising, but if you are careful you can easily tell by the ring of an advertisement whether it is honest or not, just as you can tell by the ring of a piece of money. In buying clothes, judge by the value you get, the Oak Hall will win every time with an honest, intelligent comparison.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto.

MANUFACTURER'S SAMPLES.

We have secured of a leading manufacturer his samples of Rain Coats, and we offer these goods for sale at a price which is 25 per cent. less than the cost of production. Among the lot you will find a fine line for boys and youths. This will afford an opportunity very seldom offered outside the city of Montreal and Toronto, and shrewd buyers should avail themselves of the same. Come and see the lines at the Globe Clothing House.

SOME INTERESTING REMINISCENCES.

MR. H. P. DWIGHT, PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER OF THE G.N.W. TELEGRAPH COMPANY, WAS THE FIRST TELEGRAPH OPERATOR IN THIS CITY.

The following letter, which contains much to interest Belleville people, particularly the "old timers," explains itself:

G.N.W. Tel. Co., of Canada,
Office of Pres. and Gen. Mgr.,
Toronto, Aug. 13, 1903.

Mr. U. E. Thompson, Agent, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Thompson,—On the 28th of this month, August, fifty-six years ago, our then superintendent, Mr. Wood, and I, landed in Belleville and proceeded at once to place the instruments, and got the connection between Toronto and Montreal the next day, when Mr. Wood left me in charge. I remained there for about six weeks—Belleville's first operator and was then called down to the Montreal office.

I remember distinctly the acquaintances I made in Belleville at the time, and of whom I have very pleasant recollections. Mr. Bowell, now Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was then publishing The Intelligencer newspaper in its earliest days, and for whom I used to procure some news items, and who reminded me pleasantly of this in a letter I received from him not long ago; Mr. John Ross, afterwards "Hon." and one of the original Grand Trunk syndicate; Mr. Benjamin, afterwards M.P.; Mr. Davy, whom I remember distinctly, as it was said he "carried the jack knife," and was considered one of the best and kindest of men in the world. The Munros, father and son, who kept the tavern where I boarded, the Dougalls and others, and I thought at the time Belleville was a mighty fine place, and it always had a particular interest for me as the place where I began my career so many years ago. It is rather curious that I should have been born in Belleville in New York State, and that I should have started my telegraphic career in Belleville, Canada.

Yours truly,
H. P. Dwight.

FIRE AT DESERONTO.

ONLY PROMPT ACTION PREVENTED A VERY SERIOUS CONFLAGRATION — MR. RATHBUN'S HEALTH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A fire broke out this evening about 5.15 at the Chemical Works, quite close to the Gas Works. The brigade and a big crowd was soon out and quickly had the water streaming on the Gas Works. Had the brigade been slow in responding to the call there would have been an awful fire and explosion.

Mr. E. W. Rathbun is reported to be very low indeed; not much hope left for recovery.

Stolen Articles.

Mr. Pearce, of Toronto, reports to the police that he had a waterproof coat, pair of scissors and a neck tie stolen from his room in the city a few nights ago.

Mr. Wm. Pringle reports that a hammer has been stolen from his factory.

Fraternal Visit.

Mr. J. B. Harker, District Deputy of the Sons of England, last evening paid an official visit to Devonshire Lodge at Campbellford. The District Deputy was cordially received, and, after the business of the lodge had been concluded, was royally entertained. A large number of the members and visiting brethren were in attendance.

THOS. E. MEPHAM, Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

McINTOSH BROS.

Jim Ketchum, Financier.

BY ANNE O'HAGAN.

THE gentlemen who had been investigating the possibilities of Ketchum's Point as a summer resort returned to the inn jubilant. In fancy, they already heard the braying of a band in nightly competition with the surging of the North Atlantic. They listened to a sibilant silken promenade through pillared corridors, they dreamed of candle-light at play upon table appointments of triple plate. They even foresaw Maine legislatures supine, Maine prohibition repealed, and white damask flecked with lights of amber and ruby from slender glasses—the concealing cup banished forever from Maine's service of Bacchus.

The climate was superb, the sharpened speculative appetites proclaimed; the scenery—those gray promontories of rock, those stretches of fir and furze toward the inland hills, that curved silvery beach, a very new moon for beauty—here was scenery to fire even the speculative mind to poetry. The prospectors sniffed the salt, sharp air; they looked across the deep bay beyond Ketchum's Point toward a wide, low, clear-burning sunset, and they slapped one another on the back out of pure delight.

They were in luck, they kept declaring. The place was accessible, yet untrodden. No summer cottages marred the stretches of sweet-fern and bay. Ketchum's sharp-jointed old inn was the nearest approach to a hotel within a radius of ten miles. Yet two navigable tide rivers, making their sluggish way in from the sea, almost converged here, offering gentle water sports to all who desired them; the deep incurving of the beach beyond the Point made a sheltered bay for sailing, and in front the Atlantic laid an unbroken path for the winds straight from the other side of the world.

Bentley, the fire-proof paint millionaire, had fallen in love with the place. But Bentley had not yet been educated to the point of enjoying scenery out of which he could derive no profits. To syndicate nature in some way or another was with him to prove his appreciation of it. He would build a "cottage" which should set the pace in cottages. The hotel should stand on the hill between the converging creeks. Other cottages would follow Bentley's, but his company should hold all the adjoining land so that cheap hostelries and boarding-houses should not come nigh. Ketchum's Point—of course as Renwick suggested, they must revive an old Indian name for it—would soon "make Mount Desert look like thirty cents." The phrase was Fletcher's, who found the current or even the slightly outworn slang a great help to him in the expression of his ideas.

When they came back boisterously pleased with themselves and their plans, they found old Jim Ketchum sitting on the roofless piazza of his hotel, smoking. The salt seemed dried in his gray, uneven beard, in his sparse gray locks, in the weather-beaten furrows of his thin old face. He nodded indifferently to his guests as they, with a bluster intended to denote an agreeable, democratic cordiality, made their way across the patched floor.

"Guess you'll find supper about ready," he vouchsafed, and they with great enthusiasm told him that supper would find them about ready. "A wonderful climate, this of yours, for appetites, Mr. Ketchum," they assured him, and Jim allowed that "most folks gen'rally found it hearty." Then he sat, watching the evening star throb out at the edge of the paling sunset fire, and the blue night claim the sea. Afterwards he made his rheumatic way to the kitchen, where he solemnly blew out one of the two lamps by which the viands were being apportioned.

"You'd think the Oil Trust was givin' kerosene away," he protested to the wasteful damsels of the commissariat.

Meantime, in the long, bleak, whitewashed dining-room, the prospective developers of Ketchum's Point sat at a long, bleak table thinly covered with coarse damask, and ate saleratus biscuit and oozy clam chowder with great gusto

"Things were better in Mrs. Ketchum's day," volunteered the Rev. Mr. Mather, who sat in a sort of sacerdotal loneliness on one side of the table, as Renwick, after a critical examination of the stewed apples, removed them with the monosyllable "dried."

"Oh, has the old fellow lost his wife?" asked Renwick.

"Lost is the word," replied the clergyman, smiling. "Aunt Lucindy, as she was generally called, did not die, but after thirty-odd years of being a wageless cook she rebelled. Three summers ago she delivered her ultimatum. If Jim would not supply her with a cook—she had done the cooking for the summer boarders ever since they took in the first one, the summer after their marriage—she would leave. This house holds twenty, and cooking for twenty is no joke, I take it, to a woman of sixty. But Jim was horrified at the notion, and she packed up and departed. She's been living with a married daughter in East Milburn, across the bay."

"Near enough to keep an eye on the old man," grinned Fletcher.

"Seven miles of a sail," said the clergyman, "but they've never met, and it's doubtful if they ever will. It's a morbidly obstinate race they breed down here. And as for accidental meetings—Aunt Lucindy can't be hired to set foot upon the sea, as she puts it, and it's a roundabout land trip of nearly thirty miles."

"So Ketchum's pretty close," mused Renwick. Mr. Mather laughed.

"The sharpest, meanest man in Maine," he said, sticking an identifying pin in his limp napkin as they all moved from the table.

On the side piazza the group of men who were planning the future of Ketchum's Point sat silent for a while. And gradually into their quiet there obtruded a disagreeable surmise.

"Do you suppose," suggested Fletcher, "that Old Man Ketchum will hold out for a big price on that strip of his across the middle of the hill?"

"We'll offer him something he can't afford to refuse," said Bentley. "There's no one easier to buy with a little ready money than your miser who denies his wife a hired girl, or who's too mean to feed his live stock decently."

"That's so," the others agreed. "But it was a fool trick," grumbled Fletcher, remembering the commanding position of Jim's property, "for anyone to sell him a slice of land across a hillside that way. Right across the middle it is."

"He'll come cheap enough, don't you worry," said Bentley. Then they yawned a while. And when they passed around to the front on their way to the square, whitewashed bedrooms, where the salt of the sea seemed forever struggling to release itself from the musty odor of damp matting, they found the old man staring into the night beyond the bay.

To Renwick, who was held to be something of a diplomat, was delegated the task of interviewing Jim the next morning. Renwick anticipated no real difficulty. The strip which the old man owned was as little arable as the rest of the hill. The cabin that had once stood upon it was roofless, and two sides were fallen in upon its rough foundations. Of course the meanest man in Maine would rejoice to part from so profitless a holding, however instinct and experience in barter had taught him the fructifying uses of demand.

Renwick, who was constantly deriving satisfaction from his perception of other people's hidden motives, was secretly amused at the old man's attitude. It was so perfect an example, it seemed to him, of the delay meant to stimulate and pique. Jim put off the interview until he had come in from a visit to his lobster-pots. The late tides made the delay a long one. Renwick occupied himself in walking up and down the rude piazza and smiling with gentle cynicism.

"Well, Mr. Ketchum," he remarked, when Jim, slouch-shouldered, dim-eyed and shabby, had reappeared, "I suppose you know that Mr. Bentley, Mr. Fletcher and I are interested in a little land venture down here."

Jim was unmoved and unsurprised. He looked patiently upon his guest and admitted that he had heard as much. Then Renwick, with an air of much candor, declared that the stretch of hillside to which Jim held the title was necessary to the success of the project.

"I'm not calc'latin' to sell," said Jim, slowly. Renwick could with difficulty repress a smile. It was exactly what he had expected. The old skinflint meant to enhance the value of his stony holdings by his shyness! But Renwick was tactful. Of course, Mr. Ketchum had not calculated to sell; it would naturally have been impossible for him to hope for a buyer for a property which was given value only by such an exigency as the present.

At this juncture, Mr. Ketchum, without apology, arose to enquire of a maid, scuttling along by the side of the house, why she was not at her labors. He explained to Renwick that summer "help" was a very uncertain quantity, and that a prudent employer "had his work cut out for him" in guarding against its wasteful vagaries. Mr. Renwick began to look a little bored, but after the acquiescent interest demanded by diplomacy, went on to explain blandly how the project of himself and his companions gave the hillside patch a purely factitious value, and how they would like to know at what figure Mr. Ketchum would sell it.

Mr. Ketchum gazed seaward a while. No change flitted over his patient face. Finally he turned toward his interlocutor.

"I ain't calc'lating to sell," he said, amiably, and added that he must go at once to attend to the getting of dinner.

"My wife," he said, halting, "is—is away, visitin' our married daughter. An' most likely you don't know, Mr. Renwick, the waste there is in a kitchen—the thick parin's and all that."

Renwick, the bland, having failed Fletcher, the bluff, undertook to browbeat the old man.

"See here," he began, inserting a cigar between his teeth in a very ferocious manner, "what's your idea, Ketchum? We'll give you five hundred dollars for that strip of land there—which is more than the whole blamed hillside is worth, but we want it. We're not going to raise the bid, so don't hold out for any more. You're a sensible man and a business man. You know it's a gold-mine for you. Come now, will you take it?"

Jim looked patient. There was even a slight wistfulness in his glance. But he shook his head.

"You gentlemen don't understand," he said, stumbling a little in his speech, not from infirm purpose, but from unaccustomed need of words. He struggled for an explanation, but none came, and he finished with the old formula, "I don't calc'late to sell that land."

His eyes traveled toward it—the big, bare, New England hill, littered with lichened, purplish boulders, and guarded at its crest by a dark army of firs. The dusty green of bay powdered it, and unkempt stalks of early goldenrod bloomed upon it. The ruin of the little cottage lay pitifully poor and ragged in the pellucid summer light. Fletcher's glance paralleled Jim's, anger deepening the ruddy tone of his skin.

"What are you holding out for?" he demanded, brutally. But Jim, apparently deaf, had moved off toward the barn.

Bentley, the magnate, at last undertook to bring Jim to reason. Bentlay himself was finely unreasonable. The fact that he did not need to embark upon a summer colony enterprise was evident; the fact that, if Jim Ketchum did not wish to sell, there was land to be purchased at other points along the coast, was argued at great length by his colleagues. But Bentley had approved of Ketchum's Point. Bentley had decided upon exploiting it. Bentley's boundless energy made the building of a hotel seem a desirable recreation, and what Bentley wanted he was accustomed to get.

"He probably thinks we'll spoil his custom for him," said Bentley, when the tale of Fletcher's failure had been told. "He's a shrewd old fellow. He realizes that five hundred dollars in hand won't bring in a thousand a year, and I suppose his summer business yields that. But I'll talk to him."

So Bentley, with a long line of successes to his record, sought Jim Ketchum in the office after supper. The office was a barroom furnished with a desk, two chairs, a map, and a highly glazed view of the annual county fair. Jim was balancing an ancient ledger by the unshaded glare of a single kerosene-burner. After the briefest preliminaries Bentley offered him a thousand dollars for his land.

With lack-lustre eyes the old man blinked at the other.

"It's a big price, Mr. Bentley," he said, simply. "It's more than the land is worth. You can get the rest of the hill—three times as big a parcel as I own—for half that. Of course, I know you count on improvin' and buyin' up considerable all around here, an' some day it'll be worth more than that. But it ain't now. An' I can't sell."

"I suppose," said Bentley, moved by a vague kindness toward the rusty, bent, old figure, "that you anticipate being driven out of business by the hotel we're going to put up. But you're mistaken in that. It will be the making of you. You'll have more custom than you ever have had. You'll have all your old trade—your school teachers and your clergymen and your professors with big families and small salaries—all the good people that we'll be a trifle too expensive for. You can run a whole fleet of sail and fishing boats. You can extend your fisheries, and make a fortune supplying our table. Come, come, Mr. Ketchum, be reasonable."

"What you say is likely enough so," said Jim, closing his ledger over a limp and blackened piece of blotting-paper, "but the truth is I don't calc'late to sell that land."

Bentley looked murderous for a minute. Then his brow slowly cleared. There was no longer any kindness in his heart but there was a more potent thing—respect.

"I see what you want," he said, slowly. Then he lapsed into the florid style of address native to him. "I take off my hat to you, Mr. Ketchum. You're a great financier lost down here—thrown away. The thing you're holding out for, the thing you insist upon, you never even mention. You make the other side beg you to accept it! Well, sir, you deserve it. Here it is. You want stock in the new company. By gad! sir, you shall have it."

Jim had gazed steadily at the great fire-proof paint man during this speech. At its close a faint smile sparkled in the depths of his dim eyes.

"I don't mind sayin'," he admitted, "that if I had been calc'lating to sell, I should have held out for somethin' of this sort. But—"

The cords on Jim's leathery throat above the gray flannel shirt moved curiously as he swallowed hard. A dark red combated the tan of weather and the pallor of age in his face.

"You've been pretty square by me," he said finally. "Maybe you've a right to know the truth. The truth is—the truth is—thirty-seven years ago this summer—thirty-seven — me an' my wife went housekeepin' in that cottage up there, an'—"

Confessions trembled in the air. Histories hung balanced. There were tales to be told, of wifely eyes watching across the sea for Jim's fishing-smack, of children learning to play in the flat-bottomed boats whose short sides hid them, of neighborly feet picking a way up the hill on neighborly errands, of storms that crashed along the coast, and bells that tolled in the village at their close. But Bentley did not know that these were the words for which he waited, bewildered. He thought that he was waiting for a rational explanation of Jim's outbreak. But the old man took up the lamp.

"I don't calc'late to sell it," he said, stubbornly, and left the room.

The hill loomed massive against the night sky as he made his final rounds with his rusty lantern. A sharp wind whipped the swelling waters with ghostly foam. Across the bay the East Milburn light pulsed from gold to red and then to gold again. The old man vouchsafed no glance in that direction. He shambled about the place, testing locks and shutters. But he shook his head as he went into the dark hall for the night.

"Not that land" he said.—From the "Bazar."

CROP REPORT OF ONTARIO

From the Official Returns to the Bureau of Industries.

Summary From Reports of Over 2,000 Correspondents Indicates Prosperity For Farmers of the Banner Province—The Grain Crops Better Than at First Anticipated—Average of 25 Bushels Per Acre of Fall Wheat.

Toronto, Aug. 19.—The following report concerning the crops of the Province has been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and deals with conditions as described by regular correspondents of the Bureau of Industries under date of the 1st of August. It is based on the returns of over 2,000 correspondents:

Fall Wheat.

Much of the fall wheat just harvested was sown a week or two later than usual, owing to the rainy weather prevailing in the early part of last fall, but this does not seem to have had any bad effect upon the general character of the crop. There was but little injury by winter-killing, and very little was plowed up in the spring. April was not favorable to the growth of the young wheat, but during the summer the crop picked up to such an extent that it turned out to be one of the best crops yet recorded in the Province, both as to yield and quality. While some returns fall short of an average, several instances are given where the crop range from 40 to 50 bushels per acre, and samples are reported going fully 63 pounds to the bushel. Much of the straw is shorter than usual, but bright. Owing to heavy rains in July some of the wheat lodged and sprouted, but not in sufficient proportion to be a serious drawback. The Hessian fly was reported in several counties, but only to a slight extent compared with recent years. The injury from other insects, and from rust and smut, has been but trifling, and this may also be said of the grain crops. A few complaints have been made of depredations of sparrows in wheat and other cereals. The cutting of fall wheat ranged from the 10th to the 30th of July, according to locality, although at the later date the greater part of the crop was in the barn.

Spring Wheat.

The harvesting of all spring grains this year is about a week or so later than usual, and the cutting of spring wheat was expected during the first and second weeks of August. Like fall wheat, the crop suffered from drouth in the spring, but pulled up with the more favorable weather prevailing later. While rather thin on the ground in places, the heads are well filled, the grain is plump, and the average yield will be a fairly large one. There was but slight injury from insect or other pests.

Barley.

A large acreage and a big yield fairly describes this crop. Cutting began about the 20th July, and was expected to run a week into August. While some barley had lodged and was discolored by rain, the bulk of the crop is of the choicest quality, both in color and weight, while the average yield is one of the most generous yet reported. Most of the barley grown in Ontario is now fed to live stock on the farm, being substituted largely for peas since the latter crop has been suffering from the weevil. There was but little injury to the crop from any other source but rain.

Oats.

While a few correspondents writing on the 1st of August reported the cutting of oats, most of the crop had yet to ripen, and harvesting was likely to continue for a couple of weeks yet. The yield will be large, and the quality of the grain good. As in the case of fall wheat and barley, some individual yields will be immense. The straw is comparatively short, but otherwise of fair quality, but there has been considerable lodging owing to heavy rains during the past week or two. Rust and smut are complained of in a few localities, but only to a slight extent even then.

Rye.

Comparatively little rye is now raised for the grain, much of that which is sown being either cut green or plowed under. The crop has been a most uneven one this season, both as to yield and quality. The season of harvesting rye ranged from the middle to the end of July.

Peas.

It is difficult to sum up the exact situation regarding peas, owing to the fact that for the past two or three years the flat or grass pea has been largely substituted for the common round field pea on account of the depredations of the pea weevil or "bug," and that this year a number of farmers have returned to the latter variety. While complaints are yet too frequent concerning the presence of the weevil, it would seem as if peas have been comparatively successful where grown, some correspondents, indeed, being quite enthusiastic over the prospects of the crop. There has also been a great growth of straw owing to frequent rains, but some mildew is reported. Some early fancy peas have been already cut, but ordinary field peas were not expected to be harvested for a week or two. While the acreage of peas is still small compared with that of a few years ago, the general outlook for the crop is more encouraging than for the past two years.

Beans.

The growing of field beans is confined mainly to Kent and adjacent counties in the Lake Erie district. There has been a great growth of stalk, the plants have blossomed profusely, and the prospects at present are most favorable for a more than average yield when the crop is gathered in the first or second week of September. In many instances beans were planted late, but aside from the effects of heavy rains in low places there has been but little complaint.

Hay and Clover.

April was too cold and dry for clover, and this, together with the drouth which prevailed in May, gave the crop a very poor start. Rains in the latter part of June and in the early portion of July, however, brought most meadows along in remarkably good form, with the result that the yield of hay will be about an average, although individual returns will range from ¾ to 3 tons per acre. Timothy has done much better than clover this year, and new meadows, as a rule, have been much ahead of old fields. The weather was very "catchy" during haying, and a part of the crop was caught by rain; nevertheless there has been a much larger proportion of first-class hay saved than was the case last season. Some of the hay had to be cut late on account of the scarcity of farm labor and the coming in of the fall wheat harvest, although the use of hay-loaders and other special appliances helped many farmers out. A few correspondents speak of lucerne as increasing in favor. Clover cutting began about the 4th of June, and timothy was a week or two later.

Corn.

This appears to be a very uneven crop this year. It was so dry at the time of planting that much of the seed failed to germinate, which made considerable replanting necessary. A number of correspondents also complain of the poor quality of the seed apart from weather conditions. Crows and blackbirds were unusually troublesome when the plants had just sprouted, and cold, wet weather later on told against the growth of the crop. Notwithstanding all these drawbacks many correspondents are of opinion that with favorable weather during the remainder of the season a fair yield will be recorded. Fodder corns were considered to be in a relatively better condition than those varieties raised for grain.

Tobacco.

Most of the tobacco raised in the Province is grown in the counties of Essex and Kent in the west, and in Prescott and Russell in the east. Correspondents do not report very fully concerning this crop, but western returns were to the effect that it was rather backward owing to the late planting and cold, wet weather, although otherwise looking well. The reports from eastern Ontario were rather more favorable as to general condition, but it was stated that some replanting had to be done on account of drouth. The interest in tobacco growing appears to be less than during the past two or three years.

Potatoes.

As correspondents wrote on the 1st of August potatoes promised to be one of the best yields for years, more or less favorable accounts coming from nearly every county in the Province. The only fear expressed was that should the rainy weather continue, there would be danger of a loss from rot. At the time of writing, however, only a few cases of rot were reported, and these appeared to be of a local character. A number of the returns spoke of bugs as being very plentiful, doubtless owing to the frequent rains washing off the applications of Paris green.

Roots.

Reports concerning mangels vary very much, for while some of the returns speak of the crop as being in good condition, a large number describe it as thin and patchy in places, owing to the dry weather which prevailed at seeding interfering with germination. In various parts of the Province some of the mangels had to be plowed up. Turnips have done much better, and promise to be a large crop. Hardly any mention was made of carrots, and reference to sugar beets were to the effect that the crop was rather backward, and hardly up to the average for the time of year. However, all classes of roots have still a considerable period before them in which to make further growth.

Fruit.

Taking the western half of the Province as a whole, apples are not up to the average, either in yield or quality, but most of the reports from counties extending from York to Grenville speak favorably of this fruit in both respects. Some correspondents claim that the greatest injury was from frost during the period of blossom. Winter apples will be relatively scarcer that the earlier sorts. Considerable scab has been reported where the trees were not sprayed, but complaints have been less than usual concerning wormy fruit. Blight among apple trees is reported in several districts. While a few correspondents speak well [illegible] the prospects for pears, most of the returns do not favor a large, or even an average yield. Plums, however, have had a most favorable season for bearing and where sprayed have yielded generously, but where neglected much injury was wrought by the curculio causing young fruit to drop from the tree. A few complaints have also been received of plums rotting. In most quarters where grown, peaches are yielding well, more especially the later varieties. Cherries give from a fair to a light yield, and, like plums, have suffered somewhat from black-rot. Grapes will be a medium crop should favorable weather continue until ripening. Strawberries, raspberries, and other small fruits have been more or less abundant.

Pastures and Live Stock.

The early part of the season was most unpromising for pastures, being so dry and cold, but frequent rains later on brought meadows into the very best condition, generally speaking. Live stock are in correspondingly good trim, having suffered from little but the horn fly, which, however, appeared later in the season than usual. The flow of milk has been large, and there will be a large supply of dairy products. Farmers supplying cheese factories appear to be more satisfied with results this year than those in the butter line.

There is every prospect of an abundance of all kinds of fodder for fall and winter keep.

Bees and Honey.

The season has been a favorable one for the apiary. Bees swarmed freely, and there has been an abundance of nectar in both field and forest, more especially in the case of white clover, which was more or less in bloom all summer. The yields reported range from 25 to 100 pounds per colony, but the average for the Province will be about 55 pounds, spring count. Little or no disease has been reported among bees, and at last accounts they were said to be in a thrifty condition.

Farm Labor and Wages.

Full crops and the migration of farmers' sons to New Ontario and to Manitoba and the Northwest, created a demand for farm laborers in Ontario that could not be met during the rush of summer operations. Several correspondents refer to the influx of British immigrants as having relieved the situation to some extent; for while a number of these, having had no previous experience in agricultural work, were a sore disappointment, many of them have given good satisfaction. Wages during harvesting ranged from $1.25 to $2 a day according to locality, the skill of the worker, and the urgency of the demand for help, the average rate being about $1.50 with board. Monthly wages ran all the way from $20 to $40, and in a few cases as high as $45, the prevailing quotations being from $25 to $30, with board. While many farmers were undoubtedly hard pushed for a while during harvest, the plan of interchanging labor proved to be of great assistance in some cases, and improved machinery is also mentioned as having been of much help in meeting the rush of work. On account of the scarcity and comparatively high price of labor, a number of farmers are considerably behind in their work, and others have had to let intended building improvements lie over from the same cause.

Field Crop Forecast.

The following table gives the area and estimated yields of the principal crops in Ontario for the year 1903. The forecast of August 1st is based on returns from 2,000 special correspondents:

	Acreage.	Bushels.	Yield per acre
Fall Wheat	666,595	16,969,634	25.5
Spring Wheat	252,853	4,862,711	19.2
Barley	709,839	24,203,870	34.1
Oats	2,645,965	110,125,099	41.6
Rye	179,277	2,978,641	16.6
Peas	407,133	9,179,345	22.0
Beans	53,973	984,477	18.2
		Tons.
Hay-Clover	2,783,565	5,191,828	1.86

The fall wheat plowed up was 5,496 acres, against 8,986 in 1902 and 75,473 in 1901.

SANK CHINESE CRUISER.

Couldn't Stand Impact With C. P. R. Steamer Empress of India—Official Statement From C.P.R. Office.

Hong Kong, Aug. 19.—The C.P.R. steamer Empress of India (from Vancouver, B.C., July 27, for Hong Kong), collided near this port yesterday with the Chinese cruiser Hueng Tai. The warship sank an hour after the collision. The Hueng Tai was a tender to the naval engineering college of the Southern Chinese squadron at Nanking. She was of 2,110 tons displacement, had a speed of 15 knots and carried 300 men. She was built in England in 1888. Her armament consisted of three 7-inch Krupp guns, seven 40-pounders, and six small rapid firing guns.

Official Statement.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 19.—The head office of the C.P.R. has issued the following official statement:

"At midnight Monday the Empress bound to Hong Kong, was passing the Chinese crusier, both vessels being on parallel courses and going in the same direction. When about up to the Chinese cruiser her captain suddenly and without any warning starboarded and came across the bow of the Empress, which at once manœuvred into a position which resulted in the blow from the cruiser being a glancing one instead of a direct compact. The cruiser, in sliding aft along the mail steamer, did some damage to the upper works of the latter, but she herself was struck by the starboard propeller of the Empress, and sank in 90 minutes. One hundred and seventy-one of the cruiser's crew were saved by the Empress, but her captain and 13 others are missing, though they are supposed to have been picked up by junks.

Operator Had Headache.

Kingston, Aug. 19.—The disastrous collision on Aug. 12 on the C. P. R., near Sharbot Lake, in which Engineer Haffihan and Fireman Forsythe lost their lives, was due to the awful mistake of Operator Worth of Arendale station, who, while dazed by a severe headache, told Despatcher Ivory, at Havelock, that No. 54, a freight train, had not passed when it had been let through by himself. The jury decided that Worth was the cause of the accident but that in his condition he was not responsible.

Dropped Dead in Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 19.—Horace E. Crawford, K.C., a prominent lawyer from Winnipeg, dropped dead in his room at the King's Royal Hotel here yesterday. Mr. Crawford was the law partner of Hon. J. A. Campbell, Attorney-General for the Roblin Government.

Destructive Hail Storm.

Moose Jaw, Aug. 19.—A destruction Tuesday night and damaged the section for 21 square miles. The estimated loss has not been figured out, but it will go into six figures.

Celebrated a Century.

Athens, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Robert Lee celebrated her 100th birthday yesterday. Mrs. Lee is still quite smart and recalls vividly events of her earlier days.

GOVERNMENT IS SURPRISED

Mr. R. L. Borden Favors Development of the Intercolonial.

Likewise He Proposes Government Ownership of Railways at the Crucial Points of Various Existing Systems, Including C.P.R. Between North Bay and Fort William—In Six Paragraphs Outlines True Transportation Policy.

Ottawa, Aug. 19. — Government ownership over railways is the essence of the policy advocated by R. L. Borden in the House yesterday as a desirable alternative to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme. Mr. Borden took an advanced position on these lines. He declared for the extension westward of the Intercolonial Railway to Georgian Bay by the building of a road between Montreal and Coteau, and the acquisition of the Canada-Atlantic Railway by lease or nationalization.

Nationalize Part of C.P.R.

Mr. Borden next proposed that the Government should control that portion of the Canadian Pacific line between North Bay and Fort William and make it a national highway, improve it and give all railways running rights over it. A similar policy he proposed with the Canadian Northern Railway and the C.P.R. between Fort William and Winnipeg. One or both of these railways the Government should improve in consideration of obtaining such control as would enable it to give running rights to other railways. A connecting link would be a line between Depot Harbor and North Bay, and this the Government should build in order to allow the Intercolonial Railway to run into Winnipeg. By this plan Mr. Borden urged that the Grand Trunk Railway would secure connection with the west within six months.

Nationalize Mountain Pass.

As to the far west, the leader of the Opposition declared in favor of a policy that would require the Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to pierce the Rockies by the same pass. If the two companies failed to come to terms on this point, than the Government should build a new road through the mountains and give the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern running rights over it on fair and equitable terms.

Mr. Borden did not go into details in the enunciation of his policy. He made it clear, however, that for every concession conferred upon railways the country should receive returns in the form of control of rates or some corresponding value. The line between Quebec and Winnipeg, Mr. Borden said, should be built only after full information had been obtained, and then it should be built as a Government road, owned and operated by the Government.

Criticizes G.T.P. Scheme.

The criticism offered the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme by the leader of the Opposition was strong and effective. The counter [illegible] policy which he proposed was clearly defined and forcefully presented. His declarations in favor of Government ownership and the maintenance and development of the Intercolonial Railway were something of a surprise to the Government camp, which apparently did not look for such advanced views. The Opposition members energetically applauded Mr. Borden, and these demonstrations of approval were not least enthusiastic over the strong declarations in favor of Government ownership of railways.

True Transportation Policy.

Mr. Borden insisted that the objects of a transportation policy should be:

(1) To secure the lowest possible rate in order that our people may obtain a portion as large as possible of the value at which their products were sold in our domestic and foreign markets, and consequently securing of the transportation of the Canadian products through Canadian channels.

2. To promote trade between the great divisions of our country.

3. To develop and utilize for that purpose the great national highway, the Intercolonial Railway, on which we have expended some $70,000,000. Our great inland canals and waterways, upon which we have expended quite as much.

4. To promote the development of our country by encouraging colonization and settlement in districts suitable for that purpose.

5. To firmly insist that any assistance given to the construction of railways shall be amply compensated for by equivalent advantage secured to the people of the country.

6. To act in concert with individual enterprises and not to restrain or discourage them, but at the same time to prevent monopolies and maintain effective control over great corporations.

Mr. Borden then summed up the general features of his policy and concluded with a patriotic peroration that brought forth tremendous applause from the Opposition benches.

Mr. Fitzpatrick Follows.

Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick followed Mr. Borden, and defended the Government's scheme until recess. In the evening he criticized Mr. Borden's speech and opposed his conclusions. He declared that the G.T.P. contract provided amply for control of rates, and that the question of running rights must be worked out by the company.

Mr. W. B. Northrup made a strong speech in reply to the Minister of Justice. He went into the Grand Trunk Pacific contract minutely and analyzed with searching scrutiny some of its most important provisions.

Hon. John Costigan followed with a defence of the scheme.

THAT LICENSE OUTRAGE.

The champion of the saloons which have illegally obtained licenses has at last plucked up sufficient courage to attempt a defence of the recent shameful action of the Commissioners. Naturally, not having a leg to stand on in the way of justice and equity, this defender of rottenness makes out a case which can do its friends little good.

Before proceeding to controvert what the illegal license holders' organ does say, it may be as well to reiterate some allegations, contained in The Intelligencer's recent article, which the organ does not deny. For instance:

It does not deny that the saloon run in a building owned by D. R. Leavens was fined three times in the last eight months.

It does not deny that they were all recorded as first convictions, though legally they should have been recorded as first, second and third convictions, thus causing the license to be cancelled.

It does not deny that licenses have been granted to three places in this city which have not the legal accommodation required.

It does not deny that one of these places is owned by T. S. Carman and another by D. R. Leavens, Postmaster.

All the defender of illegal methods does is to deny that Mr. Burke, one of the proprietors of the saloon which is run in Leavens' building, has ever spoken to the proprietor of the City Hotel in regard to the proposition that the Burkes should buy out the Victoria Hotel. This, of course, is a mere quibble. The deal, we were told, was arranged by agents of both parties, and was the direct outcome of a hint thrown out by a License Commissioner.

That the License Commissioners, in having to reduce the number of licenses, had "a most disagreeable duty to perform," we can well believe, but that is no justification for their taking away the license from a house which has every accommodation required by law, at the same time giving licenses to places which had not a shadow of them.

It is surely to be hoped that this matter, having been started, will not be allowed to drop till every effort has been exhausted in order to obtain justice. The city's license affairs have been in control of a ring long enough. The law in regard to the matter is plain. It should be enforced. In conclusion it may be stated that many people are wondering how supposedly respectable men can be parties to a transaction which makes a football of the law and obtains for their tenants privileges to which they have no equitable claim, at the same time defrauding others of rights which they have spent much money to qualify for and which the License law distinctly states they should have.

As we stated before, it is time the rule of demagoguery, in this city should cease.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC SCHEME.

The question which at present should be of primary importance to all Canadians is the Laurier Government's proposition to build a transcontinental railway and hand over the management of it to a private company for fifty years. As to the necessity of the Government's action, opinions differ, but it is only fair to note that those men who have the best opportunities of being thoroughly acquainted with the scheme are the ones who most roundly denounce it. Take, for instance, Hon. Mr. Blair, who had for years been Minister of Railways in the Laurier Cabinet. As everyone knows he resigned his portfolio rather than countenance the scheme, and, in a recent speech in Parliament, dealt with the question in a trenchant style which must have been especially distasteful to his former colleagues and the Premier. The following extracts from Hon. Mr. Blair's speech are worthy the attentive perusal and study of all who have the country's interests at heart:

"Mr. Blair's objections to the building of the prairie section were, therefore, these:—That the scheme was years ahead of time, and that there was no settlement along the line demanding it. He had asked a great number of people as to the capability for settlement of the country lying between the present two lines of railway, and the lowest estimate he had received was five millions of people. Was it therefore not reasonable to say that there is no occasion now to expend more money to provide facilities for further settlement? At the present rate of one hundred thousand immigrants per year, nay, if that were doubled, it would be twenty-five years before the country now available for settlement would be filled up. Parliament had been told by the Prime Minister that this was a territory of teeming activity; but why not wait till it was teeming to the extent that people demanded more room? This brought one again to the question. Why all this haste? Why were we rushing into this project as of the very life, the existence of Canada depended upon it? Was there any dark cloud that the ratification of this scheme was going to lift? If so, he did not see it. Was the justification for this scheme a fear that the Grand Trunk would not allow us two or three years hence to build a railway and make it a present to them? (Laughter.)

"Mr. Blair thought that in two or three years the Grand Trunk would be found in just as receptive mood as at present. (Cheers.) The true policy was to wait. If this was a wise scheme, it would be equally wise two or three years hence, and perhaps there would come one of those recurring cycles of depressed conditions when the exchequer might well be opened to help the people to tide over the situation until better times appeared.

"Mr. Blair was surprised to have read in a leading organ of public opinion that in regard to this railway it was a case of "Now or Never": that whatever may have been the means by which we had drifted into the situation, we were now 'face to face with a crisis.' He had pondered over this some time. His conclusion was that we certainly had not drifted, because if we had we should not have moved with such celerity. We had been drawn into the situation. But even at that, where was this crisis with which we were faced? In what direction was it facing?

"It was a fair question. Surely if there was a crisis Parliament would like to see it. If it were a tangible thing let them grasp it. Somebody might have it in his pocket, if so let him produce it. (Laughter.) The country has been in blissful ignorance until this moment that it was in the midst of a crisis. (Laughter.) He really wondered that such a strange advocacy as this should be presented by one of the leading organs of the Government, and an effort made to force it on the minds of the people of this country. If a crisis existed, if there was impending a state of affairs so grave that the interests of the country were likely to be imperilled, he wanted to say that he for one would support even a proposition of this kind if it were going to relieve the country from dire consequences. (Laughter.) It was said that unless the proposal was accepted it would be to our unspeakable or irrevocable regret. He was free to confess, however, that he had heard something of that kind in an auction room. (Laughter.) When such appeals were made, when they heard utterances of such a nature, when they were told that the credit of Canada at the present moment was in such a state that the liability should be incurred, he wanted to say that Canada would stand far higher in the estimation of financial men if in dealing with a proposition of this character she had moved with judgment and discretion. (Cheers.)

TIMELY TOPICS.

People who read the Police Court reports will have noticed that, in the last few days, several bicyclists have been fined for riding on the walks. It is not the Intelligencer's intention to defend lawbreakers, but it will do no harm to point out that, in many cases, there has been some excuse for the wheelmen and women who used the walks. At the same time it may cheerfully be admitted that some people use the walks without any justification at all, and deserve punishment, which, by the way, many of them never get.

• • •

There are, however, other forms of breaking the law besides riding a bicycle on the sidewalk. One form which is altogether too common in this city, is that of soaking with water the street in front of one's house, the same being done with a garden hose, the aqua pura being used much too liberally. The dust on the street is turned into mud, and the moment a bicyclist strikes that he is up against a condition of affairs which does not make for his personal enjoyment. Having once been through an experience of that kind the writer can speak with feeling on the subject. If our memory serves us right, it took some two hours to scrape and wash the mud from our garments, and it was hard at the time, to find language to fit the occasion.

• • •

It seems hard, to the mind of quite a few people, that bicyclists should be fined for breaking the law which prohibits riding on the sidewalks, while, as they claim, people who break the law in regard to watering the street with lawn hose, thus making it impossible for wheelmen to ride with safety, should get off scot free. Why, they say, should the sauce for the goose not be sauce for the gander? Let us hope that the officials of the Water department will give a little attention to this matter, and see that, if water wasters are to be allowed to break a city ordinance, they at all events do not go to the extreme of endangering the safety of their fellow-citizens.

The Hamilton Spectator Carnival Souvenir is quite the equal, if not the superior of anything of the kind ever attempted in Canada. To anyone interested in Hamilton the souvenir must be invaluable, while it is gotten up in such a handsome, tasty way that even to strangers it appeals as a genuine work of art. If the other features of Hamilton's Carnival equal the Spectator's souvenir the people of that good city will surely have the time of their lives.

More Glasses Are Worn

Now-a-days than ever before. No doubt of it. People used to think that the wearing of glasses should be put off as long as possible—that it was an old age necessity only.

We know more now. We apply every known agency for the relief and care of eye sickness — and there are in use to-day methods which weren't heard of even ten years ago.

Now we commence to right eye sight just as soon as it commences to go wrong. Now school children by the hundreds use glasses. And it's wise and proper.

"Oh, I don't know nothin' fer certain," said Abner Daniel sympathetically, "but ef I was you I'd go down to Atlanta an' see Perkins. You kin tell by the way he acts whether thar's anything in his railroad story or not. But, by gum, you ort to know whar you stand. You've loaded yorese'f from hind to fore quarters, an' ef you don't plant yore feet on some'n you'll go down."

Bishop clutched this proposition as a drowning man would a straw. "Well, I will go see 'im," he said. "I'll go jest to satisfy you. As fer as I'm concerned I know he wasn't tellin' me no lie, but I reckon you all never 'll rest till you are satisfied."

He descended the steps and crossed the yard to the barn. They saw him lean over the rail fence for a moment as if in troubled thought.

"Poor father," said Alan to his uncle as his mother retired slowly into the house. "He seems troubled, and it may mean our ruin—absolute ruin."

"It ain't no triflin' matter," admitted Daniel. "Thar's no tellin' how many thousand acres he may have bought. He's keepin' somethin' to hisse'f. I remember jest when that durn skunk of a lawyer put that flea in his yeer. They was at Hanson's mill an' talked confidential together mighty nigh all mornin'. But let's not cross a bridge tell we git to it. Let's talk about some'n else. I hain't never had a chance to tell you, but I seed that gal in town yesterday an' talked to 'er."

"Did you, Uncle Ab?" The face of the young man brightened. His tone was eager and expectant.

"Yes. I'd hitched in the wagon yard an' run into Hazen's drugstore to git a box o' axle grease an' was comin' out with the durn stuff under my arm when I run upon 'er a-settin' in a buggy waitin' to git a clerk to fetch 'er out a glass o' sody water. She recognized me, an' fer no other earthly reason than that I'm yore uncle she spoke to me as pleasin' as a basket o' chips. What was I to do? I never was in such a plight in my life. I'd been unloadin' side meat at Bartow's warehouse an' was kivered from head to foot with salt and grease. I didn't have on no coat, an' the seat o' my pants was non est—I don't think thar was any est about 'em, to tell the truth. But I knowed it wouldn't be the part of a gentleman to let 'er set thar stretchin' 'er neck out o' socket to call a clerk when I was handy, so I wheeled about, hopin' an' prayin' ef she did look at me she'd take a fancy to the back o' my head', an' went in the store an' told 'em to git a hustle on the'rse'ves. When I come out, she hauled me up to ax some questions about when camp meetin' was goin' to set in this yeer an' when Adele was comin' home. I let my box o' axle grease drap, an' it rolled like a wagon wheel off duty an' me after it, bendin'—bendin' of all positions—heer an' yan in the most ridiculous way. I tell you, I'd never play croquet ur leapfrog in them pants. All the way home I thought how I'd disgraced you."

"Oh, you are all right, Uncle Ab," laughed Alan. "She's told me several times that she likes you very much. She says you are genuine—genuine through and through, and she's right."

"I'd ruther have her say it than any other gal I know," said Abner. "She's purty as red shoes, an' ef I'm any judge she's genuwine too. I've got another idee about 'er, but I ain't a-givin' it away jest now."

"You mean that she"—

"No," and the old man smiled mischievously. "I didn't mean nothin' o' the sort. I wonder how on earth you could 'a' got sech a notion in yore head. I'm goin' to see how that black scamp has left my cotton land. I'll bet he hain't scratched it any deeper 'n a old hen would 'a' done lookin' fer worms."

CHAPTER III.

THE next morning at breakfast Alfred Bishop announced his intention of going to Atlanta to talk to Perkins and incidentally to call on his brother William, who was a successful wholesale merchant in that city.

"I believe I would," said Mrs. Bishop. "Maybe William will tell you what to do."

"I'd see Perkins fust," advised Abner Daniel. "Ef I felt shore Perkins had bunkoed me, I'd steer cleer o' William. I'd hate to heer 'im let out on that subject. He's made his pile by keepin' a sharp lookout."

"I hain't had no reason to think I have been lied to," said Bishop doggedly as he poured his coffee into his saucer and shook it about to cool. "A body could hear his deathknell rung every minute ef he'd jest listen to old women an'"—

"Old bachelors," interpolated Abner. "I reckon they are alike. The longer a man lives without a woman the more he gits like one. I reckon that's beca'se the man 'at lives with one don't see nothin' wuth copyin' in 'er an' vice-a-versy."

Mrs. Bishop had never been an appreciative listener to her brother's philosophy. She ignored what he had just said and its accompanying smile, which [illegible] Abner's subtle apology for [illegible]vations.

"Are you goin' to tell Adele about the railroad?" she asked.

"I reckon I won't tell 'er to git up a' excursion over it 'fore the crossties is laid," retorted Bishop sharply, and Abner Daniel laughed, that sort of response being in his own vein.

"I was goin' to say," pursued the softly treading wife, "that I wouldn't mention it to 'er ef—ef—Mr. Perkins ain't to be relied on, beca'se she worries enough already about our pore way o' livin' compared to her uncle's folks. Ef she knowed how I spent last night, she'd want to come back. But I ain't a-goin' to let Brother Ab skeer me yet. It is jest too awful to think about. What on earth would we do? What would we, I say?"

That afternoon Bishop was driven to Darley by a negro boy who was to bring the buggy back home. He first repaired to a barber shop, where he was shaved, had his hair cut and his shoes blacked; then he went to the station half an hour before time and impatiently walked up and down the platform till the train arrived.

It was 6 o'clock when he reached Atlanta and made his way through the jostling crowd in the big passenger depot out into the streets. He had his choice of going at once to the residence of his brother, on Peachtree street, the most fashionable avenue of the city, or looking up Perkins in his office. He decided to unburden his mind by at once calling on the lawyer, whose office was in a tall building quite near at hand.

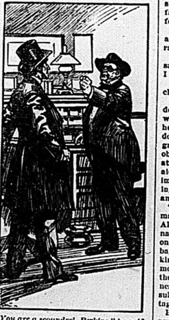
It was the hour at which Perkins usually left for home, but the old planter found him in.

"Oh, it's you, Mr. Bishop," he said suavely as he rose from his desk in the dingy, disordered little room, with its single window. He pushed a chair forward. "Sit down; didn't know you were in town; at your brother's, I reckon. How are the crops up the road? Too much rain last month, I'm afraid."

Bishop sank wearily into the chair. He had tired himself out thinking over what he would say to the man before him and with the awful contemplation of what the man might say to him.

"They are doin' as well as can be expected," he made answer. But he didn't approve of even that platitude, for he was plain and outspoken and hadn't come all that distance for a mere exchange of courtesies. Still, he lacked the faculty to approach easily the subject which had grown so heavy within the last twenty-four hours and of which he now almost stood in terror.

"Well, that's good," returned Perkins. He was a swarthy man of fifty-five or sixty, rather tall and slender, with a bald head that sloped back sharply from heavy, jutting brows, under which a pair of keen black eyes shone and shifted. "Come down to see your daughter," he said; "good thing for her that you have a brother in town. By the way, he's a fine type of a man. He's making headway too. His trade is stretching out in all directions; funny how different you two are!"



"You are a scoundrel, Perkins," he said.

"I 'lowed I'd see William 'fore I went back," said Bishop rather irrelevantly. Then, seeing that Perkins was staring at him rather fixedly, he said—it was a verbal plunge:

"I bought some more timber land yesterday!"

"Oh, you did? That's good." Perkins' eyes fluttered once or twice before his gaze steadied itself on the face of the man before him. "Well, as I told you, Mr. Bishop, that sort of a thing is a good investment. I reckon it's already climbing up a little, ain't it?"

"Not much yet." It struck Bishop that he had given the lawyer a splendid opportunity to speak of the chief cause fe[illegible] and his heart f[illegible]nnished. "But I took [illegible] last time—5,000 [illegible]

"You don't say! That was a slice."

Bishop drew himself up in his chair and inhaled a deep breath. It was as if he took into himself in that way the courage to make his next remark.

"I got it from the Tompkins estate."

"You don't say! I didn't know they had that much on hand."

"Sence I bought the land I've accidentally heerd that you are some kin o' that family."

Perkins started slightly and raised his brows.

"Oh, yes! On my wife's side, away off, some way or other. I believe the original Tompkins that settled there from Virginia was my wife's grandfather. I never was much of a hand to go into such matters."

"When I heerd that, Perkins, it was natural fer me to wonder why you, you see—why you didn't tell them about the railroad."

The sallow features of the lawyer seemed to stiffen. He drew himself up coldly and a wicked expression flashed in his eyes.

"Take my advice, old man," he snarled as he threw down his pen and stared doggedly into Bishop's face. "Stick to your farming and don't waste your time asking a professional lawyer questions which have no bearing on your business whatever. Now, really, do I have to explain to you my personal reasons for not favoring the Tompkins people with a—I may say—any piece of information?"

Bishop was now as white as death. His worst suspicions were confirmed—he was a ruined man; there was no further doubt about that. Suddenly he felt unable to bridle the contemptuous fury that raged within him.

"I think I know why you didn't tell 'em," was what he hurled at the lawyer.

"You think you do?"

"Yes; it was beca'se you knowed no road was goin' to be built. You told Pete Mosely the same tale you did me, an' Abe Tompkins unloaded on 'im. That's a way you have o' doin' business."

Perkins stood up. He took his silk hat from the top of his desk and put it on. "Oh, yes, old man," he sneered; "I'm a terribly dishonest fellow, but I've got company in this world. Now, really, the only thing that has worried me has been your un-Christian act in buying all that land from the Tompkins heirs at such a low figure when the railroad will advance its value so greatly. Mr. Bishop, I thought you were a good Methodist."

"Oh, you kin laugh an' jeer all you like," cried Bishop, "but I can handle you fer this."

"You are not as well versed in the law as you are in fertilizers, Mr. Bishop," sneered the lawyer. "In order to make a case against me you'd have to publicly betray a matter I told to you in confidence, and then what would you gain? I doubt if the court would force me to explain a private matter like this where the interests of my clients are concerned, and if the court did I could simply show the letters I have regarding the possible construction of a railroad in your section. If you remember rightly, I did not say the thing was an absolute certainty. On top of all this you'd be obliged to prove collusion between me and the Tompkins heirs over a sale made by their attorney, Mr. Trabue. There is one thing certain, Mr. Bishop, and that is that you have forfeited your right to any further confidence in this matter. If the road is built, you'll find out about it with the rest of your people. You think you acted wisely in attacking me this way, but you have simply cut off your nose to spite your face. Now, I have a long car ride before me, and it's growing late."

Bishop stood up. He was quivering as with palsy. His voice shook and rang like that of a madman.

"You are a scoundrel, Perkins," he said—"a dirty blacksnake in the grass! I want to tell you that!"

"Well, I hope you won't make any charge for it."

"No; it's free." Bishop turned to the door. There was a droop upon his whole body. He dragged his feet as he moved out into the unlighted corridor, where he paused irresolutely. So great was his agony that he almost obeyed an impulse to go back and fall at the feet of Perkins and implore his aid to rescue him and his family from impending ruin. The lawyer was moving about the room, closing his desk and drawing down the window shade.

"It's no use," sighed Bishop as he made his way downstairs. "I'm ruined! Alan an' Adele hain't a cent to their names, an' that devil"— Bishop paused on the first landing like an animal at bay. He heard the steady step of Perkins on the floor above, and for a moment his fingers tingled with the thought of waiting there in the darkness and choking the life out of the subtle scoundrel who had taken advantage of his credulity.

But with a groan that was half a prayer he went on down the steps and out into the lighted streets. At the first corner he saw a car which would take him to his brother's, and he hastened to catch it.

William Bishop's house was a modern brick structure, standing on a well clipped lawn which held a Gothic summer house and two or three marble statues. It was in the best portion of the avenue. Reaching it, the planter left the car and approached the iron gate which opened on to the granite steps leading up the terrace. It was now quite dark. Obeying a sudden impulse, the old man irresolutely passed by the gate and walked farther up the street.

"Somehow I don't feel one bit like it," he mused. "I couldn't tell William. He'd think I wanted to borrow money an' 'ud git skeerd right off. He always was afeerd I'd mismanage. An' then I'd hate to sp'ile Adele's visit, an' she could tell thar was some'n wrong by m[illegible]in' heer in sech [illegible] could a body he'p it? Oh, my Lord, have mercy! It's all gone, all—all me'n Betsy has saved."

He turned at the corner of his brother's property and slowly retraced his halting steps to the gate, but he did not pause, continuing his way back toward the station. A glance at the house showed that all the lower rooms were lighted, as well as the big prismatic lamp that hung over the front door. Bishop saw forms in light summer clothing on the wide veranda. "I'll bet that tallest one is Sis," he said pathetically. "I jest wish I could see 'er a little while. Maybe it 'ud stop this awful hurtin' a little jest to look at 'er an' heer 'er laugh like she always did at home. She'd be brave; she wouldn't cry an' take on, but it would hurt 'er away down in 'er heart, especially when she's mixin' with sech high fliers an' money spenders. Lord, what'll I do fer cash to send 'er next month? I'm the land porest man in my county."

Reaching the station, he inquired about a train to Darley and was told that one left at midnight. He decided to take it and sat in one of the iron armed seats without moving till he heard his train announced. Then he went into the smoking car and sat down in a corner.

He reached Darley at half past 3 in the morning and went to the only hotel in the place. The sleepy night clerk rose from his lounge behind the counter in the office and assigned him to a room, to which a colored boy, vigorously rubbing his eyes, conducted him. Left alone in his room, he sat down on the edge of his bed and started to undress, but with a sigh he stopped.

"What's the use o' me lyin' down almost at daybreak?" he asked himself. "I mought as well be on the way home. I cayn't sleep nohow."

Blowing out his lamp, he went downstairs and roused the clerk again. "Will I have to pay fer that bed ef I don't use it?" he questioned.

"Why, no, Mr. Bishop," said the clerk.

"Well, I believe I'll start out home."

"Is your team in town?" asked the clerk.

"The team I'm a-goin' to use is. I'm goin' to foot it. I've done the like before this."

"Well, it's a purty tough stretch," smiled the clerk, "but the roads are good."

CHAPTER IV.

IT was a little after sunrise. The family had just left the breakfast table when Bishop walked in. His shoes and trousers were damp with dew and covered with the dust of the road. His wife saw him entering the gate and called out to him from the hall:

"Well, I declare! Didn't you go to Atlanta?"

He came slowly up the steps, dragging his feet after him. He had the appearance of a man beaten by every storm that could fall upon a human being.

"Yes, I went," he said doggedly. He passed her and went into the sitting room, where his brother-in-law stood at the fireplace lighting his pipe with a live coal of fire on the tip of a stick. Abner Daniel looked at him critically, his brows raised a little as he puffed, but he said nothing. Mrs. Bishop came in behind her husband, sweeping him from head to foot with her searching eyes.

"You don't mean to tell me you walked out heer this mornin'," she cried. "Lord have mercy!"

"I don't know as I've prepared any set speech on the subject," said her husband testily, "but I walked. I could 'a' gone to a livery an' ordered out a team, but I believe thar's more'n one way o' wearin' sackcloth an' ashes, an' the sooner I begin the better I'll feel."

Abner Daniel winked. The Scriptural allusion appealed to his fancy, and he smiled impulsively.

"That thar is," he said. "Thar's a whole way an' a half way. Some folks jest wear it next to the skin whar it don't show, with broadcloth ur silk on the outside. They think ef it scratches a little that'll satisfy the Lord an' hoodwink other folks. But I believe he meant it to be the whole hog or none."

Mrs. Bishop was deaf to this philosophy. "I don't see," she said in her own field of reflection—"I don't see, I say, how you got to Atlanta, attended to business, seed Adele an' got back heer at sunrise. Why, Alfred"—

But Bishop interrupted her. "Have you all had prayers yet?"

"No; you know we hain't," said his wife, wondering over his strange manner. "I reckon it can pass jest this once, bein' as you are tired an' hain't had nothin' to eat."

"No; it can't pass, nuther. I don't want to touch a mouthful. Tell the rest of 'em to come in, an' you fetch me the Book."

"Well!" Mrs. Bishop went out and told the negro woman and her daughter to stop washing the dishes and go in to prayer. Then she hurried out to the back porch, where Alan was oiling his gun.

"Somethin's happened to yore pa," she said. "He acts queer an' says sech strange things. He walked all the way from Darley this mornin' an' now wants to have prayers 'fore he touches a bite o' breakfast. I reckon we are ruined."

"I'm afraid that's it," opined her son as he put down his gun and followed her into the sitting room. Here the two negroes stood against the wall. Abner Daniel was smoking, and Bishop held the big family Bible on his quivering knees.

"Ef you mean to keep it up," Abner was saying argumentatively, "all right an' good, but I don't believe in sudden spurts o' worship. My hosses is hitched up ready to haul a load o' bark to the tannery, an' it may throw me a little late at dinner, but ef you are a-goin' to make a daily busi[illegible] you."

Anecdotal.

The following anecdote is told by Andrew Lang in "Longman's:" Mr. M. of —— was out in the Forty-five. He was taken, and was being brought to the Tower with Kilmarnock and Balmerino. A block stopped the sad cortege, and a lady, looking from a window, cried: "You tall rebel!" (Mr. M. was six feet four) "you will soon be shorter by a head!" "Does that give you pleasure, madame?" said Mr. M. "Yes, it does." "Then, madame," said Mr. M., taking off his hat and making a low bow, "I do not die in vain."

A writer in the San Francisco "Argonaut" spoils a good story in this wise: Pauline Bonaparte Borghese, Napoleon I.'s younger sister, posed entirely nude to Canova, and it is said that she remarked, when asked if she did not feel cold without drapery: "No, the room was kept warm by a stove." The real story, according to the "Critic," is that a friend, who was very much shocked when she heard what Pauline had done, exclaimed, "How could you do such a thing!" To which the Princess replied, with a shrug of her beautiful shoulders, "It was nothing—the room was warm."

One day, just as Pere Monsabre, the celebrated Dominican preacher of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris, was preparing to ascend the pulpit, a message came to him that a lady wanted to see him who was worried about an affair of conscience. After much waste of time she came to the point. She was given up to vanity. That very morning, she confessed, she had looked in her looking-glass and yielded to the temptation of thinking herself pretty. Pere Monsabre looked at her and said, quietly: "Is that all?" "That's all." "Well, my child," he replied, "you can go away in peace, for a mistake is not a sin."

The story is told of three Protestant ladies who walked into a Roman Catholic church in Ireland during high mass. It was raining, and they had gone in for shelter. The priest, one of nature's gentlemen, recognized the ladies, and, stooping down, said to an attendant: "Three chairs for the Protestant ladies." It was a kindly thought, but the priest must have wished he had never thought it when the man stood up in the church and shouted: "Three cheers for the Protestant ladies!" It was over in a minute— the cheers were cheered and could not be called back; but it was one of the most uncomfortable moments in the good priest's life.

Herbert Spencer, the great English sociologist and philosopher, is very fond of a game of billiards, and the other day at the Reform Club in London he met an acquaintance whom he invited to play with him. The young member accepted, and Spencer said, joyfully, as he chalked his cue: "Young man, good billiard-playing is the proof of a well-balanced mind." "I believe it is," replied the young man. They played and the great writer was beaten fearfully. He had only scored thirty-eight when his young antagonist finished his one hundred. Herbert Spencer put the cue away in disgust. "Young man," he said, "such fine billiard-playing as yours is the proof of an ill-spent youth."

A Medical Health officer in a neighboring town has been giving his people some advice which might well be heeded by people in this city. He says:

"From now until the end of October is called the typhoid season. Every precaution should be taken to prevent the outbreak or spread of the disease. All sewers should be regularly flushed; all open closets should be disinfected every day. Two pounds of copperas dissolved in a pail of water used as a spray will answer the purpose. All water of a suspicious character should be boiled before being used by the family. Personal cleanliness should be strictly observed. The dwelling and surroundings should be kept in good sanitary condition. By observing these rules and others which will suggest themselves to intelligent housekeepers, much sickness and many deaths may be avoided."

POLICY OF MUTUAL BENEFIT

To Give Each Part of the Empire Commercial Advantages.

Special Committee of Congress of Chambers of Commerce Reports a Compromise Resolution on Preferential Trade Within the Empire—Debate on the Resolution Opened by Mr. Cockshutt of Toronto Board of Trade.

Montreal, Aug. 19.—The first practical step in the direction of a revision of the fiscal policy of the Empire was taken yesterday, when the preferential trade resolution was reported to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce. The historic debate on the reciprocal commercial relations opened instantly and promises to continue for two days. The committee's report was unanimous, but many hours were required to reach the conclusion. There were twelve sets of resolutions urging preferential trade relations within the Empire. Ten were from Canada and there was one each from the London Chamber of Commerce and the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. These were crystallized by the committee into the following:

Compromise Resolution.

It is resolved, That in the opinion of this congress the bonds of the British Empire should be materially strengthened and a union of the various parts of His Majesty's dominion greatly consolidated by the adoption of a commercial policy based upon the principle of mutual benefit, whereby each component part of the Empire would receive a substantial advantage in trade as the result of the national relationship, due consideration being given to the fiscal need of component parts of the Empire. That this congress urges upon His Majesty's Government the appointment by them of a special commission composed of representatives of Great Britain and her colonies and India to consider the possibilities of thus increasing and strengthening the trade relations between the different parts of the Empire, and the trading facilities within the Empire and with foreign countries.

The Debate.

There were five speeches made on this resolution. The debate was opened by Mr. F. W. Cockshutt of Toronto, in a great speech in its favor, and he was followed by Mr. S. B. Boulton, London Chambers of Commerce, in a most eloquent speech on the same side. Mr. Harvey Dawe of Plymouth, Mr. N. N. Cohen of London, Hon. George. A. Drummond of Montreal and Mr. Robert Meighen of the Montreal Chambers also voiced their support of the resolution.

Other Topics.

During the forenoon several speakers threshed out the subject of better consular service, and a reduction of the postal rates of the Empire, favoring a postal union. Resolutions were adopted, declaring an increase of the consular service imperative, and that it was essential to the prosperity of the colonies that postal rates be improved so that periodicals and newspapers can be circulated as cheaply between the Mother Country and the colonies as between the British Empire and the foreign countries adjacent.

While Curling Her Hair.

Listowel, Aug. 19.—Miss Lottie Freeman, while curling her hair, upset the lamp, or the lamp exploded. Her clothing took fire, burning her seriously about the body, arms, neck and face. The doctors cannot say as yet how serious the burns are.

Sudden drops of temperature are impossible in the home heated by hot water. Stove fires die out, hot air furnaces heat unevenly, and the hot air switches to other parts of the house leaving the remaining rooms cold and drafty. But with the heating system of the in connection with Oxford Radiators an even, steady circulation of hot water is kept up throughout the house. Each radiator is diffusing the same temperature of heat in sufficient quantities for the size of the room.

The illustration below shows that the distance from the fire to the first surface is less than in any heater made, and the water has a shorter distance to travel, thus a more equal temperature is maintained in the water of the several sections.

Write for our booklets, they are of interest to everyone with a home to heat.

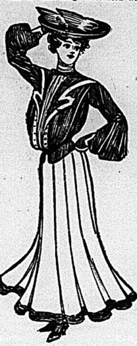
YACHTING COSTUMES.

Serge Is Always Useful—Rough White Hopsacking Skirts.

Yachting costumes are among the considerations of the moment. French women are having a great deal of deep crimson serge made up in this way. The average woman, however, looks best in a costume of navy blue trimmed with touches of red or white.

Costumes of white serge and brilliantine are also smart trimmed here and there with touches of dull green.

A blue yachting costume seen recently was of blue serge decorated with crochet applique in scarlet with dark blue and red tassels. The skirt just escaped the ground and was cut very full. The jacket was loose braided and lined with scarlet silk. With this was worn a white tailor made shirt waist with a red leather belt and a tie of red silk.



SERGE YACHTING COSTUME.

Rough white hopsacking skirts are very smart cut with a wide flare and trimmed with five rows of military braid.

Flat military braid is very good also for linens.

Orange linen is a new shade. It is usually trimmed with black and white braid.

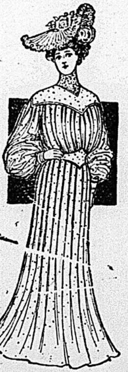
The yachting costume illustrated is of serge. The jacket is blue and the skirt cream with a blue band.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COOL DRESSES.

China Silk a Favorite, as Is Also Embroidered White Linen.

Rose is one of the favorite Parisian shades. A very smart afternoon gown seen recently was in soft white china silk decorated with a border of silk covered with pink spots. The skirt was caught up on the hips in pannier fashion, while the bodice was finished with a fichu of black embroidered sole de chine edged with heavy fringe and worn with an all black toque trimmed with pink roses.



ROSE MUSLIN GOWN.

Entire dresses of white linen are the latest thing. These dresses are of two descriptions, those intended for walking costumes and the dressy variety. A gown of linen inset with glod cluny lace is fit for almost any summer occasion. The other little gowns are made shirt waist fashion, with the skirts just clearing the ground. They are ornamented with tucks and with tailor made applications.

White china silk costumes are smart and almost universally becoming. They are trimmed with lines of fagoting and wide bands of antique lace.

An all white hat trimmed with a long ostrich plume is a very useful adjunct.

The illustration shows a very simple gown of rose spotted muslin. The hat is of rose chiffon and straw.

TWENTY YEARS OF BRONCHITIS.

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian" of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used "Catarrhozone," which cured him quickly and permanently. The captain says "Catarrhozone is the best cure for bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. Two months' treatment price $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dtf

The right is the right, whether good men approve or disapprove.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during July and August the Grand Trunk Railway System in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation Co. will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. Train leaves Belleville 7 a.m. Napanee 7.43 a.m. 7 hours sail through the beautiful 1000 Islands of the St. Lawrence to Alexandria Bay and return. Round trip rate from Belleville $1.85, Napanee $1.35.

CHEAP TRIPS.

The Grand Trunk Railway is running an excursion from Belleville to Kingston every Wednesday. Fare for the round trip, Belleville to Kingston and return, $1.35. Tickets are good going on date of issue only and parties must go on 7 a.m. train. Connect at Kingston with boat for trip through Thousand Islands to Alexandria Bay. Return fare for round trip through Islands from Kingston 50c.

Duty faithfully performed crowns the hours with flowers.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto.

The Worm Turns.

They were almost ready to start, and, like a good husband, Mr. Smoker waited patiently for his wife to put the finishing touches to her toilet. She was adjusting her hat and took a hat pin from a big cushion. Suddenly she exclaimed:

"I think it's a shame!"

"Yes, my dear," nervously assented Mr. Smoker.

"I mean the way these writers say that women sharpen lead pencils and open cans with their husbands' razors."

"Yes, my dear."

"Yes. Now, I never do such things with your razor, and I don't believe any woman does as the writers allege. I looked at your razor once when I had a box of sardines to open, but it was so sharp and so wabbly in the handle that I was afraid to use it. Besides, when I want to sharpen a pencil and have no knife I nibble a point on it."

"Yes, my dear."

"But if the writers wish to put something true in the papers why don't they go for the men who use their wives' hat pins for pipe cleaners? Ugh, you nasty brutes!"

Mr. Smoker forgot to say "Yes, my dear."

John Wesley's Shrewish Wife.

One of his biographers declares that if he had searched the whole kingdom the evangelist John Wesley would hardly have found a woman more unsuitable than she whom he married. She did not even sonfine herself to her tongue in her attacks. More than once she laid violent hands on him. "Jack," said John Hampson to his son, "I was once on the point of committing murder. It was when I was in the north of Ireland and I went into a room and found Mrs. Wesley foaming with fury. Her husband was on the floor, where she had been trailing him by the hair of his head, and she herself was still holding in her hand venerable locks which she had plucked out by the roots. I felt," continued Hampson, who was a giant of a man, though not one of Wesley's warmest friends—"I felt as though I could have knocked the soul out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

Moorish Baths.

In Spain, while the Moors were in the ascendency, luxurious hot baths were established. They were used in connection with the religious rites of Islam. The Islamites were required to bathe frequently. The manner of bathing was as follows:

After undressing, the bather is wrapped in a woolen coat, sandals are put on and he walks to the hot bath. After a thorough hot bath all parts of the body are rubbed. The soles of the feet are rubbed with pumice stone, then the body is anointed with oil and sprinkled with perfumed powders.

When the Moors were driven out of Spain the first thing the people did was to destroy the Moorish bath houses. This was done because of religious prejudice against the Moors.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

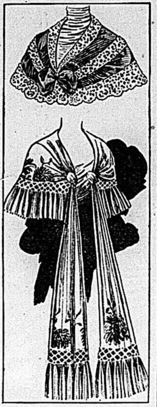
Fichus and Cape Effects Are Useful In Transforming Gowns.

The accessories of dress mean a good deal in the way of its success. Every year more care is exercised in the designing of them.

The wide collar—almost a cape—of lace or any dainty material is the one prominent feature of the summer season, and it is seen on at least one gown or coat in every smart wardrobe.

The fichu, hand painted, embroidered or made of lace, is a welcome addition to a simple gown or to one which has grown narrow through the shoulders.

Tassels and applications of all descriptions decorate even the washable summer gowns, and no gown is a success without a few of these little adornments.



DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Irregular chiffon appliques come in all the pale tints and are so designed that they can be cut up and joined together to form collars, cuffs, etc.

A flat stole seen recently was of finest point de venise laid on ivory satin, and it had a border of marabou in the natural brown tint and round the collar many fascinating tails of the same feathers. Another superb stole of Irish point laid on lime green velvet had the round, flat collar finished with a deep frill of Irish lace.

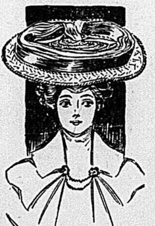
The cut shows a dainty fichu of mousseline de soie trimmed with silk fringe and embroidered. There is also a collar of louisine silk trimmed with bands of lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR WARM DAYS.

Unlined Dresses of White Lawn. Dust Coats of Sicilienne.

Unlined dresses of fine white lawn are very pretty and very smart. The waists are made with fancy yokes and fine tucks, while the sleeves are prettiest fulled into a tightly fitting upper portion. Some have little turnover collars and cuffs of pale material embroidered in white. This is particularly fetching in pale blue when combined with a ribbon sash and neck ribbon of the same color.

Dust coats of white sicilienne are very dainty to wear over thin gowns and protect the gowns themselves from the fading effects of the sun. A coat of this sort can easily be run up by the summer seamstress and merely trimmed with a loose collar of lace.



TAILOR MADE HAT.

The plain straw tailor made hat is useful because it may be worn with gowns of any color simply by adding a chiffon veil of that hue. Among the novelties in veils, by the way, is one of pale lavender trimmed with an edge of ecru lace.

Floral garnitures are very smart on chip and bass shapes, and the "crushed" roses, bare of foliage and arranged in heavy masses or conventional lines, are extremely popular. Flower trimmed hats also have the addition of feathers, and the plateau now has a broad border of contrasting color.

The picture shows a tailor made hat of yellow stra[illegible] twist of brown. [illegible]ET.

FINAL CLEARING PRICES.

The results of our buyers' extensive European trip are arriving daily.

Each and every article coming from that part of the world where it can be most advantageously bought.

We are hardly prepared to receive these yet. Summer goods are still here which must vacate our shelving before we can properly accommodate our fall lines.

If seasonable goods marked at very low prices induce buying, we will soon be out of our difficulty.

We have marked all warm weather materials at reductions that should clear goods not half as seasonable and stylish.

Many ladies whose immediate wants were already filled have purchased for the future, realizing in nearly every instance a saving of at least 50 per cent. on goods which will be "in it" as much next season as this.

Multitudes of equally worthy offerings await your inspection—it will be time well spent. Read below.

COLORED BLOUSES REDUCED.

There are many and varied reasons why the quantity of Colored Waists we sell increases each season.

No two women would give all the same reasons. But there are at least three we are confident everyone would give.

Style—Fit—Moderate Price.

We have marked all our "left overs" at three prices to effect a rapid clearance.

Styles and patterns are as desirable as any we have sold. Just the assortment ends. Here they are.

COMING DRESS FABRICS.

Although August is still with us the number of enquiries we have had, as to what the new Fall Dress Goods will be like, convince us that already many are making plans for heavier garments.

The last few days our Dress Goods Section has been busy opening up new materials. To those who can come a visit will apprise quickly what is newest.

The mixed Tweed effects will certainly be leaders. Many in coarse basket weaves.

The Snowflake and tufted materials will also be shown to a greater extent than ever.

We have made preparation for the biggest Dress Goods season in our history.

If stylish materials at lowest cash prices induce buying our expectation will be realized.

New Shoes Don't Pinch

IF YOU USE FOOT ELM.

It's a dread with some people getting new shoes. They pinch, draw and hurt the feet for a week or more until they get "broke in." All this suffering may be avoided by shaking a Foot Elm powder in the shoes. It makes them slip on easily, fit perfectly and prevents the drawing of the new leather. Besides this, Foot Elm preserves the leather, prevents it hardening and cracking, and prolongs the life of the shoe. You get double wear out of your shoes, and comfort every day you wear them by using Foot Elm. Price 25 cents a box of 18 powders at druggists or by mail. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

IT IS A PERPLEXING THING.

For the reader of newspaper advertisements to determine what is what. We do not use as large type as some, but we are sure that what we have to say is not the less important to any one who is interested in the subject of clothing at this time. Our summer suits are ready to speak for themselves, if you will but take time to inspect them, and we think you will find no fault with the prices. We are making an immense display of hot weather clothing and furnishings.—Quick & Robertson.

TAKEN BY THE OFFICIAL REPORTER — HOW CENSUS ACCOUNTS WERE MADE UP.

HIS ARDUOUS DUTIES AS FISHERY INSPECTOR — INTERESTING READING.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—I understand you found out from others that if you could not get the account you thought you were entitled to under the Department figures, you would have to put in some imaginary items. A.—Some items that I know I had been out that the hundred dollars would not make up.

Q.—So you put in that $25 rent of hall as an item you were out? A.—I was out lots of ways.

Q.—You have lumped it in that way so as to bring the bill up to the required figures? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now one thing in conclusion. Your declaration was made by you in Belleville on the 24th July? A.—I do not remember it was made there, you know, whatever the date is.

Q.—Just look at it; it was all made out in Belleville on the 24th of July. A.—Very likely.

Q.—And as made out in Belleville and as you sent to the Department, it was how much? A.—It was just what it is when I sent it to the Department.

Q.—When it first went to the Department? A.—Yes.

Q.—Whose figures are those, the $155.37? They are not your figures? A.—It is my figures.

Q.—The ink are yours? A.—That is mine, but it is written by different pen, that is all.

Q.—You mean to say that you—

A.—I had lead pencil and blue pencil and a fountain pen. There is the blue pencil and there it is the fountain pen I used all the time (producing pen and pencil).

Q.—You made up that account at Belleville at how much? It was added up and closed, is that not the fact; it shows on the face? A.—Yes.

Q.—You closed it at $282.30? A.—Yes, what I expected to get.

Q.—At that amount it was closed. A.—Yes.

Q.—When was it you changed the $105? A—After I came to Ottawa.

Q.—So to go back where we were, your account was drawn up in Belleville, completed there at $282.30. A.—Yes, whatever it is there.

Q.—$282.30 complete, and the writing "actual disbursements during census work as per account hereto attached" is in your own writing? A.—Yes.

Q.—So your own statement to the Government is $282.30? You started from Belleville with that? A.—Yes.

Q.—You came to Ottawa and met somebody, in consequence of which you changed it? A.—That was made up long before I left Belleville.

Q.—But you brought it, as originally made up, to Ottawa? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you said you met someone in Ottawa, in consequence of which you changed it? A.—No. I said we got circulars before I left home that showed we were not going to be paid the way we thought it was and I saw the $100 would not be enough for what I expended, as I went out more than the others; and from the circulars and talking to people in Belleville and on the way to Ottawa I seen we could not get that, and at the hotel here I put in that amount.

Q.—You found other Commissioners? A.—I think I met a Commissioner from out in—well, I do not know the Riding, but it was out somewhere in Glengarry.

Q.—You found other Commissioners were putting in imaginary items and so you put in the same thing? A.—I put in what I intended to plead for when I got here.

Q.—You got this payment for services as Census Commissioner and your salary was running on just the same in your other position? A.—No.

Q.—You were told it was from the first of February? A.—I started on the first of February, but it was not as large.

Q.—It was raised since, but whatever it was you were getting it? A. Yes. I got it on the first of March.

Q.—So you got $174 for how many days' work? A.—Ninety days.

Q.—No. A.—You mean 75 days?

Q.—You say that for 75 days' work you got $174; that is over $2.50 a day, but being dissatisfied with that you put in these other items to bring it up to what you thought it should be? A.—What I thought was due me for the manufactures, for instructing the manufactures.

Q.—I told you before that your account was like a diary? A.—Yes.

Q.—If you look through that I can only find some 49 days. I have allowed you every day you telephoned; some days all you did was to telephone or write a letter. A.—Oh no.

Q.—Allowing all these days telephoning or writing letters or perhaps receiving a parcel, every day you turned your hand over I have allowed. A.—It depends how far I had to go to telephone. I might have to take a horse and go into Belleville.

Q.—But allowing all that, even then your whole bill only makes it 49 days? A.—I have it all here and it makes 75 days.

The Congress of Boards of Trade.

OUR DELEGATES TAKING A PROMINENT PART—TWO SPEECHES BY COL. PONTON—WERE WELL RECEIVED.

The Montreal Star in its report of the proceedings at the Congress of Imperial Chambers of Commerce, thus reports two speeches by Col. Ponton, of this city:

Dealing with the resolution re the Consular service, which was moved by Mr. J. H. Walton, M.P., Col Ponton said:

"My Lord and Gentlemen, I believe if the Consuls are what they ought to be—the ambassadors of trade—they will act as the intelligence department of this great Empire. I feel that there is a point to be made out of this that these ambassadors of trade may be made use of in this way—they may report not only on commerce and on trade, but they may report on immigration. They may protect from their centres, where they are situated, the export of diseased immigrants to both the British Islands and the British colonies. They may prevent those suffering from trachoma and leprosy and from other noxious diseases from coming to our countries—they may prevent also those suffering from that worst of all diseases—that world wide disease anarchy—and if the Consuls exercised that power, and I believe they may exercise it, with discrimination, its effect would be wide felt and they would protect their own land. That is one of the great advantages I believe that they could afford. But there are other duties of a diplomatic nature, which they might fulfil equally as well. Being ambassadors of trade, Consuls may protect business and lubricate business difficulties—they may act as the oil very often on the troubled waters of business difficulties; acting especially in their own particular localities.

"What are other nations doing? The United States are not slow. They are not a self-contained country in this respect. They are a most ambitious country, the most progressive country of modern times. I am not going to deify them. I am not going to take our examples from them, but what are they doing in their Consular service? Do you ever see the Consular reports of Great Britain? What is the difference? Everybody sees the Consular reports of the United States. Surely if they are worth anything they are worth publishing. The Consular reports of the United States are not pigeon holed in Washington. They are sent broadcast to the manufacturers and to every man interested in industries.

"In South America the German press is working, and the United States press is also working. I have in my hand here the monthly bulletin of the International Bureau of American Republics, which is the monthly bulletin of all the Consular reports of South America, and all the trade agents. It is printed and published every month and circulated broadcast in French, Spanish and English, and that is the way the United States are working. They identify all the American Republics and hold them together. Now, I believe that that is what the British Consular work should be, and I believe we can do our duty by our Empire in urging in this way upon the Imperial Government the appointment of such men as the American Government are appointing to represent their flag."

The following resolution was moved by Mr. Cyrus A. Birge, of Hamilton:

"That in the interests of the British Empire, and particularly in the interests of the Motherland, measures should be adopted which would direct British capital and emigration to the colonies, rather than to foreign countries."

In seconding the motion, Col. Ponton said:

"I do so because I see that no one appears to be ready, and I believe always in speaking in time, so as not to delay the proceedings. I have just two ideas. One is this, that the resources of the British Empire are more than what have been spoken of in the shape of trade and commerce, and the woods and forests and minerals of Canada. Not in these things nor in agricultural products alone are the true resources of the Empire. We believe those to be in her manhood, the manhood of Great Britain and of every part of the Empire, And I believe it would be well if we could get our British brothers to come to feel the true spirit of Greater Britain, and not of Great Britain and the colonies. Every one speaks of British and Canadian delegates of the Chambers of Commerce, but Canadian delegates are as much British as the others. (Applause).

"I feel here, too, that what has been said freely from the manufacturers' point of view can be said also from the farmers' point of view; because the manufacturers, those who deal in machinery in Canada, and the goods which the machinery produces for the supply of human wants, are not the only manufacturers. The agricultural claim has also to be considered, and much the larger percentage of manufacture and the employment of human labor is agricultural. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

"The rich gardens and fields of Ontario are going partly uncultivated for the want of farm laborers. That is a fact. I am a farmer as well as a professional man, and I know. The soil is rich and the products are abundant, but there is not the laborer. And yet we have to meet circulars distributed by so-called labor apostles, really labor agitators, that not more men are required than our house is full. We have the harvest fields, which are just crying out for laborers, and these would be doubled, trebled, quadrupled in acreage if there were more laborers to do justice to-day to our soil.

Pills and Sarsaparilla

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

MUST REFUND THE MONEY.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS WHO RENDERED FICTITIOUS ACCOUNTS WILL BE COMPELLED TO DISGORGE.

Ottawa, August 18.—In the Senate to-day, in answer to Hon. Mr. Perley, Hon. Mr. Scott said the census of 1881 cost $456,904, that of 1891 $570,103 and that of 1901 $1,146,000.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell asked what was going to be done in the matter of those Commissioners who had been proved before the Public Accounts Committee to have made charges for expenses which had never been incurred.

Hon. Mr. Scott was not aware of the facts, but thought if the statement were true, those Commissioners should be forced to make refunds.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell—Agreed.

YACHTING.

America's Cup Races Start To-morrow.

The series of races for the America's Cup, between Shamrock Third and Reliance, start to-morrow, and will continue on alternate days, Sunday not included in the count. The races will, each day, start at as near 11 o'clock as possible. The yacht winning the first three races takes the cup.

Time Allowance for the Shamrock.

New York, Aug. 18.—The Reliance and Shamrock III. were measured today in the Erie Basin by C. E. Mower, the official measurer of the New York Yacht Club. As the result of his work it was announced to-night at the Yacht Club that the Reliance would allow the challenger 1 minute and 45 seconds over a thirty-mile course.

It was found that the Shamrock III. was slightly longer on the water line than the American boat, but the latter proved to have nearly 2000 square feet of sail more than the challenger, and it was this sail spread that taxed the American boat.

VALUABLE TIME SAVED.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and, when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cure bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

OFFICES, NO. 34, Bridge St., - Belleville, Ont.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager,
and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consider t o —more so than most people imagine.

SELECTIONS

SCIENCE OF BUILDING.

Exactitude Which Characterizes the Construction of Skyscrapers.

Many of the great steel structures that are being built in every city are planned and molded in some distant city—like the material for Solomon's temple of old—hundreds of miles away. It is in some rolling mill town of Pennsylvania that most of the gigantic frameworks for the modern skyscraper are built. All that remains to be done is to put them together, and the building rises up like a house of blocks.

Every piece is fitted together and numbered before it is taken away from the steel mill. So exact are the measurements that not even the drilling of a hole is necessary for fitting the rivets which fasten the plates and girders together. The watchlike precision with which these parts are made was shown in the construction of one of these buildings which is now being erected in Chicago.

One of the large cross girders was missing in the framework of the second floor, and, though it did not interfere with the placing of the framework on all sides and above it, the contractor was worried to know what had become of it. When the framework had grown as high as the sixth or seventh story and the missing piece had not yet been found around the railroad yards or heard of from any other source he wrote to the steel mill, describing it as closely as possible, ordering that it be duplicated.

By the return mail he received the following reply:

> As ground space is more valuable in Chicago than here in the country, we are storing missing girder for you. We knew that you would need a steel derrick on that floor and kept the girder out so you would have room. Will ship it after the remaining stories have been completed.

The mill men had figured correctly on the building hundreds of miles away, and the girder could not have been placed in position even if it had been on the grounds on account of the derrick.

Ice.

The words of the friendly counselor to the ambitious youth, "Beware the awful avalanche," might have been amplified to include a warning against the snow and ice through which he bore his excelsior banner. If he was a typical American youth he would be quite sure to use it to cool his drinking water and any articles of food which are more palatable cold than hot. This is the national habit, and it is said to be spreading over Europe as well. Probably no bacteriological fact is better established than that much of the ice of commerce is dangerously impure. The assumption that water purifies itself in freezing was long ago shown to have but a limited basis in truth. The individual crystals are likely to be purer than the mother liquid from which they are formed, but ice is a mass of crystals in which may be entangled all kinds of impurities.

Pepys on Copyright.

Samuel Pepys in his famous diary takes occasion in one entry to unburden himself thus:

"Moreover, I am overbourne with Grief, seeing that I, who must fain withstand bickerings at home and banter abroad in my walks from Seething Lane to the Navy Office, receive no gain from the publickation of this my Diary. My pouch is in no wise enriched thereby; yet many, methinks, do ride in fine coaches and keep open house by reason of my unconsidered Book, all so simple and innocent. It galls me to be told by my attorney (a shrewd knave and fairly honest as attorneys go) how this law of Copyright holds me powerless to gain a ducat for mine own enrichment, which makes me mad. The parliament men might well consider to emend so harsh a law of Copyright."

A New Kind of Tax.

The taxing of fat is a fiscal expedient which is new. A town in Sweden, it is announced, has introduced a municipal tax on stoutness, which appears to be graduated according to the most approved modern principles of public finance. Any one weighing less than 135 pounds goes free, an exemption which would scarcely apply to any able-bodied man. The great bulk of active taxpayers would be included in the second division, which consists of persons scaling between 135 and 200 pounds; they pay $3.12 yearly. As for the 200 pounders, their bulk is rated at $6 up to 270 pounds. Above that point every additional twenty pounds costs the proprietor of flesh another $6.

Now Arsenic Is Found In Eggs.

A chemist who has a theory that arsenic is one of the essential elements of every living organism and who is never happy unless he is making tests has just made a series of exhaustive experiments with hens' eggs and as a result claims he found that all parts of an egg contain arsenic in appreciable quantities. He says of the whole quantity found in any one egg two-thirds belong to the yolk and one-third to the white.

Curious Wells.

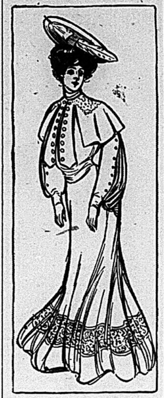
A well recently drilled in Canada produces sand instead of water. The sand comes up in a fine stream like a fountain. The force by which it is driven to the surface from a depth of a hundred feet has not yet been discovered. A magnetic well was discovered recently in New Guinea at a depth of 600 feet. Anything made of iron or steel and dipped into the water at once became magnetic.

REVIVAL OF OLD STYLES.

The Long Shoulder—Modes of 1830 Improved.

The fashions of this year are many of them revivals of past modes. Witness, for instance, the empire frocks and the pompadour designs in silk and muslin. The majority, however, are improved copies of the gowns worn a hundred years or so ago.

The development of the long shoulder is now a permanent fashion note. The people who most loudly protested against it are now most in favor of it. With the full skirt and the return to panniers, gaugings and plaits of all kinds the long shoulder, always suggestive of the 1830 period, naturally follows.



LINEN GOWN.

These 1830 fashions are admirably adapted to evening wear. Nothing is more becoming to young people than the fichu and the bertha. All angles can be softened by the skillful manipulation of a fichu in chiffon, muslin or lace.

The linen gown in the cut shows to good advantage the cape effect and the long shoulder line.

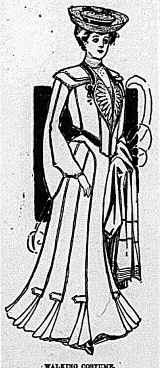
JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR USEFUL WEAR.

Walking Costumes More Elaborate. Black and White Wraps.

There is something very chic about a black and white wrap. Fringes play an important part in the trimming of all such fancy coats.

A mantle recently designed for an elderly woman was three-quarter length in soft moire antique, with a shoulder drapery of plaited silk fringe inserted with embroidered straps of black velvet lined with cream satin.



WALKING COSTUME.

Walking costumes are increasing in chic, and this is possible because of the greater length of the skirt. The little coats now boast of application, fancy lapels and, in a word, all the ornamentation of a dressy tailor made.

The long tailor made, by the way, exists only in a modified form for semidressy occasions.

The extreme fickleness of the weather this season has been exceedingly trying. The result is that modistes are striving to hit the happy medium in frocks for smart functions. Transparent necks have been softly lined, and a thin gown is provided with something substantial in the fashion of a stole, which can be worn on cool days without spoiling the effect of the toilet.

The walking costume in the illustration is of navy blue canvas trimmed with red and black embroidery.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

AN UNKNOWN LAND.

Parts of the Old Roman Empire Unseen by Modern Eyes.

Few people appreciate the fact that today, at the dawn of the twentieth century, there are still parts of the old Roman empire where no traveler of modern times has been; that there are ancient towns which no tourist has seen, temples and towers that no lover of classic literature has delighted in, inscriptions in ancient Greek that no savant has as yet deciphered—whole regions, in fact, full of antiquities for which no Baedeker has been written and which are not shown upon the latest maps. There are regions within our temperate zone where no modern European foot has trod, so far as we are able to tell—regions where the civilization of Greece and Rome once flourished and where fine monuments of classic art and of an unfamiliar art that supplanted the classic waste their beauties upon the ignorant sight of half civilized nomads.

To realize the truth of this one needs only to cross the ranges of mountains that run parallel to the eastern coast of the Mediterranean and, avoiding all caravan routes, journey independently about the barren country that lies between these mountains and the Euphrates. Here is a territory which, though not wholly unexplored, is full of most wonderful surprises. Here are cities and towns long deserted, not so great or so imposing perhaps as Palmyra, but far better preserved than the city of Zenobia and giving a much truer picture of the life of the ancient inhabitants than one can draw from these famous ruins.

These towns are not buried, like the great cities of the Mesopotamian plains, nor have their sites been built upon in modern times, as those of the classic cities of Greece have been. They stand out against the sky upon high ridges or lie sheltered in sequestered valleys, presenting to the view of the traveler as he approaches them very much the same aspect as they did in the fourth century of our era when inhabited by prosperous, cultivated and happy people or when deserted by those inhabitants some 1,300 years ago.

A Queer Career.

The Paris papers record the death of the aged Mgr. Bauer, who was formerly father confessor to the Empress Eugenie and is known to have had a considerable influence over the unfortunate direction of her policy. He was a Jew by birth, and during the fourth decade of the last century he was a busy man upon the Paris bourse. In 1855 he astounded his kinsfolk and fellow financiers by turning Roman Catholic. He was no less successful as a Christian than he had been as a Hebrew. He was ordained priest, taken up by Napoleon III., became the religious counselor of the empress and was made a monseigneur by Pope Pius IX. A few years ago the old priest added to the list of surprises which characterized his life by taking to himself a wife.—Westminster Gazette.

Straw Hats Need Brushing.

"It's a strange thing," said the hat man after he had sold a three dollar panama, "that men who brush a derby or a soft hat every day never put a brush to a straw hat. There is no reason for the neglect. Straw hats need brushing more often than the others, for the dust clings to them and is more noticeable. If you brush your straw hat every day and scrub it with a stiff brush dipped in tepid water once or twice a season it will last two years with proper care."—New York Press.

The Source of an Epidemic.

The Swiss town of Hagendorf had a typhoid epidemic not long ago, and it was suspected that it was started in a house in the upper part of the village where there had been some cases prior to the general outbreak. To test this theory fluorescin was put into the drainage water from this house, coloring it green. Nine hours later the whole water supply of the town was colored green, thus proving the fatal connection.

Salt to Prevent Cancer.

In a long study of malignant cancers Captain Rost, a young medical officer in India, has found that the bacteria attending the disease develop only when the natural chlorine of the body falls below the normal. By adding to the chlorine of the food, especially by increasing the use of salt, he claims to have cured one patient in the eight treated and to have benefited the others.

The Yard Measure.

King Henry I. had an arm thirty-six inches long. That is why the English yard is its present length, a little fact which many students have learned and forgotten.

Box Shooks.

A box shook is a set of boards prepared for the making of a box and packed up for convenience of transport. A house shook is all the material for one frame house put up in compact form for shipment, etc.

Coffee Inebriates.

There are coffee inebriates in Paris. Usually they are laundresses, a class of women who are especially devoted to the fragrant beverage. The coffee inebriate comes at last to such a state that he or she lives almost exclusively on an effusion of the beloved berry, with the addition of a little bread soaked in it.

Presidential Pardons.

The president of the United States cannot pardon a person convicted under the laws of any particular state. His pardoning power refers only to crimes against the federal laws.

VOL. 37. BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1903 NO. 93

A. W. PUTTEE'S AMENDMENT

Declares Time Is Ripe in Canada For Government Railways.

Several Members Speak For and Against the Government's Scheme For a Transcontinental Railway—Mr. Charlton Again Advocates a Divorce Court For Canada—Sir William Mulock Introduces a Civil Service Amendment.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—A bill, introduced by Sir William Mulock in the House yesterday, provides that the Deputy Ministers' salaries are increased to $3,500 with annual increases on a recommendation of the Minister to $4,000, and an extra $1,000 may be paid to the Deputy Minister of Justice, Deputy Minister of Finance and Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, if these gentlemen are possessed of special qualifications mentioned in the bill.

A new class of clerkships will be created, known as grade "A." The minimum salary for these will be $2,400, with annual increases to $2,500.

The minimum salary for junior and first-class clerks is made $700, and the maximum salary $1,000, but such clerks may be paid $50 each for optional subjects, not to make their salaries on appointment more than $800. Junior second-class clerks now in the Government employ may be paid $700 a year, if they are not receiving that amount already.

No person shall be appointed a third-class clerk without passing the qualifying civil service examinations. The minimum salary shall be $400 in this grade, and maximum $700. Fifty dollars each may be paid for optional subjects, not to increase the salary on appointment beyond $500.

Temporary writers who have been 10 years in the service may be appointed third-class clerks.

The G.T.P. Debate.

Mr. Hugh Guthrie resumed the debate on the transcontinental railway question. He supported the Government scheme on national as opposed to sectional grounds, and criticising Mr. Borden's speech said the policy it enunciated was "a piece of patchwork."

Mr. A. W. Puttee said the Government's scheme and contract with the Grand Trunk had touched no popular chord, and he moved an amendment to the Government's plan setting forth the desirability of railways being owned and operated by the Government. His amendment also declared that the time is now opportune for Government construction and operation of railways, under a properly safe-guarded civil service, placed beyond the influence of party politics.

Mr. A. E. Kemp attacked Mr. Charlton and other defenders of the Government's scheme, and urged the abandonment of the eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. Hughes of Prince Edward Island discussed the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme in its effects in the Maritime Province. The cost to the people of Canada, he said, would not amount to 20 cents a head.

Mr. Bennet (East Simcoe) declared that the eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme was essentially a political railway. He said of the western section that the system pursued by the Western States should be pursued by Canada, that is, a mixed system of rail and water. An all-rail route was out of the question. He challenged the Government to appeal to the country on the issue. The electors should at least be allowed a chance to say whether they wanted or did not want the scheme. He expressed confidence in the policy enunciated by the leader of the Opposition.

Again a Divorce Court.

The bill for the relief of Ellen McDermid was read a third time in the House last night. Mr. Charlton again advocated the establishment of a divorce court.

Ontario Board of Health.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—The following is the new Ontario Board of Health, appointed by Order-in-Council for the next three years: Edward D. Kitchen, M. D., St. George, chairman; Alexander Thomson, M. D., Strathroy; R. P. Boucher, M. D., Peterboro; Wm. H. Oldright, M. D., Toronto; John Douglas, M. D., Cobourg; J. J. Cassidy, M. D., Toronto. The retiring members are: H. E. Vaux, M. D., Hamilton, and J. H. Cullough, M. D., Owen Sound.

Sewer Caved In, Woman Killed.

Buffalo, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Lena Walkner, 35 years old, was crushed to death by the caving in of the sides of a sewer trench in her yard yesterday.

20 Sailed For Canada.

London, Aug. 20.—The British Parliamentary party, numbering twenty, sailed for Canada yesterday.

CIVIC RIGHTS.

The Fight Over the T. & H. Railway Bill Has Been Finished by an Agreement Safeguarding the Municipalities.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—The promoters of the Toronto and Hamilton Railway Bill threw up the sponge yesterday morning, and all that the Railway Committee had to do was to ratify an agreement reached between the promoters and the municipal representatives. All the municipal rights jeopardized by the bill as first drawn have been safe-guarded, and the Government has declared that such measures should not be dealt with by the Dominion Parliament.

Gist of the Agreement.

H. H. Dewart told the committee that an agreement had been reached. The company had agreed to amendments providing that only the trunk line between the cities of Toronto and Hamilton should be declared "a work for the general advantage of Canada." Secondly, no part of the proposed line is to be constructed on any street or highway or public communication without the consent of the municipality expressed by bylaw. Thirdly, none of the provincial railways to be acquired by the Toronto and Hamilton Railway are to be declared as works for the general advantage of Canada.

The Government's Position.

The position of the Government with regard to the bill, as given by Hon. W. S. Fielding, acting Minister of Railways, was this:

"It may lay down some rules that may embarrass us in the future. My one view is that it is not an enterprise for the general advantage of Canada and required nothing more than could be given it by the province. We have been erring in the past in declaring too many roads for the general advantage of Canada when they were not so. I know this bill is going through, but I do not want to be told hereafter that it is a precedent and hereafter we must have conclusive evidence that a railway is for the advantage of Canada before declaring it as such and that it wants something that it cannot get from the province."

The bill, as amended was reported.

Alvinston, Aug. 20.—During the heavy thunderstorm which passed over this section of the country about noon yesterday, Archibald Monroe's barns were struck by lightning and burned down, together with this season's crops. Loss about $2,000.

CONFLICT FOR SIX HOURS

Waged in Commerce Congress Over Preferential Tariff.

Mutual Concessions Made to Draw Harmony Out of Divergencies of Opinion—Halifax For a Fast Steamship Service Terminus Proposed by Montreal Man—The Resolution Passed—Congress Favors Adoption of the Metric System.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 20.—Straight lines and sharp corners marked the debate on a revision of the fiscal policy of the Empire yesterday. In anticipation of a warm discussion every delegate was in his seat when Lord Brassey called the congress to order. The gallery was crowded with prominent business men from all sections of the Dominion and many parts of the United States. The conflict raged fiercely for six hours. There were dramatic situations and outbursts of feeling that few were prepared for. At one time every delegate was on his feet shouting vigorously. This was the echo of a particularly strong peroration from Mr. Hurst of Birstall picturing the Empire conquering the world by her new policy of preferential trade relations, her dazzling gospel of commerce.

An Inspiring Situation.

Lord Strathcona declared that not in his experience had he witnessed a more inspiring situation, and Lord Brassey asserted that the nation had gained substantially by the splendid spectacle of these princes of the Empire's trade threshing out their differences as if it were to ever end now.

Fast steamship service for Canada occupied some attention, but the subject was a secondary feature.

The honor of initiating the debate for those who oppose the compromise resolution was accorded Sir William Holland, M.P. of Manchester. He desired to add to the article as agreed upon these words: "Due consideration being given to the fiscal and industrial needs of the component parts of the Empire, with a view to avoid injury to any."

Greeted With Mixed Expressions.

This was greeted with mixed expressions, and to avoid an open conflict a committee retired to grapple with it privately, the Canadian delegates declining to accept the change. The committee was out an hour, and on their return Mr. Owen Cockshutt of Toronto announced that the time had been wasted, as they had been unable to agree upon changing the resolution as he had introduced it Tuesday.

The discussion was then resumed by Sir William Holland, who argued at length in favor of the present system of free trade, and the colonies being left to adjust their tariffs to suit their own conditions. He then moved the amendment which he proposed earlier in the day.

The Debaters.

Those who discussed the tariff resolution formally were: Sir William Holland, Manchester; P. W. Ellis, Toronto; Joseph Walton, M. P., Barnsley; C. H. Lugerin, Victoria; Sir Elwyn Buck, Cawnpore; P. M. Belcher, Winnipeg; G. H. Hogg, North Shields; George Hurst, Birstall; Ebenezer Parks of Birmingham; Henry Bell Irving, Vancouver; Elijah Helm, Manchester; F. J. Usher, Dublin; Robert J. Graham, Belleville; John W. Johnston, Belleville; O. E. Bodington of the Paris, France, Chamber of English merchants.

Fast Steamship Service.

The other matter discussed during the lull in the trade debate was a fast steamship service. Mr. Robert Reford, one of Montreal's most prominent steamship men, moved the Montreal resolution, favoring a steamship policy giving fast mail services, and the promotion of trade within the Empire. Mr. Reford somewhat surprised the delegates by coming out strongly in favor of Halifax as the all-year-round Canadian port of the fast line service, with Galway as the British entry. The resolution was debated for some time, the opinion being practically unanimous in favor of a subsidy from Britain, and was finally passed.

Favors Metric System.

The following resolution on the metric system was adopted with little waste of oratory, being proposed by the Birmingham Chamber:

That this congress, having had under its consideration the following resolution, adopted at the conference held in London during the months of June, July and August, 1902, between His Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Prime Ministers of the self-governing colonies of the British Empire, namely:

"That it is advisable to adopt the metric system of weights and measures for use within the Empire, and the Prime Ministers urge the Governments represented at this conference to give consideration to the question of its early adoption."

Hereby expresses its hearty concurrence therewith, and urges upon the Government of the United Kingdom the necessity for legislative measures being taken in the interests of British trade and commerce to make the use of metric weights and measures compulsory.

Last night Lord Strathcona entertained the delegates at a grand function at his home. One thousand guests were present.

Harcourt on Preference.

London, Aug. 20.—In a letter to The Times yesterday, Sir William Vernon Harcourt says: "Without a taxation of food there can be no colonial preference; without colonial preference there can be no stable alliance of the colonies; without loyalty on the part of the colonies the fabric of the Empire would be dissolved."

HAD DIRECTORS SANCTION.

A. E. Wallace Says Margins Were Bought With Knowledge of Atlas Officials.

St. Thomas, Aug. 20.—A conference was held yesterday between the directors of the Atlas Loan Company and the committees representing the general creditors and the employes of the Michigan Central Railway who had deposits with the company.

A. E. Wallace, the president, was examined at length by D. W. Saunders of the legal firm of Kingsmill & Co., Toronto, solicitors for the M. C.R. He was unable to explain the discrepancies between the report issued by the directors and that made by the liquidator, but said that in buying stocks he used the names of the directors, and also of personal friends, which explains the difficulty the liquidator will have in separating the accounts of the company from those of private parties.

Mr. Wallace stated the directors had sanctioned the use of the company's funds for buying margins on the stock market.

The committee will make a report after considering the statement of the president, which will be written up by a stenographer.

ANOTHER LAUNCH.

Midland King Took the Water at Collingwood on Wednesday.

Collingwood, Aug. 20.—The Collingwood Shipbuilding Company launched yesterday, at their yards in Collingwood, one of the largest steel ships built in Canada. The launch was most successful, and was viewed by upwards of 5,000 people, citizens of the town, Barrie, Midland, Penetang and Owen Sound.

As the monster ship was sent into her element, Mr. (Capt.) Fetherstonhaugh, wife of her commander, performed the usual ceremony of naming her and wishing the steamer a successful career. The Midland King was built for the Midland Navigation Company.

Struck by a Train.

Markham, Aug. 20.—About 6.30 yesterday morning, Mrs. Doyle, wife of Wm. Doyle, manager of the Maple Leaf Woollen Mills, here, was struck by a train at Reesor's Crossing, and sustained severe injuries to her head. Mrs. Doyle was driving to Oshawa to a wedding, and as the road approaching the crossing crosses diagonally she did not notice the approach of a C.P.R. train going north. It struck the conveyance squarely in the centre, and Mrs. Doyle was thrown out and knocked senseless. The buggy was smashed and the horse killed. Mrs. Doyle was brought to the General Hospital about 7.30. At an early hour this morning she was reported as resting easily and her recovery is assured.

Canada Can't Act.

Windsor, Aug. 20.—R. F. Sutherland, M.P., has received a reply from the Minister of Justice regarding the petition sent by the people of Windsor, in behalf of Mrs. Ellen McKee, the ex-postmistress of Tubbermore, Ireland, arrested in Windsor on a charge of embezzlement. The Minister says the action against Mrs. McKee was instituted by the Imperial Government, and that he is therefore unable to do anything in the matter. He adds that he has requested the Governor-General to forward the petition to the Home Government.

Hamilton's Carnival.

Hamilton, Aug. 20.—This was Old Boys day in the carnival and it surpassed all expectations. 50,000 people saw the distinctive fireworks, the finest ever witnessed here, in Harvey Park. One piece, electric falls, was over 200 feet long. During the day a big tank burst in the stadium, but there were no serious accidents therefrom.

Lunatic Murderer Is Dead.

Kingston, Aug. 20.—Gideon Butts, aged 60, who was violently insane, died yesterday in Rockwood Asylum. In May he murdered his wife and was sent to Napanee to await trial, and sent here because of his insane condition.

For the Brave Dead.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—The Dominion Government has given $6,000 towards the fund for the erection of distinctive memorials in South Africa on the graves of deceased Canadian soldiers.

Killed by Lightning.

Kingston, Aug. 20.—Albert Tharret, son of Horatio Tharret, Moosomin, N.W.T., formerly of Sharbot Lake, Ont., was running from the stable to the house during an electric storm, when a bolt of lightning struck him, and he was instantly killed.

Gone But Not Forgotten.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—As yet the police have not succeeded in landing the escaped burglar, Boyle.

ALL READY FOR THE RACE

Shamrock III. and Reliance Have Made Last Trial Spins.

Interest at Fever Heat, and Difference of Opinion Has Increased Tenfold Since the Announcement That the Defender Has to Allow Challenger a Time Allowance of One Minute 57 Seconds—Weather Forecasts.

New York, Aug. 20.—The challenger for the America's Cup and its defender, the yachts Shamrock III. and Reliance, after a period of preparation of almost a year by the foremost designers in Great Britain and the United States, and the expenditure of something over $1,000,000, these two giant sloops will meet for the first time in the marine battle, which begins in real earnest off Sandy Hook to-day.

Shamrock III. was re-measured yesterday, the result showing that Reliance will have to give her 1 minute and 57 seconds time allowance instead of 1.45.

The first race will be 15 miles to the windward or to leeward and return, 30 nautical miles in length, over the ocean course outside of Headlands with a time limit of 5½ hours.

The outward course shall be laid to windward, if possible, from Sandy Hook Lightship.

Weather Forecasts.

The weather over the course of the international yacht race Thursday will be partly cloudy, with light to fresh west to northwest winds. (Signed.) Emery.

The weather bureau designates winds with a velocity of from one to nine miles an hour as light, and winds with a velocity of from 10 to 19 miles an hour as fresh.

Wednesday's Trials.

Under weather conditions that promise to be repeated to-day, on the occasion of the first of the races in the international series, the Reliance and Shamrock III., respectively the defender and challenger for the America's cup left their moorings at Sandy Hook for the last spin before the race yesterday. Interest had been considerably augmented in the yachts by the announcement that the Reliance must allow the Shamrock III. a handicap of one minute and fifty-seven seconds, and many yachting experts sought places of vantage yesterday to view the last trials.

The distance sailed by the yachts yesterday was estimated at about seven and a half miles. The Shamrock III. heeled at a greater angle than the Reliance and left considerable of a wave in her wake. The Reliance, on the other hand, had but little list and left hardly a ripple in her wake.

The White Star steamer Oceanic, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, was met at quarantine by Sir Thomas Lipton, who came up from Sandy Hook to greet his guests, the Earl and Countess Shaftesbury, who were on board. The Countess of Shaftesbury christened Shamrock III. and comes over to see the big race.

Interest at Fever Heat.

Never in the history of the America's cup races has there been so much interest taken as was shown at the official measurement. Last night all was bustle around the New York Yacht Club. It now rests with those in charge of the yachts to substantiate the claims that have been put forward by the greatest yachting experts as to the capabilities of the defender to retain the cup, and of the fast Irish yacht to wrest the coveted cup from the safe keeping of the Americans. As the time approaches for the contest for supremacy the interest has gone up to fever heat and the enthusiasm is at a high tension. A certain amount of uncertainty pervades the atmosphere regarding the result, as it is questioned by the wise ones whether either boat in the trial races have been given a real try out, and have gone their full speed. The basis of the opinion that Shamrock III. has a chance is, of course, her superiority over Shamrock I. in the trials off Sandy Hook, but there is one fact, hitherto unpublished, say some, regarding these trials that has a most important bearing on the matter. Besides this, since the time allowance was announced the difference of opinion as to the outcome of the renowned contest has increased tenfold.

SOLD HUSBAND FOR $500.

Montreal Woman Gets Rid of Man Who Deserted Her.

Detroit, Aug. 20.—For $500 Mrs. Constant Menthe of Montreal made an agreement yesterday afternoon to give up her husband to another woman who had once been her servant in the Canadian city. The agreement to accept $500 and call all accounts square was signed by husband and wife. Ludger Menthe then went to the bank, drew out the money and handed it over to his wife, after which the couple separated, and the wife left Detroit on the midnight train for her home in Montreal. The husband returned to his home at 595 Monroe avenue to continue to live with the woman for whose sake he deserted his wife.

Pierced by a Rod.

Hamilton, Aug. 20.—J. Graham, 21 Clyde street, who was employed at the new Roering works, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon. A steel rod was driven almost through his body. The doctors at the city hospital have little hopes of his recovery.

PHYSICIANS AND HOSPITALS.

During the past twenty years, millions of bottles of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion have been sold, and nearly all upon doctors' prescriptions. It is also extensively used in hospitals, especially for consumption, and wasting diseases of children. A good reason why you should use it.

POWERS TO FOLLOW RUSSIA.

Important Action May Result From Cruise of Black Sea Fleet.

Paris, Aug. 20.—It was learned in official quarters yesterday that the action of Russia in ordering a naval squadron to Turkish waters may be speedily followed by important naval action on the part of the powers. Communications are now being exchanged relative to a joint naval demonstration before Salonica.

Sultan Again Seen.

Constantinople, Aug. 20.—The ambassadors of the powers have again drawn the earnest attention of the Porte to the fears of massacres at Salonica, and have demanded the adoption of immediate and effective measures for the protection of the foreign consulates and the subjects of the various powers.

Every Male Destroyed.

Sofia, Aug. 20.—Reports from Monastir say 200 women, who have arrived there from the Bulgarian village of Rakevo, have presented petitions to the Russian and Austrian consuls and to Hilmi Pasha, the Inspector-General, setting forth that their village has been burned, and that all the male population have been massacred.

Satisfactory Separation Agreement.

Montreal, Aug. 20.—Following the resignation of James Ross from the presidency of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, the directors yesterday appointed J. H. Plummer, the vice-president, to the position of managing director pro tem. Senator L. J. Forget and Frederic Nicholls of Toronto were named vice-presidents. It was officially announced that, with the exception of some details, a satisfactory and amicable agreement had been arrived at for the separation of the coal and steel companies.

Fear Canadian Competition.

Baltimore, Aug. 20.—Grain exporters in Baltimore have taken action against diversion of freight from Atlantic seaboard ports to Gulf and Canadian ports. By concerted action it is hoped to have eastern American grain carriers reduce the rates so as to enable the Atlantic cities to compete with their Canadian and southern rivals.

"ROYAL MUSKOKA."

"The Royal Muskoka" Hotel is the largest and most magnificent summer hotel in Canada. Location unsurpassed in the centre of the famous Muskoka Lakes District, Highlands of Ontario (1000 feet above sea level), about six hours' journey north of Toronto. The grounds include an area of 130 acres, containing pine and hemlock groves and many beautiful walks and points commanding lovely views. There are tennis, golfing, bowling, fishing, bathing, croquet, bowling green and many enjoyable water trips. First-class in every respect. Excellent transportation service.

Daily Intelligencer.

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW.

The Ottawa Journal, an independent paper, finds much to commend in the recent great speech of Hon. Mr. Blair. Inasmuch as Mr. Blair is now an independent critic of the Government, and the Journal is an independent critic of Mr. Blair, the article from our contemporary is worthy of reproduction. The Journal says:

"Mr. Blair made in the House of Commons his complete exposition of reasons for differing from the Laurier Government in connection with the Government's transcontinental railway policy. He spoke for four hours, as did Sir Wilfrid Laurier in announcing the Government policy. Both speeches were great ones, in different ways. Sir Wilfrid's was that of an orator capable of investing with color and picturesqueness the plan and details of even a railway project of somewhat forbidding character. Mr. Blair's speech was, we think, fairly to be characterized as the powerful utterance of a practical statesman and strong administrator.

"If Mr. Blair's deliverance does not greatly deepen the distrust which we believe to be widespread in Canada of the new railway scheme, the bonds of party are ever tighter than the Journal believes them to be, which is saying a great deal. On two points Mr. Blair presented with striking force considerations which should appeal to the people at large. One is that this vast enterprise is framed by the Government without due investigation. Sir Wilfrid's contention, echoed with parrot like iteration by the Liberal press, is that there is a crisis, which must be met at once even if met blindly, namely, the necessity of immediate additional transportation facilities for the Northwest. Mr. Blair holds that no crisis exists which calls for blind action, and the arguments he advances are powerful. Then comes Mr. Blair's second point. Supposing there be a crisis, is this the way to meet it, this jump at a railway across the unknown and unquestionably barren north? If the route were not barren, it would be known. How is this jump into the dark preferable to a route, already almost completely in the Government's hands, from the Atlantic to the upper Great Lakes, with only a comparatively slight further link from Port Arthur to Winnipeg?

"And that new Quebec-to-Moncton track, smashing the Intercolonial?

"Finally, the Government in this matter is shown by Mr. Blair to be giving the plums to the Grand Trunk Pacific syndicate, while taking the dry stones itself. The public treasury is to bear the huge responsibility of the barren section from Winnipeg to Moncton; the private syndicate is to be left with the fatter part through the western prairies.

"Mr. Blair's speech was powerful in substance, dignified in utterance. It must enhance the impression his previous explanations made of his calibre as a public man. Mr. Blair was always known to be an astute politician, whose successes were hardly due to chance, but in some quarters he, like others of Laurier's chief lieutenants, received perhaps less credit than has been due them for broad public force and courage. Certainly Mr. Blair's course in the present case shows a strength which will, we believe, impress the country at large as statesmanlike, worthy of respect and admiration, and necessarily causing greater unrest regarding the nature of the Government's tremendous railway proposition."

Bachelor's Hall

This is the time of year when many of the married men are trying to keep Bachelor's Hall for a period.

To all such we extend a cordial invitation to visit our Lunch Room.

It will be much handier for them to come here and get a nice hot lunch instead of going home to an empty house and picking up a cold supper.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It was stated by Liberal papers that one of the first things Lord Strathcona did, on his arrival in Canada, was to endorse the Government's Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. This, it now seems, was not true. On his attention being drawn to the matter, Lord Strathcona said:

"I have never said one word either for or against the plan proposed by the Government. Having given no study to the question, and being in absolute ignorance of the merits of the controversy, I have said, as I say now, that I was, and am, in no position to give an opinion that would be of any value."

Why do the Grits tell such fairy tales? The truth is bound to come out.

• • •

The fact, as brought out by a speaker at the Trade Congress in Montreal, that 80 per cent. of Canada's mail and passengers come and go to-day through the United States is enough to make Canadians wonder how such a thing can be! And the reason is not far to seek. Long ere this, but for the dilly-dallying of the Liberal Government, the Canadian fast line would have been an accomplished fact. In 1896 Sir Charles Tupper had arrangements completed for a Canadian fast line of steamships, but the Grits came into power and burked the scheme, and have since done nothing but trifle with the question. Why? Probably because it offered no opportunity for a "rake-off" for the heelers. The question may well be asked, is it not time for the people of Canada to take this matter up, and demand that the Government shall at once take action and stop this ruinous and suicidal state of things? Sensible and patriotic men can give but one answer to the above questions.

• • •

Sir Gilbert Parker is reported as saying that 90 per cent. of the people of Canada are in favor of Mr Chamberlain's policy. And we opine to the opinion that Sir Gilbert is not more than 20 per cent. astray in his figures.

• • •

A Connecticut lad went to a theatre the other night and committed suicide when he got home. He must have seen one of those "entertainments" that hit the Belleville Opera House last season.

• • •

One feature of the Hamilton Carnival is the liberal throwing of confetti. Just fancy the editors throwing confetti at each other, after about twenty years' practice with bricks.

• • •

In his evidence published to-day Mr. Hurley admits that his formal instructions from the Government were to the effect that 'the remuneration of commissioners and enumerators was not to exceed $3 per day." Yet he acknowledged that he made up his bill so as to obtain $4 per day for himself. Draw your own conclusions.

• • •

Mr. Kirkwood's valedictory, in another column, while containing little that is new, will, we believe, be read with interest by Belleville people. Mr. Kirkwood seems to feel keenly the imputation that in his dealings with the Council he played the part of a speculator. He says that when he and his partner purchased the mills they did so with the bona fide intention of running them, and it must be admitted that, at the time, he seemed thoroughly sincere and very much in earnest. That was why The Intelligencer supported the by-law granting him the bonus. Now that the matter has reached a satisfactory conclusion, and a spirit of peace and good-will hovers over the scene, we can accept Mr. Kirkwood's explanations without recriminations and with the philosophical reflection that, perhaps, things turned out for the best, after all.

Four enthusiastic fishermen went up to Nigger Island, fished all yesterday afternoon and didn't get a bite. They say they'll draw the color line after this.

"My sentiments exactly," said a bicyclist after reading the Intelligencer's remarks last night about people who flood streets with lawn hose. It must not be forgotten, in dealing with this matter, that the days have gone by when the bicycle is ridden as a fad by people who use it for amusement. Nowadays the large majority of wheels are used by men and women who regard them as a business necessity. They have rights in the King's Highway, and those rights are abused when any other people flood that highway so as to make it unsafe for bicycle riding. The illegal and unnecessary practice of drowning streets with water from lawn hose should be stopped.

WHO WANTS A PLEASANT JOB

HOP PICKERS NEEDED IN MR. H. CORBY'S FIELDS AT CORBYVILLE.

By reference to the advertisement in another column it will be seen that hop picking time has come round once more, and that Mr. H. Corby is offering good inducements for people to go to Corbyville and gather the plant in question. As is well known, the occupation of hop picking is an exceedingly healthful one; indeed, in England, invalids travel many miles to get within range of the balmy breezes which blow through hop fields. Mr. Corby promises free train accommodation with free tea every noon; also the highest price paid for picking. The crop this year is a heavy one, which will make the picking easy. People who want a light, healthy and pleasant job for a few days can't do better than go on Mr. Corby's annual hop-picking picnic.

Band Concert To-night.

More Glasses Are Worn

Now-a-days than ever before. No doubt of it. People used to think that the wearing of glasses should be put off as long as possible—that it was an old age necessity only.

We know more now. We apply every known agency for the relief and care of eye sickness — and there are in use to-day methods which weren't heard of even ten years ago.

Now we commence to right eye sight just as soon as it commences to go wrong. Now school children by the hundreds use glasses. And it's wise and proper.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening. We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

ABNER DANIEL

By . . .
WILL N. HARBEN
Author of "Westerfelt"

Copyright, 1902, by HARPER & BROS., Who Publish the Work in Book Form. All Rights Reserved

"I'm a-goin' to be regular from now on," said Bishop, slowly turning the leaves of the tome. "I forgot whar I read last."

"You didn't finish about Samson tyin' all them foxes' tails together," said Abner Daniel as he knocked the hot ashes from his pipe into the palm of his hand and tossed them into the chimney. "That sorter interested me. I wondered how that was a-goin' to end. I'd hate to have a passle o' foxes with torches to the'r tails turned loose in my wheat jest 'fore cuttin' time. It must 'a' been a sight. I wondered how that was a-goin' to end."

"You'll wonder how you're a-goin' to end if you don't be more respectful," said his sister.

"Like the foxes, I reckon," grinned Abner—"with a eternal torch tied to me. Well, ef I am treated that away I'll go into the business o' destruction an' set fire to everything I run across."

"Ain't you goin' to tell us what you did in Atlanta 'fore you have prayer?" asked Mrs. Bishop, almost resentfully.

"No, I hain't!" Bishop snapped. "I'll tell you soon enough. I reckon I won't read this mornin'. Let's pray."

They all knelt reverently and yet with some curiosity, for Bishop often suited his prayers to important occasions, and it struck them that he might now allude to the subject bound up within him.

"Lord, God Almighty," he began, his lower lip hanging and quivering, as were his hands clasped in the seat of his chair, "thou knowest the struggle thy creatures are makin' on the face of thy green globe to live up to the best of the'r lights an' standards. As I bend before thee this mornin' I realize how small a bein' I am in thy sight an' that I ort to bow in humble submission to thy will, an' I do. For many yeers this family has enjoyed thy bounteous blessings. We've had good health an' the influence of a Bible readin', God fearin' community, an' our childern has been educated in a way that raised 'em head an' shoulders above many o' the'r associates an' even blood kin. I don't know exactly whar an' how I've sinned, but I know I have displeased thee, fer thy scourge has fallen hard an' heavy on my ambitions. I wanted to see my boy heer a good, obedient son an' my daughter thar in Atlanta able to hold the'r heads up among the folks they mix with, an' so I reached out. Maybe it was forbidden fruit helt out by a snake in the devil's service. I don't know—thou knowest. Anyways, I steered my course out o' the calm waters o' content an' peace o' soul into the whirlpool rapids o' avarice an' greed. I 'lowed I was in a safe haven an' didn't dream o' the stormclouds hangin' over me till they bust in fury on my head. Now, Lord, my Father, give them hearts of patience an' forgiveness fer the blunders of thy servant. What I done I done in the bullheaded way that I've always done things, but I meant good and not harm. These things we ask in the name o' Jesus Christ, our blessed Lord and Master. Amen."

During the latter part of the prayer Mrs. Bishop had been staring at her husband through her parted fingers, her face pale and agitated, and as she rose her eyes were glued to his face.

"Now, Alfred," she said, "what are you goin' to tell us about the railroad? Is it as bad as brother Ab thought it would be?"

Bishop hesitated. It seemed as if he had even then to tear himself from the clutch of his natural stubbornness. He looked into all the anxious, waiting faces before he spoke, and then he gave in.

"Ab made a good guess. Ef I'd 'a' had his sense or Alan's, I'd 'a' made a better trader. It's like Ab said it was, only a sight wuss, a powerful sight wuss!"

"Wuss?" gasped his wife in fresh alarm. "How could it be wuss? Why, Brother Ab said"—

"I never have told you the extent o' my dealin's," went on Bishop in the current of confession. "I never even told Perkins yesterday. Fust an' last I've managed to rake in fully twenty thousand acres o' mountain land. I was goin' on what I 'lowed was a dead shore thing. I secured all I could lay my hands on, an' I did it in secret. I was afeerd even to tell you about what Perkins said, thinkin' it mought leak out an' sp'ile my chances."

"But, father," said Alan, "you didn't have enough money to buy all that land."

"I got it up"—Bishop's face was doggedly pale, almost defiant of his overwhelming disaster—"I mortgaged this farm to get money to buy Maybry and Morton's four thousand acres."

"The farm you was going to deed to Alan?" gasped his wife. "You didn't include that?"

"Not in that deal," groaned Bishop. "I swapped that to Phil Parsons fer his poplar an' cypress belt."

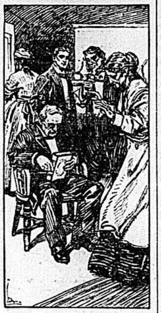
The words seemed to cut raspingly into the silence of the big room. Abner Daniel was the only one who seemed unmoved by the confession. He filled his pipe from the bowl on the mantelpiece and pressed the tobacco down with his forefinger; then he kicked the ashes in the chimney till he uncovered a small live coal. He eyed it for a moment, then dipped it up in the shovel, rolled it into his pipe and began to smoke.

"So I ain't a-goin' to git no yeerly pass over the new road," he said, his object being to draw his brother-in-law back to Perkins' action in the matter.

"Perkins was a-lyin' to me," answered Bishop. "He hain't admitted it yet, but he was a-lyin'. His object was to he'p the Tompkins sell out fer a decent price, but he can't be handled. He's got me on the hip."

"No," said Abner. "I'd ruther keep on swappin' gold dollars fer mountain land an' lettin' it go fer taxes 'an to try to beat a lawyer at his own game. A courthouse is like the devil's abode, easy to git into, no outlet an' nothin' but scorch while you are thar."

"Hush, fer the name o' goodness!" cried Mrs. Bishop, looking at her husband. "Don't you see he's dyin' from it? Are you all a-goin' to kill 'im? What does a few acres o' land ur debts amount to beside killin' a man 'at's been tryin' to help us all? Alfred, it ain't so mighty awful. You know it ain't! What did me an' you have when we started out but a log house boarded up on the outside, an' now we've got our childern educated an' all of us in good health. I railly believe it's a sin agin God's mercy fer us to moan an' fret under a thing like this."



"Wuss!" gasped his wife.

"That's the talk," exclaimed Abner Daniel enthusiastically. "Now you are gittin' down to brass tacks. I've always contended"—

"For God's sake, don't talk that way!" said Bishop to his wife. "You don't mean a word of it. You are jest a-sayin' it to try to keep me from seein' what a fool I am."

"You needn't worry about me, father," said Alan firmly. "I am able to look out for myself and for you and mother. It's done, and the best thing to do is to look at it in a sensible way. Besides, a man with 20,000 acres of mountain land paid for is not broken by a long jump."

"Yes, I'm gone," said Bishop, a wavering look of gratitude in his eye as he turned to his son. "I figured on it all last night. I can't pay the heavy interest an' come out. I was playin' for big stakes an' got left. Thar's nothin' to do but give up. Me buyin' so much land has made it rise a little, but when I begin to try to sell I won't be able to give it away."

"Thar's some'n in that," opined Abner Daniel as he turned to leave the room. "I reckon I mought as well go haul that tan bark. I reckon you won't move out 'fore dinner."

Alan followed him out to the wagon.

"It's pretty tough, Uncle Ab," he said. "I hadn't the slightest idea it was so bad."

"I wasn't so shore," said Daniel. "But I was jest a-thinkin' in thar. You've got a powerful good friend in Rayburn Miller. He's the sharpest speculator in north Georgia. Ef I was you, I'd see him an' lay the whole thing before him. He'll be able to give you good advice, an' I'd take it. A feller that's made as much money as he has at his age won't give a friend bad advice."

"I thought of him," said Alan, "but I am a little afraid he will think we want to borrow money, and he never lets out a cent without the best security."

"Well, you needn't be afeerd on that score," laughed the old man as he reached up on the high wagon seat for his whip. "I once heerd 'im say that business an' friendship wouldn't mix any better'n oil an' water."

CHAPTER V.

THE following Saturday Alan went to Darley, as he frequently did, to spend Sunday. On such visits he usually stayed at the Johnston House, a great, old fashioned brick building that had survived the civil war and remained untouched by the shot and shell that hurtled over it during that dismal period when most of the population had "refugeed farther south." It had four stories and was too big for the town, which could boast of only 2,000 inhabitants, one-third of whom were black. However, the smallness of the town was in the hotel's favor, for in a place where no one would have patronized a second class hotel opposition would have died a natural death. The genial proprietor and his family were of the best blood, and the Johnston House was a sort of social clubhouse where the church people held their affairs and the less serious element gave dances. To be admitted to the hotel without having to pay for one's dinner was the hallmark of social approval. It was near the ancient looking brick car shed, under which the trains of two main lines ran, and a long freight warehouse of the same date and architecture. Around the hotel were clustered the chief financial enterprises of the town—its stores, postoffice, banks and a hall for theatrical purposes. Darley was the seat of its county, and another relic of the days before the war was its courthouse. The principal sidewalks were paved with brick, which in places were damp and green and sometimes raised above their common level by the undergrowing roots of the sycamore trees that edged the streets.

In the office of the hotel, just after registering his name, Alan met his friend Rayburn Miller, for whose business ability, it may be remembered, Abner Daniel had such high regard. He was a fine looking man of thirty-three, tall and of athletic build. He had dark eyes and hair and a ruddy, outdoor complexion.

"Hello!" he said cordially. "I thought you might get in today, so I came round to see. Sorry you've taken a room. I wanted you to sleep with me tonight. Sister's gone, and no one is there but the cook. Hello, I must be careful. I'm drumming for business right under Sanford's nose."

"I'll make you stay with me to make up for it," said Alan as the clerk behind the counter laughed good naturedly over the allusion to himself.

"Blamed if I don't think about it," said Miller. "Come round to the office. I want to talk to you. I reckon you've got every plow going such weather as this."

"Took my horse out of the field to drive over," said Alan as they went out and turned down to a side street where there was a row of law offices, all two roomed buildings, single storied, built of brick and bearing battered tin signs. One of these buildings was Miller's, which, like all its fellows, had its door wide open, thus inviting all the lawyers in the "row" and all students of law to enter and borrow books or use the ever open desk.

Rayburn Miller was a man among ten thousand in his class. Just after being graduated at the state university he was admitted to the bar and took up the practice of law. He could undoubtedly have made his way at this alone, had not other and more absorbing talents developed within him. Having had a few thousand dollars left him at his father's death, he began to utilize this capital in "note shaving" and other methods of turning over money for a handsome profit furnished by the unsettled conditions, the time and locality. He soon became an adept in many lines of speculation, and as he was remarkably shrewd and cautious it is not to be wondered at that he soon accumulated quite a fortune.

"Take a seat," he said to Alan as they went into the office, and he threw himself into the revolving chair at his littered desk. "I want to talk to you. I suppose you are in for some fun. The boys are getting up a dance at the hotel, and they want your dollar to help pay the band. It's a good one this time. They've ordered it from Chattanooga. It will be down on the 7:35. Got a match?"

Alan had not, and Miller turned his head to the open door. An old negro happened to be passing, with an ax on his shoulder.

"Heigh, there, Uncle Ned!" Miller called out.

The negro had passed, but he heard his name called, and he came back and looked in at the door.

"Want me, Marse Rayburn?"

"Yes, you old scamp. Get me a match or I'll shoot the top of your head off."

"All right, suh; all right, Marse Rayburn!"

"You ought to know him," said Miller, with a smile as the negro hurried into the adjoining office. "His wife cooks for Colonel Barclay. He might tell you if Miss Dolly's going tonight, but I know she is. Frank Hillhouse checked her name off the list, and I heard him say she'd accepted. By the way, that fellow will do to watch. I think he and the colonel are pretty thick."

"Will you never let up on that?" Alan asked, with a flush.

"I don't know that I shall," laughed Rayburn. "It seems so funny to see you in love, or, rather, to see you think you are."

"I have never said I was," said Alan sharply.

"But you show it so blamed plain," said Miller.

"Here 'tis, Marse Rayburn. Marse Trabue said you could have a whole box ef you'd put up wid sulphur ones."

Miller took the matches from the outstretched hand and tossed a cigar to Alan. "Say, Uncle Ned," he asked, "do you know that gentleman?" indicating Alan with a nod of his head.

A quizzical look dawned in the old negro's eyes, and then he gave a resounding guffaw and shook all over.

"I reckon I know his boss, Marse Rayburn," he tittered.

"That's a good one on you, Alan," laughed Miller. "He knows your 'boss.' I'll have to spring that on you when I see you two together."

As the negro left the office Mr. Trabue leaned in the doorway, holding his battered silk hat in his hand and mopping his perspiring face.

He nodded to Alan and said to Miller, "Do you want to write?"

"Not any more for you, thanks," said Miller. "I have the backache now from those depositions I made out for you yesterday."

"Oh, I don't mean that," the old lawyer assured him, "but I had to borrow yore ink just now, an', seein' you at yore desk, I thought you might need it."

"Oh, if I do," jested Miller, "I can buy another bottle at the bookstore. They pay me a commission on the ink I furnish the row. They let me have it cheap by the case. What stumps me is that you looked in to see if I needed it. You are breaking the rule, Mr. Trabue. They generally make me hunt for my office furniture when I need it. They've borrowed everything I have except my iron safe. Their ignorance of the combination, its weight and their confirmed laziness are all that saved it."

When the old lawyer had gone, the two friends sat and smoked in silence for several minutes. Alan was studying Miller's face. Something told him that the news of his father's disaster had reached him and that Miller was going to speak of it. He was not mistaken, for the lawyer soon broached the subject.

"I've been intending to ride out to see you almost every day this week," he said, "but business has always prevented my leaving town."

"Then you have heard"—

"Yes, Alan, I'm sorry, but it's all over the country. A man's bad luck spreads as fast as good war news. I heard it the next day after your father returned from Atlanta, and saw the whole thing in a flash. The truth is, Perkins had the cheek to try his scheme on me. I'm the first target of every scoundrel who has something to sell, and I've learned many of their tricks. I didn't listen to all he had to say, but got rid of him as soon as I could. You must not blame the old man. As I see it now, it was a most plausible scheme, and the shame of it is that no one can be handled for it. Your father will have to grin and bear it. He really didn't pay a fabulous price for the land, and if he were in a condition to hold on to it for, say, twenty-five years he might not lose money. But who can do that sort of thing? I have acres and acres of mountain land offered me at a much lower figure, but what little money I've made has been made by turning my capital rapidly. Have you seen Dolly since it happened?"

"No; not for two weeks," replied Alan. "I went to church with her Sunday before last and have not seen her since. I was wondering if she had heard about it."

"Oh, yes; she's heard it from the colonel. It may surprise you, but the thing has rubbed him the wrong way."

"Why, I don't understand," exclaimed Alan. "Has he"—

"The old man has had about 2,000 acres of land over near your father's purchases, and it seems that he was closely watching all your father's deals and, in spite of his judgment to the contrary, Mr. Bishop's confidence in that sort of real estate has made him put a higher valuation on his holdings over there. So you see, now that your father's mistake is common talk, he is forced to realize a big slump, and he wants to blame some one for it. I don't know but that your father or some one else made him an offer for his land, which he refused. So you see it is only natural for him to be disgruntled."

"I see," said Alan. "I reckon you heard that from Miss Dolly?"

Miller smoked slowly.

"Yes"—after a pause—"I dropped in there night before last, and she told me about it. She's not one of your surface creatures. She talks sensibly on all sorts of subjects. Of course she's not going to show her heart to me, but she couldn't hide the fact that your trouble was worrying her a good deal. I think she'd like to see you at the ball tonight. Frank Hillhouse will give you a dance or two. He's going to be hard to beat. He's the most attentive fellow I ever ran across. He's got a new buggy—a regular hug-me-tight—and a high stepping Kentucky mare for the summer campaign. He'll have some money at his father's death, and all the old women say he's the best catch in town because he doesn't drink, has a Sunday school class and will have money. We are all going to wear evening suits tonight. There are some girls from Rome visiting Hattie Alexander, and we don't want them to smell hay in our hair. You know how the boys are. Unless all of us wear spiketails no one will; so we took a vote on it, and we'll be on a big dike. There'll be a devilish lot of misfits. Those who haven't suits are borrowing in all directions. Frank Buford will rig out in Colonel Day's antebellum toggery. Did you bring yours?"

"It happens to be at Parker's shop, being pressed," said Alan.

Curious Bits of News.

A young Kentucky girl of amazing beauty, who had been forced into marriage with an aged speculator whom she heartily disliked, vowed that after marriage she would never look upon her face in a mirror, seeing that it was her facial charms which had brought about the loathed union. For six years she faithfully observed the vow, until the recent death of her husband cancelled the extraordinary oath.

The common notion that Germans are the heaviest beer-drinkers is refuted by statistics published by the British Board of Trade. Last year every German, on the average, drank twenty-seven gallons, while the average Englishman drank thirty-two gallons. The consumption in the United States was less than half as much, per capita, as in Germany. With the exception of the Belgians, the British are the largest beer-drinkers in the world, and the consumption has grown rapidly during the last fifteen years.

A card-shuffling machine has been invented by R. F. Bellows of Cleveland. It should make business poor for crooked card-players. The device is complicated, yet simple in its action. "Card-players who want a fair and honest game are enthusiastic in their praise of my machine," says Bellows. "It shuffles cards more thoroughly than can possibly be done by hand, and it is impossible for the dealer to put up a hand to suit himself."

A funny story comes from New Jersey about an auction sale of furs which had been preserved in red pepper. About a hundred ladies and other eager bargain-hunters with a keen scent for their quarry were impatiently waiting, but as soon as the furs were opened they were all seized with a violent fit of sneezing, which was so irrepressible that, in spite of heroic struggles to continue the bidding, the sale had perforce to be stopped, and would-be purchasers were sent sneezing away.

A watchmaker at Zurich is exhibiting in his shop window a wonderful piece of Swiss workmanship, in the shape of the smallest watch that has ever been manufactured, writes a Geneva correspondent. The watch, which is in the shape of a rose, is so minute that a strong magnifying glass is necessary to read the hands, and when winding up the tiny article it is necessary to use a specially prepared contrivance for this purpose. The manufacturer refuses to sell the watch, which keeps excellent time. One rich customer offered two hundred pounds for the curiosity, but this sum was refused.

There are probably not many men living who had a brother that died one hundred and forty years ago. This, however, appears to be the case with an old man who was called as a witness in a small town of Styria. His father was married the first time in 1760, at the age of nineteen. The following year he had a son, who died after a few months. His father married again in 1811, at the age of seventy, and witness was born the next year, which made him eighty-nine. "Mark Twain dropped a tear upon the grave of Adam, so perhaps this old man still grieves for his brother," comments the London "Chronicle."

AN INSINUATION.

(Hamilton Herald.)

A resolution has been brought before the Congress of Chambers of Commerce, endorsing Canadian transcontinental railways as imperial works. The resolution was submitted by the Belleville Board of Trade. Belleville is the home of John Bell and W. H. Biggar, the legal advisers and solicitors of the Grand Trunk Railway Company.

The Summer Carnival and Old Boys' Reunion in Hamilton is said to be successful beyond the wildest dreams of the promoters. There's a lesson in that for Belleville. The Hamilton blow-out owes its success to persistent hustling and a liberal use of printers' ink. If Belleville people want next summer's celebration to be a grand success it is up to them to do likewise. And its none too early to begin.

It will interest some people to know that there is a cod liver oil famine, and that the price has advanced 500 per cent. One reason for this is that there is a shortage in the natural supply, and another reason is that New York speculators have "cornered" the remainder. Physicians say that intense suffering and many deaths will result, as in many pulmunary troubles there is no substitute for cod liver oil. What kind of a shrift should be given to speculators who deliberately create a shortage in an article, the failure to get which means death to many of their fellow-creatures? Hanging is too good for them!

Itching Eczema or Salt Rheum

THE MOST TORTURING OF SKIN DISEASES IS CURED BY DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

The very fact that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for eczema and salt rheum is sufficient evidence of its superior value as a means of allaying irritation and healing inflamed itching skin. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a necessity in every home in which it is known, for there has yet to be discovered a preparation which so quickly stops itching and heals sores or wounds. Ask your neighbors about it. Most people know of wonderful cures effected by its use. Sixty cents a box at all dealers. 3

Curse
—OF—

CURED BY
COLONIAL REMEDY

No taste. No Odor. Can be given in a glass of water tea, or coffee, without patient's knowledge.

Colonial Remedy will cure or destroy the diseased appetite for alcoholic stimulants, whether the patient is a confirmed inebriate, "tippler," social drinker or drunkard. Impossible for anyone to have an appetite or alcoholic liquors after using Colonial Remedy.

Indorsed by Members of the W.C.T.U.

Mrs. Moore, Superintendent of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Ventura, Cal., writes: "I have tested Colonial Remedy on very obstinate drunkards, and the cures have been many. In many cases the Remedy was given secretly. I cheerfully recommend and endorse Colonial Remedy. Members of our Union are delighted to find a practical and economical treatment to aid us in our temperance work."

Sold by druggists everywhere and by mail.

INSTINCT.

They christened him Reginald Percy de Vere;
They dressed him in ruffles and curled his back hair;
His mother declared him her own precious dear
And forbade him to play with the boys around there,
Which was more than poor Reginald Percy could bear.

So he went out one day, curls and ruffles and all,
And strayed where the rudest of boys congregate.
Soon Reginald's ire, though his body was small,
Increased to proportions remarkably great,
And he issued a challenge, regardless of weight.

Now Reginald's eye has turned blacker than jet,
But he isn't complaining, which seems rather queer
Till you learn that the other boy's eye's blacker yet;
And there isn't a happier youth, far or near,
Than this dirty faced Reginald Percy de Vere. —Washington Star.

The Full Measure of Success.

"Was your auto race successful?"

"Successful? I should say it was! There were two chauffeurs killed, and three owners mortally hurt, and five innocent bystanders sent to the hospital, and one auto climbed a stone wall and flung itself down a steep cliff, and another auto threw off its chauffeur and is now careering wildly across the country and terrorizing the community, and Hoskin's new touring car crossed the Verlaine ravine at a single bound and then jumped on the roof of a gamekeeper's cottage, and—well, it certainly was the most spirited and thoroughly enjoyable run we have ever had."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TWENTY YEARS OF BRONCHITIS.

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian" of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used "Catarrhozone," which cured him quickly and permanently. The captain says "Catarrhozone is the best cure for bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. Two months' treatment price $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dtf

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

CHEAP TRIPS.

The Grand Trunk Railway is running an excursion from Belleville to Kingston every Wednesday. Fare for the round trip, Belleville to Kingston and return, $1.35. Tickets are good going on date of issue only and parties must go on 7 a.m. train. Connect at Kingston with boat for trip through Thousand Islands to Alexandria Bay, Return fare for round trip through Islands from Kingston 50c.

Duty faithfully performed crowns the hours with flowers.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto.

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant but if Perry Davis' Painkiller is near all danger is soon ended.

All Have an "Itch" In Them.

"Speaking of Servian names," said an observant man, "they are not so bad when you once get used to them, nor are they so hard to pronounce. You no doubt have noticed that all Servian names end with a syllable having some resemblance to the English word 'itch.' Some of the names end in 'ies' or just with 'ic.' Sometimes it is 'ich' or 'ics' or 'isch,' and so on. It makes no difference how the name ends, you will make no mistake if you give the sound of 'itch' to the last syllable. That will be the proper Servian sound, for Petrovich or Petrovic would be correct, and in both instances the word would be pronounced in the same way, by sounding the 'itch.' Servian names are all right when one gets used to them, but they are strange and shocking when put into the columns of English newspapers."

Goats That Fight.

A species of the wild goat, the Capra ruppell, haunts the rocks of the Abyssinian highlands and manages to hold its own as to flight against all enemies, with the exception of the fleet footed jackal, an adversary whose co-operative tactics and keenness of scent make flight unavailing and have led the capras to the conclusion that under certain circumstances valor may be the better part of discretion. The yelp of an approaching horde of jackals is therefore a signal for instant rally on the part of the goats. The nannies crowd around their kids, and the bucks rush forward en masse, butting away with a rage that lays out a yelper at every spring and makes the survivors stand back howling and cowering.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone:

"Here lies John Hurley, whose father and mother died while on their way home from America. If they had lived they would have been buried here."

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Talbach cemetery in the south of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered; it marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

"My pipe is out."

Grant's Estimate of His Generals.

In Grant's estimate of the abilities of the generals of the armies, says an officer of Grant's staff in the National Magazine, I think it is safe to say that Sherman stood first. For John A. Logan he perhaps entertained the warmest personal feelings. His friendship for this brilliant soldier was very pronounced. General Thomas he considered a safe man and an indomitable fighter. Sheridan was one of his especial favorites. He considered this dashing soldier almost invincible.

ON THE BEACH.

Wadin' in the water where
 The waves come rollin' in,
Splashin' in a feller's face
 An' breakin' on his chin—
The thing 'at I wuz thinkin' of—
 Delightful, goodness knows!—
Wuz mud an' sand 'at's oozin' up
 Between a feller's toes.

Makes a feller young ag'in—
 Sometimes I wisht I wuz—
Thinkin' it wuz big to smoke
 An' bigger still to cuss;
Wadin' in the water where
 The tide jest ebbs an' flows
An' mud an' sand keeps slippin' up
 Between a feller's toes.

Most delightful feelin' 'at
 A feller ever had;
Makes him kinder feel 'at life
 An' livin' ain't so bad,
An' ever'thing is blossomin'
 Jes' like a summer rose
When sand an' mud is slippin' up
 Between a feller's toes.

Wadin' in the water where
 The sea waves gurgle in;
Wisht 'at I could wade acrost
 To where the waves begin.
Mebbe on the other side
 A youthful fountain flows,
An' sand an' mud keeps oozin' up
 Between a feller's toes.

Mebbe men don't shrivel up
 An' age an' die so soon
An' fellers jes' keep wadin' through
 An everlastin' June,
Where ever'thing is blossomin'
 Jes' like a summer rose
An' mud an' sand keeps slippin' up
 Between a feller's toes!

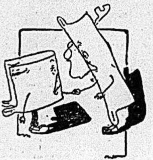
Hard Times.



The Collar—Hello, old man! You're looking done up.

The Cuff—Yes, I've had a good many reverses lately.

Ostentation.

"You say that man's relations won't speak to him?" said the surveyor who had stopped at the log cabin.

"Yes. An' it serves him right. Jes' as soon as he come into a little property he bought hisself a glass eye an' a set o' false teeth, an' his kin reckoned it was mighty ill mannered to come around puttin' on style an' wearin' all that jewelry."—Washington Star.

Two Valuations.

"Somebody asked D'Auber to name a figure for that painting of his. He placed it pretty high, I believe."

"Yes, and so did the art committee."

"What had they to do with the price?"

"Not the price, but the painting itself. They skied it."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Wonderful Performance.

"Fred made a remarkable record with his automobile last Sunday."

"How many miles did he go?"

"I don't know anything about the distance, but he ran the thing nearly all day without hurting anybody or breaking down once."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Failure.

"So you don't believe in the mind cure?"

"No."

"Did you ever try it?"

"Well, I once tried to convince my wife that she didn't really want a new gown."—Denver News.

The Intelligent Mule.

"The sense o' dumb creeturs is wonderful!" said the old man.

"Why, what's happened now?"

Favorable Indication.

"Miss Charmington says she is very fond of animals," remarked Bliggen's sister.

"Perhaps there's hopes for me then," said Bliggens. "She called me a brute the other day."—Syracuse Standard.

A Natural Collector.

"You are fond of pictures?" said the connoisseur.

"Very," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "Even when quite young I was fond of making collections of the portraits on paper currency."—Washington Star.

His Natural Preference.

Stationer—Yes, sir. Here is an elegant deck of cards for 20 cents.

Stranger—I should prefer paying a nickel more. Being a naval officer, I naturally prefer a quarter deck.—Baltimore American.

HALF PRICE WHITE WAISTS

Although many bargains have been offered from our Mantle Department, here is one in Waists showing the capabilities of this section are not yet exhausted.

In fact—if possible—it's a little better bargain than has been offered from here this season.

White promises to be stronger than ever for fall wear. Especially the fancy mercerized mattings.

Many of these styles are included in our offering for Saturday.

Were the assortments full we would not make such a sacrifice on goods which will be much sought for later on.

Many styles have only one representative left—others have more. All are marked for clearance Saturday at just half the original price. To get your size an early visit will be necessary.

—The balance of our White Shirt Waists, including fine Mattings, Lawns and embroidered Organdies, the very finest waists in our assortment were priced as high as $5.90, for.......Half Price

NEW STYLES IN RAINCOATS.

Style in Rain Coats was a thing practically unthought of a few years ago.

In fact many manufacturers have not yet awakened to the fact that people demand as good appearance in these as the finer coats.

Our new fall garments are to hand. A moment's inspection will show the up-to-dateness of the manufacturer from whom they come.

A slight change in style from last season. The collarless coats with extra large sleeves being mostly favored.

Mixed tweeds in Black and White and colors with red showing, are very stylish and popular.

These although light and porous are perfectly waterproof and in appearance are in no way different from a stylish Tweed Coat.

For fall use a little heavier weight cloth is used, making these garments some warmer.

We guarantee them satisfactory in every way. See our window.

—Fine Grey or Navy Rain proof coat with wide sleeves and pointed cuffs, a stylish reliable coat.......$6.00

—Fine Grey and Colored mixed Tweeds, collarless, with neat shoulder capes—large sleeves and cuffs—pockets with pointed lapels all sizes.......$7.50 to $11.50

ENGLISH FLANNELETTES—THE BEST.

The number of women who year after year purchase our English flannelette is probably best evidence of its ability to give lasting satisfaction.

Of course in this as all other makes there are good and bad qualities.

Personal selection of qualities and patterns, brings what our reputation demands—best at lowest prices.

We were never better able to supply your flannelette needs than at present.

Although prices have greatly advanced on all cotton goods, our assortment—bought early—will contain the usual good values at popular prices.

Every desirable point of superiority is embodied in these goods—NEAT PATTERNS—GOOD QUALITIES—GOOD WIDTH.

In every use to which flannelettes can be adapted these will give better satisfaction than any of the other makes.

The assortment is at its best now.

Repeats will demand much higher prices. Every advantage is to the early buyer.

LADIES' $1.50 SAILORS 10c.

What's the matter? No doubt this question will come to you at once.

Stock taking revealed about 150 of these straw sailors which should have been sold before.

The season has nearly passed. We made a quick decision, as we do on all goods remaining beyond their time.

The result you will see in our present offering for Saturday.

New goods are arriving—we have made the price so small that not one will be left in the evening.

These sailors are not damaged in any way—just late.

ABOUT NEW BLACK SILKS.

Because a manufacturer turns out best goods one season is not proof that he will do so the next.

Many merchants do accept this as proof and buy year after year from the same firm without inspection elsewhere.

It's our continual searching of the world's markets that preserves our reputation of "Best goods." Our buying facilities make lowest prices.

Our new Black Silk assortment awaits your choosing. Our search enables us to guarantee them best obtainable values—could we say more.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—If you choose to doubt my figures, you can add it up and you will see it only totals up 49 days. I have allowed you every day you telephoned or wrote a letter or received a parcel. A.—I have it here and it adds up 75 days.

Q.—Your account to the Government only makes it 49 days. A.—It is the same thing as there and it is 75 days.

Q.—Your account began in February and ran on until the 10th of June? A.—No, I commenced on January 10.

Q.—There is nothing in your account? A.—What I mean — well, March, 16.

Q.—Is your first item in February? A.—February.

Q.—After the first item you jump to March? A.—February 4.

Q.—February 4—5 and then you jump to March 16? A.—Yes.

Q.—So that practically you did not begin work till March 16? A.—But I had all these enumerators to appoint, getting ready between that date and March 16. I had to communicate with the 33 enumerators, pick out my men, get suitable men and I done that principally by meeting them in Belleville and writing to them, and I did not charge for anything of that. It was when I actually began to use the days that I put in the days.

By Mr. Barker.

Q.—Mr. Hurley, I see between February and June you received for salary $416 as Fishery Inspector at the same time as covered by the census accounts? A.—Well, I have received from the first of February, yes.

Q.—$416 from another Department of the Government while you are making these charges, and I see also you had travelling expenses in that time. A.—Yes.

Q.—Expenses $24.75, making a total of $441.40 you received from the Fisheries Department while you are making these charges as Census Commissioner? A.—The most of this was before I received anything from them.

Q.—It is from February to June, the very period these accounts cover? A.—But we did not expect the census to last half that time and this is after. I think I have value for both.

By Mr. McKinnon.

Q.—Mr. Hurley, what is your occupation? A.—I have been a farmer.

Q.—Where do you live? A.—I live in Belleville now, but I lived in Thurlow, four miles out, when I was acting as Census Commissioner.

Q.—Who is your member? A.—Mr. Northrup.

Q.—He is member for your county? A.—Yes.

Q.—When were you appointed Commissioner? A.—It was after the holidays. I think the first instructions I got after my appointment were on the 10th of January.

Q.—Have you got your instructions there? A.—I do not think I have the instructions.

Q.—Have you got any instructions about how to make your bill up? A.—The bill for the census?

Q.—Yes. A.—Yes.

Q.—Let me see it. A.—That was for the enumerators' bill I sent to the Department and asked instructions how to make that up.

Q.—You sent a bill in and changed it afterwards? A.—I did not send it in.

Q.—You gave the committee to understand so. You made it up at $105.37? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you get any official instructions about adding rent for hall or stationery? A.—Yes, I got this, you know, when we were about making up bills for the enumerators and myself.

Q.—Was that in the instructions at first? A.—No.

Q.—It was not in the instructions at first? A.—No, although we thought we were going to get $4 a day.

Q.—Then you included these other items in the charges? A.—That was suggested to me to do it.

Q.—But it was in your formal instructions? A.—No.

Q.—Have you got a copy of them there? A.—It shows there we were to earn $4 a day.

Q.—Did you get the instructions that "the remuneration of commissioners and enumerators is not to exceed $3 a day?" This is what you got first? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where are the instructions you got in March, 1901? A.—In March?

Q.—Yes. A.—I do not know of getting any but what I handed you there.

To be continued.

Wind Light and Fluky, and Race Was Not Finished in Time Limit.

New York, August 20, 10.30 a.m.—Great excitement prevails among all classes of people in this city in regard to the great yacht race.

At 10:35 both the racers left their moorings for the starting point, under full sail. The wind is very light and the sea rough. Unless the wind freshens considerably it is not believed to-day's race will be sailed inside the time limit of 5 1-2 hours.

Shamrock's Handy Start.

New York, August 20, 11.05 a.m.—The starting signal was fired at 11 o'clock, and five seconds later the Shamrock crossed the line. The Reliance crossed the line at 11.01.26. It looks like a drifting match.

Shamrock in the Lead.

New York, 11.30 a.m.—The Shamrock is now to windward of the Reliance, and is leading the defender by an eighth of a mile.

Lipton's Boat Gaining.

New York, 11.45 a.m.—The Shamrock is outfooting the Reliance, and is now nearly a quarter of a mile in the lead.

Reliance Gaining.

New York, 12 noon.—The wind has changed, and the boats are now on even terms. A heavy shower is now passing over, obscuring the yachts.

Reliance Leads.

New York, 12.20 p.m.—The Reliance is now in the windward position and leads Shamrock by a few yards. The shower has passed over.

New York, 12.40. — Reliance has gained somewhat on Shamrock, and is now about 200 yards ahead. Shamrock appears to be sailing faster, but is not pointing so high as the Reliance. Wind is now about six knots, and the weather is cloudy and overcast. The boats have now covered about 11 miles of the course, and it does not appear that the race will be sailed in the time limit.

Reliance a Mile Ahead.

New York, 1.35 p.m.— Reliance is now leading by about a mile, with the turning point still two miles away.

New York, 2.20 p.m.—The Reliance is still ahead, but it is acknowledged that, unless the wind freshens considerably, and in a very short time, there is no chance for the yachts to finish by 4:30 p.m.

New York, 2.50 p.m.—The Reliance is still well to windward and the Shamrock seems to be in the doldrums. It is now practically certain the race cannot be finished in time.

New York, 3.05 p.m.—The Reliance is two miles ahead. There is almost a calm.

New York, 3.15 p.m.—With the turning point still a mile and a half away there is no change in the position. Both boats are almost becalmed.

New York, 3.45 p.m.—Reliance turned the outer mark at 3.40.

New York, 4.10 p.m.—The race has been officially declared off.

YESTERDAY'S SAILING RACES.

GOOD CONTESTS WERE WITNESSED BY MANY INTERESTED SPECTATORS.

A large number of interested spectators were at the park yesterday afternoon to witness the sailing races which took place off the harbor and bay. The breeze was exceptionally light, causing the various craft to move rather slowly. Notwithstanding this disadvantage the three events were carried out, it being well towards evening when they were completed.

Yacht Race.

There were but two entries for this event. It was anticipated that another yacht was going to compete, but she did not put in an appearance. It was left for the Yoda and Spray to go over the course. This race proved to be an easy victory for Yoda, which at the start took a decided lead and when the course had been once traversed was some seven minutes ahead. On the second round she led her competitor nearly 15 minutes, and it was thought by many that this would complete the race, but the yachts went around three times. The Yoda won by a large margin.

Skiff Race.

Three skiffs started in this event, namely, the Viva, Oriole and Harold. The breeze was sufficient to make the event very exciting, but nevertheless it was a good contest. The Viva, as was anticipated by many, proved to be a winner. After the course had been once sailed over she had quite a lead over the other two skiffs, and finished the race winner by a good margin. The Viva is rather a speedy craft and was well handled. The Oriole finished second.

Punt Race.

As usual, the punt race was well contested, five boats starting in the contest, namely, King of the Waters, Blue Bird, Strathcona, Imp, and the Shamrock. At the starting point the King of the Waters forged ahead and maintained a lead to the finish. The Blue Bird came in second and the remainder in the order named at the start. The winner is certainly true to the name it bears, having already this season won nearly every event in which it has competed.

The races were not over until after six o'clock and a large number remained at the park to witness the finish.

BELLEVILLE DELEGATES AT MONTREAL CONGRESS

SPEECHES BY MAYOR GRAHAM AND MR. J. W. JOHNSON.

At yesterday's session of the Imperial Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Montreal a heated discussion ensued on the question of a co-operative preferential trade policy within the Empire. Speeches were made by Mayor Graham and ex-Mayor Johnson, of this city.

Mayor Graham's remarks are thus reported by The Toronto Globe: Mr. R. J. Graham, of the Belleville, Ont., Board of Trade, suggested that the difficulties be met by pooling all customs receipts, by maintaining the army and navy out of the general funds of the Empire, by granting each colony an annual subsidy from customs receipts sufficient for needs and the proper development of their resources, by permitting each colony to be governed as at present and by colonial representation in the British Parliament in matters relating to colonial interests.

Ex-Mayor Johnson thought that the onus of the whole question, so far as the colonies were concerned was one of duty.

Mr. Kirkwood Sends His Valedictory.

DENIES THE IMPUTATION OF BAD FAITH AND CLAIMS CREDIT FOR INDUCING FRENCH CAPITALISTS TO COME TO BELLEVILLE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir—Having closed my connections with the Rolling Mills by disposing of them to parties who, I believe, have ample capital to operate them to their fullest capacity, I desire, through the medium of your valuable paper, to say a few words to the members of your Council and the citizens of Belleville.

I understand a good many hard things have been said about my partner, Mr. McKinnon, and myself by the members of the City Council, as well as by the local press.

We have, I believe, been accused of bad faith in all our dealings with the Council, and having on all occasions made representations and promises that we had no intentions of carrying out.

Now I assure you, sir, and the citizens of Belleville, including the members of the Council, that we never made any representations or promises that we did not at the time intend to carry out.

The principal representations or promises that we made were that we would have the mills in running order by the 1st of April last, and that it was the intention of Mr. McKinnon and myself to go to Belleville to live and operate the mills.

When both these representations were made we intended to do exactly as we said we would.

We thought we had our financial arrangements made to put the mills in proper running order and to run them successfully, but circumstances over which we had no control prevented our getting the necessary capital, as we had expected, and, in fact had arranged for.

We left no stone unturned an spent a good deal of money in our endeavor to either sell or get capital to join us to operate them, with the result that they have been disposed of to capitalists, who, I believe, are losing no time in getting to work.

These capitalists I myself was the means of bringing to Belleville, as I went to Paris, France, and laid the scheme before them.

I have but one word further to say, and that is, that the citizens of Belleville have to thank Col. Lazier for the successful completion of the negotiations between Mr. Carbonneau and ourselves. It was he who brought us, when we were far apart in our figures, to anything like a basis of sale, after the manner in which Mr. Carbonneau was turned down by the City Council, and it looked as though he intended shaking the dust of Belleville off his feet. It was only through Col. Lazier's persistence and kind offices that the deal was eventually consummated.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space,

Yours truly,
T. M. KIRKWOOD.

165 Lowther Avenue, Toronto, August 19th, 1903.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely —a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

Bad luck gets the blame for a lot of poor judgment.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager,
and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

THE RIDICULOUS WOMAN.

How She Is Viewed by a Guest at a Summer Hotel.

"Of all the funny guests in a summer hotel none is more ridiculous than the woman who has left all her best clothes at home," remarked the thoughtful girl to her best friend. "Why she should make it a point to leave behind her all her swell gowns and pack only her ordinary ones is never quite clear. She never can explain it satisfactorily. In fact, she says, 'I don't know what I was thinking of not to bring the best part of my wardrobe.' The rest of the guests at the table wink slyly at one another and encourage the poor woman to talk about the finery she has left behind her. 'Yes, indeed,' she says; 'I had the sweetest little shirt waist for morning wear that I meant to put in. My dressmaker made it just before I came away, and it's so provoking of me to forget it.'

"In the evening she appears in a pretty dimity gown and at once says apologetically: 'Dear me, I simply had to put on this rag of a gown because I neglected to pack my silk mull. It's a beauty, too, hand embroidered and very becoming, they tell me.'

"The number of things that this woman has left at home is wonderful. If she had brought them all six trunks would have been filled to the brim. There are shirt waist suits, myriads of elegant hose, walking suits, bathing suits, rain coats, muslins, organdies, brilliantines, white flannel suits, automobile gowns, chiffon hats, alpine hats and flower hats. Then there are feather boas, all kinds of gloves, slippers and enough jewelry to start a jewelry shop. To hear her talk one would imagine that she was a multimillionaire.

"She always makes these remarks about her left behind toilet in a lofty way, as if it were the height of bad taste for any one to have nice gowns at this particular hotel. She says: 'I wish I had brought my nice things, but there is hardly the opportunity to wear such things here. I like to see a woman dressed appropriately, don't you know.'

"Yes, my dear, I am talking from experience, for one of these creatures is staying at this very hotel, and half the time she amuses me and half the time she irritates me. I wish you'd brought down your swell gowns just to show her a thing or two."—New York Times.

Wisely Cautious.

"Johnny," said the young man to the small boy, "has your sister read the novel, 'Sweet Pauline?'"

"Ain't seen it in the house," answered the boy.

"Good," muttered the young man, with a sigh of relief. "I'd hate to use the love speeches in that and have them recognized."—Chicago Post.

Not Aspiring.

Haskins—I wonder your friend Sillers never went to the legislature. I consider him eminently qualified for public service.

Hardly Likely.

Mr. Monkey (as little Willie Monkey's bedtime approached)—Well, I wish I was a porcupine.

Mrs. Gadby—Why, it's been only a week since the wedding, and they're acting just like old married people.

Mrs. Gibly—Yes; they quarreled so much before their marriage that it wasn't any change to them at all.—Baltimore American.

Consolatory, but Not Helpful.

Miss Barnard—He must have seen you playing baseball.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Why Kipling Wouldn't Lecture.

Major Pond, the lecture manager, was long anxious to secure Rudyard Kipling as a platform star, and Kipling took the assaults of the persistent manager in good part. Here is his reply to a proposition:

Brattleboro, Vt., Sept. 30, 1895.

Dear Mr. Pond—I am much obliged to you for your letter, but I can't say that I can see my way to the entertainment you propose. There is such a thing as paying 125 cents for a dollar, and though I suppose there is money in the lecturing business it seems to me that the bother, the fuss, the being at everybody's beck and call, the night journeys and so on make it very dear. I've seen a few men who've lived through the fight, but they did not look happy. I might do it as soon as I had two mortgages on my house, a lien on the horses and a bill of sale on the furniture and writer's cramp in both hands, but at present I'm busy and contented to go on with the regular writing business. You forget that I have already wandered over most of the states, and there isn't enough money in sight to hire me to face again some of the hotels and some of the railway systems I have met with. America is a great country, but she is not made for lecturing in. With renewed thanks for your very kind letter, believe me, yours sincerely,

RUDYARD KIPLING.

The Face of Verlaine.

An anonymous writer in To-Day tells an interesting anecdote of a visit paid by Gladstone to a little bookshop near the Odeon in Paris. As he entered Gladstone saw a strange looking man in conversation with the bookseller and carrying an old copy of Villon's poems. "His dress was ragged and dirty, his face was matted with hair and he had the eyes of an archangel, with the mouth and jaw of a baboon. Nevertheless the respectful attitude of the bookseller showed that the man was a personality. Gladstone entered into conversation with him about Villon and for an hour they talked about early French poetry. Then the stranger shuffled out of the shop. 'Who is that gentleman?' asked Gladstone. 'He has an extraordinary knowledge of French poetry.' 'Monsieur, he himself is our greatest poet. C'est Paul Verlaine!'"

Setting a Fashion.

A New York man tells a quaint story about a new maidservant he once employed.

"This maid," he said, "had just come over from the old country and she was very green. Everything she did proclaimed her greenness. One of her habits was always to come downstairs backward.

"I assure you it was a funny sight to see her descending a staircase slowly in that way. Her hand grasped the balustrade for safety and every little while she looked round to see how much farther she had to go.

"'Why do you come downstairs backward, Kathleen?' some one asked her.

"'Sure, sir,' she answered, 'that's the way we always came downstairs in the ship comin' over. Isn't it the fashion in America?'"

Coral That Shocks.

On the coast of the West Indian islands a curious kind of coral is found, called "millepoca." This has a most extraordinary property which makes the people who know it very shy of handling it. The moment you pick up a piece a sort of electric thrill runs through you and an agonizing pain shoots through your jaws. You feel as if every tooth and every nerve and muscle connected with them was burning. The acute pain lasts generally for about half an hour and slowly passes off; but the effects do not disappear entirely for hours. The reason of this curious shock or poisoning is a mystery.

Sir Loin of Beef.

Though the truth of the story that King James I. of England once knighted a loin of beef is disputed, the house in which the ceremony is said to have occurred is pointed out, as well as the table on which the sirloin lay. The scene of the historic jest lies between Higham's park and Chingford, near London. It is a curious house with quaint, low pitched ceilings and a fine garden with fruit trees of great size. It was on his return from one of his hunting expeditions in Epping forest that the British Solomon is said to have given practical proof of his favor for the roast beef of old England.

A Tinker's Dam.

In days of old the tinker bold, when called to mend a pot, would build a dam of moistened meal around the leakage spot. The melted solder thus was made within due bounds to stay, but when the solder solid was the dam was thrown away. And so the meal, then useless as a Lake Cochituate clam, became a symbol; hence we say "Not worth a tinker's dam."

Danger of Reversal.

"Don't you think you're working too hard?"

"Well, there's a lot of unfinished work before me and I've got to cover the ground in a very short time."

"Better slow down a bit or the ground will cover you in a very short time."

The Pale Horse.

"What makes 'em talk 'bout Death always ridin' a pale hoss?" some one asked of Brother Dickey.

"Well," was the reply, "any hoss in de country but a mule would turn pale ter see Death comin'!"

The Furthest Limit.

"Henpeck doesn't dare to say his soul's his own."

"It's worse than that. His wife even tips the waiter when they go out to lunch together."

At Yakutsk, in eastern Siberia, the record annual range of temperature is reached. It varies from 85 above to 75 below zero.

A Household Jewel.

A family in the southern part of the city employed what they believed to be a "household jewel." For a few days she proved to be all that they had anticipated, and everything went smoothly. One day, however, the husband came down to breakfast and made the announcement that they must get rid of the new girl.

"Why, John, you must be crazy!" said his wife with amazement. "She's the best girl we ever had, so respectful and a fine cook."

"That makes no difference. She isn't honest."

"Oh, well, we'll never miss a loaf of bread once in awhile. Her folks may need it more than we do."

"That isn't it. Early this morning I saw her creep into our room, go to my pocket, take my pocketbook and empty it."

"Oh, well, dear, perhaps it's force of habit; you know she's been married."

The First Automobile.

In these days of fast motoring and high railway speeds it is interesting to recall that it was in July, 1829, some little time before George Stephenson had solved the problem of steam transport, that Sir Goldsworthy Gurney made his famous journey in a "steam carriage" from London to Bath and back. Gurney was a surgeon in Marylebone, greatly given to the working out of inventions in his spare time, and it took him some years to complete his first "motor" in his back yard in Albany street in London. He accomplished the journey to and from Bath at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, and there was only one disturbing incident, when a crowd assembled at Melksham set upon the machine and, having burned their fingers, threw stones and seriously wounded the stoker. This Gurney journey stands as the first example of locomotion by steam in England.

They Paid the Price.

The corporation of the city of Glasgow wanted to purchase the Whistler portrait of Carlyle and in due course waited on the master of the gentle art of making enemies about the price (1,000 guineas). They admitted it was a magnificent picture, but "Do you not think, Mr. Whistler, the sum a wee, wee bit excessive?"

"Didn't you know the price before you came to me?" asked the master with suspicious blandness.

"Oh, aye, we knew that!" replied the corporation.

"Very well, then," said Mr. Whistler in his suavest tones, "let's talk of something else." And as there was nothing else of interest to detain the "corporation" they paid the price and—trust a Glaswegian—made an excellent bargain.

Corrosive Ink.

With an impatient grunt the bookkeeper threw away his pen and put a new one in the holder. "It's terrible," he said, "how ink corrodes pens. In six or seven hours a new pen will begin to scratch. It keeps me busy changing the blamed things, let alone the expense. There's money in it for the man who will invent a noncorrosive ink." An old man, a bill collector, remarked to him: "My young friend, I'll tell you a sure way to stop your ink from corroding your pen. Take a few rusty iron nails and put them in your ink well. The ink's corrosive acid will play itself out on the nails, and in consequence your pen will escape. A pen that only lasts you a day now should, with my method, last at least a week."

Hospitality Pays.

Cities and communities frequently expend large sums of money in entertaining conventions, conferences and other public gatherings, both because of a spirit of hospitality prevailing or through a sinister desire to "advertise the city." After the affair is over and the visitors have gone their several ways the people ask one of the other, "Does it pay to spend money thus?" There never was a case of public hospitality that didn't pay, if not in dollars and cents, in the extension and broadening of that finest of all sentiments the brotherhood of man.

His Auspicious Beginning.

"To gratify the curiosity of the public, Mr. Dollaraline," purred the young person with the notebook, "will you please tell me if the first contribution you ever sent to a magazine was accepted?"

The literary celebrity smiled genially.

"I am happy to say it was," he answered.

"What was it?"

"Four dollars for a year's subscription."

The Reason.

Mrs. Newed (as husband arrives home from work)—Oh, George, our new cook is a perfect gem! Why, she already has the kitchen looking like a parlor.

Mr. Newed—Humph! Expecting company tonight, is she?

Perfectly Reckless.

Druggist—I'm going to discharge that new clerk. He's too careless.

Friend—What has he done?

Druggist—This morning he sold a wild eyed woman a dose of poison and trusted her for the money.

The Reason.

Mrs. Flint (severely)—Why do you wander from place to place?

Soiled Spooner (calmly)—B'cuz de places won't wander to me, mum.—Puck.

Flinty.

"Yes, she has a heart of flint."

"Then don't forget that a persistent man can learn to strike fire from flint."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BATTLE FOR AMERICA'S CUP

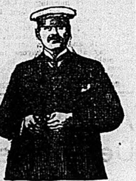
First Race, Sailed Thursday, Was Officially Declared Off.

Reliance and Shamrock III. Failed to Finish Inside Time Limit in Light Airs and Rough Sea—Defender Led in the Windward Race—Wind Was Fluky and Changed Frequently—How Wrige Outgeneralled Barr.

New York, Aug. 21.—One of the biggest crowds of sightseers and yachtsmen that ever sailed down Sandy Hook to witness an attempt of the British cup hunter to wrest from America the yachting supremacy of the world returned to New York last night disappointed because the sea had refused a field of combat to the racers, some jubilant in the conviction that Sir Thomas Lipton's latest challenger, like the two Shamrocks which had preceded her, was doomed to return to England empty-handed, while others were of the other opinion.

Race Not Conclusive.

The race yesterday was not absolutely conclusive, but in a 15-mile beat to windward the cup defender Reliance showed her heels to Shamrock III, in commanding style, and in weather conditions which were supposed to be to the particular liking of the challenger. Fife's latest creation has been heralded as a veritable wizard in light breezes, in windward work in good sea, while the Reliance, in her trials, had showed to best advantage in a whole-sail wind. Yet yesterday, with a breeze varying from 1 to 12 knots, and against a long ground swell, the defender outfooted and outpointed the Fife boat. It is estimated that the Shamrock was more than a mile astern, or beaten about 16 minutes in the existing strength of the wind, when the Reliance rounded the outer mark. Soon after the race was called off, because it was seen that it could not be finished within the time limit.



FIFE, DESIGNER OF SHAMROCK

THE RACE BY POINTS.

The Reliance reached the starting line at 10 o'clock a.m., and dropped her tow line. Shamrock III. arrived ten minutes later. No sooner had she filled away than the Reliance bore down upon her from a windward position and hauled on the wind alongside of her in a position to blanket the challenger, but Captain Wringe promptly bore away, refusing the brush. The regatta's tug established the outer mark at 10.30 a.m., and signalled that the race would be 15 miles to windward and return, the first leg south, southwest from Sandy Hook lightship. The wind was then blowing about five knots and a moderate sea was running, with long ground swells.

Shamrock III. Across Line First.

When the committee tug fired the preparatory signal at 10.25 the two racers were crossing the line for a light brush out to the windward of it, but, as the warning signal was fired, at 10.55, they whirled around and ran back toward the line. Shamrock III. whirled on her heel just to leeward of the line and crossed it. The Reliance promptly followed. The Shamrock III. led the American boat across by about 30 yards, but the Reliance held the windward position. The official starting time was:

Shamrock III. 11.01.14
Reliance 11.01.47

Both boats sailed seaward for an hour and twenty minutes. The wind dropped to about four knots soon after the start.

Defender Overhauls Challenger.

Within 25 minutes after starting, the Reliance had overhauled Shamrock III., was abeam of her and 200 yards to windward. The Reliance had not only footed faster, but pointed higher than the challenger.

Half an hour after the start, when the boats were about four miles from the starting line a shower swept down and brought a shaft of wind to the westward, which enabled the racers to lay a course direct to the mark. This robbed the Reliance of most of the advantage of her windward position and put the boats on almost even terms. They had this relative position until they had sailed eight miles, when the wind backed to south by west, again making it a dead beat to the mark and restoring to the Reliance her former advantage to windward. When they made their tack at 12.30 Shamrock III. was to leeward.

Shamrock III. Footed Fast.

The shower has passed. Then for the first time the challenger gave the Americans a bad scare. Without apparent reason she began to foot faster than the Reliance, passed to leeward of her and drew away ahead. It looked for a moment as though she was going to show her heels to Reliance, but when she came about and the two boats met, the admirers of the Reliance discovered after a while that though the challenger had been outfooting her, the American craft had been outpointing the challenger and had even increased her lead. The boats were nine miles from the starting line and the Reliance had a lead of a quarter of a mile. In a dropping wind the British boat twice repeated her performance of slipping past the Reliance to leeward, but she was losing ground in the windward thresh by reason of the Reliance sailing closer to the wind. When four miles from the turning mark, at 1.25 p. m., they started on a long leg to sea.

The Fickle Airs.

As they came about it was apparent that the Reliance was a mile ahead. The wind had dropped to a little better than a flat calm, and the racers were moving very slowly. In vain effort to woo the fickle airs, the yachts changed their head sails, but the race had degenerated into a drifting match. Fluky streaks of gentle air drifted across the course. One of these flukes, when the Reliance was more than two miles from the mark, sent her off at a good rate, while the Shamrock III. was headed off by an unfavorable slant until she pointed two points further off the actual course than did the Reliance. Three and a half hours after the race started it was evident that the race could not be finished within the time limit. The Reliance had steadily gained, and the Reliance was a good two miles dead ahead of the Shamrock, when observers noticed that the Shamrock caught a little breeze from the west, and was cutting down the lead. The Reliance promptly went about when a mile away from the turn, and, catching the westerly wind, scurried away from the mark at almost a racing pace.

Swept Around the Mark.

The wind continued to freshen until she swept around the mark, at 3.37.20, heeling to a smart northwest breeze and giving the first real exhibition of her speed. The defender hauled on the wind for a close reach back to the finish line, saluted by the whistles of the big fleet. Shamrock III. was coming on at a fast clip to meet the returning defender, but she had been so far astern that it was eight minutes after the Reliance turned the mark before the racers met going in opposite directions, indicating that the Reliance's actual lead was 16 minutes. Just at that moment the regatta committee's tug displayed the signal "the race is off," and the Shamrock III. came about before turning the mark and followed the Reliance a short distance. Both boats were taken in tow, and the fleet, hurrying homeward, quickly dropped them. The admirers of the Reliance are jubilant because the American yacht demonstrated that in extermely light airs and unusually rough water she could show her heels to the British challenger, and those were the conditions supposed to be the severest test of the Herreshoff boat.

Sir Thomas Wants a Breeze.

Sandy Hook, N.J., Aug. 21.—Sir Thomas Lipton said last night:

"No, I am not in the least disappointed with my boat or its efforts to-day. The wind was so variable neither boat had a good chance, and particularly mine with the smaller sail area. Wait until we get a good breeze."

All that Mr. Iselin would say is: "We are perfectly satisfied, we always have been."

LORD SALISBURY IS DYING.

Former Premier of Great Britain Once Thought to Be Dead—Royalty Informed of His Critical Condition.

London, Aug. 21.—A bulletin issued at 10 o'clock last night says Lord Salisbury's condition was critical, and there was little hope of his recovery.

The end may be expected at any moment. Once in the course of the evening it was thought that His Lordship had breathed his last, but he made a surprising rally, and at midnight it was announced that his condition had not changed since 10 o'clock.

Telegrams have been despatched to the King, the Queen, and the Prince of Wales, acquainting them with the critical condition of the former Premier.

It is not proposed to issue any further bulletins until this morning.

CANADIANS RUN DOWN.

American Steamer Drowns One and Injures Three Yacht People.

Buffalo, Aug. 21.—The steamer Darius Cole of the Crystal Beach line ran down a yacht near the Crystal Beach dock last night. Leonard Schooley of Ridgeway, Ont., one of the crew of the yacht, was drowned. Another young man and two girls were rescued by the crew of the Darius Cole. Their names are William Hunt, Tilly Reidman and Emma Ellis. Both of the girls were badly injured and were brought to an hospital.

Wife Saw Husband Drown.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 21.—John McInnis, aged 30, was blown from the deck of a sloop in Summerside Harbor yesterday afternoon and drowned before assistance reached him. His wife was a witness of the sad affair.

Suicide by Drowning.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 21.—Mrs. Philip Popham, aged 42, committed suicide by drowning in the harbor yesterday afternoon. Her mind was deranged. She leaves a husband and two children.

Booth's Millmen Strike.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—J. R. Booth's entire mill staff went out on strike at 1 o'clock yesterday. This will affect about eight hundred men. The demand of the men is for increased pay, but the details are not known yet. The men went quietly to their homes at noon and did not return to work.

Invented First Oil Stove.

New York, Aug. 21.—Charles Reichmann, known as the inventor of the first oil cooking stove, is dead, at his home in Brooklyn, aged 86 years. He was a native of Russia.

An Ex-Employe Peached.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—T. J. Brule, restaurant-keeper of the House of Commons and Senate, was fined in the Police Court yesterday $50 and costs for selling liquor without a license, information being laid by a discharged employe. Brule produced his contract with the Senate, which showed that he was compelled to keep liquor for sale. The police magistrate suspended collection of the fine until such time as Brule has time to appeal to a higher court.

War Eagle Mine on Fire.

Rossland, B. C., Aug. 21.—War Eagle mine is on fire at the 1,000-foot level station. The timbers were ignited presumably by a candle left burning. It is expected to extinguish the fire with steam vapor, now being introduced in large quantities. A portion of the upper level is not interfered with, and the company will not lose heavily. The incident is of special interest, however, being practically unprecedented in the history of Rossland.

MUTUAL BENEFIT POLICY

Strathcona Makes Congressmen Unite For the Empire.

Thrilling Scene in the Fifth Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire When Protectionist Resolution Was Presented and Adopted—Ovation to the Peacemaker and "God Save the King" Over All.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—The great fiscal debate in the Chamber of Commerce Congress closed yesterday with the passing of a resolution which still further compromised the difference between Mr. W. F. Cockshutt's motion and Sir William Holland's amendment by uniting some features of both. The change consisted in inserting Sir William Holland's two words, "and industrial" in the clause reading "undue consideration being given to the fiscal and industrial needs of the Empire." The portion of the Manchester amendment which was omitted in deference to the sentiments of the Canadians was the view of avoiding injury to any words which Sir William proposed should be inserted after "component parts of the Empire." The compromise resolution was ultimately submitted by Lord Strathcona, whose appearance, hailed as that of a mediator, was received with great cheering. The resolution as finally adopted then calls for a policy of mutual benefit in the following words:

The Compromise Resolution.

"It is resolved that in the opinion of this Congress the bonds of the British Empire would be materially strengthened and the union of the various parts of His Majesty's dominions greatly consolidated by the adoption of a commercial policy based upon the principle of mutual benefit, whereby each component part of the Empire would receive a substantial advantage in trade as the result of its national relationship, due consideration being given to the fiscal and industrial needs of the component parts of the Empire; that this Congress urges upon His Majesty's Government the appointment by them of a special commission composed of representatives of Great Britain and her colonies and India to consider the possibility of thus increasing and strengthening the trade relations between the different parts of the Empire, and the trading facilities within the Empire and with foreign countries."

A Thrilling Scene.

This resolution was accepted by Mr. Cockshutt and Sir William Holland and passed at 12.50 unanimously. The consummation of the plan to promote tariff revision provoked a thrilling scene. Every delegate was on his feet, shouting and waving papers, or hats. Some of them climbed to the chairs and desks in their demonstrative efforts to manifest their satisfaction. Even Lord Brassey left his place in the chair to walk over and congratulate Lord Strathcona.

The lofty tone of the debate was even more pronounced than Wednesday. There were forty-four speakers on the joint resolution, but only twenty of them succeeded in securing place. They were: George E. Davis, Bristol; James Patterson, Glasgow; James Peat, Leeds; Colonel Denison, Toronto; D. Marsland, Oldham; W. Sanford Evans, Winnipeg; J. Stephen Jeans, London; Alexander H. MacNeill, Rossland B. C.; Edward Snell, Durban, South Africa; J. C. Poynton, Pretoria; T. V. S. Angier, London; Hon. M. A. Robert, Cawnpore; Charles Lancaster, Liverpool; S. W. Royce, Manchester; W. D. Peacock, Tasmania, Australia; Hon. T. A. Brassey of London, the chairman's son; W. F. Cockshutt, Brantford, E. J. Gill, N. L. Cohen, London; Sir William Holland, Manchester. Lord Strathcona was not scheduled for a speech and was only called in the eleventh hour to secure harmony. Of these speeches Cockshutt, MacNeill, Evans and Brassey carried off the honors for the strength of their arguments and the riots they provoked from the demonstrative delegates. Marsland alone of this number formally opposed the resolution in its original form.

Tribute to the Peacemaker.

At the conclusion of the debate, amid intense excitement, Lord Brassey said: "In the interests of the wise solution of the great question we have been debating, and for the credit of this Congress and for the true expression of our mutual sentiments and regard personally towards one another, it is extremely desirable that our proceedings should terminate with a resolution which should be passed nemine contradicent. You have heard Mr. Cockshutt and the representatives who, like himself, represent a large body of opinion, which, as you know is but imperfectly represented in this hall. Now, gentlemen, that is the situation, and I think we shall all agree to this, that if one man should come amongst us, who can by his wisdom and his influence bring us to a common conclusion, that he is a man to whom we shall all be greatly indebted. That man is present here—Lord Strathcona." (Applause.)

Lord Strathcona's Reply.

After the ovation Lord Strathcona answered: "Lord Brassey and gentlemen, delegates of this Congress, as you all know, I have taken no part in the discussion that have been had within the last four days, having confined myself to a few introductory remarks as honorary president of the Congress, in the forenoon of Monday last, when we first met here. And I certainly would not intervene at this time were it not that I knew I could count on your great indulgence and consideration, and that I knew that each and all, whether coming from the Mother Country or from the colonies over the seas, or from this colony and this nation of Canada. I knew that you had all the one object in view, that is of doing what in your opinion was for the best interest of the whole Empire. We do not look to one locality or another, but we must judge of what is required under the different circumstances of the different portions of the Empire for their welfare and then consider how this can be made to subserve all the interests of the Empire."

Lord Strathcona then paid a tribute to the honesty and zeal of adherents of both sides of the controversy, and after an eloquent tribute to the King as a peacemaker in the world's politics, said:

"We in Canada are apt to express ourselves somewhat forcibly, because we are very earnest, but we know our friends on the other side are also not less earnest, and we have, as I have said already, but one object in view. Were it not so I would have hesitated to be here addressing you on the present occasion. It is that of endeavoring to find out a modus vivendi, of having what each and all approve of, and not only consent to, but cordially and heartily approve of. I think I cannot do better than to just put before you the resolution which I have in my hand, and which I have no doubt, I cannot otherwise believe, will be accepted by all those who have spoken and those who have listened to the most eloquent addresses we have heard in this assemblage. And I venture to say that in no gathering of commercial men, in no gathering of politicians, if you will, in no assemblage of people coming together for one object, has there been more eloquence displayed than in this Congress. I will now with your permission, Mr. President and gentlemen, move the compromise resolution."

Will Adjourn Friday.

The Congress will adjourn Friday at noon. The completion of Canadian confederation by securing Newfoundland was the absorbing topic of the afternoon and provoked much enthusiasm. A resolution in this direction, introduced by Col. Ponton of the Belleville Board of Trade, was carried unanimously:

A resolution to improve the copyright law was unanimously carried.

The live stock interests of Canada also secured the passage of the resolution offered by the St. John Board of Trade relative to restrictions upon Canadian cattle in Britain.

A resolution favoring the adoption of the decimal system of currency throughout the Empire; another freeing commercial travelers from licenses; one that the colonies and dependencies could, if properly developed, provide the food of the Empire, and another to simplify naturalization were passed, and the Congress adjourned at 5 o'clock till this morning.

A Great Banquet.

Last night one of the most representative gatherings ever assembled around a Canadian banquet board was participated in by the delegates at the Windsor. Five hundred covers were laid. Lord Strathcona, Lord Brassey and many other leading men addressed the guests. A. J. Hodgson, president of the Board of Trade, presided. On his right was Lord Minto, Lord Brassey and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. On his left, Lord Strathcona, Mr. R. L. Borden and Sir William Holland. Lord Minto responded to the toast of the Governor-General, making a strictly Imperial defence speech. The toast, "Our Guests," was replied to by Lord Brassey; that of the "Empire" by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and others; the "Parliament of Canada," by Mr. R. L. Borden and others.

FLOATING IN TORONTO BAY.

Mystery Surrounds Death There of John Clarke of Erie, Pa.

Toronto, Aug. 21.—Floating in the bay at the foot of Frederick street, the body of John Clark of Erie, Pa., was found yesterday morning. A telegram found on the body addressed to him at Erie and advising him of the death of a brother residing in Toronto, explains to some extent his presence in this vicinity. The telegram was dated Aug. 15, and sent by Geo. Trempe, an employe of the Hough Lithographing Company. He lives on Eastern avenue, where also did the brother of the drowned man. Other articles were found on John Clark's body, including a letter from his son in Buffalo, who is president of the District Trades and Labor Council of that city, a gold watch and chain and $11.85. No marks were found on the body to show violence being used. A warrant for an inquest was withdrawn, as the coroner was of opinion that no foul play was responsible, and that deceased either came to his death accidentally or suicided.

Bad luck gets the blame for a lot of poor judgment.

BLAIR A POLITICAL ENIGMA

Liberals Bitterly Assail Man Who They Formerly Honored.

Some Good Speeches in the House on Grand Trunk Pacific on Thursday—Mr. E. B. Osler Proves a Very Large Subsidy—Member For West Toronto Hands Out Most Effective Criticism of Specific Clauses Yet Heard.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—The word has been passed among Liberal members to lose no opportunity to assail Hon. A. G. Blair. Nearly every speaker on the Government side of the House has paid his respects to the former Minister of Railways in decidedly uncomplimentary terms. Hance Logan of Cumberland carried on the work of belittling Mr. Blair yesterday. The bitterness of his references to the man he followed with unswerving fidelity for seven years was quite marked, and was, in fact, the weak feature of an otherwise able speech.

Mr. Blair an Enigma.

Strange to say, the man who is least concerned about the denunciation that is being visited on him is Mr. Blair himself. He has not been in the House since he made his speech on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme. He is spending some of the time with his family down at Murray Bay. Occasionally he makes a trip to Montreal. When he comes to Ottawa he rarely allows a day to pass without exercising himself on the golf links. Mr. Blair is an enigma to everyone. His plans appear to be known only to himself.

Some good speeches were made yesterday, but the House showed a sluggish interest in the debate. Robert McPherson, the young Liberal member from Burrard, B.C., argued the necessity of greater railway facilities for his province with marked zeal. Jabel Robinson, in a rugged, straightforward speech, advocated the principle of Government ownership and operation.

A Very Heavy Subsidy.

Perhaps the most effective criticism of specific clauses in the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract that has yet been heard came from E. B. Osler of Toronto.

The member for West Toronto showed clearly that there is a subsidy, and a very heavy one. By reason of the Government guarantee of bonds, the company can obtain money cheaper by 1½ per cent. than it could otherwise for the loan. But estimating the advantage in this respect at only one per cent., the company would make on its loan in fifty years the sum of $62,000,000.

Charles Heyd of Brant defended the scheme unreservedly. He was followed by T. W. Ganong of Charlottetown, who energetically criticized the deal, especially in its relation to the Maritime Provinces.

BATTLE FOR AMERICA'S CUP

First Race, Sailed Thursday, Was Officially Declared Off.

Reliance and Shamrock III. Failed to Finish Inside Time Limit in Light Airs and Rough Sea—Defender Led in the Windward Race—Wind Was Fluky and Changed Frequently—How Wringe Outgeneralled Barr.

New York, Aug. 21.—One of the biggest crowds of sightseers and yachtsmen that ever sailed down Sandy Hook to witness an attempt of the British cup hunter to wrest from America the yachting supremacy of the world returned to New York last night disappointed because the sea had refused a field of combat to the racers, some jubilant in the conviction that Sir Thomas Lipton's latest challenger, like the two Shamrocks which had preceded her, was doomed to return to England empty-handed, while others were of the other opinion.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—T. J. Brule, restaurant-keeper of the House of Commons and Senate, was fined in the Police Court yesterday $50 and costs for selling liquor without a license, information being laid by a discharged employe. Brule produced his contract with the Senate, which showed that he was compelled to keep liquor for sale. The police magistrate suspended collection of the fine until such time as Brule has time to appeal to a higher court.

War Eagle Mine on Fire.

Rossland, B. C., Aug. 21.—War Eagle mine is on fire at the 1,000-foot level station. The timbers were ignited presumably by a candle left burning. It is expected to extinguish the fire with steam vapor, now being introduced in large quantities. A portion of the upper level is not interfered with, and the company will not lose heavily. The incident is of special interest, however, being practically unprecedented in the history of Rossland.

MUTUAL BENEFIT POLICY

Strathcona Makes Congressmen Unite For the Empire.

Thrilling Scene in the Fifth Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire When Protectionist Resolution Was Presented and Adopted—Ovation to the Peacemaker and "God Save the King" Over All.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—The great fiscal debate in the Chamber of Commerce Congress closed yesterday with the passing of a resolution which still further compromised the difference between Mr. W. F. Cockshutt's motion and Sir William Holland's amendment by uniting some features of both. The change consisted in inserting Sir William Holland's two words, "and industrial" in the clause reading "undue consideration being given to the fiscal and industrial needs of the Empire." The portion of the Manchester amendment which was omitted in deference to the sentiments of the Canadians was the view of avoiding injury to any words which Sir William proposed should be inserted after "component parts of the Empire." The compromise resolution was ultimately submitted by Lord Strathcona, whose appearance, hailed as that of a mediator, was received with great cheering. The resolution as finally adopted then calls for a policy of mutual benefit in the following words:

The Compromise Resolution.

"It is resolved that in the opinion of this Congress the bonds of the British Empire would be materially strengthened and the union of the various parts of His Majesty's dominions greatly consolidated by the adoption of a commercial policy based upon the principle of mutual benefit, whereby each component part of the Empire would receive a substantial advantage in trade as the result of its national relationship, due consideration being given to the fiscal and industrial needs of the component parts of the Empire; that this Congress urges upon His Majesty's Government the appointment by them of a special commission composed of representatives of Great Britain and her colonies and India to consider the possibility of thus increasing and strengthening the trade relations between the different parts of the Empire, and the trading facilities within the Empire and with foreign countries."

A Thrilling Scene.

This resolution was accepted by Mr. Cockshutt and Sir William Holland and passed at 12.50 unanimously. The consummation of the plan to promote tariff revision provoked a thrilling scene. Every delegate was on his feet, shouting and waving papers, or hats. Some of them climbed to the chairs and desks in their demonstrative efforts to manifest their satisfaction. Even Lord Brassey left his place in the chair to walk over and congratulate Lord Strathcona.

The lofty tone of the debate was even more pronounced than Wednesday. There were forty-four speakers on the joint resolution, but only twenty of them succeeded in securing place. They were: George E. Davis, Bristol; James Patterson, Glasgow; James Peat, Leeds; Colonel Denison, Toronto; D. Marsland, Oldham; W. Sanford Evans, Winnipeg; J. Stephen Jeans, London; Alexander H. MacNeill, Rossland B. C.; Edward Snell, Durban, South Africa; J. C. Poynton, Pretoria; T. V. S. Angier, London; Hon. M. A. Robert, Cawnpore; Charles Lancaster, Liverpool; S. W. Royce, Manchester; W. D. Peacock, Tasmania, Australia; Hon. T. A. Brassey of London, the chairman's son; W. F. Cockshutt, Brantford, E. J. Gill, N. L. Cohen, London; Sir William Holland, Manchester. Lord Strathcona was not scheduled for a speech and was only called in the eleventh hour to secure harmony. Of these speeches Cockshutt, MacNeill, Evans and Brassey carried off the honors for the strength of their arguments and the riots they provoked from the demonstrative delegates. Marsland alone of this number formally opposed the resolution in its original form.

Tribute to the Peacemaker.

At the conclusion of the debate, amid intense excitement, Lord Brassey said: "In the interests of the wise solution of the great question we have been debating, and for the credit of this Congress and for the true expression of our mutual sentiments and regard personally towards one another, it is extremely desirable that our proceedings should terminate with a resolution which should be passed nemine contradicent. You have heard Mr. Cockshutt and the representatives who, like himself, represent a large body of opinion, which, as you know is but imperfectly represented in this hall. Now, gentlemen, that is the situation, and I think we shall all agree to this, that if one man should come amongst us, who can by his wisdom and his influence bring us to a common conclusion, that he is a man to whom we shall all be greatly indebted. That man is present here—Lord Strathcona." (Applause.)

Lord Strathcona's Reply.

After the ovation Lord Strathcona answered: "Lord Brassey and gentlemen, delegates of this Congress, as you all know, I have taken no part in the discussion that have been had within the last four days, having confined myself to a few introductory remarks as honorary president of the Congress, in the forenoon of Monday last, when we first met here. And I certainly would not intervene at this time were it not that I knew I could count on your great indulgence and consideration, and that I knew that each and all, whether coming from the Mother Country or from the colonies over the seas, or from this colony and this nation of Canada. I knew that you had all the one object in view, that is of doing what in your opinion was for the best interest of the whole Empire. We do not look to one locality or another, but we must judge of what is required under the different circumstances of the different portions of the Empire for their welfare and then consider how this can be made to subserve all the interests of the Empire."

Lord Strathcona then paid a tribute to the honesty and zeal of adherents of both sides of the controversy, and after an eloquent tribute to the King as a peacemaker in the world's politics, said:

"We in Canada are apt to express ourselves somewhat forcibly, because we are very earnest, but we know our friends on the other side are also not less earnest, and we have, as I have said already, but one object in view. Were it not so I would have hesitated to be here addressing you on the present occasion. It is that of endeavoring to find out a modus vivendi, of having what each and all approve of, and not only consent to, but cordially and heartily approve of. I think I cannot do better than to just put before you the resolution which I have in my hand, and which I have no doubt, I cannot otherwise believe, will be accepted by all those who have spoken and those who have listened to the most eloquent addresses we have heard in this assemblage. And I venture to say that in no gathering of commercial men, in no gathering of politicians, if you will, in no assemblage of people coming together for one object, has there been more eloquence displayed than in this Congress. I will now with your permission, Mr. President and gentlemen, move the compromise resolution."

Will Adjourn Friday.

The Congress will adjourn Friday at noon. The completion of Canadian confederation by securing Newfoundland was the absorbing topic of the afternoon and provoked much enthusiasm. A resolution in this direction, introduced by Col. Ponton of the Belleville Board of Trade, was carried unanimously:

A resolution to improve the copyright law was unanimously carried.

The live stock interests of Canada also secured the passage of the resolution offered by the St. John Board of Trade relative to restrictions upon Canadian cattle in Britain.

A resolution favoring the adoption of the decimal system of currency throughout the Empire; another freeing commercial travelers from licenses; one that the colonies and dependencies could, if properly developed, provide the food of the Empire, and another to simplify naturalization were passed, and the Congress adjourned at 5 o'clock till this morning.

A Great Banquet.

Last night one of the most representative gatherings ever assembled around a Canadian banquet board was participated in by the delegates at the Windsor. Five hundred covers were laid. Lord Strathcona, Lord Brassey and many other leading men addressed the guests. A. J. Hodgson, president of the Board of Trade, presided. On his right was Lord Minto, Lord Brassey and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. On his left, Lord Strathcona, Mr. R. L. Borden and Sir William Holland. Lord Minto responded to the toast of the Governor-General, making a strictly Imperial defence speech. The toast, "Our Guests," was replied to by Lord Brassey; that of the "Empire" by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and others; the "Parliament of Canada," by Mr. R. L. Borden and others.

FLOATING IN TORONTO BAY.

Mystery Surrounds Death There of John Clarke of Erie, Pa.

Toronto, Aug. 21.—Floating in the bay at the foot of Frederick street, the body of John Clark of Erie, Pa., was found yesterday morning. A telegram found on the body addressed to him at Erie and advising him of the death of a brother residing in Toronto, explains to some extent his presence in this vicinity. The telegram was dated Aug. 15, and sent by Geo. Trempe, an employe of the Hough Lithographing Company. He lives on Eastern avenue, where also did the brother of the drowned man. Other articles were found on John Clark's body, including a letter from his son in Buffalo, who is president of the District Trades and Labor Council of that city, a gold watch and chain and $11.85. No marks were found on the body to show violence being used. A warrant for an inquest was withdrawn, as the coroner was of opinion that no foul play was responsible, and that deceased either came to his death accidentally or suicided.

Bad luck gets the blame for a lot of poor judgment.

NESTLE'S FOOD

TALK IT OVER

Yes, talk over the question of the best food to give your baby with every one who can help you. Especially talk it over with your doctor. You may have been fortunate during the past Summer, but you know of very many mothers who have had serious trouble with their children because the right food could not be found for them. You remember the experiments they made, the constant change from milk to one food or another, and the struggle and danger which it all meant.

We will send you, free of charge, a trial package of Nestlé's Food sufficient for eight meals.

BLAIR A POLITICAL ENIGMA

Liberals Bitterly Assail Man Who They Formerly Honored.

Some Good Speeches in the House on Grand Trunk Pacific on Thursday—Mr. E. B. Osler Proves a Very Large Subsidy—Member For West Toronto Hands Out Most Effective Criticism of Specific Clauses Yet Heard.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—The word has been passed among Liberal members to lose no opportunity to assail Hon. A. G. Blair. Nearly every speaker on the Government side of the House has paid his respects to the former Minister of Railways in decidedly uncomplimentary terms. Hance Logan of Cumberland carried on the work of belittling Mr. Blair yesterday. The bitterness of his references to the man he followed with unswerving fidelity for seven years was quite marked, and was, in fact, the weak feature of an otherwise able speech.

Mr. Blair an Enigma.

Strange to say, the man who is least concerned about the denunciation that is being visited on him is Mr. Blair himself. He has not been in the House since he made his speech on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme. He is spending some of the time with his family down at Murray Bay. Occasionally he makes a trip to Montreal. When he comes to Ottawa he rarely allows a day to pass without exercising himself on the golf links. Mr. Blair is an enigma to everyone. His plans appear to be known only to himself.

Some good speeches were made yesterday, but the House showed a sluggish interest in the debate. Robert McPherson, the young Liberal member from Burrard, B.C., argued the necessity of greater railway facilities for his province with marked zeal. Jabel Robinson, in a rugged, straightforward speech, advocated the principle of Government ownership and operation.

A Very Heavy Subsidy.

Perhaps the most effective criticism of specific clauses in the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract that has yet been heard came from E. B. Osler of Toronto.

The member for West Toronto showed clearly that there is a subsidy, and a very heavy one. By reason of the Government guarantee of bonds, the company can obtain money cheaper by 1½ per cent. than it could otherwise for the loan. But estimating the advantage in this respect at only one per cent., the company would make on its loan in fifty years the sum of $62,000,000.

Charles Heyd of Brant defended the scheme unreservedly. He was followed by T. W. Ganong of Charlottetown, who energetically criticized the deal, especially in its relation to the Maritime Provinces.

KILLING THE INTERCOLONIAL.

It looks at present as though Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his fellow-ministers have committed themselves beyond recall to the building of the eastern section of a Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The splendid speech recently delivered by Mr. Borden, leader of the Opposition, in this connection, will be still fresh in the minds of our readers. Mr. Borden, like a sensible and patriotic man, pointed out that the Government, instead of building a new road to parallel the Intercolonial and thus destroy its usefulness, should make proper use of that road in connection with their transcontinental scheme. And he showed plainly and briefly how that could be done. In this connection it may be pointed out that the Intercolonial could stand twice or thrice the traffic it carries at present, and surely a plan that would bring about its maximum use would be better business and better politics than to so reduce it as to make it a really grass-grown road besides saddling the country with the cost of a rival railway to it. The 1902 Railways and Canals blue book for the year ended June 30. 1902, presents a comparison between the traffic over the G.T.R. and Intercolonial systems that is confirmatory of what we have said above. The Intercolonial is laid with 80-lb rails, the same as the Grand Trunk, and it has a good roadbed. From the following it will be seen that the Intercolonial carries about half as much traffic as the G.T.R. system, at operating expenses nearly as great:

	Inter.	G.T.R.
Miles of road operated	1,302	3,142
Passengers per mile	1,679	2,331
Passengers earnings per mile	$1,360	$2,730
Freight per mile tons	1,831	3,208
Freight earnings per mile	$2,800	$4,451
Operating expenses per mile	$4,282	$4,550
Charge per freight ton	1.53	1.38
Cost operating per train mile	91 7-8	.93
Freight charges per train mile	.96	1.51

Doubtless double the traffic the Intercolonial now carries could be borne at only a slightly increased percentage in operating expenses, since a large proportion of the expenses remain the same irrespective of the amount of traffic carried. The chief additions would be a few more train crews and greater wear and tear of engines and cars.

Does it not seem a precipitate policy to parallel such a road and then calmly give away the new road the Government retaining two streaks of rust in the form of the old Intercolonial. Mr. Tarte has said that Sir Wilfrid is not a business man or a practical man, and Sir Wilfrid has given pretty conclusive evidence of it. Mr. Blair's objections are also finding echo in the independent press. The Toronto News which first rather favored the Government plan, has swung around almost to an adoption of Mr. Blair's arguments. The veering of the News may be in sympathy with what it conceives to be the trend of public opinion.

In another column will be found a report of the speeches made by Messrs. Graham and Johnson, of this city, in the Montreal Congress on the question of a trade preference within the Empire. To say that their remarks do them credit, is we believe, putting it mildly. Such glowing and patriotic words, uttered in the presence of a distinguished company, the like of which may not for many years gather in the Dominion again, deserve to live in the annals of this city. Bravo! gentlemen!

Our American cousins seem to think, judging by the way Reliance led Shamrock yesterday, that it is all over but the shouting, and that Sir Thomas can go home and build Shamrock IV. That view seems a trifle premature. Yesterday's drifting match proves nothing beyond the fact that the yacht which catches the wind can go faster than another yacht which misses it.

The following philosophical gem is going the rounds of the press: "There is no need of worrying or fretting because some one has found fault with what you say or do. 'Tis the common lot of men in business; the merchant does not please all his customers, the butcher is forever reminded of his tough beefsteak, and the minister finds it hard to please his congregation with his sermon. The newspaper man gets more than his share of it and is expected to get out a cheerful newspaper just the same. A man befriends another man for years and is turned down and abused. Such things are not always pleasant, but they always have been and doubtless will be so, and the easiest way is to pay the least attention to them and go right along trying to be pleasant and useful."

Bachelor's Hall

This is the time of year when many of the married men are trying to keep Bachelor's Hall for a period.

To all such we extend a cordial invitation to visit our Lunch Room.

It will be much handier for them to come here and get a nice hot lunch instead of going home to an empty house and picking up a cold supper.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening. We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

WILL N. HARBEN

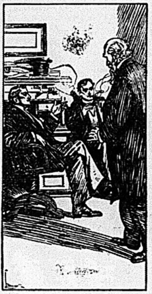
"I've had three in the last six years," laughed Miller. "You know how much larger Todd Selman is than I am. He burst one of mine from collar to waist last summer at the Springs. I can't refuse 'em, God bless 'em! Jeff Higgins married in my best Prince Albert last week and spilled boiled custard on it, but he's got a good wife and a fair job on a railroad in Tennessee now. I'd have given him the coat, but he'd never have accepted it and been mad the rest of his life at my offer. Parker said somebody had tried to scrape the custard off with a sharp knife and that he had a lot of trouble cleaning it. I wore the coat yesterday and felt like I was going to be married. Todd must have left some of his shivers in it. I reckon that's as near as I'll ever come to the hitching post."

Just then a tall, thin man entered. He wore a rather threadbare frock coat, unevenly bound with braid, and had a sallow, sunken and rather long face. It was Samuel Craig, one of the two private bankers of the town. He was about sixty years of age and had a pronounced stoop.

"Hello!" he said pleasantly. "You young bloods are a-goin' to play smash with the gals' hearts tonight, I reckon. I say, go it while you are young. Rayburn, I want to get one of them ironclad mortgage blanks. I've got a feller that is disposed to wiggle, an' I want to tie him up. The inventor of that form is a blessing to mankind."



"Hello!" he said pleasantly.

"Help yourself," smiled Miller. "I was just telling Mr. Trabue that I was running a stationery store, and if I was out of anything in the line I'd order it for him."

The banker laughed good humoredly as he selected several of the blanks from the drawer Rayburn had opened in the desk.

"I hope you won't complain as much of hard times as Jake Pitner does," he chuckled. "I passed his store the other day, where he was standin' over some old magazines that he'd marked down. "'How's trade?' I asked 'im. 'It's gone clean to the dogs,' he said, and I noticed he'd been drinking. 'I'll give you a sample of my customers,' he went on. 'A feller from the mountains come in jest now an' asked the price of these magazines. I told him the regular price was 25 cents apiece, but I'd marked 'em down to five. He looked at 'em for about half an hour an' then said he wasn't goin' out o' town till sundown an' believed he'd take one if I'd read it to him.'"

Craig laughed heartily as he finished the story, and Alan and Miller joined in.

"I want you to remember that yarn when you get to overcheckin' on me," said Craig jestingly. "I was just noticin' this mornin' that you have drawn more than your deposit."

"Overchecked?" said Miller. "You'll think I have when all my checks get in. I mailed a dozen today. They'll slide in on you in about a week, and you'll telegraph Bradstreet's to know how I stand. This is a fine banker," Miller went on to Alan. "He twits me about overchecking occasionally. Let me tell you something. Last year I happened to have $10,000 on my hands waiting for a cotton factory to begin operations down in Alabama, and, as I had no idea when the money would be called for, I placed it with his nibs here 'on call.' Things got in a tangle at the mill, and they kept waiting, and our friend here concluded I had given it to him."

"I thought you had forgotten you had it," said Craig, with another of his loud, infectious laughs.

"Anyway," went on Miller, "I got a sudden order for the amount and ran in on him on my way from the postoffice. I made out my check and stuck it under his nose. Great Scott! You ought to have seen him wilt. I don't believe he had half of it in the house, but he had ten million excuses. He kept me waiting two days and hustled around to beat the band. He thought I was going to close him up."

"That was a close shave," admitted Craig. "Never mind about the overchecking, my boy. Keep it up, if it will help you. You are doing altogether too much business with the other bank to suit me anyway."

CHAPTER VI.

THE young people assembled slowly at the dance that evening. Toward dark it had begun raining, and, according to custom, two livery stable carriages, called "hacks," were engaged to convey all the couples to and from the hotel.

Everything in life is relative, and to young people who often went to even less pretentious entertainments this affair was rather impressive in its elegance. Lamps shone everywhere, and bunches of candles blazed and sputtered in nooks hung about with evergreens. The girls were becomingly attired in light evening gowns, and many of them were good looking, refined and graceful. All were soft spoken and easy in their manners and either wore or carried flowers. The evening suits of the young men were well in evidence and more noticeable to the wearers themselves than they would have been to a spectator used to conventional style of dress. They could be seen in all stages of inadaptability to figures too large or too small, and even after the dance began there were several swaps and a due amount of congratulation on the improvement from the appreciative fair sex. The young lady accompanying each young man had pinned a small bouquet on his lapel, so that it would have been impossible to tell whether a man had a natural taste for flowers or was the willing victim to a taste higher than his own.

Rayburn Miller and Alan sat smoking and talking in the room of the latter till half past 9 o'clock, and then they went down. As a general rule, young men were expected to escort ladies to dances when the young men went at all, but Alan was often excused from so doing on account of living in the country, and Miller had broken down every precedent in that respect and never invited a girl to go with him. He atoned for this shortcoming by contributing most liberally to every entertainment given by the young people, even when he was out of town. He used to say he liked to graze and nibble at such things and feel free to go to bed or business at will.

As the two friends entered the big parlor Alan espied the girl about whom he had been thinking all day. She was seated in one of the deep, lace curtained windows behind the piano. Frank Hillhouse was just presenting to her a faultlessly attired traveling salesman. At this juncture one of the floor managers with a white rosette on his lapel called Miller away to ask his advice about some details and Alan turned out of the parlor into the wide corridor which ran through the house. He did this in obedience to another unwritten law governing Darley's social intercourse—that it would be impolite for a resident gentleman to intrude himself upon a stranger who had just been introduced to a lady. So he went down to the ground floor and strolled into the office. It was full of tobacco smoke and a throng of men, some of whom were from the country and others from the town drawn to the hotel by the festivities. From the office a door opened into a bar and billiard room, whence came the clicking of ivory balls and the grounding of cues. Another door led into the large dining room, which had been cleared of its tables that it might be used for dancing. There were a sawing of fiddles, the twanging of guitars, the jingle of tambourines and the groaning of a bass viol. The musicians, black and yellow, occupied chairs on one of the tables, which had been placed against the wall, and one of the floor managers was engaged in whittling paraffin candles over the floor and rubbing it in with his feet. Seeing what he was doing, some of the young men, desirous of trying their new patent leather pumps, came in and began to waltz singly and in couples.

When everything was in readiness, the floor manager piloted the dancers downstairs. From the office Alan saw them filing into the big room and taking seats in the chairs arranged against the walls on all sides. He saw Frank Hillhouse and Dolly Barclay sit down near the band; the salesman had disappeared. Alan threw his cigar away and went straight to her.

"Oh, here you are!" laughed Frank Hillhouse as Alan shook hands with her. "I told Miss Dolly coming on that the west wind would blow you this way, and when I saw Ray Miller just now I knew you'd struck the town."

"It wasn't exactly the wind," replied Alan. "I'm afraid you will forget me if I stay on the farm all the time."

"We certainly are glad to have you," smiled Miss Barclay.

"I knew she'd say that—I knew it, I knew it," said Hillhouse. "A girl can always think of nicer things to say to a feller than his rival can. Old Squire Trabue was teasing me the other day about how hard you was to beat, Bishop, but I told him the bigger the war the more victory for somebody, and, as the feller said, I tote fair and am aboveboard."

Alan greeted this with an all but visible shudder. There was much in his dignified bearing and good appearance to commend him to the preference of any thinking woman, especially when contrasted to Hillhouse, who was only a little taller than Dolly and was showing himself even at a greater disadvantage in his unrefined allusions to his and Alan's attentions to her. Indeed Alan was sorry for the spectacle the fellow was making of himself and tried to pass it over.

"I usually come in on Saturdays," he explained.

"That's true," said Dolly, with one of her rare smiles.

"Yes"—Hillhouse took another header into forbidden waters—"he's about joined your church, they tell me."

Alan treated this with an indulgent smile. He did not dislike Hillhouse, but he did not admire him, and he had never quite liked his constant attentions to Miss Barclay. But it was an acknowledged fact among the society girls of Darley that if a girl refused to go out with any young man in good standing it was not long before she was left at home oftener than was pleasant. Dolly was easily the best looking girl in the room—not perhaps the most daintily pretty, but she possessed a beauty which strength of character and intellect alone could give to a face already well featured. Even her physical beauty alone was of that texture which gives the beholder an agreeable sense of solidity. She was well formed, above medium height, had a beautiful neck and shoulders, dark gray eyes and abundant golden brown hair.

"May I see your card?" asked Alan. "I came early to secure at least one."

At this Frank Hillhouse burst out laughing, and she smiled up at Alan. "He's been teasing me all evening about the predicament I'm in," she explained. "The truth is, I'm not going to dance at all. The presiding elder happened in town today on his way through and is at our house. You know how bitter he is against church members dancing. At first mamma said I shouldn't come a step, but Mr. Hillhouse and I succeeded in getting up a compromise. I can only look on. But my friends are having pity on me and filling my card for what they call stationary dances."

Alan laughed as he took the card, which was already almost filled, and wrote his name in one of the blank spaces. Some one called Hillhouse away, and then an awkward silence fell upon them. For the first time Alan noticed a worried expression on her face.

"You have no buttonhole bouquet," she said, noticing his bare lapel. "That's what you get for not bringing a girl. Let me make you one."

"I wish you would," he said thoughtfully, for as she began to search among her flowers for some rosebuds and leaves he noted again the expression of countenance that had already puzzled him.

"Since you are so popular," he went on, his eyes on her deft fingers, "I'd better try to make another engagement. I'd as well confess that I came in town solely to ask you to let me take you to church tomorrow evening."

He saw her start. She raised her eyes to his almost imploringly, and then she looked down. He saw her breast heave suddenly as with tightened lips she leaned forward to pin the flowers on his coat. The jewels in her rings flashed under his eyes. There was a delicate perfume in the air about her glorious head. He had never seen her look so beautiful before. He wondered at her silence at just such a moment. The tightness of her lips gave way, and they fell to trembling when she started to speak.

"I hardly know what to say," she began. "I—I—you know I said the presiding elder was at our house, and"—

"Oh, I understand," broke in Alan; "that's all right. Of course, use your own"—

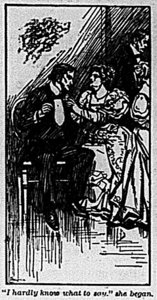
"No, I must be plain with you," she broke in, raising a pair of helpless, tortured eyes to his. "You will not think I had anything to do with it. In fact, my heart is almost broken. I'm very, very unhappy."

He was still totally at sea as to the cause of her strange distress. "Perhaps you'd rather not tell me at all," he said sympathetically. His tone never had been so tender. "You need not, you know."

"But it's a thing I could not keep from you long anyway," she said tremulously. "In fact, it is due you—an explanation, I mean. Oh, Alan, papa has taken up the idea that we—that we like each other too much, and"—

The life and soul seemed to leave Alan's face.

"I understand," he heard himself saying; "he does not want me to visit you any more."



"I hardly know what to say," she began.

She made no reply. He saw her catch a deep breath, and her eyes went down to her flowers. The music struck up. The mulatto leader stood waving his fiddle and calling for "the grand march" in loud, melodious tones. There was a scrambling for partners. The young men gave their left arms to the ladies and merrily dragged them to their places.

"I hope you do not blame me—that you don't think that I"— But the clatter and clamor ingulfed her words.

"No, not at all," he told her. "But it's awful; simply awful! I know you are a true friend, and that's some sort of comfort."

"And always shall be," she gulped. "You must try not to feel hurt. You know my father is a very peculiar man and has an awful will, and nobody was ever so obstinate."

Then Alan's sense of the great injustice of the thing rose up within him, and his blood began to boil. "Perhaps I ought to take my name off your card," he said, drawing himself up slightly. "If he were to hear that I talked to you tonight, he might make it unpleasant for you."

"If you do, I shall never—never forgive you," she answered in a voice that shook. There was, too, a glistening in her eyes as if tears were springing. "Wouldn't that show that you harbored ill will against me, when I am so helpless and troubled?"

"Yes, it would, and I shall come back," he made answer. He rose, for Hillhouse, calling loudly over his shoulder to some one, was thrusting his bowed arm down toward her.

"I beg your pardon," he said to Dolly. "I didn't know they had called the march. We've got some ice cream hid out upstairs, and some of us are going for it. Won't you take some, Bishop?"

"No, thank you," said Alan, and they left him.

CHAPTER VII.

ALAN made his way along the wall, out of the track of the promenaders, into the office, anxious to escape being spoken to by any one. But here several jovial men from the mountains who knew him intimately gathered around him and began to make laughing remarks about his dress.

"You look fer the world like a dirt dauber." This comparison to a kind of black wasp came from Pole Baker, a tall, heavily built farmer, with an enormous head, thick eyebrows and long, shaggy hair. He lived on Bishop's farm and had been brought up with Alan. "I'll be derned ef you ain't nimble on yore feet, though. I've seed you cut the pigeon wing over on Mossy creek with them big, strappin' gals 'fore you had yore sights as high as these town folks."

"It's that thar vest that gits me," said another. "I reckon it's cut low so you won't drap saft victuals on it, but I guess you don't do much eatin' with that collar on. It don't look like yore Adam's apple could stir a peg under it."

With a good natured reply and a laugh he did not feel, Alan hurried out of the office and up to his room, where he had left his lamp burning. Rayburn Miller's hat and light overcoat were on the bed. Alan sat down in one of the stiff backed, split bottom chairs and stared straight in front of him. Never in his life had he suffered as he was now suffering. He could see no hope ahead; the girl he loved was lost to him. Her father had heard of the foolhardiness of old man Bishop and, like many another well meaning parent, had determined to save his daughter from the folly of marrying a penniless man who had doubtless inherited his father's lack of judgment and caution.

There was a rap on the closed door, and immediately afterward Rayburn Miller turned the knob and came in. His kindly glance swept the face of his friend, and he said, with forced lightness:

AT THE BEE HIVE
Chas. N. Sulman

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

All trails are long to the lazy.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose, See advertisement. Small pill, Small dose. Small price.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK.

Interesting Lady Dudley.

Lady Dudley, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, is one of the most interesting women in society, but her retiring nature makes her better known to intimate friends than to the outside world of general society, says M. A. P. Miss Rachel Gurney was the handsome daughter of a beautiful mother; and on her father's side came from the old English Quaker family whose forbears have given to the world such names as Samuel Gurney and Elizabeth Fry. Natures are different. Some stand alone, others have a magnetic personality; these latter give as well as take, and make friends wherever they go. Lady Dudley belongs to the last-mentioned variety. When very young she attracted the interest of a good and gifted woman—Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, then Lady Tavistock—who pitied the somewhat lonely girl, noticed, and finally adopted her. After this the young lady had the most careful education and the happiest of times. She possessed an exquisite voice, was taught by Tosti, and at one moment there was an idea of her taking up a professional career. Music and languages occupied her time; she studied in Paris and Italy, saw men and cities, making unconscious preparation of her future destiny. Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, trained her young companion to take interest in the many charitable movements with which she herself was connected. Miss Gurney was soon taught to study the London poor, and to use her voice for the enjoyment of mothers and work girls who foregather at East End clubs. The Duchess also introduced her protege to the best society in three kingdoms. Georgina, Lady Dudley, was fond of the girl; her daughter, Lady Wolverton—then Lady Edith Ward—and Miss Rachel Gurney became the greatest friends, and it was at Witley Court that the fairy Prince made his appearance, in the person of the son of the house—the Lord Dudley of to-day. Marriage soon followed. The young fiancee's trousseau was provided by her mother-friend, who also presented some splendid pearls. Her wedding took place in September, 1691, at Holy Trinity Church, Sloane street; and in spite of its being the "off season," the event aroused such popular interest that the crowd became unmanageable, and bride and bridegroom left the church amid a scene of wild excitement. Lord and Lady Dudley have three children. Lady Honor Ward made her appearance in 1892. She is a charming child, and already a graceful skirt-dancer. Lord Ednam was born in 1894, and little Lady Morvyth is now seven years old. Lady Dudley makes an admirable mother, teaches her children, and has them constantly about her. When the first baby was christened she conceived the pretty fancy of enveloping her child in the square of rich lace which had formed her own wedding veil. Lady Dudley has a remarkably good head for business, and takes a keen interest in political questions and the progress of the people. Since her residence in the Emerald Isle she has done much to promote home industries, and to further the sale and manufacture of Irish laces and poplins. Her new country home, Rockingham Castle, will be a lasting link with Ireland. Lady Dudley's is a notable character. She is not only wife, mother and head of a household, but possesses all the social talents, and makes a brilliant appearance in the most exclusive social circles. Her jewels are splendid, and her rubies the finest in London. She generally wears white in the evening. Lady Dudley is pretty, graceful and very dark; her eastern name—Rachel—sounds most appropriate. She is a clever designer, has designed jewellery and an artistic Peace Medal.

Inventor—I tell you, the time is coming when all mankind will forsake the earth and travel entirely by flying machines.

His Friend—Oh, pshaw! You're building air castles.

Inventor—No, they'll come later.—New York Times.

TIMELY TOPICS

The Shamrock may be a light weather boat, but she can't win in a calm.

• • •

Some people think it is going a little too far to call the Shamrock an Irish boat, when she was built in Scotland, designed by a Scotchman, with a man who was born in Scotland footing the bill.

• • •

If Designer Fife's boat wins the cup he may swell up into a flute.

• • •

"Anything from the Shovel factory people yet?" said The Intelligencer to a prominent alderman yesterday.

"Nothing yet," was the reply. "Nice state of affairs, isn't it!" he went on. "A Canadian shovel factory pays the United States people $10,000 a year to stay out of Canada."

"Are they really doing that?" said the surprised newspaper man!

"They have been doing so for some years," was the reply.

And really it would appear that there is a good deal of truth in the old saying: "There are tricks in all trades but ours."

• • •

"Cup" talk is all the rage nowadays, and in that connection one of the most interesting bits we have seen, is the following from the Mail and Empire: "Many a patriotic American would be conscious of a 'gone' feeling at the foot of his stomach if he ever reflected that, had modern ideas of fair-play prevailed when the cup was first raced for, the America would have been defeated. In that historic conflict around the Isle of Wight, in 1851, for a 100-guinea prize, the America defeated the second boat, the Aurora, by 18 minutes. The America was of 170 tons, and the Aurora 46 tons. Had time allowance been made, the Aurora would have won handily, in which case there never would have been an 'America Cup' but an 'Aurora Cup,' which no one on this continent would have ever heard of. In 1885, had the English challenger been another sort of man, the cup would have crossed the Atlantic, and might still be there. The challenging yacht Genesta was fouled by the Puritan in such a matter that the judges were prepared to award the trophy to the owner of Genesta, Sir Richard Sutton. They ordered him to sail over the course for the cup, but he refused, saying he wanted a race, not a sail-over. He got the race but not the cup. The fact that Canadians have twice challenged for the trophy is usually forgotten. In 1876 and 1881 the challengers were Canadian craft. In the former year, Major C. Gifford, of the Halifax Yacht Club, sailed the Countess of Dufferin against the Madeline, and the next race was between the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club's boat Atalanta, owned by Alexander Cuthbert and the Mischief. Then we quit. Our best chance of seeing the cup seems to be in waiting for Sir Thomas Lipton to show it to us as he promised to do, if he wins. If we should grow impatient and go after it again—well, we hope it won't be necessary."

HUMOR

AN ASSISTED WOOING.

How a Fair Maiden Helped a Timid Young Man.

"Didn't you intimate that you had something particular to say to me, Mr. Timmid?"

"Me? I—I don't remember. Did I?"

"You did. And I wondered at it. It seemed strange that you should have anything of importance to say to me. I'm so young, you know, and so little versed in worldly wisdom."

"Are you? I mean, of course you are. But I—I wonder what it was I told you I wanted to say to you? It's strange I could forget it so soon. I must be losing my m-memory."

"And there isn't anything you want to say to me, Mr. Timmid?"

"Do you m-mean anything p-p-particular?"

"Yes."

"No. Wait. Ma told me to be sure and ask how your m-mother is. Maybe that's what it was I m-meant when I s-said I had something particular to say to you."

"And there is nothing else? You are quite sure?"

"I guess I am. You can't think of anything else, can you?"

"Oh, Henry—I mean Mr. Timmid, I'm afraid you are keeping something back from me."

"Am I?"

"I think so. I think you are hiding a secret."

"Who? Me?"

"Yes. But, there! Confide in me. We are such good friends. Call me Jane and tell me what it is that troubles you."

"Nothing troubles me."

"Oh, I know better. If you ask me to help you I will be your confidante. Say after me, 'Jane, will you be' "—

"Jane, will you be"—

"Oh, Henry, this is so sudden! But you may ask papa tomorrow."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Penalty of Fame.

Railroad Clerk—Say, you'd better not let old Brown catch you.

Reporter—What's the matter?

Railroad Clerk—In that write up you gave him you said "he entered the office of the P. D. Q. railroad when a boy and has grown gray in the service." Well, there have been at least a dozen men in here since trying to sell him some hair dye.—Philadelphia Press.

Before the Ceremony.

The Count—And now everyt'ing ees ready for my wedding wis Mees Gotrox. I t'ink every wan will say I am faultlessly attired.

The Baron—Parbleu, mon ami! Considering ze nature of ze lady's attractions, I t'ink it might be more appropriate if you wore a beezness suit!—Puck.

Not His After All.

"Gee whiz! My umbrella's gone!"

"Don't make such a fuss over a common occurrence like that. You should take the thing philosophically."

"So I did, but I object to having it taken from me philosophically."—Philadelphia Ledger.

For Love of Her.

"How did you lose your arm, young man?" asked the interested gentleman in the car.

"A girl once told me to remove it," answered the young man. "Got any cigarette papers?"—Indianapolis Sun.

Very Swell.

"Yas," declared Weary Willie, "I went up ter dat lady's house an' she gimme a real swell dinner."

"A swell dinner?"

"Sure; dried apples an' all de water I wanted."—Baltimore Herald.

As to Titles.

"Where did the judge get his title?"

"He was once judge of a horse race."

"But how about the general? Has he any right to that title?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! He's a general nuisance."—Chicago Post.

Persistent.

"Why, that's Miss Wellon, isn't it? Do you mean to tell me she still comes to the fashionable watering places?"

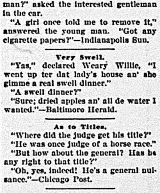
"I should say so! She brings her young married sister along as her chaperon now."—Life.

Lacked Experience.

Mamma—Don't let me catch you in a lie again, you naughty boy!

Johnny—I won't if I can help it; but, then, I haven't had the experience that pa has had.—Boston Transcript.

He Couldn't Help It.



"That young man actually had the audacity to smile at me."

"You can't really blame him, mamma. You've no idea how funny you look."—New York American.

A Lost Opportunity.

He—Look, look! I think that man out in the breakers is drowning!

She—Oh, heavens! and I have left my camera at home!—Judge.

The Biggest Thing of All.

Hamilton, Aug. 21.—The biggest thing of the whole carnival was the military show, in which 2,085 soldiers participated, yesterday afternoon. Fully 15,000 people viewed the ceremony and drill at the Jockey Club. The trades and labor and manufacturers' parade in the morning was also a huge success. The fireworks in the evening were gorgeous in the extreme, and fittingly wound up the great summer festival.

Russian Fleet Arrives.

Constantinople, Aug. 21.—The Russian squadron arrived off Inlada on the eastern coast of European Turkey Wednesday afternoon.

Proscribed Races.

Theodore Watts-Dunton, in an article in The London Star dealing with the "Proscribed Races," says:—Some few men seem to be drawn instinctively toward the proscribed races of the world. I confess to being one of them myself. This is why I have always felt the strongest admiration for the greatest of all the proscribed races—the Jews—and number among them some of my most intimate friends. I have lately been writing on that wonderful Jew, Shylock, in relation to his race, a race to which I should be very proud to belong, for an American edition of Shakespeare. With regard to the gypsies, what I say is that if any race were placed in the position of a proscribed race, the master instinct of self-preservation working through generations would show itself in qualities like those which are commonly associated with the gypsies—especially what is supposed to be Romany duplicity. It is observable in the Cagots; we see it in the proscribed races of Asia. I am at this very moment writing upon the subject in a cyclopaedia, and have mentioned the fact that a gypsy woman once said to me and a Romany Rye friend of mine, "There's somethin' in the wind off Gorgis that shuts the Romany's mouth and opens his eyes and ears." From this state of things, what can come but gypsy duplicity? I have, in the cyclopaedia article just mentioned, alluded to the way in which nature seems to have divided, not only mankind, but the entire animal world, into three families—those whom she has fitted to oppress, those whom she has fitted to resist oppression, and those whom she has fitted to fly away from it Where the oppressed race has to save itself by craft, natural selection gives rise, and must give rise, to those crafty characteristics which are their only means of defence.

The Servian Assassinations.

"The English local paper The Levant Herald of Constantinople has been allowed by the censor to publish details of and free comments on the Servian assassinations, while the other organs are still condemned to silence," says The London Standard's Constantinople correspondent. "This is the first time for many years that such a subject has been permitted to be mentioned locally. The reason is, I am credibly informed, the Sultan's great satisfaction with the strongly condemnatory position taken up by England, and at the same time his resentment at the series of false telegrams emanating from a supposed Russian source, concerning an imaginary military riot at Yildiz, which were taken as a text for predicting a similar fate for his Majesty to that which befell King Alexander."

Stole a Steamship.

This is from The London Chronicle:—It is the fashion when a famous Judge or detective retires to give a list of his more remarkable cases. Sir Hartley Williams, the retiring senior Judge of Victoria, has been subject to such a retrospect. One of the first cases he had to try was a very rare offence indeed—stealing a steamship. A couple of audacious scoundrels named Henderson and Wallace stole a steamer from the Clyde, disguised her very skilfully, and went on a pleasure cruise around the world. At Melbourne, where they posed as scions of English nobility, and received much social attention, the fraud was detected. They were arrested, convicted, and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. Stealing a ship is like stealing an elephant, a very unprofitable form of crime. The risks are enormous, and it is so difficult to get rid of the stolen property or convert it into cash.

Aerial Navigation.

Readers of that class of prophetic fiction which deals with the doings of aerial fleets and their probable influence on the warfare of the future will find something to interest them at the Alexandra Palace during to-day and for some time to come, says The London Chronicle of July 18. Here, in a huge shed by the side of the lake, Dr. Barton, working for the War Office and Mr. Brodrick, and assisted by Mr. Watel (who made the airship in which the Count von Zepperlin made his famous voyage over the Lake of Constance), is busily engaged in constructing what will be the biggest vessel yet built intended to float through space in any direction which the captain may desire. At present only the hull of the new ship with its narrow net-guarded deck can be seen. The length of this will be 180 feet, with a height of 75 feet, and a width of 50 feet. It is composed of an arrangement of thick bamboo poles selected specially for the purpose, and lashed together by experienced men with ropes and wire after Dr. Barton's own design. This framework will hang below the balloon, and will carry in addition to the crew of five men, three fifty horsepower petrol motors, which are to work sets of fans on each side of the ship, each of these having screw blades some 12 feet long working at 1,000 revolutions a minute. The aeroplanes on each side can be deflected at the will of the aeronaut, and the steering will be done by a rudder some 12 feet long. The balloon will have a capacity of 200,000 feet, and is calculated to life seven tons. The completion of the new airship will take some time, but it is expected that an experimental ascent will be made some time in August.

TWENTY YEARS OF BRONCHITIS.

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian" of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used "Catarrhozone," which cured him quickly and permanently. The captain says "Catarrhozone is the best cure for bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. Two months' treatment price $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dtf

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during July and August the Grand Trunk Railway System in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation Co. will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. Train leaves Belleville 7 a.m. Napanee 7.43 a.m. 7 hours sail through the beautiful 1000 Islands of the St. Lawrence to Alexandria Bay and return. Round trip rate from Belleville $1.85, Napanee $1.35. a1tod

CHEAP TRIPS.

The Grand Trunk Railway is running an excursion from Belleville to Kingston every Wednesday. Fare for the round trip, Belleville to Kingston and return, $1.35. Tickets are good going on date of issue only and parties must go on 7 a.m. train. Connect at Kingston with boat for trip through Thousand Islands to Alexandria Bay, Return fare for round trip through Islands from Kingston 50c.

Duty faithfully performed crowns the hours with flowers.

HAY FEVER UNKNOWN.

Certain it is, and many years of careful experience are back of the statement, that hay fever, and kindred annoying and troublesome summer affections distressing to so many thousands all over the country, recurring as regularly as July ang August, are absolutely unknown in the "Highlands of Ontario." Thousands of people go to Muskoka, Georgian Bay or the Lake of Bays every year for nothing else but to avoid hay fever, and find perfect immunity from the ailment, and many by going there regularly for a period of a few years are said to be permanently cured.

Hay fever booklet can be had free for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. d12-dtf

The Glory of California Scenery.

As long as there remains the love of beauty in the human soul so long will the glory of California scenery and that of the whole Pacific coast prove a source of inspiration to the poetic mind. Descriptive verse has been from the beginning a marked feature of the literature of this region. In fact, the term "landscape poets" may be properly applied to this bevy of song birds which seemed to the late Maurice Thompson to have taken "complete possession of the entire western seaboard." Suffice it to say that if a volume of verse were written by a Californian which reflected nothing of the state's scenic beauty or its warmth of color it would not only come as a surprise to most reviewers, but the loyalty of the poet might be seriously questioned. While all this display of local color may seem too apparent an effort on the part of Californians to place upon their work the stamp of a definite locality, and may be considered by some a cheap form of art, it is this very sensitiveness to beauty and grandeur with which nature has clothed the west that offers the most promise of its rapid literary advancement—a sensitiveness, moreover, that will become more and more acute with the cultivation of the higher faculties through increasing educational growth.—Herbert Bashford in Atlantic.

Influence of Laughter on Digestion.

The efficacy of laughter as an aid to assimilation and alimentation has passed into such a common physiological truism that no one of ordinary intelligence needs to have the principle upon which it works elucidated for his understanding in these days of widely disseminated dietetic knowledge. The average person who is not continuously "in the dumps" knows from experience that laughter is good for digestion, says What to Eat. It should be borne in mind that mirth and good cheer need not express themselves in convulsive laughter in order to influence digestion. An amiable, contented, calm and equable temperament has marked influence upon the digestive processes without laughter.

A Silver Riddle.

English tram car companies use in counting the money taken in what is called a "silver riddle." Four or five frames are placed on the top of each other, and a given quantity of mixed silver is emptied in on to the topmost. Shake the latter and all the pieces except the half crowns will disappear through the wire net arrangement on to the frame below. Shake frame No. 2 and everything goes through except the florins, and thus the coins are eventually exhausted down to the threepenny pieces.

"Then don't forget that a persistent man can learn to strike fire from flint."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. J. M. Hurley's Recent Examination

FULL TEXT OF WHAT TRANSPIRED BEFORE THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

TAKEN BY THE OFFICIAL REPORTER — HOW CENSUS ACCOUNTS WERE MADE UP.

HIS ARDUOUS DUTIES AS FISHERY INSPECTOR — INTERESTING READING.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—About this rent, which is the point I would like you to explain, Mr. Hurley, will you tell us whether $25 is a fair amount or whether you are filling it in here wrongfully? Is it a fair amount for the rooms and halls? A.—Yes, that is why I put it in.

Q.—Do you still consider it a fair amount for the rent of halls and rooms? A.—Yes, I do, for I had a great deal of running around after I made up that first bill and instructing the enumerators who took the manufacturing establishments of Deseronto and other places. That was afterwards.

Q.—You had to use different places? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long were you from the time you began till you got through?

A.—Well, it ran on into June, that is from the last of January till the middle of June, and—well, afterwards up to very recently I got schedules asking questions from the Department about certain things, the dairy business and one thing and another, which took a long time straightening out.

Q.—If you had to do this work over again, Mr. Hurley, the census work, do you think the amount too high that you have charged altogether? A.—No. I do not, if I had not been drawing the other salary I would have wanted double.

Q.—What does it come to? A.—$520, I think.

Q.—That includes disbursements of $155.37. A.—Yes.

Q.—Your charges were $174.68? A.—Yes, what I got for the census was just what the population was, 17,100 and something.

Q.—You say it was only a fair remuneration for you; you do not consider it too high? A.—I do not consider it enough, what I got for the census and for the trouble I took. It was a regular commission business, it is hardly worth $5 to $8 a day.

Q.—In some of these items you mention expense there, in the use of that word you did not always mean cash, I suppose? A.—No.

Q.—Unless a man is a legal man he does not know that it means cash; you are also Fishery Inspector? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did your work interfere the one with the other? A.—No.

Q.—Were you able to do both? A.—Yes, I did whatever the Department asked me to do. I did some commission work for them; it did not interfere at all because it was the winter season.

Q.—You found it no objection at all on account of occupying both positions? A.—No.

Q.—The Auditor-General did not object to pay your cheques and bills? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know yourself that it is often the case in Canada that a man holds two offices? A.—Yes, I looked that up myself before I took it.

Q.—And you tried to perform your duty faithfully, of course, in both offices? A.—Yes.

By Mr. Northrup.

Q.—Just one word in conclusion, so that there shall be no misunderstanding; you told my learned friend that you thought the $25 charged for halls was a fair amount for the use of halls and rooms in addition to what I put in? A.—I did not say exactly in addition to the halls; I said taking everything and the trouble and expense I had going to Deseronto instructing the enumerators for the manufacturing establishments.

Q.—Yes, that is what you told me, but you told my learned friend. I wrote the words down, "a fair amount for the use of halls and rooms in addition to what I put in." A.—Yes, with the other I mentioned right after.

Q.—Will you stand by what I think you told me, that you did not hire a single hall or room in the riding that you did not charge for before in that original bill? A.—Well, under the name of hall I said, but I really did—

Q.—Hall or room—will you say you paid $1 for a hall, room, building, tent, or anything else in addition to what is charged in the bill in the first instance, yes, or no? A.—Well, I cannot say that I can.

By Mr. McKinnon.

Q.—You used some halls? A.—I used rooms, but did not put in any charge at that time.

Q.—You included that in the whole amount? A.—I included that in the whole amount.

By Mr. Geoffrion.

Q.—That additional sum of $25 that you put in your bill after you had made up your first bill, if I understand well, you proceeded then, if I am not right you will just correct me, you first started out with the idea that you would be paid more for the census work? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you took an itemized bill, on account of all the expenses that you had made? A.—Yes.

To be continued.

HALF PRICE WHITE WAISTS

Although many bargains have been offered from our Mantle Department, here is one in Waists showing the capabilities of this section are not yet exhausted.

In fact—if possible—it's a little better bargain than has been offered from here this season.

White promises to be stronger than ever for fall wear. Especially the fancy mercerized mattings.

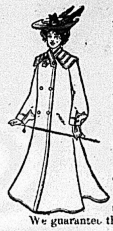
Many of these styles are included in our offering for Saturday.

Were the assortments full we would not make such a sacrifice on goods which will be much sought for later on.

Many styles have only one representative left—others have more. All are marked for clearance Saturday at just half the original price. To get your size an early visit will be necessary.

—The balance of our White Shirt Waists, including fine Mattings, Lawns and embroidered Organdies, the very finest waists in our assortment were priced as high as $5.90, for........Half Price

NEW STYLES IN RAINCOATS.



Style in Rain Coats was a thing practically unthought of a few years ago.

In fact many manufacturers have not yet awakened to the fact that people demand as good appearance in these as the finer coats.

Our new fall garments are to hand. A moment's inspection will show the up-to-dateness of the manufacturer from whom they come.

A slight change in style from last season. The collarless coats with extra large sleeves being mostly favored.

Mixed tweeds in Black and White and colors with red showing, are very stylish and popular.

These although light and porous are perfectly waterproof and in appearance are in no way different from a stylish Tweed Coat.

For fall use a little heavier weight cloth is used, making these garments some warmer.

We guarantee them satisfactory in every way. See our window.

—Fine Grey or Navy Rain proof coat with wide sleeves and pointed cuffs, a stylish reliable coat........$6.00

—Fine Grey and Colored mixed Tweeds, collarless, with neat shoulder capes—large sleeves and cuffs—pockets with pointed lapels all sizes........$7.50 to $11.50

ENGLISH FLANNELETTES—THE BEST.

The number of women who year after year purchase our English flannelette is probably best evidence of its ability to give lasting satisfaction.

Sprained His Ankle.

A young man named Shaw, a resident of Rochester, N.Y., who is summering at Massassaga Park, last evening met with an accident. He was walking about the park, when he suddenly stepped off the walk, causing a dislocation of his right ankle. A physician from the city was taken to the park to attend the young man.

VALUABLE TIME SAVED.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and, when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cure bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

Band Concert.

The band concert at the park last evening attracted a large number of citizens, who appeared to enjoy the programme of music presented. In addition to those on the park, the harbor was dotted with sailing and row boats whilst the concert was in progress.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists.

"ROYAL MUSKOKA."

"The Royal Muskoka" Hotel is the largest and most magnificent summer hotel in Canada. Location unsurpassed in the centre of the famous Muskoka Lakes District, Highlands of Ontario (1000 feet above sea level), about six hours' journey north of Toronto. The grounds include an area of 130 acres, containing pine and hemlock groves and many beautiful walks and points commanding lovely views. There are tennis, golfing, bowling, fishing, bathing, croquet, bowling green and many enjoyable water trips. First-class in every respect. Excellent transportation service.

OUR DELEGATES AT TRADE CONGRESS

Inspiring Speeches by Messrs. Graham and Johnson on the Subject of Free Trade Within the Empire—Both Expressed Noble Sentiments.

Col. Ponton Moved Resolution Looking to Annexation of Newfoundland.

The Montreal Star gives the following report of the speech made by Mayor Graham, at the Montreal Congress, on the question of the proposed Imperial preference:

Mr. R. J. Graham (Mayor of Belleville, Ont.): My Lord and Gentlemen,—Those of you who have looked over the agenda know that Belleville occupies some important positions in connection with the agenda, and among them is a resolution on this question. I desire to say in the beginning that Belleville district has been settled by a class of people known as U. E. Loyalists, a class of people who left their homes in the United States and came over to Canada in order that they might live under the British flag. We are intensely loyal, and as you will notice from the resolutions that we have put upon the agenda we look upon some matters in a manner which differs materially from our neighbors in Canada. We have had on that agenda a resolution in regard to free trade within the Empire. We have agreed to withdraw that resolution to harmonize the views of the Canadian section, but on the distinct understanding that we should have an opportunity upon this platform of stating our views upon this question.

We are in the firm of John Bull & Co., or, rather, John Bull & Sons. I regret to say the eldest son of the firm has left the company of his father, and has to-day set up in business for himself a very strong competition to the old gentleman. But we are the second son, and we hope to be able to continue in business with the old gentleman and remain with him throughout the entire time to come. We hope that all the family will remain together with him, and that we will stand together as an Empire and not depart, as did our neighbors to the south. (Hear, hear). Our motto is: "Free Trade within the Empire; protection against the world." (Applause).

What are the objections? Colonial loss of revenue, Colonial loss to manufacturers, increase in value of food products.

Let us solve these problems. "Is the unification of the Empire necessary? Is the time now ripe for action? Who pays the present bills of the Empire? Can other nations be made to contribute? Could we tax the product of other countries sufficiently to meet our financial needs? Is the British market necessary for the surplus produce of foreign countries? Can the Colonial manufacturers live with free British competition? Can the British consumer afford to pay more for his food, and will it be necessary to do so? Can the financial requirements of the Colonies be met with this system? Will the present Colonies always remain loyal to the crown under the present system? Are we as a nation getting richer or poorer? Can the balance of trade be turned in our favor?

It has been stated by one of the speakers this afternoon that free trade within the Empire is a desirable thing, and so it is, if it could be made practicable.

But can it be made practicable? I fear that under our present system of Government, free trade within the Empire is practically impossible. I have a suggestion—I don't know whether it will recommend itself to you or not—and that is that these difficulties should be met by pooling all customs receipts, by maintaining the army and navy out of the general funds of the Empire, by granting each Colony an annual subsidy from customs receipts sufficient for their needs and the proper development of their resources, by permitting each Colony to govern itself as at present in all matters, by encouraging immigration to the colonies only, by investment of our surplus wealth in developing the resources of our Empire only by producing in the colonies sufficient food products to meet the requirements of the Empire in time of war.

If these can be accomplished why not begin now and petition the British Parliament to at once call a conference of representatives of the various interests concerned to work out a plan to bring it into effect.

EX-MAYOR JOHNSON'S SPEECH.

Ex-Mayor Johnson's speech is thus reported by the Star:

Mr. J. W. Johnson (Belleville Board of Trade).—This is being a great debate, infinitely better than the resolution we are debating. If I were giving a straight vote on the question, and the Canadians were, we would vote straight on the proposal of Mr. Chamberlain to give preferential trade in the Empire. When Sir William Holland opened the debate, he reminded me of the position of St. Paul before Agrippa, for he almost persuaded me to be a—we are all Christians—he almost persuaded me to be a free trader. But it was the voice of the siren. His diction and the splendid spirit of his address was something we could admire, but to me it was devoid of the arguments to carry to completion the consolidation of the commercial interest of the Empire. No matter what the result of this convention may be, I can say Canada's national aspirations are all in one direction. We shall remain subject to the King and shall remain within the Empire, and keep our Dominion one of the nations that make up the British Empire, and we shall continue loyal to that old flag, no matter what the result may be.

It seems to me the crux of this whole matter, coming down to actual facts, is duty. We have had experience of this matter in Canada in the part of Ontario where I come from. We live right on the north shore of Lake Ontario and right across is the City of Oswego, in the State of New York. Ten years ago a very large trade was done in barley between Ontario and New York, and I say here deliberately, and challenge any gentleman to dispute what I state; every time a Canadian exported a bushel of barley to the United States, the Canadian paid duty. And why? The proposition is this, that wherever the market price is fixed you have got to pay whatever toll or charges are demanded in order to reach the market.

Now then, gentlemen, why not do as we ought to do and as we do on this continent, adapt ourselves to existing circumstances? (Hear, hear). Gentlemen, we are as much identified with you as you are with us. You are the custodians of what has come down to us from our forefathers, the British patrimony. We are just as much concerned in it as you are. You are custodians of the family jewels, but we are also custodians of the family jewels and it behooves you of the old land as it behooves us of the new land to co-operate and hand this great Empire of ours down to our sons and daughters a credit to the world.

ANNEXATION OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Toronto World: The completion of Canadian confederation by securing Newfoundland was the absorbing topic of the afternoon and provoked much enthusiasm. The following resolution, introduced by Col. Ponton, of the Belleville Board of Trade, was carried unanimously:

"It is resolved that to fully round out and complete Canadian confederation and to strengthen Imperial unity, it is, in the opinion of this Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, essential that Newfoundland should be included as a constituent part of the Dominion of Canada. The present is an opportune time to enter upon negotiations leading to this result in view of the pending tariff treaty between Newfoundland and the United States and the friendly relations now existing between France and Great Britain and the probable disposition on the part of France to settle for all time matters so long in dispute respecting the French shore. It is, in the opinion of this Congress a matter of imperial importance that one intact Atlantic seaboard should be thus permanently secured."

Col. Ponton said: "I believe it was in 1894 a conference was held between Canada and Newfoundland, but the conference dropped because Canada refused to assume the railway debt of Newfoundland amounting to only one million pounds, or about five million dollars." He asked how many million dollars had she since expended that might have been spent in getting Newfoundland into the one great national confederation of Canada. The time was ripe, he thought, because there was at present on the tapis a treaty of unrestricted reciprocity between this oldest colony and the United States. Canada was not consulted; Great Britain was not consulted, or scarcely, and what would be the result if next year at the next meeting of the Congress of the United States, that unrestricted reciprocity bill passes. It would mean that every industry in Newfoundland would go into the hands of the United States proprietors. It would mean that all Newfoundland interests would centre in the United States instead of in Canada, which now had a trade with Newfoundland, amounting to nearly $3,500,000. He did not think Canada realized the extent of it—$2,081,000 of exports, $1,600,000 of imports, with and from Newfoundland alone. Every one said "fish," but he said no, minerals, and timber as well.

Now, was it not important that this trade should be secured for all time? At present Newfoundland was under what he might call a divided allegiance. He put this forward as a proposition that every Britisher would respond to that on British soil there was no more room for two prerogative flags. Was it not a fact that, along with the British flag, there was a French flag, that at different seasons of the year was hoisted as the prerogative flag, and hoisted along with the Union Jack, but hoisted as the flag of authority? Now, there was at the present time, thanks to the good intervention of King Edward, the peacemaker, the entente cordiale between France and England. There was just one element of friction remaining, and it was the fisheries of Newfoundland, and it takes a fleet of France and a fleet of England to keep it from bursting out every year. At the present time there were in Newfoundland waters three English vessels and a great many French vessels. That was a striking illustration that this friction was there, and that something should be done to avoid such a condition of affairs.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

Bronchitis All serious lung troubles begin with a tickling in the throat. You can stop this at first in a single night with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Use it also for hard colds, and for coughs of all kinds. 25c., 50c., $1.00. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

DIED AT AGE OF 76.

MR. WM. D. BONTER PASSSED AWAY THIS MORNING.

Mr. Wm. D. Bonter died this morning at the residence of his son, Mr. Wm. E. Bonter, Albert street. The deceased was born in the Township of Ameliasburg nearly 76 years ago. He lived in Belleville a few years, but the greater portion of his life was spent in Prince Edward County. Mr. Bonter was a gentleman who was well known and respected by all who knew him. He was for many years a member of the Methodist Church. An aged widow, one son and four daughters survive. The remains will be taken to Albury, Ameliasburg Township, on Sunday morning for interment.

Five carters were summoned for neglecting to take out their licenses. The parties agreed to take licenses, and on paying costs were allowed to go.

A Famous Boat.

It is possible that many people who have read that altogether charming book, "Around the World in the Sunbeam," by Lady Brassey, may have the pleasure of seeing the famous yacht in question. Lord Brassey's boat is at present in Montreal, and it is expected that she will be taken to Toronto. Possibly she may go through the Bay of Quinte. She is a sailing yacht with an auxiliary engine of 70 horse power, a rakish looking beauty, good for any kind of weather, in any sea, built of iron and teak, and comfortable in the highest degree.

Died at Ross' Corners.

An aged and well-known resident of Ross' Corners, Township of Thurlow, died last night in the person of Mr. Thomas Empson, who was 81 years of age. The deceased had resided in this county for a number of years. Up to within a short time ago Mr. Empson enjoyed good health. A family survive.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager,
and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

Mainly About People.

It is related that the Dowager Empress of Russia once saw on her husband's table a document regarding a political prisoner. On the margin Alexander III. had written: "Pardon impossible; to be sent to Siberia." The Czarina took up the pen, and, striking out the semi-colon after "impossible," put it before the word. Then the endorsement read: "Pardon; impossible to be sent to Siberia." The Czar let it stand.

The late James McNeill Whistler upon a certain occasion appeared at a dinner party with no tie on. A friend of his remonstrated. "For heaven's sake, Whistler, you've forgotten your tie!" "Not at all," he returned, "not at all! Why wear a tie? My white collar rises from my white shirt, which is fastened by a gold stud. Everything simple, excellent. Why put another white on top of that? I'm much better dressed than you!"

The Rev. Sanford Olmsted, the new Episcopal Bishop of Colorado, is noted for the skill with which he can collect money for charity. He once called on a man who was well-to-do, but somewhat close. He asked for money for a worthy charity, and the man said: "I'd give something gladly, but the fact is I've only $300 by me in cash—$300 that I've put aside for my funeral." "You trust God with your soul," said Bishop Olmsted, "but you're afraid to trust Him with your funeral, eh?" This comment gained the bishop a generous contribution.

The late J. H. Shorthouse was afflicted with a terrible stammer, which he used to say was a blessing in disguise, having led him to use the pen as his great instrument of expression. There were times, however, when the stammer almost ceased, and he could talk on uninterruptedly. One very striking and touching habit grew up out of the stammer. At "family prayers" he and his wife read all the prayers together; because, if an attack of stammering came on, her gentle voice would carry on the thread till he recovered, and the knowledge of this prevented all nervousness on his part.

Here is a favorite anecdote which Abraham Lincoln was in the habit of relating: James Quarles, a distinguished lawyer of Tennessee, was one day trying a case, and after producing his evidence rested, whereupon the defence produced a witness who swore Quarles completely out of court, and a verdict was rendered accordingly. After the trial one of his friends came to him and said: "Why didn't you get that feller to swar on your side?" "I didn't know anything about him," replied Quarles. "I might have told you about him," said the friend, "for he would swar for you jest as hard as he'd swar for the other side. That's his business. Judge, that feller takes in swarrin' for a living."

Professor William Clark, D.C.L., in his very entertaining papers on "People and Places I Have Known" in the "Westminster," recalls many amusing stories of celebrities. Of Charles Kingsley, Professor Clark writes: In spite of a slight stammer, which he nearly overcame, he was popular in the pulpit and on the platform. He once lectured in Toronto, but with no great success. In seeking to stimulate the Toronto youth, he recommended every young man to make it his ambition to "have a bust in Westminster Abbey." The young gentlemen had their own notion of a "bust," and broke into fits of laughter, which were redoubled when Mr. Kingsley repeated with still greater emphasis—"I say a bust in Westminster Abbey."

Soon after J. M. Barrie leaped into fame, the editors of three London journals for which he had done a good deal of work determined to give a dinner in his honor. Mr. Barrie accepted the invitation, and in due course the three knights of the pen and scissors and their distinguished guest sat down together. The hosts, knowing their contributor only by his work, fully anticipated a "feast of reason and a flow of soul." However, the soup and fish were consumed without a word from Mr. Barrie, or at least, with nothing beyond noncommittal grunts. Despite frantic efforts to lure him into conversation, it was not until he rose to put on his coat that he made the first and last remark that he uttered during the evening: "Weel, this is the first time I've ever had dinner with three editors."

James Lane Allen, the Kentucky novelist, is a man of more than average size, and, what is not common to all Kentuckians, is always apparelled in the best form. One evening he stopped in a small shop just around the corner from the quarters into which he had moved only a few days before, and made a few purchases amounting to a dollar or so. When he came to pay, he discovered that he had left his purse at home. He explained to the shopkeeper, and asked that he be trusted for the goods until next morning, as he was in a hurry and could not wait. The shopkeeper declined to let the goods go without the money. Mr. Allen was nettled. "Do I look like a man who would try to 'beat' you?" he asked with indignant dignity. "Of course you don't," replied the shopkeeper, admiringly. "If you did I wouldn't have bothered with you in the first place. It isn't that kind I have to be on the everlasting lookout for."

In his reminiscences in the "Century Magazine," Andrew Dickson White, late United States Ambassador to Germany, repeats an anecdote told him by Hon. Odo Russell, the British plenipotentiary at Berlin. Russell was on one occasion making a call on Prince Bismarck, and the conversation turned on the subject of bores, and how to get rid of them. Bismarck said that he and his wife had hit upon an expedient, and whenever an unwelcome caller was wasting his time it was arranged the princess should come in and say "Prince, isn't it time for you to take your medicine?" thus furnishing an excuse to politely dismiss the intruder. Russell expressed his approval of this plan, and had no sooner done so than Princess Bismarck appeared at the door and, addressing her husband, asked him if it was not time for him to take his medicine. Bismarck and Russel. looked at each other a moment in silence and then both burst into titanic laughter.

Rescuing the Baby.

One of Mr. T. G. Warren's most successful farcical comedies was a piece called "Nita's First," and the plot of this, as its title sufficiently reveals, turned upon the attempt of a secretly married young couple to hide their offspring from a rich relation—which rich relation was, of course, an eccentric uncle in a plaid shawl and false whiskers, with a desperate desire to pay his nephew's debts only on condition that the nephew was still single. To make it known to the man in the street, and the man in the street's wife, that there was a baby in the case (there was a great run on wax babies for farcical comedy some fifteen years ago), the management of the Novelty Theatre, where "Nita's First" was to be produced, sent out a procession of sandwich men, carrying in their arms counterfeit babies in red hoods and long white robes. Towards the end of the day it was observed that one of the sandwich men had been drinking too much with his sandwich, and was staggering along the narrow kerbstone of Holborn like an intoxicated Blondin. By the time he reached Tottenham Court Road he had become hopelessly detached from his companions, and was wandering aimlessly about in a vague and intermittent search for them, now and again, as he stumbled along, looking curiously down at the baby in his arms, as if mightily puzzled to know how on earth it got there. Crossing westward into Oxford street, the wretched human hoarding made a too adhesive shuffle over a protruding road-block, and sprawling forward on his hands and knees, shot the red-hooded infant under the wheels of a passing omnibus. Women shrieked and turned the color of ivory, men shouted and rushed to the heads of the horses, and two policemen who were on traffic duty hurriedly left it for the scene of the tragedy. Turning the infant gently over, to ascertain the extent of its injuries, one of the policemen discovered that it could only bleed sawdust in the worst of accidents, and to the horror of the excited crowd, who were not in the secret, went over to the drunken sandwich man and whacked him over the head with it. Then the miserable guardian rocked and shambled away from the gaping audience, wiping the mud from his baby's eyes with the sleeve of his ragged coat.—M. A. P.

Before and After.

When a new newspaper starts up in the territories, according to The Kansas City Journal, the country exchanges greet it in a form which reads something like this, "Vol. 1, No. 1, of The Doaksville Daily Tribune has just reached our table. The Tribune is a neat and newsy little sheet, which supplies a long-felt want in that thriving community by the placid waters of picturesque Bitter Creek. The editor, Mr. James Smith, is a scholar and a gentleman, who has acquired great journalistic experience and ability by serving a number of years on the reportorial staff of one of the metropolitan newspapers of Kansas City. Good luck to you, Jimmy. We affectionately welcome you to the fold of the true moulders of public opinion." But these amenities don't last long. James runs counter to the prevailing opinion on some living issue, and the next thing he reads of himself runs in this fashion: "Vol. 1, No. 2, of that disreputable organ of the Snake Indians, The Doaksville Tribune, published in that h—hole near the sewer of creation, by that dough-faced, pudding brain idiot who recently fled from Kansas City, leaving a $2 laundry bill unpaid, the which seems queer, as he does not have any washing done here."

The whole is not repeated, as only a sample is necessary to show the troubles which soon overwhelm the adventuresome James Smith.

A Frenchman's Pun.

Two English M.P.'s, Mr. Walter Palmer and Mr. Harry Samuel, were hosts at a luncheon party given to about forty of the French Deputies at the Junior Carlton Club, says The London Chronicle. Not many English politicians were valiant enough to adventure their own vernacular French with guests of whom the majority speak no English at all. All went well, however, at the Junior Carlton luncheon, though later in the coffee-room, when Englishmen were presented, it was noticed that the profundity of the introductory bow was generally to be taken as indicative of a somewhat surface knowledge of the visitors' tongue. One Frenchman, with innate politeness, did his best to establish an international accord by talking English; his facility in which he attested by a pun: "Great treat shall lead to great Treaty."

BABY'S FUTURE

Something for Mothers to Think About

Lives of Suffering and Sorrow Averted

And Happiness and Prosperity Assured by

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills When All Else Fails.

Every child born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering, but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence, it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest and most effective treatment available, viz., The Cuticura Treatment.

Warm baths with Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and mild doses of Cuticura Resolvent, to cool the blood in the severer cases, are all that can be desired for the speedy relief and permanent cure of skin tortured infants and children, and the comfort of worn-out parents.

Millions of women use Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands, for annoying irritations and weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Nature's infinite variety is well illustrated in the collection of photographs of snow crystals made during the past 20 years by Mr. W. A. Bentley of Vermont. He has now more than 1,000 photographs of individual crystals, and among them no two are alike.

It will be good news to humanitarians who have been protesting against the feeding of snakes on live animals to learn that the authorities at the Zoological Gardens in London are now carrying out a suggestion recently made in the press, and are feeding the larger serpents with newly-killed rabbits and poultry instead of with live ones.

Trees are now to be felled by electricity. The modus operandi is as follows: A platinum wire, having been stretched out between two poles, is heated until it becomes incandescent. It is then drawn tight against the tree, through which it immediately proceeds to burn its way. It is said that a tree can by this process be felled in about one-eighth of the time it would take to saw it down.

Some time ago, according to a story in the Jewish "Chronicle," the Hungarian Jews in Chicago wrote to the chief rabbi of Pressburg, in Hungary, asking him to recommend an orthodox rabbi able to preach in their native language. Pressburg is a long way from Chicago, and it was too much to expect that a rabbi could drop across for a Sabbath to preach a trial sermon. That was where the phonograph showed its use. The recommended candidate spoke his best sermons, in his best German and Hungarian, into the instrument, and when the records were reproduced in Chicago they gave such delight that the preacher was elected at a handsome salary.

The little-grains-of-sand business has a commercial exemplification. English "drummers" do not take their meals with ordinary travelers at the hotels, but dine together in the "commercial room." The first-comer acts as president of the table. With the dessert, according to the "World's Work," a waiter passes around a plate on which each diner puts one penny—no more—for the support of the Orphans' School of the Travelers' Association. The money collected is counted by the president of the table, who enters the amount in a book kept for the purpose, and the innkeeper holds the collection until the proper official makes his quarterly visit. As the collection is taken up every day, in the commercial room of every hotel patronized by drummers, the amount received in a year is large.

Men and women in the same social circle call each other by their first names.

When a Mexican speaks to you of his home he refers to it as "your house."

When you move into a new locality it is your duty to make the first neighborhood calls.

When friends pass each other on the street without stopping they say adios (good-by).

Even the younger children of the family are dressed in mourning upon the death of a relative.

Young ladies never receive calls from young men, and are not escorted to entertainments by them.

Daily enquiry is made for a sick friend, and cards are left or the name written in a book with the porter.

Dinner calls are not customary, but upon rising from the table the guest thanks his host for the entertainment.

Mexican gentlemen remove their hats as scrupulously upon entering a business office as in a private residence.

After a dance the gentleman returns his partner to her seat beside her parents or chaperon and at once leaves her side.—"Modern Mexico."

An Excessively Literary Bit of Literature.

The poet and Penelope were playing under the rose, tossing the filigree ball; both were children of destiny, born in the house on the Hudson, near the house opposite, adjacent to our neighbors close to an East Side family. Those delightful Americans were like pigs in clover until a tar heel baron, the master of millions, espied through the gap in the garden the siege of youth; this man in the gray cloak, who figured among the middle-aged lovers, and possessed the sins of a saint, and who had been the lightning conductor and the talk of the town in Piccadilly as well as a regular typhoon along the Roman road, was no hero when he entered the circle at the time appointed, where the spinners of life—one, the blue goose, and the other, one of the deep-sea vagabonds—were enjoying the price of freedom. However, taking the main chance to overcome the modern obstacle of trees, shrubs and vines, this gold wolf cracked one of earth's enigmas and dashed like a detached pirate upon wild life near home; say, Marty, who had been abroad with the Jimmies in the kindred of the wild, and the lions of the Lord, didn't do a thing but lift the log of a cowboy grown in the mountains of California, and standing 'twixt God and mammon, saying: "You are the under dog." Lovey Mary, alias Penelope, whose mother was a Virginian girl in the Civil War, jumped upon the intruder and said: "I am a girl of ideas of the better sort, also a daughter of Thespis; you are the spoilsmen set; scat! get you to walks in New England. You are only Perkins the fakeer." And he got.—Horace Seymour Keeler in New York "Sun."

Good, Kind Russia.

"It is easy to say that Russia has no designs upon India," says Blackwood's Magazine (Edinburgh), "and that it is only our ill-natured opposition to her harmless ambitions which causes her to threaten us in that quarter. If we are only wise enough to give her what she wants, she will 'leave us masters of the greatest prize in the world, the fertile plains and valleys of Southern Asia.' In other words, we are advised to offer no opposition to the occupation by Russia of a position which will place India at her mercy, and to trust to the infinite mercy and goodness of the Czar and his advisers to restrain their hands. Russia will be so kind as to 'leave us masters' of our Indian empire. It may be so, but the British people will prefer to hold their possessions by their own right hands, and at no man's sufferance."

BETRAYAL OF THE TRAINMEN

Perjury and Boycott in British Columbian Labor Circles.

Report of the British Columbia Labor Commission—Suggests That Foreign Interference With Canadian Industrial Conditions Should Be Put a Stop to By Law—Condemns Certain Unions as Being Secret Political Organizations.

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—The report of the British Columbia Labor Commission, which was tabled in the House yesterday afternoon, contains some startling revelations. It shows that the strike of the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes on the C.P.R., which began in February last year, was brought about by the headquarters of the organization at San Francisco, while the strikes this year of the coal miners in the employ of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, the Western Fuel Company, Nanaimo; the Wellington Colliery Company, Ladysmith and Union, respectively, were due to another foreign organization, the Western Federation of Miners, with headquarters at Denver.

Sold Himself to C.P.R.

With respect to the C.P.R. strike it was established that the chief organizer in Canada of the United Brotherhood, while acting in this capacity, had sold his services, along with confidential letters received from the president of the order, to the railway company, and acted as one of their secret service officials, while he still continued to be chief executive officer of the order for the Dominion. George Estes, president of the order, exercised an all but complete control over the movements of the striking forces and directed the entire strike.

Brought About by Intrigue.

The report details at length attempts to tie up the steamship service of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the Pacific and Kootenay Lakes, to bring about a stoppage in the supply of coal and to effect a gigantic boycott in connection with the products of all concerns which even remotely might be brought into business connection with the C.P.R. The commissioners express the opinion that the strike of the coal miners at Ladysmith, which commenced on March 12, and affected about 800 employes, was brought about first by an intrigue whereby the Western Federation of Miners, in an effort to assist the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes, strikers on the Canadian Pacific Railway, sought to tie up the Dunsmuir mining properties, on Vancouver Island, which were at the time supplying the Canadian Pacific Railway with coal. Upon this point the report says: "The trouble at Ladysmith would never have taken place but for the strike of the United Brotherhood of Vancouver. It originated in the intrigues of a few men who, in part consciously, in part unwittingly, allowed themselves to be used as instruments to serve the desires and ends of a handful of dictators residing in the United States, and who are not in any way amenable to the laws of the country or responsible to those of its inhabitants whom they succeed in enlisting in the forces with which they hold sway."

Unsatisfactory Arbitration.

The report draws attention to the arbitrary and inconsiderate dealing on the part of the management of the Wellington Colliery Company with its employes and of the manner in which they were required to give up residence at the mines at Extension and reside at the Town of Ladysmith. Commenting on this, the commissioners say: "It is just such arbitrary and inconsiderate dealing that antagonizes employes to their employers, and is at once a provocation and justification for the formation of unions."

There was an absence of any general desire among the miners at Ladysmith for organization or of dissatisfaction with the wages or conditions of their employment.

Guilty of Deception.

In the case of the strike at Union the officials of the Western Federation of Miners were proved to have been guilty of deception in dealing with the officers of local unions, who still should have possessed their utmost confidence. The federation were prepared to organize the Japanese and Chinese laborers in the Dominion to effect their purposes, and their chief representative in Canada did not respect his oath as it should have been respected in giving evidence before the commissioners, as in the case of Ladysmith, the strike at Union was not due to any real feeling of dissatisfaction among the miners in regard to the conditions of their employment, but to a carefully contrived and skilfully executed intrigue on the part of persons acting as part of, or in connection with the executive of the Western Federation of Miners at Denver.

General Conclusions.

In the conclusions of the commissioners the problems to which the relations of organized labor and organized capital have given rise and more particularly the matter of industrial disputes and questions incident to them are carefully reviewed, and the rights and duties of the respective parties in relation thereto set forth. The right of workmen to combine is defended, but the sympathetic strike, the boycott, intimidation, blacklisting and picketing, as commonly practised, are condemned.

The strike for recognition, according to the report, should not be declared unlawful, but it is specially incumbent on the authorities when such a strike takes place to see that no illegal or criminal methods are used to gain reinforcements.

With respect to international organizations, it is pointed out that the chief objection is the liability of Canadian workmen to interference by officials in matters of contract and in settlement of differences with their employes. In this connection, if Parliament would declare that, notwithstanding anything contained in the constitution or in the rules of the international bodies, any agreement arrived at by an employer with his employes in settlement of a dispute should be valid and binding, the most formidable objection to these bodies would be removed.

Different Sorts of Unions.

The report draws a sharp line of distinction between the legitimate trade union and "a class of so-called union which is not really a trade union at all, but a secret political organization." To the latter class are assigned the American Labor Union, the Western Federation of Miners and the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes, which are in confederation with each other and whose leaders were engaged in a conspiracy to sweep all the employes of the Canadian Pacific Railway into the United Brotherhood and all coal miners into the Western Federation, doubtless with a view to being able to stop all transportation and all mining whenever it might appear expedient in the advancement of the common end. The commissioners say that all legitimate trade unionism ought to be encouraged and protected, but organizations such as these referred to should be prohibited and declared illegal, and there ought to be a strict enforcement of the law relating to the administration of voluntary oath. The commissioners suggested that provision be made for the incorporation of trade unions with a model constitution.

Government Interference.

The establishment of boards of conciliation and the compulsory investigation of disputes are recommended. While the weight of opinion, as expressed before the commission, was opposed to compulsory arbitration, the commissioners advise that in case of disputes affecting the public interest which are not settled within a certain period the Government should have power to refer the matter to a court, whose award shall be binding for a period not exceeding one year. As to foreign interference, the commissioners think it necessary for Parliament to interfere in the direction of making it an offence for any person not a British subject who has not been a resident in the Province for at least one year to procure or incite any employe in Canada to quit employment without the consent of the employer or for any person in Canada to communicate in any way the contents of any order or request by persons individually resident without Canada having in view the bringing about of a strike in this country.

The report concludes with a recommendation in favor of strengthening the laws of labor, which should be done gradually and with due regard to the conditions of the particular industry in other countries.

Killed by Lightning.

Winnipeg, Aug. 22.—Henry Fields, while driving a binder at Thornhill, Minn., was struck by lightning and killed.

Drowned on a Dare.

Quebec, Aug. 22.—George Richard, a French-Canadian truckman, was drowned yesterday morning in the River St. Lawrence. Richard had been drinking heavily for the past two years, and yesterday morning, while standing near the old Finlay Market, in the Lower Town, a number of butchers and wharf idlers got around him, and, after teasing him, made a wager of $1 that he would not jump into the river. The unfortunate truck driver accepted the bet and jumped into the river.

Sam Parks Guilty.

New York, Aug. 22.—Samuel J. Parks, the labor leader, who has been on trial for several days, charged with extortion in demanding and receiving money from various employers under threat that he would call strikes, was found "guilty" yesterday. Recorder Goff remanded Parks until Monday. Parks was locked up in the Tombs.

WILL STAGGER HUMANITY

Supplementary Estimates Asking For $25,000,000.

Will Be Brought Down After the G.T.P. Debate—Money to Be Expended in the Constituencies in Public Works to Square the Liberal Members Who Find It Hard Work to Swallow the Contract With Their Constituents.

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—The supplementary estimates will not be brought down before the end of the debate on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme. When they are unfolded to the public gaze, they will pretty nearly stagger humanity. It is said that the supplementaries provide for expenditures amounting to twenty-five million dollars.

Much difficulty has been encountered by the Government in whipping all its followers into line for the Grand Trunk Pacific contract. Strong protests were made from some quarters on the ground that public sentiment could not be reconciled to such a scheme. To soften these protests and to place certain members in a better position to carry their constituencies, appropriations for public works have had to be recommended, almost regardless of the staggering total. It is to provide for these public works that supplementary estimates, reaching far into the millions, have been determined upon by the Government.

The Debates Run Along.

The debate on the national transcontinental railway project developed no arguments of startling originality yesterday. Mr. A. Broder of Dundas sent home some well-pointed truths and Mr. Uriah Wilson indulged in some vigorous criticisms.

Mr. Charles Marcil of Bonaventure had the floor in the morning sitting of the House. He cemented with his eloquence, for something like the sixteenth time, the scattered portions of this young Dominion.

There was a voice from the height of land when Mr. Thomas MacKay of Renfrew rose to commend the Government's railway policy to the House. Mr. MacKay stated that he had traversed the country north and south of the height of land, and knew whereof he spoke when he promised the Government in timber alone, traffic sufficient to keep the new railway going for at least ten years.

Mr. Lavelle of Leeds and Grenville pointed out several flaws in the contract and criticized the scheme in its general features.

From Mr. R. F. Sutherland of North Essex came an unqualified defence of the contract. He insisted that the scheme found favor in the sight of the public.

Mr. Hackett of Prince Edward Island moved the adjournment of the debate.

The T. & H. Bill Passed.

After a long and hazardous journey, the Toronto and Hamilton Railway Bill as amended passed its final stage in the House of Commons last night.

REVOLUTION GROWS WIDE.

The Macedonian "Rough House"—Insurgents Burn Villages and Are Arrested by Bulgarian Officers.

Sofia, Aug. 22.—All the despatches received here yesterday indicate that the revolution in Macedonia is spreading. The most alarming news relates to an outbreak covering a considerable area in the eastern part of the Adrianople Vilayet, where the insurgents have captured the town of Vasiliko. They took the chief Turkish officials prisoners, and brought them to the Bulgarian frontier, where they liberated them. The Turkish officials, fearing to return to Vasiliko, sought refuge of the Bulgarian authorities who sent them to an hotel in Burgas, where they are at liberty to remain or depart.

Burned Vasiliko and 12 Villages.

The insurgents completely burned Vasiliko and also 12 villages in the neighborhood. The Bulgarian officials arrested the insugents who brought the Turkish officials at Vasiliko to the Bulgarian frontier.

Severe fighting is reported to be proceeding near Gehgele, with heavy losses on both sides. The Sofia Dnevjnjk declares that all the Turkish vilayets in Macedonia will be in full revolt Aug. 28, and that the revolution is spreading from Salonica into the districts towards Serves. Several new bands have appeared in the districts of Voden, southeast from Monastir. A general panic prevails in the Vilayet of Uskub.

Await Marching Orders.

The Turkish authorities have mobilized their whole forces in Macedonia, numbering 18,000 men. A large body of Asiatic troops is ready to move. Twenty-four regiments are only awaiting marching orders.

Curiously Killed.

A Viennese woman cutting bread for her children fainted, and in falling the knife ran into her body and mortally wounded her.

Stoned to Death.

Two men were fighting in a town in southern Italy, and when the bystanders attempted to part them one of the men threw stones at them. The crowd retaliated in like fashion, and the man was literally stoned to death.

HIS DEATH IS INEVITABLE

Though Lord Salisbury Is Making a Wonderful Struggle.

Fought For Every Breath During the Past 24 Hours—Patient's Heart Seizure Is Becoming Hourly Accentuated—Met With an Accident Which Gave Him a Severe Shock a Week Ago—His Sister Is Dead.

London, Aug. 22.—The gates of Hatfield House were closed at midnight, with the announcement that there had been no change in the patient's condition since early in the evening, and no other bulletin was expected until morning.

The general belief is that Lord Salisbury will last through the night, but there is little expectation that the improvement shown last evening will prove more than a last flicker.

Since the bulletin, issued Thursday night, announcing that the condition of Lord Salisbury was critical, the members of his family have been gathered in the vicinity of the sick room, awaiting the final call.

Death Is Inevitable.

It is realized that death is inevitable, though the patient is making a wonderful struggle. For 24 hours he has been fighting for every breath, aided by a continual supply of oxygen. The heart weakness, which has been the patient's last seizure, is hourly becoming accentuated, and the Marquis is gradually sinking. He does not suffer much pain, and has only brief periods of consciousness.

Telegrams have poured in from notable men throughout the world. King Edward telegraphed for additional information, though His Majesty has been kept informed of the bulletins.

Met an Accident.

Viscount Cranborne, Lord Salisbury's eldest son, says that his father was improving in health until last week, when a slight accident led to a recurrence of the complications he had been suffering from, including marked weakness of the heart and circulation. The most serious element of his illness, however, is nervous prostration, which on several occasions has been acute. The slight accident to which Viscount Cranborne referred yesterday occurred under these circumstances: Lord Salisbury was asleep in a chair, when the arm on which he was leaning gave way, and he fell heavily to the ground, receiving a severe shock.

His Sister Is Dead.

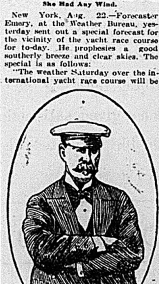
Hatfield House is situated in a magnificent park, which skirts the quaint town of which the Marquis of Salisbury is practically the owner. Yesterday while the statesman lay dying, boys were playing cricket in the brilliant sunshine on the smooth lawns within earshot of the unpretentious room occupied by the patient. While on one side the cricketers laughed and chaffed each other, on the other side and almost an equal distance from the house was an ominous contrast, for there the workmen were finishing the grave of the Countess of Galloway, Lord Salisbury's half-sister, in the family burying ground. The Countess died a few days ago, but it is understood, that Lord Salisbury was not informed of her death. Her funeral will take place at Hatfield at noon to-day.

LIPTON IS HOPEFUL.

Says Shamrock Did the Best Work When She Had Any Wind.

New York, Aug. 22.—Forecaster Emery, at the Weather Bureau, yesterday sent out a special forecast for the vicinity of the yacht race course for to-day. He prophesies a good southerly breeze and clear skies. The special is as follows:

"The weather Saturday over the international yacht race course will be fair to partly cloudy, with fresh southerly winds; probably shifting to southwesterly."



SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

Lipton Is Hopeful.

Sir Thomas Lipton said yesterday: "I have not lost hope in the slightest. The conditions Thursday were the worst I have ever seen off Sandy Hook. I have been here since June and we never had anything so bad. It was purely a matter of luck. The Reliance was getting all the wind she wanted to foot away from us with, while the Shamrock was lying without a breath. Whenever we did get a breeze we lost no time in making up the Reliance's gain, but the luck never lasted with us.

"The Shamrock, while the wind lasted, did better work Thursday than the Reliance. Others may say what they like on this matter, but this is my positive belief."

ALMOST FROM BIRTH.

"Almost from birth my little girl was troubled with bronchitis and a harsh, hacking couth. Angier's Petroleum Emulsion was prescribed. It cured her cough, and she almost immediately gained in flesh and color. To-day she is strong and robust."—Al Pudsey, Toronto, Canada.

AGAINST THE G.T.P.

Belville Motion Failed by a Large Majority in the Commerce Congress—Important Resolutions.

Montreal, Aug. 22.—The conclusion of the Imperial Trade Congress was spirited and fraught with much business of grave importance to Canada. The closing chapter of the important commercial record was written in terms of loyalty to the Crown and the person of the King, a cable being authorized to convey these sentiments to His Majesty.

Blow to Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. R. J. Graham of the Belleville Board of Trade moved the following resolution, seconded by Mr. C. H. Lugrin of Victoria, B. C.:

"It is resolved that the transcontinental railways of Canada, those existing and those projected, are in the opinion of this Congress for the general advantage not merely of Canada, but of the Empire, and should receive some Imperial support and consideration in any proposed plan of Imperial federation, not merely on the ground that they furnish rapid and effective modes of transportation of troops and munitions of war for Imperial defence, but also on the ground that they also form the chief land links in the chain of British commerce and are the inlets to and outlets from the granary of the Empire and essential to the future food supply of Great Britain."

There were no speeches, and on the motion being put Lord Brassey declared the motion lost by a large majority.

State-Owned Cables.

The next subject considered was telegraphy, the London resolution upon this subject was withdrawn and that of the Toronto and Ottawa Boards, moved by Sir Sanford Fleming and seconded by Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, of Brantford, was unanimously carried as follows:—

"That in the opinion of this Congress all the self-governing British communities around the globe should be united by a continuous chain of State-owned telegraphs, that such an inter-Imperial line of communication would under Government control put an end to the difficulty which has been caused by the allied cable companies in Australia and remove all friction which has arisen between the partners in the Pacific cable; that it would lower charges to a minimum on over sea messages passing between New Zealand, Australia, India and South Africa and the West Indies, Newfoundland, Canada and the mother country; that it would provide a double means of communication at low uniform rates between the mother country or any one British State and all self-governing British States; that it would constitute the most effective means by which the several Governmental units of the Empire may hold communion with each other whenever they desire, and that, while it would be of the highest importance to the commercial and social interests of the British people around the world, it would by the subtle force of the electricity at once promote the consolidation of the Empire and prove an indispenable factor in Imperial unity."

Wireless Telegraphy.

Sir Sanford Fleming had charge of the resolution regarding wireless telegraphy being added to the equipment of lighthouses and lightships. Owing to the pressure of time Sir Sanford merely moved the resolution, and it was seconded by Mr. Cockshutt of Brantford and carried unanimously.

Other Subjects Passed Upon.

Other business included resolutions asking for an inquiry into the unsatisfactory state of the trade marks' regulations throughout the Empire. Other resolutions favored the assimilation of the patent laws throughout the Empire, codification of at least one branch of commercial law before next meeting, protesting against the British embargo of Canadian cattle, favoring the promotion of commercial education, advocating the establishment of conciliation boards for the settlement of trades' disputes, also demanding the passage of a bankruptcy law in Canada.

Then came the final scenes. The big hall had filled up gradually, and Lord Brassey moved the usual votes of thanks. The Congress then adjourned singing the National Anthem.

OPEN AIR TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

The modern treatment for tuberculosis requires the patient to spend practically his whole time in the open air. Regarding the theory Dr. J. H. Kellogg writes as follows in "Modern Medicine" for July:

"It has been clearly shown by numerous experiments in various parts of the United States that the out-of-door life with regular hygienic habits, irrespective of latitude or special climatic advantages is capable of aiding the natural powers of the body so as to effect a cure of this formidable malady without the use of drugs of any sort.

"Tuberculosis is a disease of civilization. It scarcely exists at all among savages who live in a primitive state, but quickly appears among such people when the habits of civilization are adopted, especially the indoor life. The South American monkey and the North American Indian alike fall victims to this disease when shut away from the sunlight and active exercise out of doors.

"The time is not far distant when every large city will find it necessary to provide conveniences for the application of this simple curative measure, not only for the purpose of rescuing victims of pulmonary tuberculosis from the certain fate which awaits them, but as an essential measure for protecting the public health."

The doctor quotes from a paper read before the American Congress of Tuberculosis last year by Dr. Henry Mcllatton, vice-president of the Congress, the following interesting illustration of the stamping out of tuberculosis disease in a group of families who were threatened with extinction from this terrible plague:

"About 1790, there landed at Trujillo, on the Caribbean Sea, a party of Spanish emigrants. This party consisted of members of ten families of the Spanish nobility—families who were so tuberculous that they decided to emigrate rather than become extinct. They worked their way in the course of time across Central America and settled on the Pacific slope, not far from Tegucigalpa, and at the altitude of about twenty-five hundred feet, in probably one of the most even and healthful climates in the world. They have always been purely agricultural and pastoral. Even to-day there is not a road leading to this colony—nothing but trails, and it is a journey of days to reach them from the nearest port. Their village is built in accordance with the climatic requirements. They hold themselves far above the surrounding Indians, and there has been practically no intermarriage between them and their neighbors. They present the purest strain of Spanish blood in America.

"The Indians, ten or fifteen days' ride from this colony, never fail to speak of it—always as "El pueblo de los blancos,' the village of the whites—and to extol the physique and endurance of the men as well as the beauty and virtue of the women, which opinion the few specimens that I saw fully upheld.

"The history of these people was given me in a personal interview by Don Torencio Sierra, President of Honduras, and a most highly educated gentleman.

"Dr. O. B. Hunter, of San Padro Sula, a graduate of Tulane University, learning their history, became so much interested in them that he spent some time in their village with the sole object of learning their present condition. He met some of the children of the original emigrants, now old men and women, who in every way corroborated the above history.

"Dr. Hunter informs me that they are the finest race of people in Central America. After careful inquiries, he could get no history of tuberculosis for a long period back, and at present none of them give physical evidence of this disease in any of its forms."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Can it be that the Toronto Star is "switching" on the G.T.P. scheme? It says: "When pirates were found on the high seas they were given no quarter. When they are met in the lobbies of Parliament they are treated differently."

A gentleman asks The Intelligencer to propose that the Mayor call a public meeting in the near future, at which the three delegates sent by the Board of Trade to the Trade Congress at Montreal be requested to give their fellow-citizens a report of what took place there, as it impressed itself on them, together with whatever other items of interest they may have to unfold. The idea is a good one, and we have no doubt that many would be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear the three "Congressmen" who so recently hobnobbed with sons of the Empire who hail from all points of the compass and sit in the seats of the mighty.

LACTATED FOOD

The Only Perfect Substitute for Healthy Breast Milk.

Many infants waste because they are starved, and still their condition cannot be described to lack of feeding: for, if fed from breasts which secrete milk poor in quality and insufficient for the support of the little ones, they can but waste with startling rapidity.

Many a child is starved at the breast, so that it becomes an easy prey to disease, because its mother dreads to wean it in the early summer. If a child must be fed, hot weather is no objection. There are many substitutes for mother's milk, and while some may be deserving of confidence as nutrients, it is an established fact that Lactated Food is the only perfect substitute for healthy breast milk: it is the only prepared food that contains the essentials so necessary where nutrition is called for. Lactated Food is the only perfect nourisher for infants and young children; it is easily digested; it is the great protector against disease and the common summer complaints.

Women and Wages.

It has often been explained that one reason why men get higher wages than women is that they do not give up their work as soon as they have become experts, as women usually do. In Germany nine-tenths of all saleswomen leave their occupation (usually to get married) before they are twenty-six years old.

Keep Your Feet Dry.

Never sit in a damp shoe. Maybe you think that unless your shoes are positively wet a change is not necessary. This is a fallacy. The least dampness in the sole in its evaporation absorbs the heat from the foot. In a few minutes the feet will be damp and cold, and perspiration is dangerously checked.

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low

"I don't want to bore you, old man, but I just had to follow you. I saw from your looks as you left the ballroom that something was wrong, and I am afraid I know what it is. You see, Captain Barclay is a rough, outspoken man, and he made a remark the other day which reached me. I wasn't sure it was true, so I didn't mention it; but I reckon my informant knew what he was talking about."

Alan nodded despondently. "I asked her to go to church with me tomorrow night. She was awfully embarrassed and finally told me of her father's objections."

"I think I know what fired the old devil up," said Miller.

"You do?"

"Yes. It was that mistake of your father. As I told you, the colonel is as mad as a wet hen about the whole thing. He's got a rope tied to every nickel he's got, and he intends to leave Dolly a good deal of money. He thinks Frank Hillhouse is just the thing. He shows that as plain as day. He noticed how frequently you came to see Dolly and scented danger ahead and simply put his foot down on it, just as fathers have been doing ever since the flood. My dear boy, you've got a bitter pill to take, but you've got to swallow it like a man. You've reached a point where two roads fork. It is for you to decide which one you'll take."

Alan made no reply. Rayburn Miller lighted a cigar and began to smoke steadily.

"It's none of my business," Miller burst out suddenly, "but I'm friend enough of yours to feel this thing like the devil. However, I don't know what to say. I only wish I knew how far you've gone into it."

Alan smiled mechanically.

"If you can't look at me and see how far I've gone, you are blind," he said.

"I don't mean that," replied Miller. "I was wondering how far you had committed yourself—oh, hang it!—made love and all that sort of thing."

"I've never spoken to her on the subject," Alan informed him gloomily.

"Good, good! Splendid!"

Alan stared in surprise.

"I don't understand," he said. "She knows—that is, I think she knows—how I feel, and I have hoped that"—

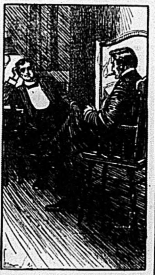
"Never mind about that," interrupted Miller laconically. "There is a chance for both of you if you'll turn square around like sensible human beings and look the facts in the face."

"You mean"—

"That it will be stupid, childish idiocy for either or both of you to let this thing spoil your lives."

"I don't understand you."

"Well, you will before I'm through with you, and I'll do you up brown.



"It's none of my business," Miller burst out suddenly.

There are simply two courses open to you, my boy. One is to treat Colonel Barclay's wishes with dignified respect and bow and retire just as any European gentleman would do when told that his pile was too small to be considered."

"And the other?" asked Alan sharply.

"The other is to follow in the footsteps of nearly every sentimental fool that ever was born and go around looking like a last year's bird's nest or, worse yet, persuading the girl to elope and thus angering her father so that he will cut her out of what's coming to her and what is her right, my boy. She may be willing to live on a bread and water diet for awhile, but she'll lose flesh and temper in the long run. If you don't make as much money for her as you cause her to lose, she'll tell you of it some day or, at least, let you see it, and that's as long as it's wide. You are now giving yourself a treatment in self hypnotism, telling yourself that life has not and cannot produce a thing for you beyond that particular pink frock and yellow head. I know how you feel. I've been there six different times, beginning with a terrible long first attack and dwindling down as I became inoculated with experience till now the complaint amounts to hardly more than a momentary throe when I see a fresh one in a train for an hour's ride. I can do you a lot of good if you'll listen to me. I'll give you the benefit of my experience."

"What good would your devilish experience do me?" said Alan impatiently.

"It would fit any man's case if he'd only believe it. I've made a study of love. I've observed hundreds of typical cases and watched marriage from inception through protracted illness or boredom down to dumb resignation or sudden death. I don't mean that no lovers of the ideal, sentimental brand are ever happy after marriage, but I do believe that open eyed courtship will beat the blind sort all hollow and that in nine cases out of ten, if people were mated by law according to the judgment of a sensible, open eyed jury, they would be happier than they now are. Nothing ever spoken is truer than the commandment, 'Thou shalt have no other God but me.' Let a man put anything above the principle of living right, and he will be miserable. The man who holds gold as the chief thing in life will starve to death in its cold glitter, while a pauper in rags will have a laugh that rings with the music of immortal joy. In the same way the man who declares that only one woman is suited to him is making a god of her, raising her to a seat that won't support her dead, material weight. I frankly believe that the glamour of love is simply a sort of insanity that has never been correctly named and treated because so many people have been the victims of it."

"Do you know," Alan burst in almost angrily, "when you talk that way I think you are off. I know what's the matter with you—you have simply frittered away your heart, your ability to love and appreciate a good woman. Thank heaven, your experience has not been mine! I don't see how you could ever be happy with a woman. I couldn't look a pure wife in the face and remember all the flirtations you've indulged in—that is, if they were mine."

"There you go," laughed Miller. "Make it personal. That's the only way the average lover argues. I am speaking in general terms. Let me finish. Take two examples—first, the chap crazily in love, who faces life with the red rag of his infatuation—his girl. No parental objection, everything smooth and a carload of silverware, a clock for every room in the house. They start out on their honeymoon, doing the chief cities at the biggest hotels and the theaters in the three dollar seats. They soon tire of themselves and lay it to the trip. Every day they rake away a handful of glamour from each other till, when they reach home, they have come to the conclusion that they are only human, and not the highest order at that. For awhile they have a siege of discontent, wondering where it's all gone. Finally the man is forced to go about his work, and the woman gets to making things to go on the backs of chairs and trying to spread her trousseau over the next year, and they begin to court resignation. Now, if they had not had the glamour attack they would have got down to business sooner, that's all, and they would have set a better example to other plungers. Now for the second illustration: Poverty on one side, boodle on the other; more glamour than in other case because of the gulf between. They get married; they have to. They've inherited the stupid idea that the Lord is at the bottom of it and that the glamour is his smile. Like the other couple, their eyes are finally opened to the facts, and they

CAUSED BY THE HEAT.

A Rash on Baby's Skin That Often Alarms Careful Mothers.

During the summer months a rash often appears on the face, neck and body of babies and small children which is liable to alarm the careful mother. It is due to the excessive heat, and while not dangerous, is the cause of much suffering. Immediate relief is given by dusting the eruption liberally with Baby's Own Powder, which may be had at any druggist's, but to cure the trouble a medicine must be given that will cool the blood of the little sufferer. Baby's Own Tablets will be found a positive blessing in such cases and will soon restore the clearness and beauty of baby's skin. Mrs. Clifton Cuyler, of Kincardine, Ont., says: "My baby had a rash break out on her face and all over her body. I gave her medicine but the eruption never left her until I gave her Baby's Own Tablets, and after using them a short time the rash entirely disappeared. I have also given her the Tablets for constipation with the best of results. They act gently but promptly, and always make baby quiet and restful. I think the tablets a splendid medicine for young children." Baby's Own Tablets may be had from all druggists at 25 cents per box, and Baby's Own Powder at the same price. If you prefer to order direct they will be sent post paid on receipt of price by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

EMERSON'S PROSE STYLE.

Held to Be Lacking In the Quality of Writers Called Masters.

What shall be said of Emerson's prose? Was Matthew Arnold right when, as an experienced critic calmly judging the favorite author of his youth, he denied that the "Essays," the lectures and "English Traits" formed a body of prose of sufficient merit to entitle Emerson to be ranked as a great man of letters? It seems as if the time had come for Emerson's countrymen frankly to accept this verdict. Because of deficiencies, both of style and of romance, Emerson does not belong to the small class of the great masters of prose. His style, despite the fact that "Nature" and many of the essays contain pages of eloquent prose almost equal in power and beauty to noble poetry, was nearly always that of the lecturer or preacher rather than that of the writer. He too frequently lost the note of distinction and was content if he satisfied his far from exigent audiences. In diction, to be sure, he was a conscious and consummate master, and it need scarcely be said that few writers have surpassed him in the ability to compose a pregnant sentence. But, as is generally admitted and as is shown by his practice of piecing his notes together, he was rarely able to evolve a paragraph, much more a whole essay, in a masterly or even in a workmanlike fashion. It may be granted that critics have overemphasized his lack of coherence, that there is more logical unity in his essays than appears on first reading, that "English Traits" and the later volumes are far from being mere strings of "orphic sayings," but the fact seems to remain that the prose style of Emerson from first to last lacks the firmness, the compass, the precision, the flexibility, the individuality we demand of the prose writers whom we denominate masters.—Professor Trent in Bookman.

MIGHTY TREES OF SIERRA.

Greatest In Size of All Creations of the Living World.

During all the ages nature has favored the growth of forests on the Pacific mountains, providing the peculiar conditions which make them far different from, greater in size, more luxuriant, than any other in the world. Of all the creations of the living world none is so great in size, so majestic in presence, as the mighty trees of the Sierra and the Cascades. For here the air is always fertile with moisture, clouds blown in from the Pacific ocean rest among the mountain summits, even crowning the tops of the trees themselves, and here discharge their rain. The soil is deep and spongy with centuries of decomposing vegetable matter, furnishing an unequaled nurturing place for vegetation, and there are no extremes of heat in summer or depths of cold in winter, says the Century Magazine.

Every condition has been favorable to unexampled exuberance of growth not only of the largest trees, but of all manner of undergrowth, vine, shrub and brake. A huge tree falls, decays and is yellowed with thick moss. Immediately scores of young firs and cedars spring up along the top of it—the first chance of a bare spot in the wood. Old burned stumps, gathering soil in their hollow interiors, are nurseries for colonies of young trees, some strong individual finally shouldering out the others, growing larger, and, as the mother stump drops away, sending its roots downward into the earth through the disintegrating textures until it in time becomes a great tree.

Women's Strength In Tears.

The weakest woman in all the world is armed with one weapon against which man's pride and strength are powerless. Her tears will win when everything else has failed. A woman's tears move her own tender sex as well as the sterner masculine brutes. Old and young yield to their potential spell, and when the woman happens to be pretty there is no telling what will follow when her bright eyes grow misty with these messengers from a wounded heart. It is folly to attempt to stand out against a woman's tears. They have caused revolutions. They have made and unmade many a great cause. They can be met in only one way — unconditional surrender.—Exchange.

Placing Him Right.

As a northern express drew up at a station in the early morning for a few minutes' wait, a pleasant looking gentleman stepped out on the platform, and, inhaling the fresh air, enthusiastically observed to the guard:

"Isn't this invigorating?"

"No, sir; it is Normanton," said the conscientious employee.

The pleasant looking gentleman retired.—London Telegraph.

Absence.

"We are here today," said the solemn looking man with a thin neck and a collar three sizes too large for him, "and gone tomorrow."

"That's right," agreed the dyspeptic looking man with the ivory black cigar, "and when we get back six months later some of our best friends want to know where we've been for the last two weeks."—Puck.

A Stamp Wasted.

Pettishly she stamped her foot. They were standing on the corner. He had offended her in some way. Again she stamped her foot.

"Well," he said slowly, "here is a letter box, but you must know you can't drop your foot in it. You are simply wasting postage."

Revenge is a kind of wild justice which the more man's nature runs to the more ought law to weed it out.—Bacon.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

All trails are long to the lazy.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

Here is another argument in favor of old boys' reunions. The Hamilton Herald says: "Already the Herald has learned of four cases of family quarrels and estrangements being healed through the kindly feeling engendered by the old boys' reunion—of family circles, sundered in anger many years ago, being happily united. Doubtless there have been many another such happy outcome of this little 'era of good feeling'."

Excitement over the flag incident at Trenton has not yet died out. Somebody signing himself "Jack Canuck" writes as follows to The Advocate: "Although the young man's action has been condemned by the local press his spirit is commendable. If more Canadians took the stand he took they would be thought far more of and Carnegie, Depew and other Americans would not talk of her as "the spoiled child" and hurl mud, then offer her a new library from money wrung from the starving laborers, which the Canadians have not always the spirit to refuse. One in Four Has Piles

FOR WHICH DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT IS AN ABSOLUTE AND GUARANTEED CURE.

One person in every four suffers more or less from itching piles, some do not know the nature of their ailment and others have not heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the only absolute and guaranteed cure for this distressing disease. If you are a sufferer from piles, pin worms, or any itching skin disease, ask your neighbor about this great preparation. It has grown popular as a result of the news of its merits being passed from friend to friend. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Prospects Good for Finishing in Time To-day — A 12 Knot Wind Blowing.

New York, August 22nd.—There is every indication that the big yachts will to-day be able to complete the first race for the America's cup within the time limit. At 8 o'clock there was a 10-knot breeze from the southwest. The weather is clear. At 9 o'clock the official gauge of the Weather Bureau at Sandy Hook showed the wind blowing steadily from the southwest at 13 miles an hour.

New York, 10 a.m.—Shamrock has reached the lightship, under sail. Reliance in tow, about half-way out. Wind 12 knots.

Sandy Hook, 10.40 a.m.—Boats are jockeying for the start.

New York, 10.43 a.m.—By Marconi wireless—The start has been postponed, as the committee has decided to shift the course. The yachts are sailing about the lighthouse. Wind 10 to 12 knots and a heavy sea running.

Sandy Hook, 11 a.m.—Boats not started yet. Wind now 15 miles per hour.

11.30 a.m.—Boats started at 11.15. Shamrock has slight lead.

11.40 a.m.—Shamrock has slight lead now, but very small. Reliance crossed the line first.

12.05 p.m.—Shamrock leads by 100 yards.

12.35 p.m.—Reliance now 50 yards in the lead, and increasing her lead. Wind now 10 knots.

12.48 p.m.—The Reliance is now about 80 yards ahead, and increasing her lead very slowly. The race so far has been very close. Breeze dying down.

1 p.m.—Shamrock gaining on Reliance.

1.20 p.m.—It looks as if the yachts will make the outward mark on this tack. The Reliance is leading by about a quarter of a mile.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES HAVE BEEN DISMISSED.

G.T.R. DISCHARGES ENGINEER, CONDUCTOR AND BRAKEMAN.

Kingston, Aug. 21.—The Grand Trunk Railway Co. has made a dismissal of employes as a result of the investigation into the cause of the collision between two freight trains here last Sunday morning. Engineer John Gurney, of Belleville, who was primarily to blame in having moved past the semaphore lights resigned. King Rogers, engineer, of Belleville, Conductor Collier and Brakeman J. M. McGee, of the westbound train, are the dismissed ones. McGee is blamed for not flagging the down train, and Collier for not seeing that this was done. The company is weeding out its oldest employes for trivial mishaps. Three well-known conductors, W. Pappa, John Germain and G. Collier have been numbered among the lot.

THE CRAWLING OF CANCER

One of the Symptoms by Which The Disease May be Distinguished.

A characteristic of a cancerous growth, distinguishing it from other lumps and growths, is a peculiar sensation of creeping or crawling which comes over the part affected.

Anyone suffering from a growth attended by such symptoms, should hasten to procure treatment without delay. The most effectual remedy that can be used is our Constitutional Treatment. It eradicates the cancer germs and poisons from the system and completely cures the disease without the necessity of resorting to painful operations. Send two stamps for full particulars. B. I. TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT TWEED VILLAGE THIS MORNING.

ONTARIO POWDER COMPANY'S PACK HOUSE BLEW UP, DEMOLISHING IT, AND BLOWING THREE MEN TO FRAGMENTS — REMAINS WERE HANGING IN THE TREES.

UNFORTUNATE MEN ALL MARRIED — CONCUSSION FELT EIGHTEEN MILES AWAY.

Tweed, Ont., Aug. 22.—At ten minutes past ten this morning the Ontario Powder Company's pack-house blew up.

The village was quite severely shaken by the explosion, and in a few seconds the streets were full of excited and alarmed people.

The source of the shock was quickly discovered and a general rush to the scene ensued.

The building was literally lifted from its foundations and torn to splinters, its location being now only marked by a black smoking spot.

Three men, Charles Moon, Lyman Moon and Edward Tebeau, who were working in the building, were blown to fragments.

Various pieces of the bodies of the men were to be seen hanging in the trees which surrounded the building. The two former were brothers and all three were married men.

Glass was broken in several places in the village, including one light of plate glass in the store of Mr. T. R. Preston, but no serious damage was done outside of the powder company's premises.

The explosion was distinctly heard at Tamworth, about 18 miles distant, as the crow flies.

Dear Sir:—Through the kindness of a friend supplying me with a bottle of the O.R. Kidney Cure, I am now able to work, the first I have done in four years. I commenced improving before I had taken the first bottle, and before the third was finished I was able to start working. Before taking the O.R. Kidney Cure I tried different preparations without receiving any benefit. I feel much better now, and am sure that I have received a permanent cure.

Wishing you every success, I remain, yours very sincerely,

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dtf

Munyon's Witness
GEO. BARBEAU TELLS HOW HE WAS CURED.

"I had the first twinges of Rheumatism last fall. I first noticed it in my knee, and finally it went all through my body, and my knees were swollen up like bladders, and red, as if filled with blood. I secured two vials of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure, and the swelling soon went down in my feet, so much so that my wife could put on my shoes for me. I take a dose of pills once in a while simply as a preventive. The pains have all gone and have not returned since I first started taking them."—Mr. George Barbeau, 13 Nicholas street, Ottawa.

LIFE IN ENGLISH VILLAGES.

It Is Not the Idyllic Form That Poets Sing About.

"I know a village where there are no fewer than thirty cottages with but one bedroom apiece, and in each of these single bedrooms six, seven and more people are sleeping," says A. Montefiore-Bruce, writing in the London Mail about life in the average English village. "In one of them, father, mother and eight children huddled together. In another, father, mother and six children—three of whom are grown up—are sleeping. In these cottages there is one living room downstairs and no sanitary arrangement of any kind. At the back of the cottages runs an open ditch. It is also an open sewer.

"Here, in the very heart of the country, I expect to find abundance of pure water, abundance of sweet air. Too often I find neither about the cottages. Hundreds of villages have no water supply, though a comparatively small expenditure could provide it. I know a village—it is typical of hundreds—where the cottagers have to go half a mile to get water. A foul ditch furnishes another village with the whole of its water supply. Offensive refuse heaps lie piled round the crumbling walls of the cottages. The wooden floors within are rotten with sewage.

"Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex contain many such villages, and other counties—such as Bedford, Cambridgeshire, Wiltshire, Dorset, Somerset—easily vie with them. I could write of lonely cottages far across the fields, with no water within a mile, whence the children morning after morning walk two miles to school, and drag their tired limbs that distance back again at night—and this whatever the weather; where the postal service comes but once a week; where the men and boys walk daily five or six miles to and from work; where of drainage there is none; where of the simplest sanitation there is none; where the medical officer of health comes not, and where the inspector of nuisances is unknown."

MEXICAN CUSTOMS.

Female friends kiss on both cheeks when greeting or taking leave.

Gentlemen speak first when passing lady acquaintances on the street.

When a Mexican speaks to you of his home he refers to it as "your house."

The sofa is the seat of honor, and a guest waits to be invited to occupy it.

Men and women in the same social circles call each other by their first names.

Mexican gentlemen remove their hats as scrupulously upon entering a business office as in a private residence.

Dinner calls are not customary, but upon rising from the table the guest thanks his host for the entertainment.

After a dance the gentleman returns his partner to her seat beside her parents or chaperon and at once leaves her side.

The fashionable call of a few minutes is unknown. A lady who arrives at 4 o'clock will remain until 6 or 7. The calls of intimate friends are half day visits.

Her Little Joke.

They were in the studio. Artists' trappery and bohemian paraphernalia were placed about the room with studied carelessness.

Heavy tapestries and portieres choked the walls. Costly statuary, mediæval firearms, poniards, yataghans and priceless and historic armor were ranged idly about the room.

Seated on a heavily upholstered divan, eying the American heiress at work on an intricate landscape, was the duke.

"Bah Jove!" he ejaculated suddenly. "Do you know, Miss Millyins, I'm wrapped up in you and"—

"Huh!" interrupted the wealthy maiden with Yankee sarcasm. "I don't see why you should be wrapped up. I haven't bought you yet."

The duke sat dumfounded, wondering what there was in her remark to cause a smile to break out over her sweet visage.

Monkey and Parrot In Brazil.

In Brazil monkeys and parrots have interests in common. They not only roost in the same trees, but work for mutual benefit. The monkeys cannot easily pick the big Brazil nut husks from the trees, so the parrots gnaw them loose, allowing them to drop, the fall to the ground splitting them. Then the monkeys tear the cracked husks asunder, gather the nuts and divide them with the parrots. Sometimes, when the husks fail to split, the monkeys carry them up to the highest limbs of the tree and let them drop again. Monkey and parrot enjoy their harvest side by side.

Rivals In Misfortune.

People are very often proud of the properties to which they are heirs, but surely few landed estates are so vaunted, few castles are so boasted about, as are the ills to which the flesh is heir. Human nature fairly revels in its misfortunes, and this revelry leads to rivalry and to many complications. None is so proud, none is so jealous, as your traveling invalid.—London Queen.

A Good Reason.

Mrs. Greene—What do you have an alarm clock in your chamber for if you don't have the alarm wound up?

Mrs. Gray—If you could have heard the awful things my husband said when the alarm went off, you wouldn't ask me.

Do as They Please.

Dick—Those folks next door have an awful good time.

Dora—How?

Dick—Oh, they don't have to go anywhere, and they don't entertain.—Exchange.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality. Handsome illustrated publications sent free on application to J. D. FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK

SIMPLE FISHER FOLK

THE NEWFOUNDLANDERS ARE EASILY IMPOSED UPON.

A Pathetic and Tragic Incident That Illustrates the Attitude of the "Upper" Classes—The Hardy Courage of the Outporters.

"St. John's, N. F., lives by its fisheries; nothing worth while is produced there, but, according to the unsophisticated stranger, there is a noisy and vituperative wrangling over the wealth that comes down from the coasts," says a writer in the World's Work. "There are some few factories, to be sure, but they are too ingeniously managed by half. For instance, a certain brand of tobacco, made at St. John's and exclusively consumed by fishermen, is sold in the French island of St. Pierre for half what it costs the Newfoundland 'bay noddle,' and the manufacturers pay $15,000 yearly to the proprietor of a rival concern to induce him to keep his plant shut down. At St. John's, too, is the aristocracy of the colony—merchants, middlemen, lawyers, physicians, officeholders, tricky and abusive politicians and colonial knights (the visitor may observe on a signboard above a little corner store: 'Sir Thomas Morburn, Grocer. Cheap Teas'). There is neither sympathy nor mercy for the fisherman here, though there is a most enthusiastic reception for what he takes from the sea. He is regarded as legitimate prey, is most marvelously lied to before election and abused, ridiculed and reviled afterward. But through it all he preserves a humble faith in 'all those set in authority over him.'

"A doctor of the outports—the incident is related because, though it may appear an extraordinary case, it yet aptly indicates what has for years been the attitude of the 'upper' classes toward the fishermen, without whom Newfoundland would lie waste and deserted, the shame of the fair earth—a doctor of the outports was once called to a little white cottage where three children lay sick of diphtheria. He was the family physician—that is to say, the fisherman paid him so much by the year for medical attendance. But the injection of antitoxin is a 'surgical operation' and therefore not provided for by the annual fee.

"'This,' said the doctor, 'will cost you $2 an injection, John.'

"'Oh, iss, zur!' was the ready reply. 'I'll pay you, zur. Go on, zur.'

"'But you know my rule, John—no pay, no work. I can't break it for you, you know, or I'd have to break it for half the coast.'

"'Oh, aye! 'Tis all right. I wants un cured. I'll pay you when I sells me fish.'

"'But you know my rule, John—cash down.'

"The fisherman had but $4, no more. Nor could he obtain any more, though the doctor gave him ample time. I am sure that he loved his children dearly, but, unfortunately, he had no more than $4, and there was no other doctor for fifty miles up and down the coast.

"'Four dollars,' said the doctor, 'two children. Which ones shall it be, John?'

"Which ones? Why, of course, after all, the doctor had himself to make the choice. John couldn't. So the doctor chose the 'handiest' ones. The other one died.

"'Well,' said John, unresentfully, the day after the funeral, 'I s'pose a doctor have a right t' be paid for what he does. But,' much puzzled, ''tis kind o' queer!'

"The Newfoundland outporters are hardy, courageous, boldly adventurous, simple lived, God fearing, warm hearted—a physically splendid race of men. Cowards and weaklings have for four hundred years been the unfit of the place; they occur, of course, in the best regulated families, but do not long survive, for exposure kills off the weaklings, and in the midst of many dangers the cowards lose their lives. Children learn to sail a punt at six or seven years old, and at every age they are encouraged to play at the highly dangerous game (called copying) of prancing about on floating ice. The skill acquired in leaping from one sinking block to another would make the trumpeted river driver look like a blundering child. As men, they know their punts as intimately as a cowboy knows his horse, and they will say of their boats in a gale, 'I thought she'd not live through it t'day,' with the same unconcern that a cowboy might say of his horse, 'He nearly throwed me that time.' The race is truly hardy and courageous. It was John Butt, with a broken collar bone and a split forehead to show for it, who survived two wild, snowy nights and a day on a twenty foot ice pan, over which for many hours broke great seas, heavy with jagged fragments of ice, and it was a reckless Green bay skipper who let the wind blow the masts out of his schooner rather than reef her, because he had been told that his crew thought him 'nervous'—a mad sort of courage, to be sure, but proof positive for all time that he was no coward."

Already There.

She—I heard you complimenting her upon her girlish appearance. What did she say?

He—She said, "Ah, but I'm sure I shall look much older when I'm forty."

She—Huh! She means she'll look much older when she admits she is forty.

His Title.

"How did he get his title of colonel?"

"He got it to distinguish him from his wife's first husband, who was a captain, and his wife's second husband, who was a major."—Exchange.

RELIABLE SCHOOL CLOTHING.

Another holiday season is about over. In a few days from camp and country the boys will be returning ready to take up school duties—and enjoyments— with renewed energy.

In all probability ninety-nine out of every hundred will require clothing for either every day or best.

Makes little difference which kind is wanted—we are confident of our ability to please you in either. Here are some of the reasons for our confidence—

OUR STYLES ARE RIGHT.

We purchase our Boys' clothing from manufacturers who make but one style—the latest. You'll find no "has beens" in the assortment. Every suit has the freshness of recent and careful tailoring.

All in desirable styles that will make immediate friends with the boys.

OUR QUALITIES ARE RIGHT.

Years ago we made it a rule not to sell merchandise of any kind on which we could not place our guarantee of "Perfect satisfaction or money refunded."

This principle we have in our clothing department as elsewhere.

Qualities other that the best would not stand such liberal terms.

OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT.

This feature probably more than any other is responsible for our rapidly increasing trade.

People quickly find where values are high and prices moderate.

Many garments that leave us are directly responsible for the sale of others.

None leave here that will not meet up to our reputation—"Best values at lowest cash prices."

Space permits special mention of but two worthy styles—many others as good.

POPULAR PRICED SUITS $2.50.

With many this is a popular price for rough usuage suits. It will be popular with many more when the value of our school suits at this figure becomes known.

Neat in appearance—fine workmanship—good trimmings—made from firm serviceable material, they contain all desirable points at a price affordable by all.

—Boys' fine Tweed Suits in neat patterns, sizes from 22 to 34 Suits that contain much more value than the price stands for elsewhere........$2.50

FINE WORSTED SUITS.

For a fine suit no material quite meets the demand as well as Worsted.

Best buying facilities are directly responsible for the excellence of three lines of Boys' heavy Navy and Black Worsted 3 piece Suits.

The worthiness of the garments induced us to give an order large enough to bring to selling exclusively to us.

A few minutes inspection will show you, as it did us, their superiority over any you have seen at the price.

—Boys' fine all wool Clay Worsted 3 piece Suits in Black and Navy. Lines worthy of our store and your inspection........$5.00, $6.50, $7.50

$5.00 SILK WAISTS $3.95.

Our ability to handle large quantities enables us to make this Silk blouse offering,

All Fall styles, silk sewn and finished in the manner that marks first class workmanship.

Did we buy them regular our selling price would be $5.00. We accepted the offer of a manufacturer for a large quantity and so this price results.

Each blouse is neatly packed in a separate box.

You'll best appreciate the worthiness of this offering by visiting our Mantle room and making a personal examination.

—Ladies' fine Japan Taffeta Blouses in Sky Blue, Pink, Cardinal, White, Black and Reseda trimmed with Sherring and Tucks—newest sleeve tucked on top from shoulder to elbow—neat collar and cuffs, self color lining—a very pretty waist, regular $5.00, for........$3.95

STYLISH SILK UNDERSKIRTS.

The ready-to-wear garment feature has brought the Black Silk Underskirts in reach of many of who before did not feel able to pay the prices asked.

Our new assortment is here. The dainty styles and excellent workmanship of these we have never equalled at the prices.

Every Skirt is lined with black lustre. Actual test has proven that this greatly lengthens the life and preserves the shape.

Such dainty garments are a pleasure to display.

Ask to see them whether desirous of purchasing or not. Price from $5.00 to $11.00.

—Fine Black Silk Skirt with wide tucked flonce and 3 narrow frills—lustre lined........$5.00

—Fine heavy quality rustle Taffeta underskirt, with wide accordion plaited flounce and narrow frills—lustre lined........$7.50

—Fine extra wide Taffeta underskirts with 14 inch accordion plaited flounce and extra silk drop flounce—lustre lined a very stylish garment........$11.00

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during July and August the Grand Trunk Railway System in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation Co. will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. Train leaves Belleville 7 a.m. Napanee 7.43 a.m. 7 hours sail through the beautiful 1000 Islands of the St. Lawrence to Alexandria Bay and return. Round trip rate from Belleville $1.85, Napanee $1.35.

Over one-third of the land in Great Britain is owned by members of the House of Lords.

Never is time more precious than when some member of the family is attacked by colic, dysentery or any bowel trouble. The doctor is distant but if Perry Davis' Painkiller is near all danger is soon ended.

Ice Waggon on the Rampage.

A team of horses attached to A. Smith's ice waggon ran away on Charlotte street yesterday afternoon and a lively run they made for a while. The animals turned upon Commercial street and started on towards Front street, down Murney's hill, but had not proceeded far when the waggon collided with a pole on the side of the road. This caused the animals to be checked rather suddenly, where they were caught. The waggon was considerably damaged.

The Market.

There was a large market to-day and prices were as follows: Butter 22c to 23c, eggs 13c to 14c, chickens 40c to 75c per pair, ducks 75c to 90c per pair. Apples are plentiful, selling as low as 25c per bushel; potatoes 75c per bag.

TWENTY YEARS OF BRONCHITIS.

Captain Dunlop, of Kingston, commander of the steamer "Bohemian" of the R. & O. fleet, suffered unceasingly for twenty years, and although he took treatment all that time permanent relief was not obtained until he used "Catarrhozone," which cured him quickly and permanently. The captain says "Catarrhozone is the best cure for bronchitis on the face of the globe, pleasant to use, quick to relieve and sure to cure." Catarrhozone is a wonderful treatment for all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. Two months' treatment price $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Monster Black Bass.

Norwood Register:—On the 5th of August a black bass of unusual size was caught in Clear Lake. Messrs. John J. Irven, of Smithtown, and Philip Kard, of Cavendish, were still-fishing with poles in a canoe when the former succeeded, not without much difficulty in landing the magnificent catch. The fish was 22 inches long, 17 inches around and weighed 8 pounds.

THAT MARMORA FIRE.

A MARMORA CORRESPONDENT GIVES THE FOLLOWING ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

Marmora, Aug. 21.

Fire on Thursday afternoon destroyed the Roman Catholic Church in this village. About 2 o'clock the sacred edifice was discovered to be on fire, and although every effort was made to save the building, it proved futile. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The church was a brick veneered building, 70x40 feet, and had a belfry. It was in every respect commodious for the congregation which worshipped within its walls, and the interior was becomingly fitted up. The loss is a serious one to the Roman Catholics of Marmora. There was an insurance, we understand, of $3,000, but the loss was more than double that amount.

The manse, situated near the church, had a narrow escape from being destroyed. Considerable damage was sustained by fire and water, but the loss is covered by an insurance of $2,500 held by an agent in Belleville.

Sports and Pastimes

BASEBALL

"Copper" Jordan Pitched a Fine Game.

A Pawtucket, Mass., exchange gives an account of a game in that city, in which "Copper" Jordan, formerly of Belleville, was the winning pitcher. The opposing team was shut out by a score of 3-0, and the paper says, "Jordan pitched great ball and was found for but two hits." Nice work, that. He also participated in a triple play. A picture of the Pawtucket team is given, both Marks and Jordan showing up well in it.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

Died in Foxboro.

Mrs. Demorest died yesterday at the family residence, Foxboro, after a brief illness. Deceased was in her 42nd year and was born in Thurlow, her maiden name being Miss Easton. Mrs. Demorest was well known and a lady much esteemed. She was a member of the Methodist Church. A husband survives, and three brothers, George, Adam and Wm. Easton, all of Thurlow, and two sisters, Mrs Isaac McCutcheon, of Stirling, and Mrs. F. P. Casey, of Sidney.

Horse Drowned.

A few evenings ago Mr. Thos. Gee, of Canifton, had a team of horses stolen from his premises. Two days after one of the animals was found drowned in the river Moira at what is known as the "dead water." No trace of the other horse can be found.

A DIFFERENCE IN CLOTHING.

Yes, there is a big difference in clothing. You who have tried all around know that some suits are well made and wear well, and some are made only to sell. Now that is just the difference. The Oak Hall buy only such clothing as is made by reliable firms and every suit goes out under our positive guarantee. We are sole agents for Sanford's celebrated make.

Lost In the Mails.

The income of the British post office from money in envelopes having no or insufficient address is $30,000 or $35,000 a day.

Marriages.

Marriages average 3,000 a day in the whole world. Of 1,000 men who marry 332 marry younger women, 570 marry women of the same age and 98 older women.

Coltsfoot Tobacco.

Coltsfoot tobacco is smoked by the rustics in small country places in England and is called by them "the finest remedy on earth for catarrh." It is simply a powdered form of the leaves of the common coltsfoot, a plant found growing wild in chalky soil.

Embalming.

The danger of one's being buried alive is greatly reduced by the fact that three out of four of all dying are embalmed, a necessarily fatal operation.

The Oldest Flag.

Old Glory is literally the oldest flag now in use in any of the great nations of the earth, antedating the present ensigns of England, France, Germany, Spain, Russia or any other European power.

Queer Japanese Animals.

The Japanese believe in the existence of a crane which, after it has reached the age of 600 years, has no need of any sustenance except water. Their mythical dragon has the head of a camel, the horns of a deer, the eyes of a demon, the ears of an ox, the body of a serpent, the scales of a fish and the claws and wings of an eagle.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

The Men and Women Who Carry Chips on Their Shoulders.

The really unhappy man whose unhappiness is his own fault is the one who is forever carrying "a chip upon his shoulder." Perhaps his happiness is his unhappiness, for when he is not engaged in a personal altercation he is brooding over some fancied slight and awaiting a favorable opportunity to give vent to his wrath.

The man with the chip on his shoulder is easily recognized, and his society by wise people is carefully avoided. He can go nowhere without trouble following in his wake. If he attends a theater he is either annoyed by the usher or some one in the audience or at the man in the box office for not having sold him a seat bought long before he appeared at the window. He is the bane of the car conductor, and on the railroad train he succeeds in embroiling himself in a row with the brakeman, conductor, Pullman car porter and the passengers. Each flying cinder from the locomotive is aimed especially at his eyes, and he succeeds in stirring up the spirit of mutiny in the hearts of the travelers.

There are some women similarly constituted, who manage to be in trouble from the moment their eyes open in the morning till they close them in sleep. These people are indeed to be pitied, if indeed they are not cordially hated. This quarrelsome habit of mind can be so fostered that the petulancy grows to be a malignant disease and leads sometimes to the insane asylum. Parents who notice in their children this fretful, quarreling disposition can easily find a remedy. They may not agree to the measure—simply a good, sound thrashing. Every one has heard of the story of the child who was continually whimpering and quarreling. In despair the mother cried: "Are you sick? What do you want?" Gravely the child answered, "I think, mamma, I want a whipping." She received the whipping, and there was a marked improvement in her temper.

PICKINGS FROM FICTION.

What is genius? It is the power to be a boy again at will.—"Tommy and Grizel."

There is one consoling thing about being disillusioned—it presupposes the illusion.—"A Social Departure."

Thar never was a quicker way to kill courage in a feller than to fight his fights for 'im.—"The Substitute."

Women have us back to the condition of primitive man or they shoot us higher than the topmost star.—"The Egoist."

Tact is the exercise of that wit whereby woman renders man unconscious of the chains in which her beauty binds him.—"A Summer In New York."

When a man has once treated a matter as a joke, be it for ever so brief a period, he can never take it back again into the region of the highest tragedy, where alone danger lies.—"Flower o' the Corn."

Optimism in life is a good working hypothesis if by optimism we mean the open eyed faith that force exerted is never lost. Much that calls itself faith is only the blindness of self satisfaction.—"The Philosophy of Despair."

Perception of the Beautiful.

An instance of the Italian child's quick, poignant perception of the beautiful occurred the other day in one of the settlement libraries. A shy little maiden, with a world of dream thoughts in the depths of her dark eyes, stood by the librarian's desk waiting for Andrew Lang's "Gray Fairy Book." But when it was given into her small hands all the wealth of fairy lore between its covers was for a moment forgotten in contemplation of the cover, a dainty design in gray and silver. All thought of the story vanished. The child stood there eying the book with a look that was a caress, her hands just touching the binding, tenderly, as something of fragile beauty. And then, very softly, as if to herself, she said: "I mustn't get it the least bit dirty. It's so pretty."—Everybody's Magazine.

Lytton's Good Catch.

Bulwer-Lytton was once entertaining at Knebworth a young Australian when the visitor from Melbourne, shy and clumsy, took from the mantelpiece a piece of china lately given his host by a grateful colonial. It slipped out of his hands. In another moment it would have been shivered upon the hearth. The host, from his sofa, saw what had happened, was up in an instant, stretched out his hand and caught the bowl just ere it descended on the marble. "Fielded, by Jove! But I save my crockery, which I would rather not have written 'Money' than have lost," cried the novelist.

The Rich Man's Plaint.

I don't see what good my money does me. I can't eat. I never saw it in its entirety. I dress no better than my private secretary and have a much smaller appetite than my coachman. I live in a big barn of a house, am pestered to death by beggars, have dyspepsia, and most of my money is in the hands of others, who use it mainly for their own benefit.

Taste For Color.

Our hero beat his young wife until she was black and blue.

"The feminine characters in a society novel are so apt to be colorless," said he in explanation of the seeming gaucherie.

Asked and Answered.

Irate Father—Ah! How is it that I catch you kissing my daughter, sir! Answer me, sir; how is it?

Young Man—Fine, sir; fine!—Philadelphia Ledger.

PEN PICTURES OF PEOPLE YOU MEET

ON A BELLEVILLE STREET.

ALD. W. W. CHOWN.

One of the leading members of the City Council is undoubtedly the gentleman whose name appears above. And that fact, we think, will not be disputed by anybody who has either attended Council meetings or kept close track of the newspaper reports. Ald. Chown does not talk, perhaps, so much as some of his colleagues; he does not, either, pretend to have a mind that, like a ten thousand dollar bill, cannot be sometimes changed; but there is really no exaggeration in saying that, either as a humble member, as he was at first, or Chairman of the Executive and "Leader of the Council," as he is now, few better Aldermen than W. W. Chown ever held down a seat in the classic precincts of the Belleville Council Chamber. We render this tribute to Ald. Chown with all the more pleasure because he is a native of Kingston, and it shows that there is no truth in the report that, in recent years, nothing good came out of that place. Ald. Chown came out of it in 1882, and when he dropped into Belleville he gazed around and found that this was the place he had been looking for, so he settled down and remained with us. No doubt many other Kingston people would do likewise, if they knew as much as Ald. Chown does. On the street Ald. Chown looks just what he is—a solid business man, who cares little for the frivolities of this wicked world, who, perhaps, takes life more seriously than most men, and who, if occasion arose, might bend one of the commandments slightly, but who wouldn't knowingly break it under any consideration. Of a deeply religious nature, the subject of our sketch is a local preacher in the Methodist church, and can discourse more clearly, fluently and convincingly than many men who wear "the cloth" as a regular thing. And all this, mind you, does not keep him from being a mighty sharp business man. Ald. Chown, in his business, has made so many lanterns that his light shines before men in all quarters of Canada. As we stated before, Ald. Chown is a native of Kingston, having been born there in 1851. He was educated in the Public Schools of the Limestone City. Settling in this city in 1883, it took him 18 years to make up his mind to enter municipal life, which he did as an Alderman in 1900. The next year he entered the Mayoralty race, his opponent being the present incumbent, Mr. R. J. Graham. The subject of our sketch didn't run fast enough, and he was defeated, but made many friends by the good-humored, philosophical way he took his "turndown." In 1902 he again ran for Alderman, was elected and appointed Chairman of the Executive Committee, which position he still holds and, if merit counts for anything, will probably hold as long as he desires the position. Ald. Chown is a Liberal—and a prohibitionist. How he makes the professions of some of his fellow-Liberals tally with their practises we don't pretend to say. So far as we know he never says much about it, which is, perhaps, from one point of view, the best thing he can do. Rumor has it that Ald. Chown aspires to wear the gold chain next year, and if he does start in the race, mind you, it will take a pretty speedy man to head him off. Put that down for a prophecy. When the worthy Alderman isn't doing a little missionary work on his own account on Sunday he attends Bridge St. Church, being a member of most of the governing boards of that congregation. He has been a strong supporter of the Y.M.C.A. since its inception in this city, and is yet. There is no question at all that, as an Alderman and citizen, the subject of our little prize essay has worked early and late to advance the interests of this city. He has not pleased everybody, but even the reverend editor of The Globe couldn't do that. Taking one consideration with another, however, it will be well for Belleville if all the people who control her affairs in the future are as painstaking, honest and capable as the gentleman we have just finished writing about.

OFFICES, NO. 34, Bridge St., - Belleville, Ont.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager,
and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

McINTOSH BROS.

HURT AND WILL DIE.

Harry Seaman of Toronto Run Over by a Hamilton Trolley.

Hamilton, Aug. 22.—A most distressing accident occurred at the corner of Hughson and King streets last night about 10.45. The victim is Harry Seaman, the 10-year-old son of Thomas Seaman, 140 Duchess street, Toronto. He was knocked down and run over by a street car. The flesh on his left leg, from the knee up, was torn clear off the bone. The doctor says he cannot live.

Tried Clerk Arrested.

Hamilton, Aug. 22. — John W. Noble was placed under arrest last night, charged with stealing $2,000 from the Canadian Express Company. The announcement of his arrest on such a grave charge caused a sensation in the city. He had been with the company for over 18 years, and is known by almost everyone in Hamilton. He was popular and bore a good reputation for honesty. The warrant under which he was arrested charges that he stole a package containing $2,000. As far as known, the prisoner had no bad habits, and his friends refuse to believe that he is guilty. He is a married man, about 40 years of age.

Deadly Crossing Again.

Clinton, Aug. 22.—As the G.T.R. pay train was returning from Goderich at noon yesterday it ran into Thos. Webster and his little son, who were driving along the 14th concession. Both Mr. Webster and the horse were instantly killed, but the boy escaped without injury.

Seized With Apoplexy.

Winnipeg, Aug. 22.—Hon. J. A. Davidson, Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba, had a slight stroke of apoplexy yesterday morning, in his office at the Legislative Buildings. He rallied quickly, however, and appears to be progressing favorably towards recovery.

Two Bad Fires.

In 1825 a forest fire overran more than 1,000,000 acres in central Maine. About the same time a fire near Quebec resulted in the death of 5,000 persons.

Blood Thicker Than Water.

The saying about the superior density of blood to water is generally attributed to the American commander, Tatnall, who certainly used it at the taking of the Taku forts, but Scott puts it into the mouth of Dandie Dinmont, from whom it was probably borrowed by the Yankee sailor.

Coffee.

Americans consume twelve pounds of coffee per capita in a year. Danes and Norwegians use more. England, being a tea drinking country, uses less than three-quarters of a pound.

A VICTIM OF DROPSY

CURED AFTER DOCTORS PRONOUNCED HIS CASE HOPELESS.

Limbs Swollen Until He Had Become a Bloated Helpless Mass—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Wrought the Cure.

In the little village of Redon, not far from the mining town of Springhill, N.S., lives Mr. James Stevens, a quiet, middle-aged man who though living an unobtrusive life, has lately been much talked of as having been the subject of a cure pronounced by all familiar with the circumstances as scarcely less than miraculous. The disease, which some two years ago prostrated Mr. Stevens, came upon him gradually. There was an increasing feeling of general lassitude; the kidneys did not rightly perform their function, and then the body began to bloat. This feeling continued extending to the extremities, until Mr. Stevens became a helpless bloated mass of flesh. A finger pressed upon the bloated flesh would leave a mark all day. The urinary weakness became painful and distressing, the passages becoming very frequent. Doctors diagnosed the trouble as dropsy, but as their remedies failed to effect a cure, they pronounced the trouble incurable. At this stage the case of a neighbor who had been cured after a long and painful illness through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was recalled and it was decided to give the pills a trial. By the time the second box was used, the swelling began to decrease, the passage of the urine was less frequent and the patient was inspired with fresh hope. The use of the pills for some time longer set Mr. Stevens upon his feet again a cured man. The limbs were restored to a healthy condition, his weight became normal, the kidneys resumed their functions healthfully and today Mr. Stevens goes about his daily work a cured specimen of hardy, healthy Canadian manhood. His restoration is entirely due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he does not hesitate to strongly recommend them to other sufferers.

To the casual reader cases like this may seem remarkable, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have, in reality, cured thousands of cases pronounced by doctors to be incurable. These pills make new, rich blood with every dose, and in this way tone and strengthen every organ in the body, driving out diseases and restoring the patient to health after all other means have failed. Those who are weak and ailing, or who suffer from chronic diseases, should not waste money and valuable time experimenting with other medicines, but should take Dr Williams' Pink Pills at once, if they wish to be restored to full health. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Love Taps.

An oriental woman doubts her husband's love unless he beats her occasionally.

Timid Reindeer.

The reindeer are so gregarious and timid that one herder can easily guard a thousand head. The herder knows that if a few stray off he need not look for them, as they will soon become frightened and rejoin the main herd.

Unexpected Pearls.

On a sunken coal lighter being raised from Colombo harbor its bottom was found to be covered with pearl oysters. Their value more than paid for the cost of the salvage operations.

Poverty In Denmark.

Denmark makes a clear distinction between the thriftless and the respectable poor. The latter never cross a workhouse threshold. If destitute they receive a pension ranging from £3 to £17 a year; or, if too feeble to look after themselves, they are placed in an old age home.

The Cedar Tree.

No tree gives so great an expanse of shade as the cedar, and it never dies except from lightning stroke or the woodman's ax.

Averted a Disgrace.

Abimelech, while storming the town of Thebez, was wounded in the head by a stone thrown by a woman and made his armor bearer kill him lest it be said a woman slew him.

Java's Death Plants.

The death plant of Java has flowers which continually give off a perfume so powerful as to overcome, if inhaled for any length of time, a full grown man, and which kills all forms of insect life that come under its influence.

Bogus.

William A. Bogus was a Georgia land commissioner years ago. He issued fraudulent land rights. He furnished our vernacular with a word for everything spurious and false.

Cider.

Cider is the only alcoholic beverage that is not taxed. When sold fermented, in bottles, it contains ordinarily 4 or 5 per cent of alcohol, but this amount may be increased largely by adding sugar—sufficiently, indeed, to render the beverage quite intoxicating.

Pipes In a Skyscraper.

In an up to date skyscraper there are usually from ten to twenty miles of piping of all sorts and sizes—water pipes, gas pipes, sewer pipes, speaking tubes and ventilation ducts.

MESSRS. AUTHORS & COX:

I am extremely glad to report that the truss you made me has effected a COMPLETE CURE. You will remember mine was a very severe case, both sides, the right being extremely bad. I could get no truss that was any use to me before I got your new Era, the result of which proves it to be UNEQUALLED for it has caused a radical cure.

Thankfully yours,

RELIANCE WON RACE EASILY

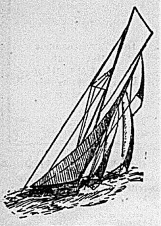
First Race in America's Cup Series in Good Wind.

Shamrock III. Behind 7 Minutes, 3 Seconds—First Hour's Run Was Nip and Tuck, But Reliance Afterwards Pulled Up and Won Out Handily—Shamrock III. Proved to Be a Great Boat in Windward Work.

New York, Aug. 24.—The summary, official:-

	Start.	Turn.	Finish.	Elapsed Time
Reliance	11.45.21	1.53.10	3.17.38	3.32.17
Shamrock III	11.45.17	1.58.30	3.26.34	3.41.17

In a splendid 12 to 15-knot breeze over a windward and leeward course of 30 miles, the sloop Reliance Saturday beat Shamrock III. by exactly nine minutes actual time, or 7 minutes and 3 seconds after deducting the 1 minute and 57 seconds allowance to Sir Thomas Lipton's third challenger. It was a royal water fight for the ancient trophy, which carries with it the yachting supremacy of the world and by a strange coincidence the first victory in the cup series of 1903 occurred on the 52nd anniversary of the day on which the old schooner America captured it in her famous race around the Isle of Wight. The Reliance beat the British boat 8 minutes and 24 seconds in the thrash to windward and 5 minutes and 36 seconds in the run home.



THE RELIANCE.

It must be conceded that the Shamrock showed herself a wonderful boat in beating to windward, perhaps the ablest craft in this respect ever sent here on a cup-hunting expedition. For 12 miles the great single stickers raced like a team of horses and during that portion of the duel, the followers of Reliance made no attempt to conceal their nervousness.

The racing conditions Saturday were ideal. A thin haze hung over the Jersey shore, obstructing the view of the spectators gathered there, but out on the ocean race course the sea was flooded with sunshine from a vault of fleckless blue. A long ocean swell heaved up from the south and a 12-knot breeze, fresh and strengthening, blew out of the southwest, throwing up fleeting white caps. The marine picture was superb. The size of the enormous excursion fleet and the number of sightseers made a record for an international cup race.

As the direction of the wind would have carried a windward course from Sandy Hook lightship into the Jersey shore, the committee was obliged to set the mark 7 miles farther out. This delayed the start about three-quarters of an hour, and prevented the massing of the excursion fleet as usual in the form of a great marine amphitheatre back of the starting line. Instead they formed a column of hulls and stacks extending 3 miles toward the Jersey shore. The course, southwest, carried the yachts directly into the eye of the wind to a point off Asbury Park.

The honors of the start, as on Thursday, were captured by the American skipper. Captain Wringe timed his approach to the line with the Shamrock very badly and in an effort to keep off until the gun boomed he almost lost his bowsprit as he luffed up to cross. Barr, as usual, went over in the windward berth, four seconds behind his rival. Both were close hauled on the starboard tack. It was a magnificent sight as they plunged seaward in a 12-knot breeze pounding fountains of spray from their convex bows. The crew in white duck were piled up along the weather side. The first few minutes of the windward work were watched with intense interest. Both yachts were footing rapidly with yards of their underbodies showing. But after 15 minutes of sailing their positions had not varied perceptibly and there was alarm among the experts. Those who had expected to see the Reliance walk away from her adversary as a result of last Thursday's showing were disappointed. The Shamrock hung on with bulldog tenacity and with tack after tack she seemed to be holding her own.

For 13 miles challenger and challenged fought out the magnificent duel, sailing between two lanes of excursion boats. All the time the wind was increasing and the white-caps were whitening the waves in tumbled ardor. The critical point of the race came at 1.40, a little less than two hours after the start. The mark float was two miles away and the relative positions of the boats were about the same. Both were on the starboard tack. Reliance ahead, but to leeward. Suddenly the wind dropped and hauled a trifle to the west. The shift enabled the yachts to hold up for a mark with Reliance in the lead by about 200 yards. This was the only thing which marred an otherwise truly run race. But from that time on the Reliance increased her lead in the windward work until she was three-quarters of a mile ahead. As she tacked around the outer mark a vast chorus of whistles, bands and the cheer which up from the excursion fleet.

Turning for home, her spinnaker boom, poised along the mast like a lance in rest, fell to port and the big sail burst out like a cloud, while at the same moment their enormous balloon jib topsail bellied out forward. A moment afterwards there was dismay among the patriots when the guy, which held the spinnaker pole parted. The enormous sail soared aloft and tumbled over the jib topsail stay, collapsing like an empty meal sack. But the spar was hauled back into place and then with her three balloon sails setting like plaster, Reliance fled homeward before the following wind.

The fleet remained to salute the Shamrock as she rounded and then made way for the finish line.

In setting her balloon jib the Shamrock encountered another piece of bad luck. One of the stops would not break out and the sail hung for some minutes like a limp rag. When both had been squared away for home, it was seen that Reliance was making a run away race of it. With her crew aft to keep her head up she skimmed along the surface of the water like a gull with outstretched pinions, leaving the Shamrock farther and farther astern. The pace was so fast that many of the tugs and not a few of the steam yachts were left behind.

The scene at the finish was soul stirring. Under her towering cloud of canvas, rolling in the swell, in the Reliance bounded across the finish line. The excursion boats gathered there and burst forth with a terrific din, and the patriots shouted themselves hoarse. Then the immense concourse of vessels waited nine minutes longer until the Shamrock with a slight rent in her spinnaker, but majestic looking even in defeat, swept by between the stake boats. The reception she received was, if anything, more hearty than that accorded to her successful rival. The net result of the race shows that barring the fluke Shamrock III. had held her own in the windward work and had been beaten more than fine and a half minutes to leeward. It is expected that the next race will be sailed on Tuesday.

The Erin steamed into her haven at Sandy Hook after the race with the American flag flying at the main mast and another at her bow, a tribute to the winner. After his guests had departed, Sir Thomas Lipton said with a smile: "We were beaten fair and square. It was splendid weather and Shamrock did not do as well as I had expected she would in the race to windward and return. I appreciate the splendid manner in which my boat was handled. Reliance is a wonderful yacht. My confidence in Shamrock is not shaken and I hope she will yet make a better showing."

FRENCH SWINDLERS GUILTY.

Humberts to Live in Jail—Great Criminal Trial Results in Finding Against the Whole Gang.

Paris, Aug. 24.—One of the greatest criminal trials in the history of France culminated Saturday night, when the jury in the Court of Assizes rendered a verdict of guilty against Therese and Frederic Humbert and Romaine and Emile Daurignac. After a brief deliberation the court sentenced Therese and Frederic Humbert each to five years, and to a fine of 100 francs; Emile Daurignac to three years, and Romaine Daurignac to two years. Frederic Humbert acted as though dazed by the shock of conviction, his thin face assuming a ghastly pallor. Romaine and Emile Daurignac preserved an air of stolid indifference. Therese thanked her lawyers and then calmly announced she was ready to go to prison.

Sultan Agrees to Russia's Demands and Czar Is Satisfied.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 24.—The Russian Black Sea Squadron, which was ordered to Turkish waters, and which arrived at Inalada, Eastern European Turkey, Aug. 19, in order to support Russia's demands on the Sultan, growing out of the assassination of M. Rostkowski, Russian Consul at Monastir, has been recalled to Sebastopol, the squadron's point of departure, and has left Turkish waters. The recall of the Russian squadron followed on a notification from the Porte that the Sultan had ordered all the Russian demands to be complied with.

Turkish Troops Defeated.

Sofia, Aug. 24.—From Eastern Adrianople come reports of more fighting, which so far seems to be resulting in favor of the revolutionists. Many villages have been burned and their inhabitants have taken refuge across the Bulgarian frontier. At Stolloro the insurgents defeated a detachment of Turkish troops, which lost 20 killed and wounded.

Reaper Severed Boy's Leg.

Morden, Man., Aug. 24.—A shocking accident which occurred near Deerwood terminated fatally in the hospital Saturday evening. Late on Wednesday afternoon, Norman, the three-year-old son of William Harmar, wandered into a field of grain around which his father was cutting. The child was not as tall as the grain and was not noticed by the father till the machine had done its horrible work. One little leg was completely severed below the knee. He succumbed to the shock. The father is heart-broken.

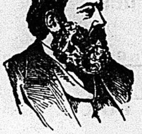
NUMBERED WITH THE DEAD

A Great Figure Gone From the Imperial Stage.

Lord Salisbury Died on Saturday, His End Coming on the 50th Anniversary of His Entrance Into Public Life—Man Who Made Much of the England the Public Committed to His Care and Direction.

London, Aug. 24.—Lord Salisbury died peacefully at 9.05 o'clock Saturday night. For forty-eight hours it was seen that the end was inevitable. Even the administration of oxygen failed of effect that evening. A few minutes after 9 o'clock the former Premier turned slightly towards his favorite daughter, Lady Gwendoline Cecil, who was kneeling beside him, and then quietly breathed his last. All the members of His Lordship's family, except Lord Cecil, were at the bedside.

The Village of Hatfield, which still retains many features of the feudal period, was filled with anxious residents awaiting the news of Salisbury's demise. Finally the news came, when a hatless servant dashed down the graveled roadway, saying as he passed "He has gone," and then disappeared in the church. Soon thereafter the bell from the tower above tolled slowly, in memory of the celebrated statesman.



THE LATE LORD SALISBURY.

Notified King Edward.

Viscount Cranborne, who now assumes the title of Marquis of Salisbury, immediately notified King Edward and Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales and others, including Lord Edward Cecil, the soldier son of Lord Salisbury, who is now in Egypt, and who was the only child of the Marquis absent from the death-bed. Scores of telegrams of condolence were received at Hatfield House.

The ex-Premier, though retired from political life, was an important figure in many public ways. He was warden of the Cinque Ports, High Ward of Westminster, and Chancellor of Oxford University. His death places an Order of Knight of the Garter within the disposal of King Edward.

Saturday was the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into public life as a member of parliament for Stamford, Robert Cecil, Marquis of Salisbury. His disappearance from the scene leaves a vacancy which men of the newer generation will find hard to fill. He was the greatest figure left on Britain's political stage on which he had remained until the limit of his endurance was reached.

M.P. For Stamford.

When half a century ago young Lord Robert Cecil had just returned from a visit to the Australian gold fields he became a member of the House of Commons for Stamford, which was practically a pocketborough of the Marquis of Exeter, himself a Cecil. Since then Lord Salisbury's career is part of modern history.

In private life, as in politics, he was always the great aristocrat. His party never dared to attempt to dictate to him. His "people" on his estates in seven counties also regarded him as their chief in a fashion which is quite rare nowadays. This was particularly noticeable at his home estate at Hatfield, whose villagers throughout the past anxious days have shown that silent courtesy which only springs from sincere respect.

Means Change in the Cabinet.

Lord Salisbury had long been a great sufferer from gouty complaints. Lord Salisbury's death and the consequent elevation of Viscount Cranborne to the marquisate will inevitably lead to alterations in the personnel of the ministry, as the new marquis cannot retain his under secretaryship in the House of Lords, where the Marquis of Lansdowne represents the Foreign Office. Viscount Cranborne's departure from the House of Commons and consequent elevation to the House of Lords will cause a bye-election in the Rochester division.

When the Liberals were defeated in the elections of 1895, and the Rosebery ministry went out of power, Lord Salisbury again assumed the Premiership, though even at that time it was recognized that the actual control of affairs was rapidly passing into the hands of younger men. He remained at the head of the Unionist ministry until June 11, 1902, when his advanced age and ill health, added to the mental distraction caused by the death of his wife, led him to resign. He had previously given up his portfolio as Minister of Foreign Affairs. The new ministry with Arthur J. Balfour a Premier was formed without calling a general election.

Salisbury's Career in Brief.

He was 73 years old. Robert Cecil was a second son, and began his career with only the title "honorable." He married Miss Alderson, the daughter of a barrister who brought him no dower. It was a love match. With a university education as his only capital, he soon became known as one of the ablest writers of the period. In journalism he won a high place. This brought him a parliamentary nomination. In 1865 he was interrupted in an important speech in the Commons with the announcement of the death of his eldest brother, Viscount Cranborne. This made Salisbury the heir to the title and big estate of the Marquis of Salisbury. In 1866 he entered Lord Derby's Cabinet. He became Foreign Secretary under Disraeli. In 1996 he reached the Premiership, holding it but one year. In 1894 he was recalled to power and served until the accession of Mr. Balfour. He was an opponent of Home Rule in Ireland, believed in the protection of home industries, was ultra-conservative regarding internal politics, but aggressively radical in his Foreign politics. He astounded all Europe by dictating to the world at the Berlin conference, drawing his finger through the map of the Balkan mountains, and saying, "England draws the line here," thus proving a barrier to the dismemberment of Turkey. Bismarck declared it was the boldest speech that ever came from an English Premier's lips. The ultimatum stood. He ranked as the master of the art of clear, succinct oratory.

King Edward's Tribute.

King Edward's tribute to the deceased Marquis of Salisbury is given in the Court Circular last night, dated Marienbad, Sunday. It runs as follows:

"The King has received with profound regret the news of the death of the Marquis of Salisbury, and His Majesty deeply deplores the loss of so great a statesman, whose invaluable services to Queen Victoria, to the King and his country in the highest offices of state, which he held for so many years, will ever dwell in the memory of his fellow-countrymen."

Messages of condolence are pouring in at Hatfield House. The senders include King Edward and Queen Alexandra, the Queen of Portugal and President Loubet. Touching references were made to the dead statesman in the pulpits of almost all the churches in the United Kingdom. There were many visitors to the village of Hatfield yesterday. The parish church was crowded yesterday morning, the worshipers including Premier Balfour, the Earl and Countess of Selborne, the Marquis' sons and members of his family and household.

The funeral has been provisionally fixed for the end of this week to enable Lord Edward Cecil, who is on his way home from Egypt, to assist.

Appetite.

Food eaten without appetite always causes gastric disturbances, because unless the secretory glands of the stomach are stimulated by a desire for food no digestive juices are exuded into the stomach.

Dr. Johnson's Monomania.

The boundary line between habit and monomania is rather shadowy and vague. Dr. Johnson had an irresistible impulse to touch every post he passed. Sometimes he would force himself to go by one, only to return and gratify his strange wish.

Daily Intelligencer.

CANADA SHOULD BE PROUD OF R. L. BORDEN.

Mr. R. L. Borden, the leader of the Conservative party, has clearly demonstrated that he stands second to no public man in Canada. In him the Conservative party have a leader they need not hesitate to praise. He is a Canadian first, last, and always, who has a deep rooted conviction that this country will some day take its place amongst the great nations of the world. While Sir Wilfrid Laurier deplores the forced dependence of Canada on the United States in commercial matters, Mr. Borden indignantly denies that we are in the slightest degree subject to the whims of the American people. He resents such an insult—and declares that we are quite competent to look after our own interests. It is to such men that we must look for our future. Mr Borden, by his broadness of view in the matter of a national railway system, has made himself the most talked of man in Ottawa. Friend and foe admire the man for his ability, modesty, gentlemanly bearing and integrity. He is now spoken of as Canada's premier at no distant day. In his hands our destinies would be safe, and the Canadian people need not display any reluctance in supporting one who is not only an ornament to his party, but to his native land.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Some idea of the terrible concussion caused by the explosion at Tweed on Saturday morning may be gathered by the fact that it was distinctly heard in the outlying parts of this city, twenty-five miles distant. People at the time thought it was thunder, and were surprised that they heard no more than one clap.

• • •

Mr. William Leverton, of Thurlow, on Saturday last showed some of his friends in this city a glass demijohn which, per the name and date blown in the glass, was 137 years old. Being an heirloom in his family, Mr. Leverton, naturally, values it highly, not only for its antiquity, but because of the oceans of sentiment which have flowed in and out of its neck during the four generations it has been in use.

• • •

"Wondrous Things of the Law," a topic preached on by a city minister last night, had no reference to the Ontario License Law, or the way it is enforced in this city.

• • •

A few days ago The Intelligencer, in noticing the demise of the independent London News, expressed its opinion of independent papers in general. The said opinion does not seem to have found favor with the Hamilton Herald, itself an "independent" paper, which hands us the following violent slap on the wrist:

"We congratulate our contemporary upon the fidelity with which it has reproduced the features of the type which it had in mind. And we are convinced that if The Intelligencer took it into its head to become independent, it would be just such an independent newspaper as the one it has pictured."

Congrats accepted, old boy. You do us proud. And if we ever do "take it into our head to become independent" we will certainly copy many of the good features of The Herald, while striving strenuously to steer clear of the one which (judging by the way it dons the cap) places our esteemed contemporary in the "independent" class we spoke of.

• • •

"A Law-Abiding Citizen" writes: "I read in your paper some time ago an article stating that a saloon-keeper in this city had been fined three times during the past eight months, the offences being infractions of the License law, the fines being imposed by Police Magistrate Flint. It was stated in your article that the convictions were entered in each case as first offences. In common with many other people, I have waited patiently to hear Magistrate Flint explain his action in this matter, providing, of course, the allegations contained in your article are true. Sufficient time, in my opinion, having elapsed, and no explanation having been given, I would like to ask whose duty it was to see that the cases were entered as first, second and third offences. Of course the enforcement of the law cannot be supposed to hinge on the Police Magistrate's memory, though it is hard to see how he could have failed to recognize the fact that the same parties had been before him three times in eight months. I think it is time we had some light on how the License law is enforced in this city. May I, through your columns, ask Police Magistrate Flint for an explanation? I can assure him it will be gratefully received and eagerly read."

• • •

The Intelligencer has no hesitation in publishing "A Law-Abiding Citizen's" letter. The questions he asks are pertinent and timely, and should be answered.

• • •

The official report of Mr. J. M. Hurley's examination before the Public Accounts Committee closes in to-day's paper. Though rather long, it has, we are sure, been read with interest by many people. The principal thing it seems to bring out is the fact that Mr. Hurley held two fat jobs at the same time, and that, in connection with one of the jobs, he padded out his accounts so that he drew from the Government a sum which he thought he was entitled to, the same being greatly in advance of the sum his official instructions led him to expect. The official instructions said Mr. Hurley was not to receive more than $3 per day; Mr. Hurley admits that he did his best to get $4 a day, and apparently succeeded. People in this district will now wait with interest to see if the Government will require Mr. Hurley to return the money he obtained to which he was not legally entitled. The leader of the Senate, a few days ago, said the Government ought to take such a course. Will they?

A WELL KNOWN ALBANY MAN.

Recommends Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

About eighteen months ago Mr. W. S. Manning, of Albany, N. Y., widely known in trade circles as the representative of the Albany Chemical Co., was suffering from a protracted attack of Diarrhoea. "I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," he says, "and obtained relief. I cheerfully recommend this medicine to those similarly afflicted." Sold by all druggists.

HUMOR

A FAKE TRAMP.

How a Theatrical Manager Was Hoodwinked by a Ventriloquist.

Harry Sanderson, manager for Tony Pastor, who resides at Cranford, N. J., not feeling particularly well, took a day off recently and remained at home. From the window of his library he observed a tramp entering his gate, and he walked down to the rear door to meet him. It was the old story—a request for a meal. Having a load of unsawed wood in the shed, he told the fellow that if he got to work and performed on the sawbuck for a brief period he would have something prepared for him.

The tramp went to the shed, and immediately the sound of vigorous sawing was heard, stick after stick parting under his energetic strength. Calling the tramp into the kitchen, Sanderson complimented him upon his energy, and the tramp replied, with a modest air, that whenever he had anything to do he generally paid attention to it. The meal was eaten, and the tramp expressed his thanks and departed.

Shortly after Sanderson went out to the shed and was surprised to find every stick of wood intact. Upon inquiry in the village he ascertained that he had been entertaining a stranded ventriloquist, who was working his way back to New York from Easton, Pa. The mean chap had simply gone into the shed and given his imitation of sawing wood.—New York Times.

What He Ought to Learn.

A young man at Tooting recently bought a cornet with the intention of learning to play. A few days afterward the man who sold it to him met his little brother.

"By the way," he inquired, "how is Charlie getting on with his cornet playing?"

"He isn't gettin' on at all," sniffed the youngster. "He's been blowin' away at it every night, but this mornin' one of the neighbors came over and told him in plain language that he'd better be learnin' to play the harp, for he might need it soon, and I guess Charlie's goin' to give up music altogether."

Remembered It.

They had received a letter from son Henry, who was at college.

"He says," said Aunt Martha, wiping a tear from her eyes—"he says that the happiest minute in his life was when he got on the team."

"Dogged if I don't recollect it as plain as if it was yisterday," responded Uncle Silas. "It wuz in the fur field an' he wuz jist a barefooted little tad, an' I lifted him up an' put him on old Kate's back after the day's plowin' wuz done. He can't fergit the old farm, Marthy; he can't fergit the old farm!"—Indianapolis Sun.

His Salvation.

"There is no use talking, sir," remarked the positive man as he seated himself in his lawyer's office, "drink is the only thing to save me from ruin."

"I don't understand you, I'm sure," was the retort.

"Well, you see, all my money is invested in an inebriates' cure."—Yonkers Herald.

Crippled.

"Wow!" exclaimed the centiped as the housekeeper swatted him with the dishcloth. "That 'll cripple me sure."

"She certainly did knock you off your feet," remarked the sympathetic fly.

"Worse than that!" groaned the victim. "I'll bet she's knocked fifty or sixty of my feet off me."—Boston Herald.

British Merchantmen.

The statement that the British navy would protect British commerce in time of war seems absurd when taken with the fact that there are 6,500 British merchantmen afloat.

Beautiful Red Tape.

Perhaps the most remarkable curios in the British army system of red tape are the headings under which various personal necessities are classed. For instance, a soldier must purchase a brush and comb under the head "clothing, while a toothbrush for some extraordinary reason comes under the denomination of fuel.

VALUABLE TIME SAVED.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and, when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cuts bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

Rending the Face.

The "rending the face" and "eyes with painting" mentioned in the Bible are still practiced by Arabian and other oriental women. A bodkin of orange wood charged with black powder is thrust along between the closed eyelids, giving a languorous depth to the eyes.

Our First Pins.

The first pins made in this country were very crude indeed, merely a bit of wire twisted into a knot for a head at one end and sharpened to a point at the other.

Rapid Shoemaking.

A pair of women's shoes made in Lynn, Mass., to establish a record for rapid shoemaking required fifty-seven operations and the use of forty-two machines and 100 pieces. All these parts were assembled and made into a graceful pair of shoes ready to wear in thirteen minutes.

Wild Birds In New York.

The trade in wild birds is quite a feature in New York. About 15,000 are imported annually from Europe and 10,000 from Africa. They are bullfinches, goldfinches, linnets and thrushes.

Argentina's Cows.

The number of dairy cows in the Argentine Republic is 8,000,000. In European markets the Argentine butter is preferred to the imports from Russia, Canada and Australia.

Soda Water.

There is no soda in soda water. Every pint of soda water contains two and one-half pints of carbon dioxide, a gas. Therefore when you drink one pint of soda water you really drink three and one-half pints. This is why soda water is such a comfortable drink.

The Oldest Hospital.

The Pennsylvania hospital in Philadelphia is the oldest hospital in the United States. It was built in 1755.

Horse Versus Mule.

After quarrelling over the respective strength of a horse and a mule two farmers at Segovia, Spain, decided to settle the matter by a tug of war. The animals were harnessed, one at each end of a cart. After a desperate struggle the mule triumphed, pulling the horse off its legs and galloping away with it.

Paper Mills.

The earliest European paper mills were at Fairiano, in Italy, in 1150. The Arabs first introduced the secret of paper making into Europe, they themselves having learned it from Chinese prisoners of war.

Shooting Stars.

We should think of shooting stars as solid shot about the size of a cherry or cherry stone, each of them flying with 100 times the speed of a bullet as far as the orbit of Uranus, and returning to the earth's distance from the sun three times in a century, unless it strikes our atmosphere and is burned up in a flash.

Ancient Fire Engine.

The old order does not change at Halesworth, in Suffolk, England. There is a fire engine still in use which was made in 1793.

Naples Honey.

In Naples the flat roofs of houses are turned into apiaries, and the poorest families are able to eat all the honey they desire, the cost being practically nothing. The Italian bee does not sting.

The Paper Tree.

A cloth of very fine texture is made from the bark of the paper tree, a mulberry growing in the south sea islands.

The Coffins of the Greeks.

The ancient Greeks used a species of limestone known as sarcophagus in making coffins. The peculiar quality of sarcophagus consisted in the fact that it would consume the human body within a period of a few weeks. It is said to have been found at Assos, a city of Lycia.

Proportion of Murders.

One death in every 112 in the United States is a murder.

Strawberry Plants.

A strawberry plant if set in a patch of dry sand will send out its runners in the direction where good soil is nearest.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paperhangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

begin to secretly wonder what it's all about. The one with the spondulics wonders harder than the one who has none. If the man has the money, he will feel good at first over doing so much for his affinity, but if he has an eye for earthly values—and good business men have—there will be times when he will envy Jones, whose wife had as many rocks as Jones. Love and capital go together like rain and sunshine; they are productive of something. Then if the woman has the money and the man hasn't there's tragedy—a slow cutting of throats. She is irresistibly drawn with the rest of the world into the thought that she has tied herself and her money to an automaton, for such men are invariably lifeless. They seem to lose the faculty of earning money—in any other way. And as for a proper title for the penniless young idiot that publicly advertises himself as worth enough, in himself, for a girl to sacrifice her money to live with him—well, the unabridged does not furnish it. Jack Ass in billboard letters would come nearer to it than anything that occurs to me now. I'm not afraid to say it, for I know you'd never cause any girl to give up her fortune without knowing at least whether you could replace it or not."

Alan arose and paced the room. "That," he said as he stood between the lace curtains at the window, against which the rain beat steadily—"that is why I feel so blue. I don't believe Colonel Barclay would ever forgive her, and I'd die before I'd make her lose a thing."

"You are right," returned Miller, relighting his cigar at the lamp, "and he'd cut her off without a cent. I know him. But what is troubling me is that you may not be benefited by my logic. Don't allow this to go any further. Let her alone from tonight on, and you'll find in a few months that you are resigned to it, just like the average widower who wants to get married six months after his loss. And when she is married and has a baby she'll meet you on the street and not care a rap whether her hat's on right or not. She will tell her husband all about it and allude to you as her first, second or third fancy, as the case may be. I have faith in your future, but, you've got a long, rocky row to hoe, and a thing like this could spoil your usefulness and misdirect your talents. If I could see how you could profit by waiting, I'd let your flame burn unmolested; but circumstances are against us."

"I'd already seen my duty," said Alan in a low tone as he came away from the window. "I have an engagement with her later, and the subject shall be avoided."

"Good man!" Miller's cigar was so short that he stuck the blade of his penknife through it that he might enjoy it to the end without burning his fingers. "That's the talk! Now I must mosey on downstairs and dance with that Miss Fewclothes from Rome—the one with the auburn tresses that says 'delighted' whenever she is spoken to."

Alan went back to the window. The rain was still beating on it. For a long time he stood looking out into the blackness. The bad luck which had come to his father had been a blow to him, but its later offspring had the grim, cold countenance of death itself.

He had never realized till now that Dolly Barclay was so much a part of his very life. For a moment he almost gave way to a sob that rose and struggled within him. He sat down again and clasped his hands before him in dumb self pity. He told himself that Rayburn Miller was right; that only weak men would act contrary to such advice. No, it was over—all, all over.

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER the dance Frank Hillhouse took Dolly home in one of the drenched and bespattered hacks. The Barclay residence was one of the best made and largest in town. It was an old style southern frame house, painted white, and had white columned verandas on two sides. It was in the edge of the town and had an extensive lawn in front and almost a little farm behind.

Dolly's mother had never forgotten that she was once a girl herself, and she took the most active interest in everything pertaining to Dolly's social life. On occasions like the one just described she found it impossible to sleep till her daughter returned, and then she slipped upstairs and made the girl tell all about it while she was disrobing. Tonight she was more alert and wideawake than usual. She opened the front door for Dolly and almost stepped on the girl's heels as she followed her upstairs.

"Was it nice?" she asked.

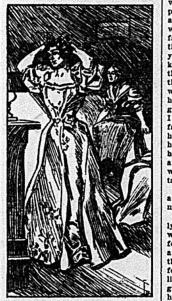
"Yes; very," Dolly replied. Reaching her room, she turned up the low burning lamp and, standing before a mirror, began to take some flowers out of her hair. Mrs. Barclay sat down on the edge of the high posted mahogany bed and raised one of her bare feet and held it in her hand. She was a thin woman, with iron gray hair, and about fifty years of age. She looked as if she were cold, but for reasons of her own she was not willing for Dolly to remark it.

"Who was there?" she asked.

"Oh, everybody."

"Is that so? I thought a good many would stay away because it was a bad night, but I reckon they are as anxious to go as we used to be. Then you all did have the hacks?"

"Yes; they had the hacks." There was a pause, during which one pair of eyes was fixed rather vacantly on the image in the mirror. The other pair, full of impatient inquiry, rested alternately on the image and its maker.



Began to take some flowers out of her hair.

"I don't believe you had a good time," broke the silence in a rising, tentative tone.

"Yes; I did, mother."

"Then what's the matter with you?" Mrs. Barclay's voice rang with impatience. "I never saw you act like you do tonight—never in my life."

"I didn't know anything was wrong with me, mother."

"You act queer; I declare you do," asserted Mrs. Barclay. "You generally have a lot to say. Have you and Frank had a falling out?"

Dolly gave her shoulders a sudden shrug of contempt.

"No; we got along as well as we ever did."

"I thought maybe he was a little mad because you wouldn't dance tonight, but surely he's got enough sense to see that you oughtn't to insult Brother Dillbeck that way when he's visiting our house and everybody knows what he thinks about dancing."

"No; he thought I did right about it," said Dolly.

"Then what in the name of common sense is the matter with you, Dolly? You can't pull the wool over my eyes, and you needn't try it."

Dolly faced about suddenly.

"I reckon you'll sit there all night unless I tell you all about it," she said sharply. "Mother, Alan Bishop was there."

"You don't say!"

"Yes, and asked me to let him take me to church tomorrow evening."

"Oh, he did?"

"Yes; and, as I didn't want father to insult him, I"—

"You told him what your pa said?"

"No; I just told him father didn't want me to receive him any more. Heaven knows, that was enough!"

"Well, that was the best thing for you to do." Mrs. Barclay took a deep breath as if she were inhaling a delicious perfume. "It's much better than to have him plunge in here some day and have your father break out like he does in his rough way. What did Alan say?"

"He said very little, but he looked it. You ought to have seen him. Frank came up just about that time and invited me to have some ice cream, and I had to leave him. He was as white as a sheet. He had made an engagement with me to sit out a dance, and he didn't come in the room again till that dance was called, and then he didn't even mention it. He acted so peculiarly I could see it was nearly killing him, but he wouldn't let me bring up the subject again. I came near doing it, but he always steered round it."

"He's a sensible young man," declared Mrs. Barclay. "Any one can see that by looking at him. He's not responsible for his father's foolhardy venture, but it certainly leaves him in a bad fix as a marrying man. He's had bad luck, and he must put up with the consequences. There are plenty of girls who have no money or prospects who would be glad to have him, but"—

"Mother," broke in Dolly as if she had been listening to her own troubled thoughts rather than her mother's words, "he didn't act as if he wanted to see me alone. The other couples who had engagements to talk during that dance were sitting in windows and out of the way corners, but he kept me right where I was and was as carefully polite as if we had just been introduced. I was sorry for him and mad at the same time. I could have pulled his ears."

"He's sensible, very sensible," said Mrs. Barclay in a tone of warm admiration. "A man like that ought to get along, and I reckon he will do well some day."

"But, mother," said Dolly, her rich, round voice rising like a wave and breaking in her throat, "he may never think about me any more."

"Well, that really would be best, dear, under the circumstances."

"Best?" Dolly blurted out. "How can you say that, when—when"—

"Dolly, you are not really foolish about him, are you?" Mrs. Barclay's face dropped into deeper seriousness.

Dolly looked away and was silent for a moment. Then she faltered: "I don't know, mother. I—I'm afraid if I keep on feeling like I do now I'll never get over it."

"Ah, but you'll not keep on feeling like you do now," consoled the older woman. "Of course, right now, just after seeing how hard he took it, you will kind of sympathize with him and want to help him; but that will all pass away. I remember when I was about your age I had a falling out with Will Despree, a young man my father didn't like because his grandfather had been an overseer. And, do you know, I thought I would actually kill myself. I refused to eat a bite and threatened to run away with Will. To this day I really don't know what I would have done if your grandfather hadn't scared him away with a shotgun. Will kept writing notes to me. I was afraid to answer them, but my father got hold of one and went after him on a fast horse. Will's family heard what was up, and they kept him out in the swamp for a few days, and then they sent him to Texas. The whole Despree family took it up and talked scand'lous about us."

"And you soon got over it, mother?" asked Dolly almost in a tone of dismay.

"Well," said Mrs. Barclay reflectively, "Will acted the fool so terribly. He wasn't out in Texas three months before he sent back a marked paper with an article in it about his engagement to the daughter of a rich man who, we found out afterward, used to keep a livery stable; then I reckon hardly any girl would keep caring for a boy when his folks was telling such lies about her family."

Dolly was staring studiously at the speaker.

"Mother," she asked, "don't you believe in real love?"

Mrs. Barclay laughed as if highly amused. "I believe in a different sort to the puppy love I had for that boy. Then after that there was another young man that I thought more of, if anything, than I did of Will, but he was as poor as Job's turkey, and my folks was all crazy for me and your pa, who I'd never seen, to get married. I held out against the idea, just like you are doing with Frank, I reckon, but when your pa come with his shiny broadcloth coat and spotted silk vest—no, it was satin, I think, with red spots on it—and every girl in town was crazy to catch him and there was no end of reports about the niggers he owned and his high connections—well, as I say, it wasn't a week before I was afraid he'd see Joe Tinsley and hear about me and him. My father was in for the match from the very jump, and so was your pa's folks. He put up at our house with his nigger servant and didn't want to go about town much. I reckon I was pleased to have him pick me out, and so we soon fixed it up. Lordy, he only had to mention Joe Tinsley to me after we got married to make me do anything he wanted. To this day he throws him up to me, for Joe never did amount to anything. He tried to borrow money from your pa after you was born. The neighbors had to feed his children."

"But you loved father, didn't you?"

There is nothing equal to Moth Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the diseas Change of water, cooking, and gre fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summ Complaints. If a few drops a taken in water when the symptom are noticed no further trouble will b experienced.

All trails are long to the lazy.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill, Small dose. Small price.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

THE LARGER FOOT.

See if This Shoe Salesman's Theory Fits Your Case.

"The question of which foot to fit first is an important one to us," said the shoe salesman. "It may seem strange to you, but it is rarely that we do not experience some trouble in fitting one foot while the other is easily covered. A popular belief obtains that the left foot of every person is the hardest to fit, and consequently many shoe clerks always try a shoe on that foot first. It is not true, however, according to my observation, that there is any inflexible rule as to which foot to try first. It is true, nevertheless, that in a majority of cases if you succeed in fitting the left foot you will have no trouble with the right. My practice is to try both feet before I pronounce a pair of shoes a perfect fit. Then I am sure of avoiding any mistake growing out of peculiarities of foot formation. No two persons have feet formed exactly alike, and the shoe salesman who thinks so and is governed accordingly will meet with many complaints.

"For some time I pondered over the problem of fitting shoes to feet, and especially as to why the left foot should be considered the standard by which to be governed. The only rational theory I have ever been able to evolve is a very simple one when you come to consider it. Nine out of ten persons you meet are right handed, as we say. About one person in ten, or perhaps the per cent is even less than that, uses his left hand. If you will observe persons who use the right hand when they are standing and talking they invariably rest their weight on the left foot. And, vice versa, a left handed person will rest his or her weight on the right foot. The result is that with right handed persons the left foot is probably a fraction larger than the right foot, and the shoe clerk must inevitably find this to be a fact sooner or later."

ROMANCE IN VARIED GUISE.

Definition of the Word Is Susceptible of Wide Diversification.

What is romance? Even the colloquial use of the term is varied. When we say "you are romancing" or call anything romantic as distinguished from what is real or what is true we mean one thing, but quite another when we apply the term romantic to natural scenery. And in this application we must distinguish between the effect upon us of that which we call romantic because of human associations with certain sights or sounds and that wildness of nature which we call romantic because of its absolute dissociation from anything human.

Keeping out of mind the use of the word in artistic and literary criticism, let us try to find what element of reconcilement there is in the diversities of colloquial usage.

In all that is generally called romantic in the cases above mentioned there is the common element of strangeness. We easily revert to what must have been the original sense of the word in its connection with those mediæval modifications of the Latin tongue known as the romance languages. The Saxon or Celt would have found his native tongue sufficient for all ordinary needs, but if he caught the Roman air in any way, by travel or refinement of taste and habit, he would, to meet the newly developed need, borrow the graces of the Roman speech—that is, he would romance.—Harper's Magazine.

Rockefeller and the Bungs.

In former years John D. Rockefeller's supervision of Standard Oil company affairs took in even the smallest detail. On one occasion, according to Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's, commenting on a monthly statement, he called a refiner's attention to a discrepancy in regard to bungs, articles worth about as much in a refinery as pins are in a household. "Last month," he said to the subordinate official concerned, "you reported on hand 1,119 bungs. Ten thousand were sent you at the beginning of this month. You have used 9,527 this month. You report 1,012 on hand. What has become of the other 580?" Apparently Mr. Rockefeller's idea was: Take care of the bungs and the barrels will take care of themselves.

The Mistress' Character.

The London Globe prints a "character" which an English servant leaving kindly gave her mistress: "In anser to your letter, it's not a bad place; the Mrs. understands her dutys, and is sivel and obliging, but troubles about getting up early in the mornings. There is plenty, and if you don't mind a place where only one other young lady is kept besides yourself, you might give them a month's trial. I like more society, which is why I am leaving."

His Narrow Logic.

"If I had my way," said the man of high principles, "there would be no money in politics."

"But," said Senator Sorghum, "if you didn't put any money in politics it isn't likely you could have your way."

Shoes and the Feet.

"Maudie, dear, those shoes look tight. How do they feel on your feet?"

"Perfectly comfortable, mamma." (To herself) "If she had asked me how my feet felt in the shoes she would have had me!"

Anticipating Him.

"Jenkins, I believe you have some of the elements of success about you."

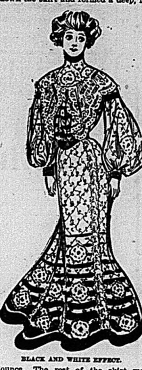
"Not a dollar, old man. Honor bright. You'd be welcome to it if I had."—Stray Stories.

When our shafts fail to hit the mark we generally have a feeling that it is because the mark is too low.—Puck.

DRESSY COSTUMES.

Elaborate Tailor Mades—White Serge Made With Flounces.

The short pelerine or collar of beautiful lace is a feature of the more dressy tailor mades. A smart frock designed recently was of a soft white fabric, a very superior kind of cashmere, with a pelerine of deep ecru point lace. A beautiful panel of the lace was carried down the skirt and formed a deep, full flounce. The rest of the skirt was closely gauged from the waist to the knees.



BLACK AND WHITE EFFECT.

Ever so smart was a white serge made with a series of seven flounces beginning three or four inches below the waist and very full at the feet. Each of these flounces had a border of black spots of different sizes. These spots also formed a trimming on the smart coat bodice, which was finished with a yoke of beautiful lace having a lining of rose pink. With this was a hat of simple black, the only decoration being a wreath of old rose velvet pansies. The white parasol was ornamented with black spots.

The black and white costume is the very essence of smartness. With all of these dressy costumes a three-quarter coat of black silk is desirable, the latter plentifully enriched with lace.

For uncertain weather a costume of silk and wool crape is smart, light and yet not too cool. Many delicate tones of gray are in favor, and lace is universally employed as the chief trimming, but there are as well all sorts of additions, such as tassels, strappings and little tabs of panne or velvet.

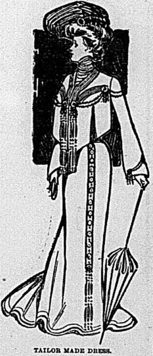
The illustration shows a costume of black and white silk velvet and venetian lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

Effective Muslin Dresses — Gowns Which Are Practical.

Very effective debutante frocks are made of painted chiffon over underskirts of a contrasting color.

A gown composed of pale blue chiffon, painted with a pompadour design of pink rose, was mounted over a fine plaited accordion skirt in pale green, worn with a sash of old rose panne, caught up high in the back with some fancy blue enameled buttons. With this was worn a fichu tied together with a bunch of La France roses.



TAILOR MADE DRESS.

One can never dispense with the useful black gown or something of a dark order. A bright shade of blood red is extremely effective in the evening when it happens to suit. One great advantage of a gown of this sort is that it comes in well for an afternoon reception frock. It may also do duty for quiet dinners and traveling. A dress of this sort may be worn twenty times as often as a paler one.

The cut shows a tailor made dress of deep red canvas.

RED HAT GIRL.

You're blazing here and blazing there,
You fill the street with lurid glare,
And as you wander up and down
You fairly seem to paint the town.
You'd light an eight room Harlem flat,
Oh, sweet, sweet girl with the red, red hat!

When far away a dull red glow
Illumes the sky where'er you go.
They say that if a bull you met
You'd surely need an air ship, yet
"You're not so warm!" They can't say that,
Oh, sweet, sweet girl with the red, red hat!

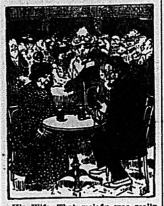
You fairly seem to scorch the air;
Into each horse you throw a scare.
Your flaming headlight makes us thrill
And gape and gaze and glare until
We hardly know where we are at,
Oh, sweet, sweet girl with the red, red hat!

In fear 'tis said you'll scale a house
When fleeing from a tiny mouse,
And yet you wear beyond a doubt
The reddest badge of courage out
Whene'er you don a thing like that,
Oh, sweet, sweet girl with the red, red hat!

They tell a tale—pray is it true?—
About that hat of fiery hue:
It got too near a big machine—
An auto run by gasoline—
And "Puff! Boom! Bang!" Did you do that?
Oh, sweet, sweet girl with the red, red hat!

—Earle Hooker Eaton in New York Herald.

The Professor.



His Wife—That melody was really fine.

Professor—I thought so too. I will tie a knot in my handkerchief so that I won't forget it.

Gosling and His Sauce.

Once upon a time there was an impudent gosling who was exceedingly saucy to his mother and apparently had no respect for his elders.

His kind mother was very patient with him and tried to overlook his failing, hoping that he would improve with age. His father was not so lenient, and one day, when the gosling tried his saucy methods on him, he gave him a sound thrashing.

"That sort of talk may do for your mother, but it will not do for me," said the father.

Moral.—What is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander.—New York Herald.

She Looked It.

"I've a real good idea," said the manager as he pulled the gilt band off a 5 cent cigar. "Going to give the people the old songs and stir up old memories."

"Pretty good," said the friend.

"Well," continued the manager, now lighting the 5 cent cigar, "did you see that lady in my outer office? I've engaged her to sing 'The Last Rose of Summer' for 200 nights."

"Yes?" said the cold friend. "Can she sing it? I know she ought to, for she certainly looks it."

And the manager threw away the 5 cent cigar.—New York Times.

Particular.

Mr. Con Seet—I suppose I'm what you might call a gay Lothario, Miss Pepprey.

Miss Pepprey—Indeed?

Mr. Con Seet—Yes. I'm attentive to a number of girls, but I'm not engaged to any particular one.

Miss Pepprey—Naturally, for how could she be engaged to you if she were?—Philadelphia Press.

Pity.

Nell—I'm in a dilemma. Of course I can't think of marrying Jack Lowfer, but he says if I don't he'll go to the dogs.

Belle—Well, you can't help that.

Nell—That's just it. I know I can't, and I'm very fond of dogs.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Last Remembrance.

Ethel (ecstatically) — Oh, Charlie, would you just as leave propose all over again, and do it into this phonograph?

Cholly—Why?

"Why, I want to have something to remember you by after you have gone in and spoken to papa about it."—Life.

Subject to Conditions.

Terwilliger—Crigson claims to have caught a catfish weighing fifty pounds in Cedar creek, does he? Well, it's safe to say he's lying to the extent of about forty pounds.

A Tomato Tragedy.

A Philadelphia man grabbed a crate of tomatoes and tried to get away with it, but the police caught up with him and shot him down.

Pretty serious case of tomato ketch up, wasn't it?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Getting On.

"Wallie is learning to play golf very rapidly, isn't he?"

"Yes. He doesn't have to wait any more for the caddie to tell him which club he needs."—Chicago Record-Herald.

TALKING IT OVER.

The Southern Educational Conferences Interesting Examples.

A shoemaker in a little New England valley displays a sign on the top of his shop bearing the following inviting language: "Walk In and Talk It Over." It is an announcement that has more of timeliness and general application than may have originally occurred to the displayer of the sign. The "get together" and "talk it over" method is having a remarkable vogue nowadays. It was conspicuously present in the world's congress of religions at the Chicago Columbian exposition. It is used by those interested in social progress; it is at the basis of the various schemes for conciliation between capital and labor; it is the backbone of the international arbitration movement, Mr. Carnegie's proposed Palace of Peace at The Hague being merely a commodious and agreeable place where the nations of the world may "walk in and talk it over" in the most convenient and dignified manner, in this case a highly civilized and truly Christian substitute for the old fashioned, romantic, corpse decorated battle field, where the nations instead walked in and fought it over.

The "talk it over" in place of the "fight it over" method implies a higher state not merely of manners and morals, but also of human intelligence, as illustrated by the story told the other day in the south of a colored servant who, referring to the civil war, remarked that, as the white folks hadn't intelligence enough to settle the question peaceably, they had to go and fight it out.

One of the most interesting modern examples of the talking over method is the series of annual conferences on education in the south, with which the name of Mr. Robert C. Ogden is prominent. The sixth was held recently in Richmond, the capital of Virginia and the former capital of the southern confederacy. The valuable and instructive "talking over" on this occasion between representatives of various parts of the north and of the south was not only upon the public platform, but in social intercourse.—Century.

British Naval Matters.

Admiral Sir John Fisher, who replied for the British navy to a toast at a recent Royal academy banquet, said in the course of his speech: "I always think on these occasions of the first time I went to sea on board my first ship, a little sailing two decker, and I saw inscribed in great big gold letters the one word 'Silence.' Underneath was another good motto, 'Deeds, Not Words.' I have put that into every ship I have commanded since. This leads me to another motto which is better still. When I was commander in chief in the Mediterranean I went to inspect a small destroyer, only 200 tons, but with such pride and swagger that she might have been 10,000 tons. The lieutenant in command took me round. She was in beautiful order, and I came aft to the wheel and saw there 'Ut Veniant Omnes.' 'Hello!' I said. 'What the deuce is that?' Saluting me, he said, 'Let 'em all come.' That was not boasting; that was the sense of conscious efficiency, the sense that permeates the whole fleet, and I used to think as the admiral it would be irresistible, provided the admiral was up to the mark."

Perils of Ballooning.

Balloon ascents are attended by many dangers, but a novel peril was experienced by an aeronaut in India some time ago. As night came on the aerial traveler found himself nearing a jungle and resolved to descend on a marshy spot at the edge of a lake. As he came down into the rushes, however, a crocodile appeared and made straight for the balloon. The aeronaut by throwing out some sand managed to rise a few feet, but the crocodile rushed round and round the grappling rope, clearly disproving the fallacy that a crocodile cannot turn quickly. It would probably have made short work of the unlucky voyager had not some natives come up just in time.—Golden Penny.

Professor Bell's Powerful Kite.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell has lately invented a variation in the form of box kites whereby he obtains a greatly increased flying or lifting power. His kite is a tetrahedron, so that it presents the form of a triangle from whatever side it is viewed. It is then self braced in every direction, and with increase of size its lifting power increases in a greater ratio than the weight. By combining a great number of tetrahedrons he has constructed a large kite, which is able to lift not only a man, but a weight of 200 pounds.

A Lucky Sultan.

Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey, has just celebrated his sixtieth birthday. Thirty-four Ottomans have reigned in Turkey, and the longest reign was less than fifty years, Solyman I. having sat upon the throne from 1520 to 1566. Only one sultan in the nineteenth century, only one in the eighteenth and only one in the seventeenth ruled longer than Abdul, and most of his predecessors have been slain or put in chains before their friends were able to wish them many happy returns of their sixtieth birthday.

A Forest Monarch.

A great spruce tree was felled in the state of Washington recently, and it was decided that a piece of it should be sent to Sweden for exhibition purposes. The men who went to see the tree said they would take eleven feet of the butt, but the railroads told them they could leave it in Washington if they did, for it would be impossible to transport the log on any car. The men finally bought fifteen inches, and the section is nine feet in diameter.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

Mr. J. M. Hurley's Recent Examination

FULL TEXT OF WHAT TRANSPIRED BEFORE THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

TAKEN BY THE OFFICIAL REPORTER — HOW CENSUS ACCOUNTS WERE MADE UP.

HIS ARDUOUS DUTIES AS FISHERY INSPECTOR — INTERESTING READING.

Committee Room 34,
House of Commons,
Wednesday July 22, 1903

Q.—After you had made your bill with that itemized account you found out that in taking your itemized account you had left out, if I understand by your examination in chief, some items which you did not propose to enter, such as, for instance, as giving stationery, using your horse and team for driving, which you did not put in your first account, and when you found out you were to be paid so very parsimoniously that you did not think it was fair pay for what you had done you thought you had no present to make to the Government, and you put in a lump sum of $25, thinking it was a fair amount, conscientiously a fair amount for what you had put in the way of stationery, and trips with your horse, using rooms, not halls, which you had not at first put in, and you thought it was a fair amount which you should be allowed to put in your bill, is not that correct? A.—Yes, that is correct.

By Mr. Taylor.

Q.—Mr. Hurley, my learned friend has spoken of the cost of a lot of things, to which the witness had given assent, as being $25 that is not a fact; that after having made up his bill he found he could put in another $25 for halls, stationery and horse hire. I want my learned friend to understand that the bill Mr. Hurley has put in is $25 for halls, $10 for stationery and $15 for horse hire, making a lump sum of $50. How much did you pay for the $10 worth of stationery you supplied? A.—I do not know.

Q.—If you had to buy it how much would it have cost you? A.—There was paper—

Q.—How many quires of paper? A.—I do not know.

Q.—And? A.—And postage.

Q.—No, it is stationery. A.—Well, is not postage stationery?

Q.—I do not think so. A.—I supposed it was. There was a lot of this stationery, there were 33 enumerators all over the riding and people were writing asking me to appoint this one and that one.

Q.—Did you give them a quire of paper each? A.—I do not think I did; I did not give them much, some of them I did not furnish any stationery.

Q.—Did you furnish five quires of paper altogether? A.—No, I do not know that I did; I put postage and stationery; I made out a sum for the whole business.

Q.—Have you the amount you paid in postage? How much did you pay for postage? A.—I do not know.

Q.—How did you arrive at $10 for stationery and postage? A.—I happened at one time to be Reeve of the township, and I would get $10 for postage for what I used, and I did not use as much in that way as I did in connection with the census.

Q.—And because you had been paid $10 when you were Reeve of the township you charged that here, and the Government paid for it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you charged $15 for horse hire? Was that for your own horse? A.—Sometimes if I could get him.

Q.—Every time I think? This $15 that you charged for your own horse, how many days did you use him? A.—I hardly know.

Q.—Did you use him two days outside the days you had charged for? A.—I used the horse every day, I always use a horse. I live four miles out.

Q.—How many days did you use him outside what you have charged for? A.—I used him 20 days.

Q.—Over and above what you charged for? Yes, I did.

By Mr. Barker.

Q.—When you made that charge of $25 for expenses of halls, did you make an affidavit that was a correct charge and that you had paid money? A.—I put that in just as conscientiously as I did any other.

Q.—That is not what I am asking you; did you put in that affidavit that that charge was correct? A.—I do not think so that I put in an affidavit to my accounts.

Q.—You made no affidavit as to your personal expenses? A.—I do not think so, I do not think there was any affidavit asked for after we were first sworn in.

Q.—Did you make any affidavit as to your expenditure for any purpose, that you expended? A.—No.

Q.—You did not? A.—No, we were sworn in.

Q.—I am not asking you if you were sworn in, but did you make an affidavit? A.—Not after the first.

Q.—The $100 that was allowed was to cover all charges and office, was it not? A.—Well, I do not know what it was to cover.

Q.—Oh, yes, you got instructions for all other duties it was to cover, expenses, travelling and otherwise, and all other charges of office, you could not use your own room? A.—I did not get the $100.

Q.—You got more, $150? A.—That is what I found after if the account was for $100 you didn't get but the $100.

Q.—And it was for that reason you put in $25 for room? A.—I think I had put in what I honestly thought I was entitled to.

Q.—And you charged it as expenses, although you had not expended it? A.—I did not, I did expend it.

Q.—You said over and over again here, that you did not expend that $25 for halls. A.—Yes, for halls, but I said that item would cover—

Q.—You said you did not expend it for halls. What did you charge that $25 for? A.—For halls and so forth.

Q.—Very well. A.—Well, that's it.

Q.—Have you expended it for halls? A.—I had a lot of running around; what put that in my mind about halls was that it would cover any place where I was.

Q.—For any room at all, did you expend any part of that $25 for any room or hall? Did you expend any part of that $25 that you charged for halls, for either room, hall or anything of that description? A.—I put it in as general expenses.

Q.—Answer the question. Did you expend one dollar of that $25 that you have charged for halls, did you expend $1 for a room, hall, or anything of that description? A.—I expended it for the room I stayed in.

Q.—Have you not charged all your hotel expenses? A.—I do not know that I have in that account put in on the 12th June.

Q.—When you were putting that charge in why did you not state what you were charging it for? A.—That was done just for a short time.

By Mr. Blain.

Q.—Mr. Hurley, just one question, you went over the accounts of your enumerators in your county? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you find any schedules or columns not filled in, or were they all filled in in every case? A.—Oh, we had lots of them not filled in.

Q.—There were lots of columns not filled in? A.—Yes.

Q.—There were no answers to be given? A.—No answers to be given.

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned.

Germany's Orchard Trees.

Germany has on an average 806 orchard trees to the square mile.

Cuba's Corn Crops.

Four crops of corn are produced yearly in Cuba. The first crop is planted in December, and the fourth crop is harvested in December.

Pitchblende.

Pitchblende, so valuable to scientists because of the radio activity metal it contains, is found in Saxony and Cornwall and is a mineral made up of 86½ per cent of oxide of uranium, 2½ black oxide of iron, galena and silex.

Surgeons' Stitches.

Silk twist is only one of two or three dozen stitching materials used by surgeons, fine silver wire and the use of so called catgut being the more commonly used. The advantage of the latter is that they do not have to be removed and are absorbed by or built into the wound.

Hotels in Switzerland.

About 27,000 persons are employed in the 1,271 hotels for tourists in Switzerland.

Negro Mortality.

The mortality in the colored population of the United States is nearly double that of the white population. Native white stock has the advantage of foreign white stock at most ages above infancy.

Dangerous Bacteria.

It is the bacteria that have become virulent by feasting on human tissues that are dangerous. A soiled bottle returned to the milkman by a mother whose baby had diarrhea will infect the score or more bottles that are washed in the same water with it.

Charles Macklin.

The oldest actor who ever appeared on the stage was Charles Macklin, who represented Shylock in 1789 at Covent Garden, London, when past his one hundredth birthday.

An Ancient Tree.

In the orangery of Versailles is the oldest pomegranate tree in France. It dates, in fact, back to the establishment of the orangery in 1685. In exceptionally warm and bright seasons the old tree still decorates its branches with a few flowers, but no fruit has been seen upon it for a long time.

Bad For the Eyes.

If you value your eyes never look too steadily from a car window at objects that are constantly flying past you.

Sunday Island.

Sunday Island, in the Pacific, is really the tallest mountain in the world. It rises 2,000 feet out of five miles of water and is thus nearly 30,000 feet from base to summit.

Apple Trees.

It is estimated that there are about 200,000,000 apple trees in the United States and that the average crop amounts to about 175,000,000 bushels. Apples can be grown anywhere in the United States except where it is very cold or very hot.

Sea Born Britons.

On an average 700 British subjects are born every year at sea.

The Sky.

John Ruskin, the great art critic, wrote in his "Modern Painters," "The sky is not blue color merely; it is blue fire and cannot be painted."

Use All Your Teeth.

It is a curious fact that the teeth that are seldom used decay more rapidly than those that have daily work to do. It is a fact, however, and, being a fact, the thing to do is to take pains to eat on both sides of the mouth equally.

Store Closed Every Wednesday During July and August at 12 O'Clock Noon.

RELIABLE SCHOOL CLOTHING.

Another holiday season is about over. In a few days from camp and country the boys will be returning ready to take up school duties—and enjoyments—with renewed energy.

In all probability ninety-nine out of every hundred will require clothing for either every day or best.

Makes little difference which kind is wanted—we are confident of our ability to please you in either. Here are some of the reasons for our confidence—

OUR STYLES ARE RIGHT.

We purchase our Boys' clothing from manufacturers who make but one style—the latest. You'll find no "has beens" in the assortment. Every suit has the freshness of recent and careful tailoring.

All in desirable styles that will make immediate friends with the boys.

OUR QUALITIES ARE RIGHT.

Years ago we made it a rule not to sell merchandise of any kind on which we could not place our guarantee of "Perfect satisfaction or money refunded."

This principle we have in our clothing department as elsewhere.

Qualities other that the best would not stand such liberal terms.

OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT.

This feature probably more than any other is responsible for our rapidly increasing trade.

People quickly find where values are high and prices moderate.

Many garments that leave us are directly responsible for the sale of others.

None leave here that will not meet up to our reputation—"Best values at lowest cash prices."

Space permits special mention of but two worthy styles—many others as good.

POPULAR PRICED SUITS $2.50.

With many this is a popular price for rough usuage suits. It will be popular with many more when the value of our school suits at this figure becomes known.

Neat in appearance—fine workmanship—good trimmings—made from firm serviceable material, they contain all desirable points at a price affordable by all.

—Boys' fine Tweed Suits in neat patterns, sizes from 22 to 34 Suits that contain much more value than the price stands for elsewhere........$2.50

FINE WORSTED SUITS.

For a fine suit no material quite meets the demand as well as Worsted.

Best buying facilities are directly responsible for the excellence of three lines of Boys' heavy Navy and Black Worsted 3 piece Suits.

The worthiness of the garments induced us to give an order large enough to bring to selling exclusively to us.

A few minutes inspection will show you, as it did us, their superiority over any you have seen at the price.

—Boys' fine all wool Clay Worsted 3 piece Suits in Black and Navy. Lines worthy of our store and your inspection........$5.00, $6.50, $7.50

$5.00 SILK WAISTS $3.95.

Our ability to handle large quantities enables us to make this Silk blouse offering.

All Fall styles, silk sewn and finished in the manner that marks first class workmanship.

Did we buy them regular our selling price would be $5.00. We accepted the offer of a manufacturer for a large quantity and so this price results.

Each blouse is neatly packed in a separate box.

You'll best appreciate the worthiness of this offering by visiting our Mantle room and making a personal examination.

—Ladies' fine Japan Taffeta Blouses in Sky Blue, Pink, Cardinal, White, Black and Reseda trimmed with Sherring and Tucks—newest sleeve tucked on top from shoulder to elbow—neat collar and cuffs, self color lining—a very pretty waist, regular $5.00, for........$3.95

STYLISH SILK UNDERSKIRTS.

The ready-to-wear garment feature has brought the Black Silk Underskirts in reach of many of who before did not feel able to pay the prices asked.

Our new assortment is here. The dainty styles and excellent workmanship of these we have never equalled at the prices.

Every Skirt is lined with black lustre. Actual test has proven that this greatly lengthens the life and preserves the shape.

Such dainty garments are a pleasure to display.

Ask to see them whether desirous of purchasing or not. Price from $5.00 to $11.00.

—Fine Black Silk Skirt with wide tucked flonce and 3 narrow frills—lustre lined........$5.00

—Fine heavy quality rustle Taffeta underskirt, with wide occordion plaited flounce and narrow frills—lustre lined........$7 50

—Fine extra wide Taffeta underskirts with 14 inch accordion plaited flounce and extra silk drop flounce—lustre lined a very stylish garment........$11 00

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

IT IS A PERPLEXING THING.

For the reader of newspaper advertisements to determine what is what. We do not use as large type as some, but we are sure that what we have to say is not the less important to any one who is interested in the subject of clothing at this time. Our summer suits are ready to speak for themselves, if you will but take time to inspect them, and we think you will find no fault with the prices. We are making an immense display of hot weather clothing and furnishings.—Quick & Robertson.

Fatal Accident at Frankford Village.

BOY FELL OFF WAGGON AND WHEEL PASSED OVER HIS BODY—DIED THE NEXT AFTERNOON.

A distressing and which proved to be a fatal accident occurred in the Village of Frankford on Friday afternoon. It appears that a yeoman named Wilmot Hendricks, who resides in the Township of Murray, at about 5 o'clock on the afternoon named was hauling a load of grain to an elevator which is situated in the village.

Unnoticed by Hendricks, a boy named Harry Wilson, 11 years of age, and a son of Mr. Wesley Wilson, of Frankford, jumped upon the waggon at the rear.

Just before the elevator was reached the waggon gave a sudden jolt and the lad fell off in such a manner that one of the hind wheels passed over his abdomen.

While falling young Wilson screamed, but Mr. Hendricks was unable to stop the team before the accident occurred.

As soon as possible the unfortunate boy was conveyed to his home and medical aid summoned. At first it was thought he would survive the injuries, but later in the evening he grew worse and at 1 o'clock on Saturday morning he passed away.

Harry was a plucky lad, and when revived shortly after the accident told parties who were around not to let his mother know he was hurt, as she would feel bad. He was an exceptionally bright boy and a general favorite amongst his companions. No blame is attached to Mr. Hendricks on account of the unfortunate affair.

WANT TO COME TO BELLEVILLE.

EMPLOYEES OF HAMILTON ROLLING MILLS EAGER TO COME HERE TO WORK.

Mr. John Meagher, caretaker of the Conservative Auxiliary Club rooms, has just returned from a trip to Hamilton, where he attended the Summer Carnival. While there he visited the rolling mills in that city, and saw several who were formerly employed in the local mills. In conversation many of the Hamilton men expressed themselves as eager to come to Belleville to work, as they had heard much of its natural beauty and pleasant surroundings. John says Hamilton is a great industrial centre, but it isn't one-two with Belleville as a nice place to live.

NERVOUSLY EXHAUSTED.

Sleepless, poor digestion, easily tired blue as indigo, that's how you feel. Do you want to feel strong, make plenty of blood, enjoy buoyancy, strength and vim. You can do so by using Ferrozone. How it sharpens the appetite and imparts a feeling of buoyancy, strength and vim! Improves the appetite, digestion, assimilation, sleep. How surely Ferrozone does this, you can ascertain by using it. Ferrozone is a blood builder, nerve strengthener and brain invigorator. Sold by all druggists.

FENWICK RESIDENCE WAS BURGLARIZED.

THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN THE WORK OF BOYS—MISSING ARTICLES NOT YET ENUMERATED.

Some time between Saturday evening and Sunday morning an entrance was effected into the residence of Mr. R. Fenwick, situated on the corner of Bridge and George streets. Mr. and Mrs. Fenwick being away, the would-be burglars were not disturbed, and the house was ransacked from the cellar to the garret, but as yet nothing has been missed by the servant who discovered the condition of the house.

An entrance was effected by forcing a door in the rear of the premises. It is thought that a chisel was used, from marks made which had the effect of springing the lock. There are finger marks left upon the door which indicate that the work was done by some one having a small hand. The police think that boys are the guilty parties.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

Additional News Of Tweed Disaster.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSION NOT KNOWN — VICTIMS WERE ALL YOUNG MEN.

Tweed, August 23.—The village is to-day thronged with visitors, who have come to see the scene of the recent explosion, and who hang on the morbid details with the interest that cases of this kind always create.

Dr. Sutton, coroner, of Madoc, was summoned, and held an inquest yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock on the portions of the bodies which were found. All the fragments picked up would not weigh 100 pounds.

The cause of the accident is not known, and probably never will be. The packing house, which blew up, has vanished completely from sight, and the other buildings of the works were all more or less damaged.

Much sympathy is expressed for the relatives of the victims, who were:

Lyman Moon, married, aged 27;
Charles Moon, married, aged 26;
Edward Thibault, married, aged 25.

The funeral of the two Moons, who were brothers-in-law, as well as cousins, took place on Sunday at 4 p.m.; the remains of Thibault were buried at Flinton at 12 o'clock. All the funerals were largely attended, the public seeming anxious to show their sympathy with the relatives of the unfortunate men.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP YESTERDAY.

St. Michael's

Yesterday morning Miss Pearl Fanning sang a beautiful solo in the above church, entitled, "My God, My Father, while I stray." At the evening service Miss Catherine Bawden and Madame Bonvini O'Brien rendered solos which were much appreciated.

Holloway Street.

At Holloway Street Church yesterday, in the absence of the Pastor, Rev J. R. Real, the Rev. R. H. Leitch, of Picton, preached, and his discourses were much appreciated by the congregations.

Christ Church.

Rev Prof. Howard yesterday conducted services and preached, his discourses being very acceptable to the congregations. In the evening his text was from St. John, 20th chapter, 8th verse:

"Then went into also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw and believed."

Tabernacle Church.

Good congregations were present at both services yesterday, which were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. G. Brown.

In the evening his text was taken from Genesis, 7th chapter and 1st verse:

"And the Lord said unto Noah, come thou and all thy house into the ark, for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation."

Bridge Street.

"An old Preacher and his Congregation" was the subject discussed by the Rev. Dr. Crothers last evening. The Rev. gentleman took his text from 1st Kings, 18th chapter and 21st verse:

"And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, how long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God follow him, but if Baal then follow him. And the people answered him not a word."

The solos in the anthems sung at both services were taken by Miss Mabel Vermilyea.

Baptist.

In the absence of the Pastor, the Rev. R Wallace occupied the pulpit last evening. His text was taken from St. Luke, 5th chapter, 57th and 58th verses.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

At the above church yesterday morning, the Rev. Geo. Worrell, of Philadelphia, preached from the following text:

"What think ye of Christ."

There was a good congregation present. At the evening service the rector, Rev. M. Gilliland, was the preacher.

St. Andrew's.

The pulpit of this church was yesterday occupied by the Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean. In the morning the Rev. gentleman gave an earnest and practical discourse on the words found in St. John, 14th chapter and 15th verse:

"If ye love me keep my commandments."

At the evening service Miss Nora Lazier sang a solo and the male quartette also took part in the singing.

John Street.

After a few Sundays' absence, the Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, yesterday occupied the pulpit of this church, and his discourses were, as usual, both thoughtful and impressive. In the evening the subject discussed was "Wondrous Things of the Law." The text was taken from Psalm 119, 18th verse:

"Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

The preacher showed that the laws of nature had gradually been unfolded for man's enlightment, and to that fact was due the many inventions which had been perfected. Only for the lightning and thunder which men saw and heard in the heavens they might never have discovered the wondrous force known as electricity. Many of the other great discoveries had been the result of accidents, showing how the wondrous things of nature's law were being unfolded for the benefit of mankind.

Whilst the offertory was being taken, Mrs. Grant rendered an appropriate solo, entitled "Teach me Thy Way O Lord."

KILLED IN MANITOBA.

WHO KNOWS ISAAC YOUNG, SUPPOSEDLY A FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS LOCALITY?

Rev. M. W. Maclean yesterday received a telegram from Griswold, near Oak Lake, Manitoba, stating that Isaac Young had been accidentally killed in that vicinity by falling under a moving train. From the message it would appear that the unfortunate man was a resident of this city, but diligent enquiry failed to identify such a person. Rev. Mr. Maclean has also made every effort to locate friends of the deceased. He was unknown to the Rev. gentleman, who is at a loss to understand why the message was sent to him. Any relatives or friends of Young should communicate with Mr. Maclean at the Manse.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTES.

Lacrosse results on Saturday: Brantford 18, Oshawa 4; Tecumsehs 5, St. Kitts 1; Montreal 9, Cornwall 1.

The Brantford Lacrosse team will again challenge for the Minto cup, and ask that the games be played this fall.

In a cricket match at Rosedale, Gentlemen vs. Players, the amateurs gave the pros. a bad beating, the score being: Gentlemen 459 for fourteen wickets; Players, [illegible]13 for twenty wickets.

Sphinx B., a horse which lately raced here, got third money in the 2.26 class at Montreal.

In a lacrosse match at Toronto last Saturday, Tecumsehs vs. St. Catharines, no less than 25 men were ruled off for foul playing.

The Toronto Baseball Club has won 10 straight games, and now look safe to finish in the first division.

It is said that the next challenge for the America's Cup will be from Canada, and that already $100,000 has been subscribed to build a challenger, which, in order to fulfil the conditions, will sail under the colors of the Halifax Yacht Club.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE OF CANCER CURES

No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success as the new constitutional treatment for cancers and tumors. The fact that it acts on the principle of destroying the cancer germs and purifying the blood of cancer poisons, has established it the only rational remedy for cancers, tumors and malignant growths. There are dozens of people in Canada who have been completely cured by this new, painless method of treatment, and if you will send two stamps to Messrs. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., full particulars of these cases will be sent to you.

Life is a mission; duty its highest law.

THOS. E. MEPHAM. Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

McINTOSH BROS.

SMART EFFECTS.

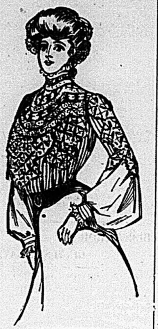
Some Dainty Black Gowns and Shirt Waist Suits.

Shirt waist suits of foulard continue to be worn. The favorite color is a deep blue black with tiny white markings.

Utility hats of ecru straw tilt up in front and are simply trimmed by the addition of a veil of lace or brown chiffon.

Stamped nets of which the ground is white and the pattern of some delicate color make ideal dancing frocks for summer wear and even for simple occasions in winter.

The gown of black point d'esprit will always be worn by the well dressed woman. It is inexpensive and gives the airy effect of a far more expensive creation. A gown of black point d'esprit banded with chantilly lace—and it need not be expensive lace either—makes an ideal frock worn over a lining of soft, lustrous silk.



BLACK CHIFFON WAIST.

Blouses of black chiffon and black antique lace are very smart. The neck and sometimes the upper halves of the sleeves are made transparent, and a waist of this sort worn with a crepe de chine skirt makes a smart demitoilet.

The picture represents a blouse of the above description made of chiffon and embroidered antique lace.

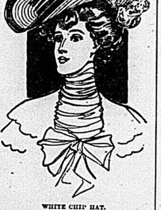
JUDIC CHOLLET.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Styles of 1830 in Chip and Chiffon. Gainsborough Hats.

Some very picturesque 1830 hats are being introduced in chip and chiffon, and indeed several are composed entirely of lace. They are very large, with strings, and therefore very closely resemble the picture hat finished with a single feather and a rose.

The best hats are still of the Gainsborough type in fine chip, in black, white and pale shades. Some are simply trimmed with wonderful choux of ribbon and an equally wonderful rosette, while the others have a long, sweeping feather. These hats are very distinctive, but not to be ranked among economical head gear.



WHITE CHIP HAT.

An all black hat is a necessity with the up to date woman, but she can relieve the somberness of this if she chooses by applications of ecru lace.

French sailor hats of rough straw are worn with pale tinted veils of chiffon, a delicate blue and lavender being the newest thing.

An exquisite robe is of plisse crepe de chine in a creamy tint, and over this falls a tunic of black chantilly lace, applique with lozenge shaped motifs of ivory d'alencon lace. The bolero—of the black lace—is heavily incrusted with ivory lace, and the neck is cut low to show a transparent yoke of ivory lace, fastened with straps of narrow green velvet and diamond buttons. A broad belt of the velvet shows beneath the short bolero. Several gowns of nut brown crape and chiffon have been seen, one of which had a pronounced admixture of apricot yellow, while another was liberally applied with champagne tinted lace and had slight touches of orchid pink panne.

The dressy hat in the cut is of fine white chip trimmed with black velvet and a white feather.

TWO MEN'S HURRIED EXIT

Fatal Nitro-Glycerine Explosion at Leamington, Ont.

Twenty Quarts of the Explosive Caused Great Havoc—Derrick Was Blown to Pieces and a Hole 15 Feet Square and 20 Feet Deep Was Torn Up Around the Well—Some Very Narrow Escapes.

Leamington, Aug. 24.—A terrible accident occurred here Saturday at No. 2 oil well, owned by the Leamington Oil Co. While making preparations for shooting the well a premature explosion of nitro-glycerine occurred and two men were blown to atoms.

The dead are:

William Booth, an expert from Petrolea, Ont.

William Kennedy, a driller from Kingsville, Ont.

The cause of the explosion has not as yet been ascertained, but it is thought that the can slipped out of the expert's hand. They had lowered one quart of the nitro-glycerine to the bottom of the well, and were in the act of placing twenty quarts more when they exploded.

The derrick was blown to pieces, and a hole 15 feet square and 20 feet deep torn up around the well. Pieces of the derrick and casing were blown for twenty rods in every direction.

There were some very narrow escapes. Ed. Winters, one of the principal stockholders and promoters of the company, only left the well about a minute before the explosion occurred, and was only a rod or so away at the time. His escaping the falling timbers is miraculous. The other directors arrived on a special from Detroit a short time after the accident happened.

MISS CURZON DROWNED.

Was Professor of Chemistry at Lilian Massey Training School, Toronto.

Pentanguishene, Aug. 24.—Miss E. M. Curzon, B.A., professor of chemistry in the Lilian Massey School of Domestic Science, was accidentally drowned yesterday morning at Go-Home, Georgian bay, off the island where she was camping. She was in bathing alone at the time, and got into water beyond her depth. Her friends on the island were not aware of her danger in time to rescue her. Help was summoned with all haste from the nearest island, Prof. McCurdy's, some distance away, and promptly on arrival Mr. John McCurdy dived for the body and brought it to the surface. It was lying in ten or twelve feet of water, and some twenty-five feet from the shore. Over half an hour had, however, elapsed, and although prolonged efforts at resuscitation were made by several physicians, who were soon at hand, these were unavailing.

Miss Curzon, who was a daughter of the late Mrs. Sarah Anne Curzon, the well-known writer, and member of the Ontario Historical Society, graduated from the University of Toronto in 1889 and was for over ten years assistant to Dr. W. H. Ellis, Dominion analyst, resigning the position on the organization of the Lilian Massey School of Domestic Science, to join its staff. She was identified with the movement to secure a woman's residence for University College, and took an active interest in all women's societies in the University.

Two Men Drowned.

Guelph, Aug. 24.—Saturday night Arthur Bradley of the Traders' Bank and Frank Maddock, bookkeeper in Raymond Manufacturing Co.'s office, while going up the river in a canoe to their camp, were drowned. The bodies were found about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Bradley's people are residents of Mount Forest, and Maddock's live in Ingersoll. Neither of the young men could swim.

Fell From Bridge, Was Drowned.

Newtonville, Aug. 24.—Little Cecil Noden, youngest son of Wesley Noden, blacksmith, with two other small boys, went out bathing Saturday afternoon, and were on the railing of a bridge when young Noden slipped, fell into about 6 feet of water, and was drowned.

TWO MEN ELECTROCUTED.

Ottawa Contributes Two Fatal Accidents to the News Columns.

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—Two fatal accidents by electrocution occurred here Saturday. Elzear Remond of St. Genevieve, 23 miles from Montreal, a lineman for the Bell Telephone Company, was killed at Elgin and Maclaren streets. He was sitting on a cable pulling a guy wire used to hold the cable taut, when the wire came in contact with an electric wire. Remond had not the regulation rubber mitts on, and, having hold of the wire by the right hand, a complete circuit was formed. He received a heavy shock and fell to the ground, a distance of about 30 feet, breaking his collar bone and suffering other injuries, from which he died. He came here last Thursday.

George Stone, aged 19, a plumber apprentice, was electrocuted in the Collegiate Institute building while examining some plumbing work in a lavatory. He had an ordinary sixteen candle-power lamp in his hand and his right hand was on a piece of and his right hand was on a piece of iron work when he received the shock. The flesh was burned off his hand to the bone. There is some wonder expressed as to how a hundred voltage wire could cause electrocution, and it was said that a crossing with outside wires is impossible. An inquest will be held and evidence taken on that point.

Ottawa, Aug. 24. — Two women were seriously injured and one man severely hurt in a rear-end collision on the Ottawa Electric Street Railway, at the corner of Rideau and Sussex streets, at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. E. Rogers, 160 Cambridge street, was cut about the head and had her right foot crushed so that amputation of the part was necessary. Mrs. E. Guertin of Aylmer was cut about the face and hands. Motorman James A. Benbow of car No. 234 had his left leg broken in two places, a little above the ankle. Miss Blanche Gratton had the drum of one ear ruptured by the shock. Many others were bruised, but not seriously.

HOLOCAUST AT BUDAPEST

Between Forty and Fifty Persons Were Burned to Death.

Flames in Factory Spread So Rapidly in Piles of Flimsy Material That They Could Not Escape—Thirteen Persons Were Killed by Missing the Fire Nets and 16 Were Mortally and Nine Seriously Injured.

Budapest, Aug. 25.—(1 a.m.)—Between 40 and 50 persons were burned to death, according to reports at this hour, in a fire last night in a four-story building.

The lower floors of the building were occupied by a fancy goods firm, named Goldberg, and the upper floors as residential flats. There were 200 working people in the building, and the escape of many of them and of the residents on the third and fourth fourth floors were cut off. The warehouse contained piles of flimsy material and the flames spread with great rapidity. Only the work people near the doors below were able to escape.

The residents above, seeing their escape cut off, clung desperately to the windows, screaming for help. Fifteen persons were saved by jumping into fire nets. Many in jumping missed the nets, thirteen being killed in this way. Sixteen others were mortally and nine seriously injured.

Several buildings near by caught fire, but the firemen extinguished the flames in these before heavy damage had been done.

The damage is estimated at 4,000,000 kronen, mostly covered by insurance.

SUICIDE AT EIGHTY.

Woman Near Mitchell Takes Large Quantity of Paris Green.

Mitchell, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Winteringham, who has resided with her son at lot 6, Con. 3, Logan, a short distance from here, died Sunday evening from the effects of a dose of paris green, which she took with suicidal intent on Saturday morning. The woman was 80 years of age. The quantity of the poison that she swallowed would have been sufficient to kill half a dozen persons.

Suicide at Monkton.

Mitchell, Aug. 25.—A very shocking affair occurred at Monkton on Saturday, when Alfred Huggins, hotelkeeper of that place, deliberately took his life with his own hand. He left home in the morning and was seen by a man who was plowing in the field walking along by the fence and entering the bush. Not long after the man heard a shot. Searchers found the body cold in death with the revolver in Mr. Huggins' hand. The ball had entered the right temple.

MORE ROWLEY STEALINGS.

Fifty More Cases Where Deposits Were Not Credited.

St. Thomas, Aug. 25.—Further stealings of George Rowley, ex-manager of the Elgin Loan Co., are daily coming to light. On Saturday it was stated that Barrister E. Horton was acting for two clients, one of whom had deposited $1,240 and another $105, and had pass books showing that the amounts were deposited, but no entry could be found on the books of the company. It has, since been learned that so far about fifty similar cases have been reported and that instead of Rowley's defalcations amounting as given out to $188,000 in round figures they will exceed a quarter of a million dollars.

Peculiar Death of a Huckster.

Toronto, Junction, Aug. 25.— Alfred Anthony, a huckster for Barton Bros., Weston-road, died under rather peculiar circumstances about 12 o'clock on Saturday night. He had taken a load of vegetables to Brampton and, while returning home, fell asleep on the wagon and dropped off the seat. The wheels evidently went over his chest, but he thought he was not hurt and jumped on the wagon again. He drove to Mr. Barton's farm and handed him the money for the day's sales. He refused to be helped, and, as he was getting into bed, died. He had been married about twenty-five years, and leaves a wife, but no children.

Lieutenant-Governor Clark Home.

Toronto, Aug. 25.—Hon. William Mortimer Clark, Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, returned yesterday with the Misses Clark, from his visit to London, England, where he had spent the last six weeks on private business. Government house has been repainted and repaired since the spring, and the plumbing and heating systems entirely renovated, and it is expected that the Lieutenant-Governor, and his family will occupy the official residence before the winter sets in.

SLAUGHTER OF INNOCENTS

General Situation in Macedonia Becoming Intolerable.

Massacre of Children at Adrianople on Sunday Morning—Twenty-Two Villages in the Districts of Florila and Monastir Desolate—Horrible and Unspeakable Atrocities Committed by the Turks on Women and Children.

Sofia, Aug. 25.—Travelers who arrived here last night from Adrianople state a massacre of children occurred there Sunday morning. One version says the guns in one of the forts opened fire upon an insurgent band, which had attacked a military outpost. A panic followed inside the town, and the Mohammedan population fell upon the Christians.

22 Villages Desolate.

The Turks are reported to have massacred all the women and children in twenty-two villages of the districts of Florila and Monastir, and to have afterwards burned the villages. They are also alleged to have killed a number of prisoners. The streets of Krushevo are said to be strewn with dead and the survivors are afraid to bury the bodies, fearing to incur the suspicions of the Turks.

Reports from Monastir authenticated by the Russian and Austrian Consuls, give horrifying details of the massacres and atrocities. At the village of Armensko, the Turks destroyed 150 homes out of a total of 157, and massacred every man, woman and child. The women were subjected to the most terrible atrocities by the soldiers. Eight revolutionaries, captured at Krushevo, who were sent in the direction of Monastir in chains, were slaughtered by their guards.

Becoming Intolerable.

With the rumors of massacres, atrocities and the murder of prisoners in Monastir, now authenticated, the general situation here is fast becoming intolerable. Official and diplomatic circles are alike concerned fearing that many horrors enacted have yet to come to light. The revolutionary committees are doing their utmost to force the hands of the Bulgarian Government, and the immediate outlook is exceedingly serious.

Killed 150 Persons.

Constantinople, Aug. 25.—According to Turkish advices, when the insurgents captured Vasilike in the eastern part of the Vilayet of Adrianople, they killed the garrison, consisting of fifty soldiers, and about one hundred of the inhabitants.

200 Persons Killed.

Vienna, Aug. 25.—The Neue Freie Presses, Constantinople correspondent telegraphs that a band of Bulgarians has attacked the Turkish town of Urgas, south of Iniada, on the east coast of Turkey, and have blown up the Government buildings with dynamite. It is reported that 200 persons were killed.

PAN-AMERICAN RAILWAY.

To Connect Hudson's Bay With Central South America.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 25.—Plans for a gigantic railroad, with a trunk line connecting Hudson Bay with British Columbia, Buenos Ayres, South America, and having a network of branches, was disclosed yesterday when articles of incorporation of the Pan-American Railroad Company, with a capital stock placed at $250,000,000, were filed here with the Secretary of the Territory. The purpose of the corporation, it is said, is to build a line of railway extending from Port Nelson, Hudson Bay, in a southerly direction, crossing the line of the Canadian Pacific near Winnipeg, thence through the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory to Galveston; through Mexico to the Isthmus of Panama; through Colombia to Ecuador, and finally through Peru to Buenos Ayres.

International Cricket.

Toronto, Aug. 25.—The annual three-days' international cricket match between elevens representing the United States and Canada was started on Varsity campus yesterday morning. The game started in the morning, with the visitors at bat, and they were not retired before they had totalled the comfortable score of 167 runs. In the afternoon the Canadians went to bat, and were all retired for a total of 47 runs. The Americans went in for their second innings, and when the game was called they had made 55 runs for three wickets.

Officer Accused of Stealing.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—Messrs. Rene de Salaberry, notary; F. G. Faulkner, druggist, both of Hull, and Mr. Genest of the Public Works Department were shooting at Corbett's Island Sunday when Edmund T. Loveday, Inspector for the Ontario Fish and Game Protection Association, seized their arms, with the result that the officer has been accused by the Hull gentlemen of theft, and will answer to the charge in the Ottawa Police Court.

Vesuvius Getting Worse.

Naples, Aug. 25.—The slight increase in the activity of Vesuvius continues. The eruption is accompanied by detonations, while the stream of lava flowing in the direction of Pompeii is still slowly advancing. Some of the fissures recently noted have become enlarged, and are assuming almost the aspect of new craters.

Two Years For Spera.

Hamilton, Aug. 25.—Walter E. Spera, the Paris agent of the Robert Hay Grain Company, Toronto, who confessed he stole $975 from the firm, was sent to Kingston Penitentiary yesterday for two years by Judge Snider.

300 Entries For O.R.A. Matches.

Toronto, Aug. 25.—The O. R. A. matches, which commence to-morrow at Long Branch ranges, will serve to draw out the largest number of competitors in the history of this annual event. Entries have closed with nearly 300 names on the list, and it is expected that more will arrive by mail to-day. Last year there were but 218 all told, and the substantial advance in the number speaks much for the growing popularity of the annual contests.

Freedom Granted For $4,000.

Hamilton, Aug. 25.—John W. Noble, cashier of the Canadian Express Company, was committed for trial yesterday by the police magistrate. His friends still believe that he will be able to clear himself of the charge of stealing $2,000 from the company. He was released on $4,000 bail yesterday afternoon. Manager Moore and William Oblender, a clerk, swore that he had made damaging admissions to them.

Fell Out of Bed.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 25.—Private H. Levesey, aged 34 years, of the Royal Garrison, fell out of bed and died. A post mortem examination revealed that in falling on the floor Levesey had sustained a fracture and dislocation of the spinal cord.

Fought the Highwayman.

Winnipeg, Aug. 25.—Alberic Petria, bartender, was held up by a highwayman on the C.N.R. bridge early Sunday morning. He closed with the robber, and in trying to get possession of his revolver, the latter pulled the trigger, shooting Petrin's thumb off. The robber fled.

Czar Will Visit Emperor.

Vienna, Aug. 25.—It is definitely settled that the Czar will pay a five days' visit to Emperor Francis Joseph here at the end of September. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff will accompany the Czar.

OPPOSITION AMENDMENTS.

Lines of Party Cleavage on G.T.P. to Be Made More Distinct.

Trans Canada People Seem to Have Accepted the Grand Trunk Pacific Scheme—Mr. Lefurgey of East Prince Makes One of the Strongest Speeches of the Debate—Lord Brassey and Son in the House.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—New life was thrown into the debate on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway project yesterday. It now looks as if the House will not divide on the resolution before the end of the week. Some amendments are to be offered by the leader of the Opposition. These will prolong the discussion, but they will make the lines of party cleavage more distinct.

Mr. Hackett of P.E.I. opened the debate yesterday morning with a speech which did not err on the side of neglect of his national province. He was followed by Mr. Talbot of Belichasse, who was one of the promoters of the Trans-Canada. It seems the Trans-Canada people have apparently been reasoned into calm acceptance of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. Mr. Talbot defended the project all the way from Moncton, N. B., to Port Simpson on the coast. He used some hurry-up surveys of portions of the Trans-Canada route to justify the argument that a road is needed between Quebec and Winnipeg.

Fighting Richard Blain made a characteristic speech trenchant and straight from the shoulder. Then the Minister of Agriculture uncorked the vials of his eloquence. He ratified the Premier's statement that $13,000,000 would cover the country's obligation in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme.

A. A. Lefurgey of East Prince had the floor at the opening of the evening sitting of the House. He made one of the strongest speeches of the debate. The most pronounced of the views of the young Prince Edward Islander was his stout advocacy of the principle of Government ownership as applied to construction and operation of railways. In no other way, he declared, could the transportation question be advantageously worked out.

Mr. Roche of Halifax made an out and out defence of the Government's policy. He was followed by Mr. Thompson of Grey, who adjourned the debate.

Among the listeners in the Speaker's gallery were Lord Brassey and his son, who followed with close interest the eloquent argument of the member from Summerside.

Canada to Guard Fish.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—The Department of Marine and Fisheries is determined to put an end to illegal fishing in the Great Lakes. It is not the intention of the Government, however, to enforce the law with seven-pounders, as has been intimated in some quarters since the Petrel-Silver Spray incident occurred. It is the opinion in official circles that the desired end can be attained without resorting to harsh measures, which might lead to international complications. Swift boats will be manned and placed at points in the Great Lakes, where poaching has been carried on on a large scale. They will be armed with rifles and seven-pounders, as all the patrol boats are now equipped.

Railways After Ladders.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—The railways are carrying on an energetic lobby in the Senate, their object being to secure the defeat of certain amendments to the railway bill. They have made a dead set against the amendment, which requires freight cars to be equipped with side-ladders. The amendment, or question, was placed in the bill after a hard fight, and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen is most anxious that it should not be struck out. The active hostility which the railways are offering to this amendment is an ominous sign.

The Senate considered the Railway Bill last night and the criticism offered is anything but reassuring to those who founded big hopes on the measure as it left the House of Commons. It was expected that at least 200 clauses of the bill would be passed last night. When the Senate adjourned at 11.15, however, only 50 clauses had been touched, and of these 34 proved to be contentious and were allowed to stand.

Bell Telephone in Hamilton.

Hamilton, Aug. 25.—Last night the agreement to grant the Bell Telephone Company an exclusive franchise in this city for two years was carried through. The rates were fixed at $30 a year for unlimited call, and $25 for a limited service for residences, and $45 for office 'phones.

He Killed the "Tweed Ring."

New York, Aug. 25.—John Foley, who brought the famous injunction suit which ended in the rout of the "Tweed Ring" is dead. His health was shattered 20 years ago by his persistent fight for good government. He was born in Ireland in 1834, and came to America when nine years old.

P. O. Martineau, M.P., Is Ill.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—P. O. Martineau, M.P. for Montgomery, is ill in the General Hospital with rheumatic trouble.

TRIANGULAR COURSE TO-DAY

Winds to Be Light to Fresh to Variable, Mostly From Some Easterly Point—The Re-measurement.

Washington, Aug. 25.—"To Observer, New York: 'The winds Tuesday over the international yacht race course will be light to fresh and variable, though mostly from some easterly point. Unsettled weather, possibly showers.' (Signed) Frankenfield."

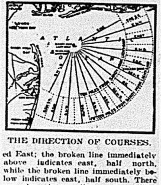
After having removed 1,100 pounds of ballast and taking on board a cable and anchor weighing that much the Shamrock III. was measured in dry dock in the Erie Basin yesterday. The net result was that there was no change in the time allowance of 1 minute and 57 seconds.

The Direction of Courses.

The chart herewith shows the possible directions in which the course can be laid from the Sandy Hook Lightship, the starting point of the races. The lightship is about eight nautical miles, east half south, from the point of the Hook.

To-day's race, which will be over a triangular course ten knots to a side, the yachts will not go beyond the inner circular line, but the course, if to the eastward, may be laid half a point further north, or if to the southward, half a point further west than the fifteen-knot course. It must be borne in mind that a knot or nautical mile is 800 feet longer than a statute mile.

The radial lines show the points of the compass, the continuous lines indicating the full points, and the broken lines the half points. For example, take the continuous line marked East; the broken line immediately above indicates east, half north, while the broken line immediately below indicates east, half south. There are also intermediate or quarter points, but these are not indicated. The circular lines, as shown by the lettering, mark the distance from the lightship.



THE DIRECTION OF COURSES.

On account of the draught of the yachts the course cannot be laid north of east northeast half east, nor west of south southwest half west. The most northerly course would take the yachts to a point close to the Long Island shore, a mile or two east of Long Beach. The most westerly course, on the other hand, would take them close to the Jersey coast, nearly opposite Asbury Park. Any other course would take them along one, or between two of the intermediate radial lines.

Judging by the Shamrock's work to windward, and barring accidents, she should do much better than in the first race.

TO NATIONALIZE THEM.

Britain Offers a Colony in East Africa to the Jews—Zionist Congress Is Expected to Accept It.

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 25.—The sixth Zionist congress opened here Sunday under the presidency of Dr. Theodore Hersel of Vienna. Among the 500 delegates from all parts of the world, including the United States and Canada, who assisted at the opening, were Max Nordau, Sir Francis Montefiore and Israel Zangwill, the novelist.

Dr. Hersel in his opening address, referring to the collapse of the project to establish the Jews on the Sinai peninsula, announced that Great Britain had offered the Zionists a large tract of territory in East Africa for colonization by the Jews, who would be given an autonomous Government under British suzerainty.

The question of accepting the offer, he said, would be submitted to the congress.

Absent members of the household were summoned home on Saturday. His physicians entertain hopes of his recovery.

Knighted by the King.

Dublin, Aug. 25.—Colonel Neville Chamberlain, C.B., upon whom the King has just conferred the honor of knighthood, has held the post of Inspector General of the Royal Irish Constabulary since the year 1900. During the South African war Colonel Chamberlain acted as private secretary to Field Marshal Earl Roberts.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

They Are the Filters of the Body—Danger Signals.

Into everything we eat and drink, no matter how "pure" the food is labeled nor how careful we are, poisons enter. Were we not provided with organs especially designed to look after these poisons, human life would soon perish. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. They catch the poison in the food and expel it from the system. That is, they do these things when they are in healthy and vigorous condition. When they are weak, or overworked, or clogged, or handicapped by the ravages of disease in even a slight degree, they do their assigned work more or less imperfectly, or not at all. When the kidneys are not working well, the poison which should pass from the system is returned to the blood, to circulate through the body. Excess of uric acid in the blood causes inflammatory, muscular or articular rheumatism, for one thing, and those who have suffered from any of the forms of this distressing and dangerous malady will say that this is enough. The best authorities on the subject, however, believe that this is only a small part, and that to kidney irregularities are due a long train of bodily ailments. The kidneys often give warning, though not always and not always in time, of the dangers which menace the body from their abnormal condition. Among these danger signals are weakness of the back, pains or aches in the region of the kidneys, irregularity of the bowels and kidney action, chills, feverishness, puffy eyes, brick dust deposit or cloudiness, and a dropsical appearance of the ankles or wrists. When any of these symptoms appear blood poisoning to a certain extent is undermining the fabric of life. The result of the latest research into kidney troubles and their cure is the vegetable preparation known as Bu-Ju, which is put forth by the Claflin Chemical Co., Ltd., of New York, N. Y., and Windsor, Ont. It may be purchased at any drug store in boxes of 50 pills at 50 cents. It were well to pay no heed to efforts to substitute other so-called remedies for this dangerous condition, as Bu-Ju embodies all that these have with the addition of the latest-upto-date discoveries and enhanced skill in preparation.

CRITICIZING THE CONGRESS.

The St. John, N.B., Sun, fails to see why Lords Brassey and Strathcona and the other prominent men in the late Imperial Trade Congress should have been so anxious to secure an unanimous vote for a compromise resolution, rather then a fair division of the meeting on the main question of Imperial preference. It must be confessed that the Sun's remarks contain a great deal of sound sense. Would it not have been better to have taken a vote on the resolution, as at first introduced, and thus found out fairly how the delegates, as representataives, were prepared to vote on the question, rather than butcher and torture it so as to make of it something few people could find fault with and fewer still find good in. As the case stands now, we fear the opponents of preferential trade have more to be pleased with than its friends. Commenting on this question, the Sun says:

"The resolution adopted has a certain value. It declares that the existing system is unsatisfactory. It affirms the advantage of a readjustment of imperial fiscal relations. Practically it is an admission by the unanimous vote of the great federation of business interests of the British Empire that the question of free trade and protection is an open one, and that the fiscal policy of Great Britain was not settled for all time when the corn laws were repealed.

"But it would be well worth while to have obtained a direct expression of opinion from the Congress on the main question. A straight vote on the Toronto resolution would have been instructive. It would not have been unanimous, but if one can judge from the speeches and other signs the preferential policy would have been endorsed by a very large majority of the chambers represented. One of the free trade speakers frankly admitted that his side was in a minority. Every Canadian Board with two possible exceptions would have voted for the resolution. A majority of the British Chambers which were heard from supported Mr. Chamberlain's programme. The Bristol chamber of Congress, the Glasgow incorporated Chambers of Commerce and Manufacture, the Leeds chamber, the Birstall Board, the representative of Birmingham (who is also an M.P.,) the British Chamber of Commerce in Paris, and the Dublin Chamber were among those either favorable to a change in the British fiscal system or anxious for an open inquiry into the whole matter. A representative from India supported the Canadian resolution, and the South African delegation seems to have been unanimous in support of Mr. Chamberlain. Three of the strongest speeches against free trade were from Old Country delegates and two were from Toronto men. A Yorkshire woollen manufacturer brought down the house by his explanation of the condition of affairs which changed him from an ardent free trader into a strong protectionist. The strongest and most indignant rebuke to the timid delegate who feared that the United States and Germany would regard Britain's departure from free trade as an unfriendly proceeding, came from a Glasgow representative.

"When members of a great gathering who have come thousands of miles to discuss a large question, are held down to five or ten minutes speeches and the debate continues for three or four sittings, there should be little waste of words. This Montreal debate on preferential trade was a remarkable discussion, both as to the manner and the matter. The debate was thus much more valuable than the resolution, and it would have been worth a good deal more if after the discussion the vote of the meeting had been taken by Chambers or individuals. So far as may be judged by the reported speeches, by the accounts of the meetings which the Montreal papers furnish, and by the admission of the free trade delegates, the resolution in favor of imperial preference would have been carried by at least a two-thirds majority. A majority of British Chambers seems to be favorable to the idea and that majority would have been swelled by every Colony in the Empire.

To-morrow will be the last half-holiday, so let us all play as hard as we can to-morrow and have a good time while we may.

ARNOTT-DUKE NUPTIALS.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING AT ROSSMORE THIS AFTERNOON.

A pleasing event transpired at the residence of Mr. Hy. Duke, of Rossmore, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, in which a well known resident of this city was a participant. It was the marriage of Miss R. M. Duke to Mr. Richard Arnott, of this city.

The drawing room where the ceremony took place was prettily decorated with flowers. Rev. Dr. Johnson was the officiating minister. Miss Gertie Duke, of Watertown, N.Y., was bridesmaid, whilst Mr. R. D. Carr, of Albany, N.Y., did honors for the groom. A rich repast was served to the guests at the conclusion of the ceremony. The bride received a large array of costly and beautiful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Arnott left on the evening train for the west. After visiting several places of interest they will return to this city, taking up their residence on Charles street.

SCHOOL SUITS.

School opens next week. The end of vacation always finds the boys "out at knees and elbows." New outfits of wearing apparel must be bought—this week. Quick & Robertson have by far the largest stock of Boys' School Suits in this city; all new and up-to-date in style and strictly reliable in material and make. Special values, too, in Boys' furnishings, hats and caps.

It is the duty of school teachers to look to the care of their pupils' eyes. Many children seem dull, do not like to study, and are called numskulls. They are unfortunate in some cases for having some eye defect. Most of them show no other sign of eye trouble, and grow to manhood and womanhood dull and stupid, never knowing that their eyes alone made them averse to study and activity. Parents who have any reason to suspect any eye trouble should send their childenr for free examination before the schools open.—Alex. Ray.

Married at Read.

Mr. Owen McEvoy, of Little Falls, N.Y. formerly of Read and Miss Mary A. Eagan, of Belleville, were united in marriage at St. Charles' Church, Read, on Monday, August 17th, by Rev. Father McCarthy. The wedding dinner was partaken of at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Buckley, where a number of guests assembled. The bride received numerous and costly presents.

THOSE DARLING BOYS.

RHYMING JOKERS LAMPOON THEIR ASSOCIATES IN A LOCAL TEMPLE OF LEARNING.

Considerable amusement has been created among the pupils of a local educational institution by the promulgation of the following verses, which were composed by the young lady pupils of the institution and refer to their male associates:

We have the sweetest teacher here,
He has brown eyes and lovely hair,
And when we're rude, oh how he stares
That beautiful darling boy.

There is another I do declare
Who has such lovely curly hair,
But then he is a New Gent here,
That beautiful darling boy.

There is a Mann, a darling Mann,
With big, black eyes and face of tan,
Who gives a smile whene'er he can,
That beautiful darling boy.

Another who from France does hail,
Whene'er we look he turns quite pale,
We know he would not tell a tale,
That beautiful darling boy.

Another fellow has caught my eye,
His name, I think, is Mr. Godfry,
I tell you he's not very shy,
That beautiful darling boy.

Another has a dimpled face,
Who all the girls would like to embrace,
But from him they will run a race,
That beautiful darling boy.

There is the Seller I do descry,
Who wears a dainty pink stock tie,
Wouldn't that catch any girl's eye,
On that beautiful darling boy.

Now let the Fiery champion come,
I tell you he's not bent on fun,
The one that meets him is undone
By that beautiful darling boy.

There is another from St. Kitts,
His smile would send you into fits,
He's a new man here, you know,
But he's all right if he's got the dough,
That beautiful darling boy.

There is another whose name is Pratt,
I'm sure he wears a stovepipe hat,
His smile is so—that! that! that!
That beautiful darling boy.

There is no danger that men should die
As long as they have lots of Pye,
I wish I had some, my, oh my,
Beautiful darling boy.

But first of all, is Bishop here?
You never see him with a sneer,
He always smiles when we appear,
That beautiful darling boy.

There is another whose name is Eades,
Who is always noted for good deeds,
On taffy I am sure he feeds,
That beautiful darling boy.

There is a Loosie in our land,
Who plays a cornet in the band,
And has a little shapely hand,
That beautiful darling boy.

Another lad who is very tall,
Comes marching through our stately hall,
Here's Richard-son, the boys all bawl
At that beautiful darling boy.

Phillips and Nelson, both brave lads,
They smile except when they are mad,
And then we do not feel so glad
About those beautiful darling boys.

The Weeks go by, but not so bad
But a man that's married makes us sad,
But then who cares if we are glad,
Not that beautiful darling boy.

Now Shannon, dear, with lots of wit
We're sure that you will make a hit,
But watch your heart, you may get bit,
You beautiful darling boy.

And last comes Wigget to the charge,
You'd think it was a loaded barge,
Because the room he takes is large,
For that beautiful darling boy.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paper hangers and decorators busy all the time— this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 66 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected cold and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, natural.

Dolly breathed, in some relief over what she thought was coming.

"Well, I can't say I did," said Mrs. Barclay. "We had a terrible time getting used to one another's ways. You see, he'd waited a good while and was some older than I was. After awhile, though, we settled down and now I'm awful glad I let my father manage for me. You see, what your pa had and what my father settled on me made us comfortable, and if a couple is that it's a sight more than the poor ones are."

Dolly stood before her mother, close enough to touch her. Her face wore an indescribable expression of dissatisfaction with what she had heard.

"Mother, tell me one thing," she said. "Did you ever let either of those boys—the two that you didn't marry, I mean—kiss you?"

Mrs. Barclay stared up at her daughter for an instant, and then her face broke into a broad smile of genuine amusement. She lowered her head to her knee and laughed out.

"Dolly Barclay, you are such a fool!" she said, and then she laughed again almost immoderately, her face in her lap.

"I know what that means," said Dolly, in high disgust. "Mother, I don't think you can do me any good. You'd better go to bed."

Mrs. Barclay rose promptly.

"I think I'd better, too," she said. "It makes your pa awful mad for me to sit up this way. I don't want to hear him rail out like he always does when he catches me at it."

After her mother had gone Dolly sat down on her bed. "She never was in love," she told herself. "Never, never, never! And it's a pity. She never could have talked that way if she had really loved anybody as much as"— But Dolly did not finish what lay on her tongue. However, when she had drawn the covers up over her the cold tears rose in her eyes and rolled down on her pillow as she thought of Alan Bishop's brave and dignified suffering.

"Poor fellow," she said. "Poor, dear Alan!"

CHAPTER IX.

THERE is a certain class of individuals that will gather around a man in misfortune, and it differs very little, if it differs at all, from the class that warms itself in the glow of a man's prosperity.

Horses were hitched to the fence from the front gate all the way round to the side entrance. The mountain people seemed to have left their various occupations to subtly enjoy the spectacle of a common man like themselves who had reached too far after forbidden fruit and lay maimed and torn before them.

Their disapproval of the old man's effort to hurry Providence could not have been better shown than in the failure of them all to comment on the rascally conduct of the Atlanta lawyer. They even chuckled over that part of the incident. To their minds Perkins was a sort of faroff personification of a necessary evil, who, like the devil himself, was evidently created to show mortals their limitations.

The Rev. Charles B. Dole, a tall, spare man of sixty, who preached the first, second, third and fourth Sundays of each month in four different meeting houses within a day's ride of Bishop's, came around as the guest of the farmhouse as often as his circuit would permit. He was called the "fightin' preacher" because he had had several fearless hand to hand encounters with certain moonshiners whose conduct he had ventured to call ungodly because unlawful.

On the second Saturday after Bishop's mishap, as Dole was to preach the next day at Rock Crest meeting house, he rode up as usual and turned his horse into the stable and fed him with his own hands. Then he joined Abner Daniel on the veranda. Abner had seen him ride up and purposely buried his head in his newspaper to keep from offering to take the horse, for Abner did not like the preacher "any to hurt," as he would have put it.

Dole did not care much for Abner either. They had engaged in several doctrinal discussions in which the preacher had waxed furious over some of Daniel's views, which he described as decidedly unorthodox. Daniel had kept his temper beautifully and had the appearance of being amused through it all, and this Dole found harder to forgive than anything Abner had said.

"You all have had some trouble, I heer, sence I saw you last," said the preacher as he sat down and began to wipe his perspiring brow with a big handkerchief.

"Well, I reckon it mought be called that," Abner replied as he carefully folded his newspaper and put it into his coat pocket. "None of us was expectin' of it, an' it sorter bu'sted our calculations. Alf had laid out to put new high back benches in Rock Crest, an' new lamps an' one thing another, an' it seems to me"—Abner wiped his too facile mouth—"like I heerd 'im say one day that you wasn't paid enough fer yore thunder an' that he'd stir around an' see what could be done." Abner's eyes twinkled. "But, lawsy me! I reckon ef he kin possibly raise the seads to pay the tax on his investment next yeer he'll do all the Lord expects."

"Huh, I reckon!" grunted Dole, irritated, as usual, by Abner's double meaning. "I take it that the Lord hain't got much to do with human speculations one way or other."

"Ef I just had that scamp that roped 'im in before me a minute, I'd fix 'im," said Abner. "Do you know what denomination Perkins belongs to?"

"No, I don't," Dole blurted out, "an', what's more, I don't care."

"Well, I acknowledge it sorter interests me," went on our philosopher in an inscrutable tone, "beca'se, Brother Dole, you kin often trace a man's good ur bad doin's to his belief in Bible matters. Maybe you don't remember Jabe Lynan that stold Thad Wilson's stump suckin' hoss an' was ketched an' put up. I was at the courthouse in Darley when he received his sentence. His wife sent me to 'im to carry his pipe an' one thing or other—a pair o' socks an' other necessary tricks, a little can o' lye soap, fer one thing. She hadn't the time to go, as she said she had a patch o' young corn to hoe out. I found 'im as happy as ef he was goin' off on a excursion. He laughed an' 'lowed it ud be some time 'fore he got back, an' I wondered what could 'a' made 'im so contented, so I made some inquiries on that line. I found that he was a firm believer in predestination an' that what was to be was foreordained. He said that he firmly believed he was predestinated to go to the coal mines fer hoss stealin', an' that life was too short to be kickin' ag'in the Lord's way o' runnin' matters. Besides, he said, he'd heerd that they issued a plug o' tobacco a week to chawin' prisoners, an' he could prove that he was one o' that sort ef they'd look how he'd ground his jaw teeth down to the gums."

"Huh!" grunted Dole again, his sharp gray eyes on Abner's face as if he half believed that some of his own theories were being sneered at. It was true that he, being a Methodist, had not advocated a belief in predestination, but Abner Daniel had on more than one occasion shown a decided tendency to bunch all stringent religious opinions together and cast them down as out of date. When in doubt in a conversation with Abner, the preacher assumed a coldness on the outside that was often not consistent with the fires within him. "I don't see what all that's got to do with Brother Bishop's mistake," he said frigidly as he leaned back in his chair.

"It sets me to wonderin' what denomination Perkins belongs to, that's all," said Abner, with another smile. "I know in reason he's a big Ike in some church in Atlanta, fer I never knowed a lawyer that wasn't foremost in that way o' doin' good. I'll bet a hoecake he belongs to some hifalutin' crowd o' worshipers that kneel down on saft cushions an' believe in scoopin' in all they kin in the Lord's name, an' that charity begins at home. I think that myse'f, Brother Dole, fer thar never was a plant as hard to git rooted as charity is, an' a body ought to have it whar they kin watch it close. It'll die a heap o' times ef you jest look at it, an' it mighty nigh always has bad soil ur a drought to contend with."

Just then Pole Baker, who has already been introduced to the reader, rode up to the fence and hitched his horse. He nodded to the two men on the veranda and went around to the smokehouse to get a piece of bacon Bishop had promised to sell him on credit.

"Huh!" Dole grunted, and he crossed his long legs and swung his foot up and down nervously. He had the look of a man who was wondering why such insufferable bores as Abner should so often accompany a free dinner. He had never felt drawn to the man, and it irritated him to think that just when his mental faculties needed rest Abner always managed to introduce the very topics which made it necessary for him to keep his wits about him.

"Take that feller thar," Abner went on, referring to Baker. "He's about the hardest customer in this county, an' yet he's bein' managed right now. He's got a wife an' seven children an' is a holy terror when he gits drunk. He used to be the biggest daredevil moonshiner in all these mountains, but Alan kept befriendin' 'im fust one way an' another tell he up one day an' axed Alan what he could do fer 'im. Alan ain't none o' yore shoutin' kind o' Christians. He shakes a nimble toe at a shindig when he wants, an' knows the ace from a tenspot, but he gits thar with every claw in the air when some'n' has to be done. So when Pole axed 'im that Alan jest said, as quiet as ef he was axin' 'im fer a match to light a cigar, 'Quit yore moonshinin', Pole.' That was all he said. Pole looked 'im straight in the eye fer a minute an' then said:

"'Alan Bishop, you don't mean that!'

"'Yes, I do, Pole,' said Alan. 'Quit! Quit smack off!'

"'You ax that as a favor?' said Pole.

"'Yes, as a favor,' said Alan. 'An' you are a-goin' to do it too.'

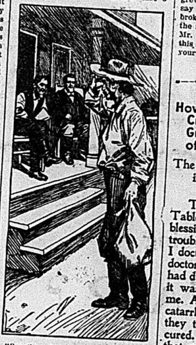
"Then Pole begun to contend with 'im. 'You are a-axin' that beca'se you think I'll be ketched up with,' he said, 'but I tell you the' ain't no man on the face o' the earth that could find my still now. You could stand in two feet of the door to it all day an' not find it if you looked fer it with a spyglass. I kin make bug juice all the rest o' my life an' sell it without bein' ketched.'

"'I want you to give it up,' said Alan, an' Pole did. It was like pullin' an eyetooth, but Pole yanked it out. Alan is workin' on 'im now to git 'im to quit liquor, but that ain't so easy. He could walk a crack with a gallon sloshin' about in 'im. Now, as I started to say, Alan 'ain't got no cut an' dried denomination an' don't have to walk any particular kind o' foot log to do his work, but it's a-goin' on jest the same. Now I don't mean no reflection on yore way o' hitchin' wings on folks, but I do believe you could preach yore sermons—sech as they are—in Pole Baker's yeers till Gabriel blowed his lungs out, an' Pole 'd still be moonshinin'. An' sometimes I think that sech fellers as Alan Bishop ort to be paid fer what they do in betterin' the world. I don't see why you fellers ort always to be allowed to rake in the jack pot unless you'd accomplish more'n outsiders that jest turn the'r hands to the job at odd times."

Dole drew himself up straight and glared at the offender.

"I think that is a rather personal remark, Brother Daniel," he said coldly.

"Well, maybe it is," returned Abner; "but I didn't mean fer it to be. I've heerd you praise up certain preachers fer the good they was a-doin', an' I saw no harm in mentionin' Alan's method. I reckon it's jest a case o' the shoe bein' on another foot. I was goin' to tell you how this misfortune o' Alf's had affected Pole. He's been like a crazy man ever since it happened. It's been all Alan could do to keep 'im from goin' to Atlanta an' chokin' the life out o' Perkins. Pole got so mad when he wouldn't let 'im go that he went off cussin' 'im fer all he was worth. I wonder what sort of a denomination a man ud fit into that 'll cuss his best friends black an' blue beca'se they won't let 'im fight fer 'em. Yes, he'll fight, an' ef he ever does jine the ranks above he'll do the work o' ten men when thar's blood to spill. I seed 'im in a row once durin' election when he was leggin' fer a friend o' his'n. He stood right at the polls an' wanted to slug every man that voted ag'in 'im. He knocked three men's teeth down the'r throats an' bunged up two more so that they looked like they had on false faces."



"Say thar, Pole," Abner called out.

Here the preacher permitted himself to laugh. Being a fighting man himself, his heart warmed toward a man who seemed to be born to that sort of thing.

"He looks like he could do a sight of it," was his comment.

At this juncture the subject of the conversation came round the house, carrying a big piece of bacon wrapped in a tow grain bag.

"Say thar, Pole," Abner called out to the long, lank fellow. "We are a-goin' to have preachin' at Rock Crest tomorrow. You'd better have a shirt washed an' hung out to dry. They are a-beatin' the bushes fer yore sort."

Pole Baker paused and brushed back his long, thick hair from his heavy eyebrows.

"I've been a-waitin' to see ef meetin' ever 'd do you any good, Uncle Ab," he laughed. "They tell me the more you go the wuss you git to be. Neil Filmore said t'other day ef you didn't quit shootin' off yore mouth they'd give you a trial in meetin'."

Abner laughed good naturedly as he spat over the edge of the veranda floor to the ground.

"That's been talked, I know, Pole," he said, "but they don't mean it. The all know how to take my fun. B you come on to meetin'. It will do yo good."

"Well, maybe I will," promised Pole. And he came to the steps, and, putting his bacon down, he bent towar them.

"It's a powerful hard matter to know exactly what's right an' what's wrong in some things," he said. "Now, looky heer." Thrusting his hand down into the pocket of his trousers, he drew out a piece of quartz rock, with a lump of yellow gold about the size of a pea half imbedded in it. "That thar's puore gold. I got it this away: A feller that used to be my right bower in my still business left me when I swore off an' went over to Dalonega to work in them mines. T'other day he was back on a visit, an' he give me this chunk an' said he'd found it. Now, I know in reason that he nabbed it while he was at work, but I don't think I'd have a right to report it to the minin' company, an' so I'm jest obleeged to receive stolen goods. It ain't wuth more'n a dollar, they tell me, an' I'll hang on to it, I reckon, ruther 'n have a laborin' man discharged from a job. I'm tryin' my level best to live up to the line now, an' I don't know how to manage sech a thing as that. I've come to the conclusion that no harm will be done no how, beca'se miners ain't too well paid anyway, an' ef I jest keep it an' don't git no good out of it I won't be in it any more 'n ef I'd never got hold o' the blamed thing."

"But the law, Brother Baker," said Dole solemnly. "Without the law we'd be an awful lot o' people, an' every man ort to uphold it. Render the things that are Cæsar's unto Cæsar."

Pole's face was blank for a moment, and Abner came to his rescue with a broad smile and sudden laugh.

"I reckon you don't remember him, Pole," he said. "He's dead. He was a nigger that used to belong to old man Throgmartin, in the cove. He used to be sech an awful thief during slavery days that it got to be a common sayin' that everything lyin' round mought as well be his'n, fer he'd take it sooner ur later anyways."

"I've heerd o' that nigger," said Pole, much to the preacher's disgust, which grew as Pole continued: "Well, they say a feller that knows the law is broke an' don't report it is as guilty as the man who does the breakin'. Now, Mr. Dole, you know how I come by this nugget, an' ef you want to do your full duty you'll ride over to Dalo-

How Iron-ox Tablets Cured a Well-Known Guelph Man of Catarrh of the Stomach.

The Guelph Waterproof Clothing Co., Guelph, Ont.

December 12, 1902.

Through your Iron-ox Tablets I have received a great blessing. For years I was troubled with my stomach. I doctored with several good doctors and they told me I had dyspepsia, but I was sure it was not that which ailed me. At last I found out it was catarrh of the stomach, and they told me I could not be cured. It got so bad at last that my stomach had ulcers, and I suffered something awful. Being a commercial traveler I received a box of your Iron-ox Tablets free last winter. I took them right along and I noticed, when away from home and staying at hotels, eating different food, it did not hurt me as it always did before; so when that box was empty I bought two more, and have since had two more, and I must say my stomach is fully restored to its old-time work. I never leave home without a box of Iron-ox Tablets with me, as I believe them to be the best thing for the stomach ever made. I have recommended them to a very great number of people. As I travel from one end of the country to the other I am well known. I am a member of the above firm and do the travelling for them, and everyone that knows how I suffered with my stomach knows the difference now. I would have written sooner, but waited to make sure it was lasting, and I feel sure it is. I must say it is the best remedy I have ever used, and I would not be without it. Hoping your Iron-ox may cure many as it has me,
I am yours sincerely,
W. F. PAYNE.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening. We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paper hangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment—a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers—no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

Our Picture Framing, too, is just what our Wall Paper department is— everything the best with prices low.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body gives up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 66 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, tural.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Dolly breathed, in some relief over what she thought was coming.

"Well, I can't say I did," said Mrs. Barclay. "We had a terrible time getting used to one another's ways. You see, he'd waited a good while and was some older than I was. After awhile, though, we settled down and now I'm awful glad I let my father manage for me. You see, what your pa had and what my father settled on me made us comfortable, and if a couple is that it's a sight more than the poor ones are."

Dolly stood before her mother, close enough to touch her. Her face wore an indescribable expression of dissatisfaction with what she had heard.

"Mother, tell me one thing," she said. "Did you ever let either of those boys—the two that you didn't marry, I mean—kiss you?"

Mrs. Barclay stared up at her daughter for an instant, and then her face broke into a broad smile of genuine amusement. She lowered her head to her knee and laughed out.

"Dolly Barclay, you are such a fool!" she said, and then she laughed again almost immoderately, her face in her lap.

"I know what that means," said Dolly, in high disgust. "Mother, I don't think you can do me any good. You'd better go to bed."

Mrs. Barclay rose promptly.

"I think I'd better, too," she said. "It makes your pa awful mad for me to sit up this way. I don't want to hear him rail out like he always does when he catches me at it."

After her mother had gone Dolly sat down on her bed. "She never was in love," she told herself. "Never, never, never! And it's a pity. She never could have talked that way if she had really loved anybody as much as"— But Dolly did not finish what lay on her tongue. However, when she had drawn the covers up over her the cold tears rose in her eyes and rolled down on her pillow as she thought of Alan Bishop's brave and dignified suffering.

"Poor fellow," she said. "Poor, dear Alan!"

CHAPTER IX.

THERE is a certain class of individuals that will gather around a man in misfortune, and it differs very little, if it differs at all, from the class that warms itself in the glow of a man's prosperity.

Horses were hitched to the fence from the front gate all the way round to the side entrance. The mountain people seemed to have left their various occupations to subtly enjoy the spectacle of a common man like themselves who had reached too far after forbidden fruit and lay maimed and torn before them.

Their disapproval of the old man's effort to hurry Providence could not have been better shown than in the failure of them all to comment on the rascally conduct of the Atlanta lawyer. They even chuckled over that part of the incident. To their minds Perkins was a sort of faroff personification of a necessary evil, who, like the devil himself, was evidently created to show mortals their limitations.

The Rev. Charles B. Dole, a tall, spare man of sixty, who preached the first, second, third and fourth Sundays of each month in four different meeting houses within a day's ride of Bishop's, came around as the guest of the farmhouse as often as his circuit would permit. He was called the "fightin' preacher" because he had had several fearless hand to hand encounters with certain moonshiners whose conduct he had ventured to call ungodly because unlawful.

On the second Saturday after Bishop's mishap, as Dole was to preach the next day at Rock Crest meeting house, he rode up as usual and turned his horse into the stable and fed him with his own hands. Then he joined Abner Daniel on the veranda. Abner had seen him ride up and purposely buried his head in his newspaper to keep from offering to take the horse, for Abner did not like the preacher "any to hurt," as he would have put it.

Dole did not care much for Abner either. They had engaged in several doctrinal discussions in which the preacher had waxed furious over some of Daniel's views, which he described as decidedly unorthodox. Daniel had kept his temper beautifully and had the appearance of being amused through it all, and this Dole found harder to forgive than anything Abner had said.

"You all have had some trouble, I heer, sence I saw you last," said the preacher as he sat down and began to wipe his perspiring brow with a big handkerchief.

"Well, I reckon it mought be called that," Abner replied as he carefully folded his newspaper and put it into his coat pocket. "None of us was expectin' of it, an' it sorter bu'sted our calculations. Alf had laid out to put new high back benches in Rock Crest, an' new lamps an' one thing another, an' it seems to me"—Abner wiped his too facile mouth—"like I heerd 'im say one day that you wasn't paid enough fer yore thunder an' that he'd stir around an' see what could be done." Abner's eyes twinkled. "But, lawsy me! I reckon ef he kin possibly raise the scads to pay the tax on his investment next yeer he'll do all the Lord expects."

"Huh, I reckon!" grunted Dole, irritated, as usual, by Abner's double meaning. "I take it that the Lord hain't got much to do with human speculations one way or other."

"Ef I just had that scamp that roped 'im in before me a minute, I'd fix 'im," said Abner. "Do you know what denomination Perkins belongs to?"

"No, I don't," Dole blurted out, "an', what's more, I don't care."

"Well, I acknowledge it sorter interests me," went on our philosopher in an inscrutable tone, "beca'se, Brother Dole, you kin often trace a man's good ur bad doin's to his belief in Bible matters. Maybe you don't remember Jabe Lynan that stold Thad Wilson's stump suckin' hoss an' was ketched an' put up. I was at the courthouse in Darley when he received his sentence. His wife sent me to 'im to carry his pipe an' one thing or other—a pair o' socks an' other necessary tricks, a little can o' lye soap, fer one thing. She hadn't the time to go, as she said she had a patch o' young corn to hoe out. I found 'im as happy as ef he was goin' off on a excursion. He laughed an' 'lowed it ud be some time 'fore he got back, an' I wondered what could 'a' made 'im so contented, so I made some inquiries on that line. I found that he was a firm believer in predestination an' that what was to be was foreordained. He said that he firmly believed he was predestinated to go to the coal mines fer hoss stealin', an' that life was too short to be kickin' ag'in the Lord's way o' runnin' matters. Besides, he said, he'd heerd that they issued a plug o' tobacco a week to chawin' prisoners, an' he could prove that he was one o' that sort ef they'd look how he'd ground his jaw teeth down to the gums."

"Huh!" grunted Dole again, his sharp gray eyes on Abner's face as if he half believed that some of his own theories were being sneered at. It was true that he, being a Methodist, had not advocated a belief in predestination, but Abner Daniel had on more than one occasion shown a decided tendency to bunch all stringent religious opinions together and cast them down as out of date. When in doubt in a conversation with Abner, the preacher assumed a coldness on the outside that was often not consistent with the fires within him. "I don't see what all that's got to do with Brother Bishop's mistake," he said frigidly as he leaned back in his chair.

"It sets me to wonderin' what denomination Perkins belongs to, that's all," said Abner, with another smile. "I know in reason he's a big Ike in some church in Atlanta, fer I never knowed a lawyer that wasn't foremost in that way o' doin' good. I'll bet a hoecake he belongs to some hifalutin' crowd o' worshipers that kneel down on saft cushions an' believe in scoopin' in all they kin in the Lord's name, an' that charity begins at home. I think that myse'f, Brother Dole, fer thar never was a plant as hard to git rooted as charity is, an' a body ought to have it whar they kin watch it close. It'll die a heap o' times ef you jest look at it, an' it mighty nigh always has bad soil ur a drought to contend with."

Just then Pole Baker, who has already been introduced to the reader, rode up to the fence and hitched his horse. He nodded to the two men on the veranda and went around to the smokehouse to get a piece of bacon Bishop had promised to sell him on credit.

"Huh!" Dole grunted, and he crossed his long legs and swung his foot up and down nervously. He had the look of a man who was wondering why such insufferable bores as Abner should so often accompany a free dinner. He had never felt drawn to the man, and it irritated him to think that just when his mental faculties needed rest Abner always managed to introduce the very topics which made it necessary for him to keep his wits about him.

"Take that feller thar," Abner went on, referring to Baker. "He's about the hardest customer in this county, an' yet he's bein' managed right now. He's got a wife an' seven children an' is a holy terror when he gits drunk. He used to be the biggest daredevil moonshiner in all these mountains, but Alan kept befriendin' 'im fust one way an' another tell he up one day an' axed Alan what he could do fer 'im. Alan ain't none o' vore shoutin' kind o' Christians. He shakes a nimble toe at a shindig when he wants an' knows the ace from a tenspot, but he gits thar with every claw in the air when some'n' has to be done. So when Pole axed 'im that Alan jest said, as quiet as ef he was axin' 'im fer a match to light a cigar, 'Quit yore moonshinin', Pole.' That was all he said. Pole looked 'im straight in the eye fer a minute an' then said:

"'Alan Bishop, you don't mean that!'

"'Yes, I do, Pole,' said Alan. 'Quit! Quit smack off!'

"'You ax that as a favor?' said Pole.

"'Yes, as a favor,' said Alan. 'An' you are a-goin' to do it too.'

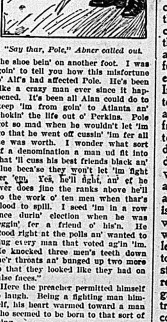
"Then Pole begun to contend with 'im. 'You are a-axin' that beca'se you think I'll be ketched up with,' he said, 'but I tell you the' ain't no man on the face o' the earth that could find my still now. You could stand in two feet of the door to it all day an' not find it if you looked fer it with a spyglass. I kin make bug juice all the rest o' my life an' sell it without bein' ketched.'

"'I want you to give it up,' said Alan, an' Pole did. It was like pullin' an eyetooth, but Pole yanked it out. Alan is workin' on 'im now to git 'im to quit liquor, but that ain't so easy. He could walk a crack with a gallon sloshin' about in 'im. Now, as I started to say, Alan 'ain't got no cut an' dried denomination an' don't have to walk any particular kind o' foot log to do his work, but it's a-goin' on jest the same. Now I don't mean no reflection on yore way o' hitchin' wings on folks, but I do believe you could preach yore sermons—sech as they are—in Pole Baker's yeers till Gabriel blowed his lungs out, an' Pole 'd still be moonshinin'. An' sometimes I think that sech fellers as Alan Bishop ort to be paid fer what they do in betterin' the world. I don't see why you fellers ort always to be allowed to rake in the jack pot unless you'd accomplish more 'n outsiders that jest turn the'r hands to the job at odd times."

Dole drew himself up straight and glared at the offender.

"I think that is a rather personal remark, Brother Daniel," he said coldly.

"Well, maybe it is," returned Abner; "but I didn't mean fer it to be. I've heerd you praise up certain preachers fer the good they was a-doin', an' I saw no harm in mentionin' Alan's method. I reckon it's jest a case o' the shoe bein' on another foot. I was goin' to tell you how this misfortune o' Alf's had affected Pole. He's been like a crazy man ever since it happened. It's been all Alan could do to keep 'im from goin' to Atlanta an' chokin' the life out o' Perkins. Pole got so mad when he wouldn't let 'im go that he went off cussin' 'im fer all he was worth. I wonder what sort of a denomination a man ud fit into that 'll cuss his best friends black an' blue beca'se they won't let 'im fight fer 'em. Yes, he'll fight, an' ef he ever does jine the ranks above he'll do the work o' ten men when thar's blood to spill. I seed 'im in a row once durin' election when he was leggin' fer a friend o' his'n. He stood right at the polls an' wanted to slug every man that voted ag'in 'im. He knocked three men's teeth down the'r throats an' bunged up two more so that they looked like they had on false faces."



"Say thar, Pole," Abner called out.

Here the preacher permitted himself to laugh. Being a fighting man himself, his heart warmed toward a man who seemed to be born to that sort of thing.

"He looks like he could do a sight of it," was his comment.

At this juncture the subject of the conversation came round the house, carrying a big piece of bacon wrapped in a tow grain bag.

"Say thar, Pole," Abner called out to the long, lank fellow. "We are a-goin' to have preachin' at Rock Crest tomorrow. You'd better have a shirt washed an' hung out to dry. They are a-beatin' the bushes fer yore sort."

Pole Baker paused and brushed back his long, thick hair from his heavy eyebrows.

"I've been a-waitin' to see ef meetin' ever 'd do you any good, Uncle Ab," he laughed. "They tell me the more you go the wuss you git to be. Nell Filmore said t'other day ef you didn't quit shootin' off yore mouth they'd give you a trial in meetin'."

Abner laughed good naturedly as he spat over the edge of the veranda floor to the ground.

"That's been talked, I know, Pole," he said, "but they don't mean it. They all know how to take my fun. But you come on to meetin'. It will do you good."

"Well, maybe I will," promised Pole. And he came to the steps, and, putting his bacon down, he bent toward them.

"It's a powerful hard matter to know exactly what's right an' what's wrong in some things," he said. "Now, looky heer." Thrusting his hand down into the pocket of his trousers, he drew out a piece of quartz rock, with a lump of yellow gold about the size of a pea half imbedded in it. "That thar's puore gold. I got it this away: A feller that used to be my right bower in my still business left me when I swore off an' went over to Dalonega to work in them mines. T'other day he was back on a visit, an' he give me this chunk an' said he'd found it. Now, I know in reason that he nabbed it while he was at work, but I don't think I'd have a right to report it to the minin' company, an' so I'm jest obleeged to receive stolen goods. It ain't wuth more'n a dollar, they tell me, an' I'll hang on to it, I reckon, ruther 'n have a laborin' man discharged from a job. I'm tryin' my level best to live up to the line now, an' I don't know how to manage sech a thing as that. I've come to the conclusion that no harm will be done nohow, beca'se miners ain't too well paid anyway, an' ef I jest keep it an' don't git no good out of it I won't be in it any more 'n ef I'd never got hold o' the blamed thing."

"But the law, Brother Baker," said Dole solemnly. "Without the law we'd be an awful lot o' people, an' every man ort to uphold it. Render the things that are Cæsar's unto Cæsar."

Pole's face was blank for a moment, and Abner came to his rescue with a broad smile and sudden laugh.

"I reckon you don't remember him, Pole," he said. "He's dead. He was a nigger that used to belong to old man Throgmartin, in the cove. He used to be sech an awful thief during slavery days that it got to be a common sayin' that everything lyin' round mought as well be his'n, fer he'd take it sooner ur later anyways."

"I've heerd o' that nigger," said Pole, much to the preacher's disgust, which grew as Pole continued: "Well, they say a feller that knows the law is broke an' don't report it is as guilty as the man who does the breakin'. Now Mr. Dole, you know how I come by this nugget, an' ef you want to do your full duty you'll ride over to Dalo-

How Iron-ox Tablets Cured a Well-Known Guelph Man of Catarrh of the Stomach.

The Guelph Waterproof Clothing Co., Guelph, Ont.

December 12, 1902.

Through your Iron-ox Tablets I have received a great blessing. For years I was troubled with my stomach. I doctored with several good doctors and they told me I had dyspepsia, but I was sure it was not that which ailed me. At last I found out it was catarrh of the stomach, and they told me I could not be cured. It got so bad at last that my stomach had ulcers, and I suffered something awful. Being a commercial traveler I received a box of your Iron-ox Tablets free last winter. I took them right along and I noticed, when away from home and staying at hotels, eating different food, it did not hurt me as it always did before; so when that box was empty I bought two more, and have since had two more, and I must say my stomach is fully restored to its old-time work. I never leave home without a box of Iron-ox Tablets with me, as I believe them to be the best thing for the stomach ever made. I have recommended them to a very great number of people. As I travel from one end of the country to the other I am well known. I am a member of the above firm and do the travelling for them, and everyone that knows how I suffered with my stomach knows the difference now. I would have written sooner, but waited to make sure it was lasting, and I feel sure it is. I must say it is the best remedy I have ever used, and I would not be without it. Hoping your Iron-ox may cure many as it has me, I am yours sincerely,

W. F. PAYNE.

The Kaffir Ideal.

The ideal of a Kaffir is to have several wives, who work for him while he loafs. The desire to earn the money necessary to buy wives is what makes him keep at work in the South African mines.

A Dangerous Proposition.

It has been proposed seriously several times to put out the fires of Vesuvius by letting in on them the waters of the Mediterranean. The experiment has been prevented by fear that a gigantic explosion would result which would blow up Italy.

A Hurricane.

A hurricane is a wind that blows at seventy-seven miles an hour or more. Such a wind exerts a pressure of nearly eighteen pounds to the square foot.

Intoxicated Patients.

Before the days of anæsthetics surgeons sometimes intoxicated their patients before an operation. This was done habitually early in the last century by the English bonesetter Dr. Thurland, a predecessor of Dr. Lorenz.

A Cloud Arrester.

Hon. Rollo Russell, a member of the British parliament, advocated the building of immense walls to increase the rainfall in sterile districts. The [illegible] walls were to be [illegible] so high that their tops would arrest the clouds and cause a downpour of rain, thereby rendering the land fit for cultivation.

The Air We Breathe.

The amount of air that a man will inhale in twenty-four hours will fill seventy-eight hogsheads and weigh fifty-three pounds.

John Brown's Body.

The author of the words and music of "John Brown's Body" has never been traced. It "sprang into being" at the opening of the civil war and was sung by Webster's regiment when it left Boston for the front on July 18, 1861.

Macrame Lace.

Macrame, or knotted lace, is of very ancient origin. It was brought from Arabia to Spain and from Spain to England in the days of good Queen Bess. Ladies at the court of Elizabeth used it for the trimming of their dresses, and by the sovereign it was employed for the decoration of her household and table linen.

Consumption In Canada.

The annual number of deaths from tuberculosis in Canada is about 9,000.

A Feline Fisher.

A farmer at Ballina, New South Wales, trained a black cat to act as a retriever. The animal was also fond of diving in the sea for fish, and recently it brought out a two pound mullet. Its career was ended by its being swallowed by a shark.

BLOOD HUMOURS

Skin Humours, Scalp Humours, Hair Humours,

Whether Simple Scrofulous or Hereditary

Speedily Cured by Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills.

Complete Treatment for All Kinds of Humours.

In the treatment of torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy and scrofulous humours of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair, Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills have been wonderfully successful. Even the most obstinate of constitutional humours, such as bad blood, scrofula, inherited and contagious humours, with loss of hair, glandular swellings, ulcerous patches in the throat and mouth, sore eyes, copper-coloured blotches, as well as boils, carbuncles, scurvy, sties, ulcers and sores arising from an impure or impoverished condition of the blood, yield to the Cuticura Treatment, when all other remedies fail.

And greater still, if possible, is the wonderful record of cures of torturing, disfiguring humours among infants and children. The suffering which Cuticura Remedies have alleviated among the young, and the comfort they have afforded worn-out and worried parents, have led to their adoption in countless homes as priceless curatives for the skin and blood. Infantile and birth humours, milk crust, scalled head, eczema, rashes and every form of itching, scaly, pimply skin and scalp humours, with loss of hair, of infancy and childhood, are speedily, permanently and economically cured when all other remedies suitable for children, and even the best physicians, fail.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.
Send for "The Great Humour Cure."

An Underground City.

One of the most remarkable cities in the world is Kelburg, near Cracow, Poland, for, besides being situated underground, it is excavated entirely in rock salt. The inhabitants, to the number of over 3,000, are, of course, workers in the famous salt mines, and all the streets and houses are of the purest white imaginable.

Human Growth.

Recent statistics have proved that men's stature increases up to the age of fifty years. This is a refutation of the former belief, according to which men stopped growing at twenty-two or twenty-three.

Kangaroos In Australia.

There are no native kangaroos except on the continent of Australia. That country contains millions of them.

Cow Tree Sap.

The sap of the cow tree, as its name implies, resembles milk both in name and taste and is very wholesome and nourishing. The tree grows in Venezuela and frequently attains a height of 100 to 125 feet.

The Mississippi Valley.

If the Mississippi valley was as densely populated as Massachusetts it would have 350,000,000 inhabitants.

The Mule Ducks.

If a horse touches his ears in going under a low bridge or through a tunnel he will invariably throw his head up and receive a hard knock. When a mule's ears touch anything his head goes down.

Bach's Works.

The most voluminous of all musicians was Jean Sebastian Bach. Less than one-half of his works have been published.

Lemon Cream.

Mix together the juice of two lemons, the grated peel of one, the juice of two oranges and a cup of sugar. Let stand two hours, then add a little grated nutmeg and strain through cheese cloth. Add gradually a pint of stiffly whipped cream and serve soon with any light, delicate cake.

Awnings.

To make awnings waterproof immerse first in a solution of soap and repeat the process in a copper solution of equal strength and then wash and dry.

Sisal Hemp.

Not more than 350 square miles of territory are under cultivation in henequin or sisal hemp, yet on this small area is produced the fiber that literally binds the wheat harvests of the world. It is used alike in Minnesota and Argentina, in Siberia and Egypt.

London Tenements.

Many rooms in London tenement houses are occupied by one family in the day time and another at night.

Dangerous Development.

A big arm, with fine biceps, triceps and deltoid development, may be very pretty to look at, but such arms have ofttimes cost their owners their lives through enlargement of internal organs incident to their development.

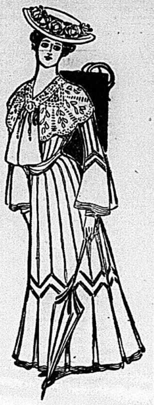
Sulphur Baths.

A sulphur bath, which persons travel far to take at the springs, may be taken at home very acceptably and with good results by throwing a handful of sulphur into the bath water.

FOR WARM DAYS.

New Bathing Suits—Smart Linen Robes.

Some of the new bathing suit models are cut princess fashion, with the skirt fitting the hips closely and sloping out very wide and full at the edge. Sometimes the tunic is made in the two tier fashion or the godet flounce is employed to widen the edge, but the gored tunic trimmed with flat bands or strappings is by far the neatest and most becoming style. Swimming toilets are usually cut in princess fashion or the bodice is separate and slightly eased into a deep band for the waist. A sash or scarf is usually worn with the bathing costume, but a shaped band is pretty, or even a smooth patent leather belt if the waist is small and round. The Swiss shape is also becoming if the bodice is allowed to bag back and front, and it should be of the material trimmed with braid or stitched in rows all around the edges.



BLUE LINEN COSTUME.

There are some charming linen robes with hemstitched borders to be had at the summer sales. These are not difficult to make, as they are already cut out, but they require care in the arranging. Very often if they are made at home a good collar or a sash will hide the deficiencies.

Very pretty skirts can be bought ready to wear, many being sold with an extra length of material, which, when of cloth or other suitable fabric, can be converted into a smart little bolero or sack coatee. The usual length allowed is two yards in a double width, and this is ample.

The costume in the cut is of pale blue linen, with the collar of embroidered lawn.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

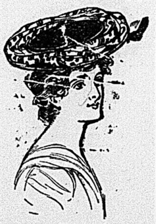
MILLINERY NOTES.

Hats Made of Currants—Brown Veils Popular.

A pretty hat entirely composed of red and white currants was made on a foundation of red and white tulle. It was worn with an ecru and white linen dress and the whole effect was very good.

Red is extremely popular both here and in Paris. Some clear lawns in the new shade of currant red are quite beautiful, provided they are toned down by exquisite lace.

Many French people are wearing no veils at all, still, taking it all in all, veils are generally worn and some are very becoming. The bizarre, large patterned veilings are giving place to fine, flimsy Russian nets and tulle. Navy blue spotted tulle is worn with the all blue hat, and it suits women with good complexions and auburn hair.



A FLAT HAT.

Brown veils are charming with brown hats. The finest Russian nets are becoming to the majority.

Everything pertaining to the pelerine shape is fashionable. Certainly the fluffy pelerines are much more becoming than the flat stoles of past seasons. These are now giving way to the pelerine collar of mousseline de soie and chiffon, and to the lace scarf draped in this fashion.

The hat in the picture is of blue straw trimmed with a blue and white silk scarf.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

AT THE BEE HIVE

Chas. N. Sulman

A curious custom exists in the Prussian royal family of selecting every July a half dozen deserving young couples too poor to marry, and to have them wedded in the garrison church at Potsdam on the anniversary of the death of Queen Louise of Prussia. After the ceremony each bride receives a gift of a sum equivalent to about $115 and a handsome family Bible. The function took place, as usual, a short time ago, in the presence of Princess Margarethe, the eldest unmarried daughter of the Prussian royal family.

Some time ago the old trysting oak in Harthill Walk, so frequently mentioned in "Ivanhoe," was felled to the ground in order to preserve the trunk. The tree was one of the oldest in England, and is described by Scott as being venerable when siege was laid to the castle of Torquilstone. The tree stood on the estate of the Duke of Leeds, whose agent, Mr. Mozey, is devoted to Scott. By his instructions the tree was taken down, and the trunk will be preserved on the lawn in front of Mr. Mozey's house. A young oak tree is to be planted by the Duchess of Leeds on the site of the trysting tree.

WE WANT YOU TO READ THE FOLLOWING LETTER.

WHICH WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED FROM MR. W. T. JACKSON, WHO SUFFERED FOR THREE YEARS WITH LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Kingston, Ont., July 22, 1903.

The O. R. Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen.—It gives me great pleasure to recommend the O. R. Kidney Cure to all who are suffering from lame back, rheumatism or kidney trouble. I have endured the pangs of rheumatism for the last three years. I tried to get relief from doctors' medicine and preparations that I saw advertised, but all failed. I have now taken three bottles of the O. R. Kidney Cure and do not feel an ache or pain. I sleep perfectly and never felt better in my life than I do to-day. So I feel quite satisfied in recommending your preparation, as I believe I am permanently cured. I remain,

Yours truly,
W. T. JACKSON.

Employee of Peter Lowrie, Blacksmith, 50 Queen St., south.

Every bottle of O. R. Kidney Cure contains a full 10 days' treatment. It is put up in a liquid form, quickly assimilates and gives instant relief. Price 50c bottle. O. R. Liver Pills 25c bottle. O. R. Dyspepsia Tablets 25c box at druggists, or write Ancient Etiquette of Gloves.

In the middle ages etiquette with regard to gloves was far more stringent than at present. For instance, no one was permitted to enter a church wearing gloves, which were considered just as much out of place as it would nowadays be to remain in any sacred edifice with a hat on.

The Sultan's Household.

It is estimated that nearly 20,000 pounds of bread are eaten daily in the sultan of Turkey's household.

Sherry and Gout.

Workmen employed in the warehouses of Jerez, Spain, drink two bottles of sherry a day, and gout and rheumatism are said to be almost unknown among them.

TERRIBLE COST.

Achinese War Which Has Cost Netherlands $200,000,000 Is to Stop.

London, Aug. 25.—Private news from Achin is to the effect that Pangkima Polem and Rajah Keumala, who have been for many years the two chief rebel leaders, will formally submit to the Dutch in the course of the next few days. This means the end of the war the colonial troops of the Netherlands have been waging with the Achinese almost continuously since the year 1873. The cause of the war was the refusal of the Sultan of Achin to recognize the sovereignty of the Netherlands. The war thus began has cost the Dutch over $200,000,000, and the lives of several thousand soldiers.

COFFIN FINALLY CLOSED.

Funeral of Lord Salisbury Takes Place on Monday Next.

Hatfield, Eng., Aug. 25.—Lord Salisbury's coffin has been finally closed. The servants and family will act as bearers at the funeral, which will occur on Monday, Aug. 31, when Lieut.-Col. Lord Edward Cecil, Military Secretary of the Egyptian army, and fourth son of the deceased statesman, reaches England from Egypt.

The funeral service will be held in St. Etheldreda's Church. The interment will be beside the body of his wife in the private burying ground adjoining. The ceremony will be most private. Simultaneously a service will be held in Westminster Abbey.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW GOVERNOR.

Lord Northcote, Now in Bombay, to Succeed Lord Tennyson.

London, Aug. 25.—The King has approved the appointment of Lord Northcote, G.C.I.E., C.B., Governor of Bombay, to be Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia. Lord Northcote will take up his new appointment in December next, on the retirement of Lord Tennyson.

Liberals of Norfolk Organize.

Simcoe, Aug. 25.—A meeting of the Liberals of Norfolk County to organize a Liberal Association, rendered necessary by the Redistribution Act, was held in the Merchants' Hall here yesterday. The following gentlemen were elected as officers of the association for Dominion purposes: President, H. B. Donley; vice-presidents, L. L. Sovereign and Oliver Austin; secretary-treasurer, R. A. G. Rose; Executive Committee, the above men, together with present presidents of municipal branch associations. After the work of organizing had been performed, Mr. John Charlton addressed the meeting on the Government's position on the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill. The other speakers of the day were Speaker Charlton, H. B. Donley, Major Atkinson, C. S. Killmaster and G. W. Wells, K.C.

The Road Runner at Work.

George Watts, Sam Kline, Peter Butts and Charley Connus of Bisbee were out prospecting on the Tombstone road in the neighborhood of the Old Sandy Bob ranch, and while in the course of hunting for monuments their attention was attracted to the actions of a road runner that seemed to be very much excited, jumping up and down in the air. When drawing nearer they discovered a large rattler coiled up. The bird would drop quickly upon the rattler and prick him with a piece of cactus in its feet and then drop the same near the rattler. This was kept up over an hour until the bird completed a circle of cactus around the snake. It then systematically pecked the snake on the head until the rattler was dead. The gentlemen brought back eight rattles that they cut from the defunct snake.—Tombstone Epitaph.

Air and Sunshine.

Go out into the country if you can. Make the acquaintance of birds and flowers and running brooks. Take a lunch along with you, and do not drink too much of the lager which the road house has awaiting your order. You will be surprised to find how the years drop away and how young you feel by nightfall and what a whopping sleep you will have when you get home. If you cannot go into the country go to the park or to the river side. Get on the sunny side of the street. It won't hurt you. And fill your lungs with great drafts of sun kissed air. There is healing in every inhalation, and if you breathe full and deep it will cleanse you like a bath.—New York News.

Strengthened Aluminium.

Alloys of aluminium and magnesium are superior to pure aluminium in strength, but less malleable and ductile. A more satisfactory metal is obtained by the Dutch Aluminium company. A mixture of aluminium with 2 to 10 per cent of magnesium gives a metal that can hardly be distinguished from aluminium, and the qualities of this alloy are modified by passing several times through a rolling mill while heated to about 900 degrees F. The treated alloy can be easily cut and filed, while it has much of the ductility and malleability of pure aluminium.

New Railroad Mileage.

The figures of new railroad mileage completed during the first half of 1903 show that the greatest extension was in Oklahoma, 240 miles, next Texas with 205 miles and third the Indian Territory with 203 miles. All of the older states were behind these, even New York reporting only two miles and a half of new road. The figures indicate that the principal railway extensions during the next few years will probably be in the southwestern and northwestern states.

LOUIS KLEIN DEAD.

PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY AT AN EARLY HOUR THIS MORNING.

Mr. Louis Klein, who had been conducting a second-hand store in this city for some time, passed away rather suddenly at an early hour this morning. He had been unwell for some days, but his demise was not anticipated. During the night he had an attack of heart failure, which caused death. Deceased, who was a Jew, was born in Russia some 47 years ago. He had been a resident of this country for a number of years and had lived in Belleville about seven years. He was well and favorably known about the city. A widow and a family of one son and two daughters survive.

NERVOUSLY EXHAUSTED.

Sleepless, poor digestion, easily tired blue as indigo, that's how you feel. Do you want to feel strong, make plenty of blood, enjoy buoyancy, strength and vim. You can do so by using Ferrozone. How it sharpens the appetite and imparts a feeling of buoyancy, strength and vim! Improves the appetite, digestion, assimilation, sleep. How surely Ferrozone does this, you can ascertain by using it. Ferrozone is a blood builder, nerve strengthener and brain invigorator. Sold by all druggists.

Laid to Rest.

The funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hamilton, whose death occurred at Rossmore, on August 17th, took place at the residence of William G. Anderson, on August 18th, Rev. Dr. Gardiner, of Belleville, officiating. Interment took place in the Wallbridge burying ground.

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

RELIANCE WINS THE SECOND RACE

RELIANCE WON TO-DAY'S RACE BY A MINUTE AND A HALF, CORRECTED TIME.

CHALLENGER STUCK CLOSE TO DEFENDER DURING EARLIER PART OF RACE.

New York, August 25.—The wind is light, about 8 knots.

Reliance started at 11.00.32, Shamrock at 11.02.10.

11.05 a.m.—Shamrock is slowly cutting down Reliance's lead, the Yankee boat being about one minute ahead.

11.10—Shamrock is holding Reliance well on the port tack.

11.15—Reliance is holding her lead.

11.18—Shamrock seems to point as high and foot a little faster than Reliance.

11.19—Reliance crossed first on starboard tack, but Shamrock held away too long and was behind her time allowance at this point. Reliance slowly creeping away. Wind 5 knots.

11.40—Yachts nearer the shore, Reliance is pointing and footing best.

12.26—Reliance 2 minutes ahead.

12.30—Reliance turned the first stakeboat at 12.24.55; Shamrock at 12.25.51. As Reliance passed the line a minute and 24 seconds ahead of Shamrock, she will have to lead the challenger at the finish at least 3 minutes and 21 seconds to win the race.

1.35—Both boats have set spinnakers for the run to the second mark.

2.29.—Reliance turned second mark at 2.15.25, Shamrock at 2.20.18. By corrected time Reliance now leads by 52 seconds.

New York, 3 p.m.—On the last leg the yachts have been obscured. About four miles from the finish Reliance was leading by five minutes.

3.15.—Reliance crossed the finish line 6 minutes ahead of Shamrock, winning by one minute and a half, corrected time.

TONIC HYPOPHOSPHITES COMPOUND.

This scientific remedy is especially prepared for conditions prevalent in summer, when the system gets run down, the brain tired out and the organs of secretion and excretion become weak and inactive. This preparation is a splendid builder of bones, nerves and muscles. The health steadily improves under its action. It is steady, constant, reliable, reconstructive tonic. Price 75c, $1.00 and $1.25 per bottle.—Alex Ray.

FORMER BELLEVILLE BOY WRITES OF INDIA.

INTERESTING DESCRIPTION OF HABITS OF LIFE, PRICES, ETC., IN THAT FAR-OFF COUNTRY.

The writer of the following letter, Will K. Ward, is now a soldier in India, and formerly a Marchmont boy, having also worked for several farmers in this district. He writes to Mr. B. Ketcheson, of Phillipston, Thurlow:

14th Howitzer Battery, R.F.A.,
Cawnpore, July 15th, 1903.

Dear Friend Billa,—Hvaing asked me in your last letter to tell you what I have noticed in the farming business and other things in this country, I will try and tell you a little. In the first place, I wish you to understand that this subject is only on what I have been informed and what I have just noticed, and is not to be taken as if I actually had been at the work. When travelling up the line from Bombay to Cawnpore we were all anxious to view the country, it being new scenery to what we all had been used to for the last year or two in South Africa. What one man did not notice another would, and between us all there was not many things of importance left unnoticed. There were a few men of the battery that have worked as farm laborers at home, so that land and crops would occupy their attention a good deal. The first ploughing I saw in this country reminded me of the pictures in your large family Bible as being true to nature. The plough itself is roughly constructed of strong wood and resembles as near as I can explain one of your home-made corn markers, with an iron tip as plough point. This is drawn by two oxen, which are mostly all used in place of horses. The breed of cattle out here are the brahim and water buffalo. The last named is one of the ugliest kind of cattle I ever saw. Their skin is like a Tamworth pig, i.e., black and no hair, and their habits are not much better. They will lie in mud or water and eat most anything, but are very strong and useful for draft, but slow. The brahim is a hump-back, color mostly white, and is a sacred animal amongst natives, I believe. They are also used as beasts of burden, and are very nice looking and large if properly cared for. Well, to go back to the ploughing, that is done when finished, just looks like the work of a spring tooth cultivator on wet land. The land mostly is divided into plots, with mud walls about one foot high, to suit the different crops raised. I am told this is done for two purposes; first, to hold the rains during the rainy season, known over here as the Monsoon weather, and secondly, to flood their land for growing rice. Rice is one of their chief crops, for a native of the poorer class lives mostly on rice and dhall. The season mostly looked for, and which is best for crops, is the Monsoon weather, for if this weather did not happen for the next three months of every year all crops would be a failure, and no doubt you have read of the famines of India, caused in most cases through want of rain, and a very pitiful sight to witness. The different grasses grown for feed of horses and cattle are very diferent from yours in Canada, for you would consider most of it what you call swamp hay and mostly all very coarse. What is considered a first quality grass is called ghoi ghai and only grows on good land. It resembles timothy hay a good deal after losing its seed and fully ripe. The best grass, I believe, around here, is called jhan neva, which is very sweet, and animals prefer it to any other kind. This also looks like timothy as near as I could explain. Other kinds are called black and white unjana, sphere, mushan and lastly doob, which is also considered first-class, but am told at times during the rainy weather it gets bitter and animals refuse it. The soil, from my point of view, appears to be mostly all very good, and what I would call black muck and loamy soil. Fruit is very plentiful of mostly all kinds, but I have not yet seen many apples around here. Grass and rice I would call the chief crops, but a little of everything is grown. There is an abundnace of trees out here, which all look to me as if they had been planted in the fields along the roads and around all buildings to act as shade from the excessive heat. The buildings of the natives and their places of worship are built mostly of mud, and in some cases thatched roofs. Native labor is very plentiful and cheap, the lowest wages that I am aware of being rupees four monthly (thirty-two cents to the rupee). You may wonder how they live on this, but I have told you before this is one of the cheapest countries in the world, and a native would live on what would not keep life in me or you. A good deal of manual labor is carried on by women out here, and at present women are working in front of our bungalow on a new sewre that is being built. Instead of carting such things as dirt, mortar and bricks to where they are required for this work, the women carry it in small flat baskets on their heads, and water is carried if a well is near by in leather bags and chatties earthenware. We are able to obtain eggs at six cents per dozen, milk at two cents per quart and small pats of butter enough for one man's meal for one cent. These prices, however, must not be considered the lowest, for a native puts the price up double when selling to a soldier, whom they think rich, and we give it rather than argue with them, for that appears to be part of their work to get as much as possible. I will conclude this time and promise to tell you more later, especially if you think my letter interesting enough, for I would not wish to tire or even worry you. Hope all are in the best of health, as this leaves me at present, as you may guess. Remember me to all and write at your earliest convenience, and believe me to be

Your sincere friend,
WILL K. WARD.

LACTATED FOOD

The large sale for Lactated Food is not due to extensive advertising, but to the fact that those who use it recommend it to their friends and neighbors. No one knows better than the experienced mother the importance of giving the proper food to a baby, and for this reason those who have used Lactated Food feel they are doing the greatest possible kindness when they recommend it to their friends.

If mothers want their babies to be healthy and happy, let them stick close to a diet of pure Lactated Food. Specialists in children's d orders prescribe it, intelligent p ents recommend it, and babies l upon it show how perfectly food is adapted to infant life their healthy condition, their plum happy faces, and their bright e

THE GATE

WHAT THE BRIGHT, UNDIMMED EYE OF FAITH CAN SEE OF HEAVEN.

NO FIGHT FOR AN EXISTENCE.

Consequently There Is No Need of Rest There—Perfect Renewal of Our Powers Day by Day That the Passage of Years Leaves No Trace of Decay, Saith the Preacher.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1903, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—From the glitter and fascination of worldly pleasures and enjoyments the preacher in this sermon directs us to the contemplation of the greater joys of the "better land." The text is I Corinthians xv, 49, "We shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

What is heaven? Some people think that we do not know much about it. I remember how my father who loved to preach about the "celestial city," used to say he felt when he described it—that he was looking through a glass darkly."

That is true. No human mind can conceive, no human voice or pen can depict, the beauties of the celestial kingdom. There are, however, passages in God's word which open the pearly gates a little way, so that we can catch a glimpse of the supernal grandeur of that city of celestial glory. We can, as it were, pluck a rose of Sharon or a lily of the valley and learn in miniature what the fragrance of the heavenly gardens shall be, where every hillside and meadowland is covered with perpetual flora. Through the crevice of that open gate we can, as it were, for a moment catch a sight of the redeemed, whose garments are as white as the driven snow and whose joys are limited only by their own capacity to enjoy the happiness provided for them by their almighty and all loving Father. It is for such a glimpse of this heaven, to which all Christians are heading, that I would open my Bible to-day and speak from the text, "As we have borne the image of the earthy we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Heaven is the place of immortal residence. What does that imply? "Why," answers some one, "that means that we shall live on millions upon millions of years." It means that long after this earth as a burning star shall flicker and go out our spiritual existence shall continue. It means a conscious life extending to ages which dwarf into brevity the longest term even of the inanimate relics of the most remote past.

But the immortality of heaven is not to be measured in years alone. It is the immortality of eternal youth. Old age implies weakness of body and of mind. In heaven there will be such a perfect renewal of our powers day by day that the passage of years leaves no trace of decay.

Perfect adjustment of the resurrected body to its celestial surroundings proves there is to be no fight for an immortal existence. Why does the physical body grow tired? Because it is not in perfect accord with its physical surroundings. In order to make the heart pump I must breathe. Yet every time I inhale the air that oxygen burns up part of my physical being, which must be replaced by food and physical nourishment. Why do the great clouds of smoke ascend from the funnels of the locomotive and the chimneys of the factories? Because those clouds form component parts of wasted energies. Imperfect consumption of fuel implies that the coal must be continually shovelled into the furnaces or else the machinery will stop. But in that heavenly land there shall be no need of sleep, because the redeemed body, perfectly adjusted to its celestial surroundings, will never know fatigue. There shall be no need of physicians, because pain, which is the warning signal of infirmity, shall never have any of our joints in its twist. There shall be no need of recreation, because then all stings shall be, once for all, perfectly created.

We marvel at the perfect adjustment in the natural world. We wonder at the vast resources of power which can swing the stars in their courses and make whirling constellations marshal themselves upon the heavenly plains and yet have no confusion in passing reviews. Once in awhile we are horror struck when some of the elements seem to balk and the lightnings, as fractious colts, kick over the traces and start to smash things. We stand aghast when the dark garments of a tornado sweep past us, or two storm clouds collide and the heavens are ablaze with electricity and the ear is startled with the crashing of the thunder and the freshets come and bridges are swept away. But all the time when these elements are at war we think of the greater power which holds the moon and the sun off from the earth at arm's length. We think of the greater power of the laws of evaporation, which with golden pulleys lifted those waters into the clouds. We think of the law of cohesion or of specific gravity, which holds this old earth together in a compact sphere. We think of the power inherent in vegetable and animal life of sucking up the waters which flow by their sides. We marvel at the great adjustment of nature—marvel not only because it works like the wheels of a perfect automaton, but because it seems to work without friction.

Now, my friends, if we wonder at the seemingly perfect adjustment of the mundane elements, can we not the more marvel at the perfect adjustment of the redeemed body with its heavenly surroundings? Shall we not rejoice over the thought that all our faculties shall be enlarged and developed and yet keep on enlarging and developing and never grow tired? We have read that for over fifty years John Wesley preached on an average sixteen sermons per week, or nearly three sermons per day. How vigorous must have been the constitution that could perform that task! Bu[illegible] we shall [illegible]ll have vigorous [illegible]tions.

Oh, the [illegible] of that bet[illegible]er land in which the[illegible] we render [illegible] will never produce [illegible] nor the in-finite subjects that [illegible]ngage our attention ever caus[illegible]! Our hands grow weary, even [illegible] they may be busy in well doing. [illegible] in that "beautiful land" we shall [illegible]er be weary of well doing. Then our redeemed bodies shall have a perfect eye, a perfect ear, a perfect tongue, a perfect foot, a perfect hand clasp. Then all our faculties shall not only have the resilience of youth, but the alertness and perfect adjustment of immortality. We shall live and continue to live, because decay and corruption shall flee away when "death, the last enemy, shall be destroyed."

Heaven is to be a place of progressive enjoyments. If the resurrected brain is to be alert it must have something to feed upon. Though there may be many intellectual enjoyments of heaven, I believe there shall be two which will most appeal to the denizens of the skies. The first is in studying the wonderful construction of the celestial city. "Oh," answers some one, "I know now what is the formation of heaven. It is a great walled town. And the length and breadth and the height of it are all equal. And the city is made of pure gold, and the foundations of the walls of the city are a collection of precious stones, and the twelve gates of the city are twelve massive pearls. Why, the book of Revelation describes the city to its minutest detail."

Do you truly mean what you say? Do you affirm that the streets of heaven are to be literally made out of yellow bricks and the city to be a walled in town with a lot of precious stones for foundations? Why, the apostle in the book of Revelation is merely talking in figurative language or in the language of earth. He is giving us a description of heaven in figures which we can comprehend. He does not mean that heaven is to have streets of gold any more than he literally means that hell is to be a place of fire. Fire is a symbol of torture. Gold and precious stones are the symbols of unlimited luxuries. Thus the apostle piles together a great mass of diamonds and sapphires and emeralds and topazes and amethysts and says: "Heaven is to be like that. Heaven is to be like pearls, like mansions of white, like golden boulevards. Picture to yourself the brightest place you possibly can, and heaven is to be multipotently, infinitely, transcendently more beautiful." Yet when at last we reach heaven all will be so new, so strange, that our minds through all eternity will never tire of exploring the grandeur. We shall take wings of the morning and fly away as a bird, and every place our eye lights upon shall offer inexhaustible fields of investigation.

Now, the more you live with some people the more you appreciate their love and devotion and realize their true worth. When you were a little child you thought you loved your mother, but every year you grew older the more beauty and tenderness you found in her life. When she was old and her hair silvered and face wrinkled and form emaciated she thought that her work was done and wondered why God did not come and get her. But she became dearer to you then every day. You said to her just before her death: "Mother, mother, I cannot get along without you. I am just now beginning to appreciate what your love means." Yes, it takes some of us ten, twenty, forty—aye, fifty—years to fully appreciate the beautiful characters of those who have lived by our side. Each month reveals some new sweetness or gentleness, each year some new worth. So our heaven is to be a place of continual surprises. We shall all be hourly and daily discovering some new manifestation of purity and love in the lives of those with whom we are spending eternity. We shall be continually surprised with their thoughtfulness and sacrifices and tender attentions. When they do us the unexpected kindnesses which only heaven can offer we shall delightedly exclaim. "Why, Mary, though I have been living with you now in heaven for a thousand years I never realized before how thoroughly kind you could be. Their spiritual beauties, their noble deeds, their self sacrificing attentions, shall be as a changing kaleidoscope, ever revealing to us new natures and wonderfully new developments of love.

Heaven is to be a place of manifested gratitude, a place where we can lay at the feet of our benefactors the rich golden sheaves of our lives which came as a result of their seed planting. It shall be a place where others may rejoice in our gospel conquests because their words of advice and their prayers and their examples were the means of first leading us to the foot of the cross and starting us forth as gospel messengers.

Heaven must be such a place. Why? Because most Christians never live long enough on earth to see the full results of their services for the Master. But few gospel workers can say, as did Simeon of old, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people." We shall not live long enough to see our boys and girls, for whom we have slaved and worked and prayed, grow up into Christian men and women and see them as teachers in Christian Sunday schools and leaders in evangelistic meetings and perhaps elders and ministers about the communion table of the Lord's supper. But in heaven we shall know about the glorious results of our Christian labors. In heaven the redeemed mother shall not only see her children, but her children's children, who have been saved through her prayers and consecration. In heaven there shall be rejoicing everywhere, because we shall there know that through the results of our labors the "dead are alive again and the lost are found."

And, oh, how many redeemed immortals we shall have to thank in that heavenly kingdom! John Todd, you were dead thirty years before I was born, but I shall in heaven thank thee for the yellow leaves of that old book I found in my father's library of which you were the author. That book was one of the means used by the Holy Spirit of turning [illegible] thoughts toward the Christian [illegible]istry. William H. Milburn, twen[illegible]rs blind chaplain of the United State[illegible] senate, thou didst not, in proba[illegible]bility, ever hear of my [illegible] didst [illegible] thy sightless eyes name[illegible] gla[illegible]ake me turn many thou[illegible] in [illegible]nce toward the a gratef[illegible] rapt[illegible] heaven is to-day Christ who [illegible] thank[illegible]us and holy watching thy [illegible] who [illegible] thee, O re-[illegible] face. I wish to [illegible] didst [illegible] years ago deemed spirit, thou [illegible] thy [illegible] in the as a Sunday school [illegible] to [illegible] shed old Brooklyn tabernacle [illegible] many an anxious tear over [illegible] lars. I would tell thee that [illegible] in the sacred ministry I feel [illegible] touch of thy sainted hand and hear the earnest tone of thy pleading voice. Yes, there are many spirits in heaven we would thank for what they did for us when upon the earth. We would thank them that they may rejoice, as we all rejoice, and that their hosannas of gratitude might be augmented with our halleluiahs.

As Christian comrades one will say: "Do you remember that time when we started those cottage prayer meetings? As a result of those prayer meetings what a glorious revival we had—a hundred and twenty souls for Christ!" "Yes," says another, "that reminds me of what a hard time we had in starting that mission school down in the slums. Cynics said it would do no good, but it did, it did." "Yes," will answer many voices, "we were converted and saved through those little meetings." Then the pastors and the different congregations will get together, and they will have their reminiscences. And the parents and the children will get together, and they will talk over again the blessings which came from their altars. And the Bible distributers will tell how they were scoffed at and yet blessed as they distributed their tracts and sacred leaves. And Francis E. Clark and the Christian Endeavorers will have their separate reunions. We shall be in that "better land" living over and over again the Christian joys which we passed through when serving Christ upon the earth. Oh, my friends, if this idea is true, that heaven is to be a place of glorious reminiscences, ought we not all to double and treble our energies in the service of Jesus Christ? Shall we not by the power of the Holy Spirit do more and more for our Saviour, who has done so much for us, in order to be able to drink deep out of this golden chalice of celestial pleasure?

But the greatest celestial joy of all I have reserved until the last. Heaven is to be a place of perpetual worship. "Does that mean," asks some one, "heaven is to be a great cathedral or church in which all the inhabitants of the New Jerusalem shall assemble and pray to him—and pray to him and never cease to pray to him? In which there shall be a service with no doxology and no benediction, for that service shall be without beginning and without end?"

Oh, no, my brother. I do not believe you have caught the right idea of the worship of the celestial city. Heaven is not to be a church, where we shall have stated times for prayers and hymns. St. John distinctly says in his Apocalypse: "And I saw no temple therein. For the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb and the temple are of it." That means, as I take it, instead of having buildings especially dedicated for the worship of the trinity we shall feel, wherever we may be, that we are standing face to face with Christ. And then our hearts shall be so full of gratitude to him for what he has done for us that our eyes and lips and tongues and hearts will never cease to praise him. It will not be the worship of intercession or of pleading for the pardon of sin, but the worship of adoration and of eternal homage.

Perhaps my thought may be simply illustrated by a conversation I had with a very dear friend some time ago. This noble Christian man turned to me one day and said: "Do you know that my ideas of prayer and worship have greatly changed within the last few years? When I used to pray I would make out a long list of petitions for which I would ask God. But now I have begun to see that he loves me better than I love myself. Therefore, instead of saying, 'O God, give me this or that,' I simply say, 'O, Christ, thour art so good and pure; suit thyself in reference to my life and thou wilt suit me. They will, O Lord, and not mine, be done.'" So in that heavenly land we shall have but one prayer and one song, "They will, O Lord, not mine, be done." We shall sing it on the street. We shall sing it in the green pastures beside the still waters. We shall sing it in chorus with our loved ones. We shall sing it when we are alone. "Thy will, O God, thy will be done!" In that one song, and that alone, we shall find the perpetual and never ending worship of heaven.

Thus, my dear Christian friends I have tried to open for you a little way the gates of the glorious "city of the redeemed." I have tried to eternally bind our lives with the immortal lives of our dead. Like Christian in Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," may you continue to strive to enter into the "strait gate." And like the Christian Queen Victoria may you hopefully and triumphantly be able to write the same kind of an epitaph upon the tombstones of your loved ones as she chiseled upon the mausoleum of the departed prince consort: "Farewell, beloved. Here at last I will rest with thee. With thee in Christ shall I rise again." Such is the gospel prophecy for all who love him. Heaven! Heaven! Glorious heaven! Heaven of the Christians who are resurrected! Heaven, eternal and never ending heaven!

MONDAY NIGHT'S BAD STORM

Did Widespread Damage in the Western Part of Ontario.

Simcoe Had a Baby Cyclone, and Fruit Will Suffer Greatly—Many Barns Destroyed by Fire Caused by Lightning—Season's Crops Just Harvested in Many Cases Were Totally Destroyed—Several Buildings Struck in St. Kitts.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—While Toronto did not suffer any material damage from the rainstorm of Monday night and the early hours of Tuesday morning, yet it was of a very general nature covering the territory along the lower lakes very thoroughly, as well as making its effects felt in Western Ontario. In the city the rain lasted from 7.30 Monday evening till 6.30 Tuesday morning, during which time the showers ranged from a light downpour to a regular deluge. The heaviest period was between 4 and 5 a.m., when 2-10 of an inch fell. Only one place is reported to have suffered from the lightning, and the City Hall received the bolt, which sent a chunk from the terra cotta roofing on the east side of the hall crashing to the ground.

CYCLONE AT SIMCOE.

Largest of Trees Destroyed and Apple, Plum and Pear Crops Suffer.

Simcoe, Aug. 26.—Never before has Simcoe been visited by such a violent wind storm as that which swept over the town and vicinity during yesterday forenoon. About 1 a.m. a storm came up from the southeast, during which lightning did some damage near the town, but the most damage was done at about 11 a.m., when the storm came from the west, accompanied by what approached very nearly to a cyclone.

In the town large trees were simply twisted and torn down by the fierceness of the wind. Many of the largest trees were destroyed as if they were ade of pipe clay; windmills were blown away and other things were destroyed.

The apple crop will suffer the most, while the plums and pears will not escape.

The telegraph and telephone lines suffered as a result of the storm, and many of the streets are decorated with fallen trees.

At the present time it is not possible to give an estimate of the damage done, but it will be serious, as many of the best orchards in this section were heavily laden with fruit.

BARNS BURNED.

Lightning Strikes at Virgil, Metz, Culross, Stayner, and Near Woodstock.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Aug. 26.—Lightning early yesterday morning struck the barns of Robert Manson, a farmer, living near Virgil, about four miles west of here, setting fire to them and completely destroying the buildings, together with their contents, consisting of this year's crops, one horse and a number of farm implements.

Fergus, Aug. 26.—During a thunderstorm Monday night, the barn of Alex. Spence of Metz was struck by lightning, and the contents entirely consumed, with most of the season's crops, as well as a lot of first-class implements. The loss on contents will amount to about $1,000.

Teeswater, Aug. 26.—During a thunderstorm Monday night, Tom Little's barn, on the 8th concession of Culross, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The barn contained all the season's crop and implements, together with one horse and three calves. Total loss about $2,500.

Stayner, Aug. 26.—A heavy thunderstorm passed over here Monday night. Percy Wallace's barn was struck by lightning, and, with the contents, was totaly destroyed. The crop had just been harvested. One or two other barns were struck.

Woodstock, Aug. 26.—The severe electrical storm which passed over this vicinity during Monday night did considerable damage in the country.

The barn of Edmund Schillings, lot six, concession seven, Blandford, a mile and a half east of Innerkip, was struck by lightning at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning and with its contents totally destroyed.

The barns of Innes Sutherland at Harrington, with this year's crops and farm implements were destroyed by lightning Monday evening. Mr. Sutherland is at present in Manitoba.

Stratford, Aug. 26.—A very heavy electric storm passed over this district Monday night and the aftermath reveals the destruction of two large bank barns and their contents and considerable damage to a residence. The losses recorded are: Barns of Alma Lupton, lot 3, con. 6, Downie, burnt to the ground, with season's crops and several implements. Loss between $2,000 and $3,000. Insurance, $1,500. Barn of Joseph Hunter, near Drumbo, burnt to the ground, with all contents, including the season's crops and implements. House of George McKenzie of the fourth line of West Zorra, struck and damaged to some extent.

Guelph, Aug. 26.—Monday night's tornado did considerable damage in Puslinch. The frame barn of Ed. Doyle, lot 14, con. 4, Puslinch, with all the season's crop, was destroyed by lightning. The frame driving shed of W. J. Laing, near Arkell, was also struck by lightning and destroyed. The barn of John Bovells, Mountsberg, one of the finest barns in Flamboro, was burned, with all the crop and some of the stock. Two houses were struck at Freelton, but little damage was done.

STORM BAD AT ST. KITTS.

Streets Flooded and Several Buildings Struck by Lightning.

St. Catharines, Aug. 26.—A very severe electrical storm struck this city at an early hour yesterday morning and lasted over an hour. People rushed from their beds, thinking another cyclone was coming.

The lightning was most vivid and struck several places. The rain fell in torrents, and on the main streets the sewers were blocked and the water raised above the kerbstones, reaching the doors of several business houses.

The lightning struck the Orphans' Home on Ontario street, setting it on fire. The firemen confined the blaze to the tower.

A large flagstaff in Capt. Wigle's yard was splintered. At J. S. Smith's home the electric wires were melted, the fire coming right into Mr. Smith's house.

Four Men Drowned.

New York, Aug. 26.—During the height of the storm a huge derrick on a Central Railroad of New Jersey bridge across Newark Bay was swept from its supports into the water, carrying down several workmen. Four of them were drowned and several were badly injured. No bodies have yet been recovered.

Storm Kills One.

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 26.—A severe storm struck Mossville, near here, yesterday, killing one and injuring several.

Two Women Drown.

New York, Aug. 26.—In the gale yesterday Mrs. John Holm and her sister, Miss Rasmussen of Brooklyn lost their lives in Jamaica Bay. They went sailing in a cat-boat with Mr. Holm and the boat was upset. [illegible] by a sailboat. The two women were picked up by a launch, but died without regaining consciousness.

A HEAP OF RUINS.

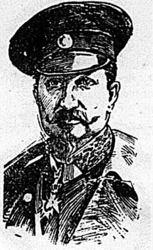
Women and Children Homeless in Once-Beautiful City of Krushevo—Warnings Ignored by Vali of Monastir.

Monastir, European Turkey, Aug. 26.—The once beautiful city of Krushevo is a heap of ruins. The women and children are homeless, exposed to the weather and famine. The town is rendered uninhabitable by the odor of corpses, which are being gnawed by dogs and pigs, the Turkish authorities refusing to allow them to be removed under the pretext that an inquest would be held. Krushevo is situated on the summit of a hill to the northwest of Monastir. It contained 2,000 houses and 10,000 inhabitants, mostly Vlachs, who are prosperous merchants.

The Macedonian Committee had been making arrangements to occupy the town, and authorities of Krushevo begged the Vali of Monastir to send reinforcements, but warnings were ignored.

May Depose Ferdinand.

London, Aug. 26.—A deputation left Sofia last Friday to visit Prince Ferdinand, who is in Hungary, to invite him to declare publicly his Macedonian policy, says the Berlin correspondent of The Morning Post. The Prince will have ten days to reply. In the event of his declining, it is understood that the deputation bears a mandate from the Bulgarian people to depose him.



PRINCE FERDINAND.

Turkish Consul Stopped.

Phillipopolis, Bulgaria, Aug. 26.—The Turkish Consul, accompanied by a suspected person, arrived here last evening from Constantinople. They were stopped by a policeman, who demanded their passports. The Prefect has dismissed the policeman, but the Consul is not satisfied and demands severe punishment for the perpetrator of what he calls a serious assault upon himself and his friend.

Three Villages Destroyed.

Constantinople, Aug. 26.—Three Bulgarian villages near Toherkeskoi, Vilayet of Adrianople, are reported to have been attacked by Circassians and their inhabitants massacred.

Every Able Bodied Man.

London, Aug. 26.—A despatch from Uskub to The Daily Mail reports that every able-bodied man in the European vilayets of Turkey will be called to the colors, a sufficient proof of the gravity of the situation.

Killed Them All.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 26.—A revolutionary band has appeared at the village of Toherkeskoi, between Adrianople and Constantinople, within six hours of the Sultan's capital. The insurgents and Turks fought and afterwards the Circassian inhabitants of the village pillaged and destroyed three Bulgarian villages in the neighborhood, killing all the men, women and children, except a few who escaped to the mountains.

Battleship Dominion Launched.

London, Aug. 26.—The Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyle) yesterday launched the battleship Dominion, at Barrow. The Dominion is the last of three ships known as the King Edward VII. class. When completed the Dominion will have cost $6,500,000.

Quackenbush Sentenced.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Charles Quackenbush, the man who recently escaped from the Central Prison, will spend the next nine years and two months within the confines of Kingston Penitentiary. The Police Magistrate sentenced the young criminal to seven years each on two charges of burglary, sentences to run concurrently, and 16 months for escaping from the Central Prison, with which he must also serve an unexpired term of 20 months yet remaining to his credit at the Central Prison. Thomas Murphy, one of his companions, got five years. Larry Doyle will get his reward later on, if he is caught.

Harvester Goes Insane.

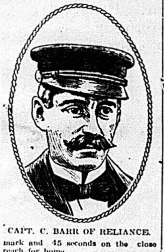
Winnipeg, Aug. 26.—An Ontario harvester apparently went insane at La Riviere and stabbed a liveryman in a dozen places, but not fatally. The man was captured, but his name is not known.

RELIANCE HAS TWO RACES IN

Shamrock III. Lost the Second Race on Tuesday.

Defender of the America's Cup Slipped Over the Line Ahead of the Challenger, in Latter's Weather and Wind, 1 Minute, 19 Seconds—"We Did Better To-day," Philosophically Says Sir Thomas Lipton—A Close Contest.

New York, Aug. 26.—In a glorious whole-sail breeze, over a triangular course of 10 miles to a leg, the fleet-footed cup defender, Reliance, again yesterday showed her heels to Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, taking the second race of the cup series by the narrow margin of 1 minute and 19 seconds. It was as pretty and as hard a fought contest as has ever been sailed off Sandy Hook, and, had the wind not fallen during the last 10 minutes, the record for the course, 3 hours, 12 minutes and 15 seconds, made by Columbia, two years ago in a race against Shamrock II., would have been broken. As it was, Reliance sailed the 30 miles within 2 minutes and 39 seconds of the record, which speaks wonders for her speed in the wind that was blowing. Reliance's victory, narrow as it was, would have been even smaller had not Captain Wringe, the skipper of the British ship, bungled the start, sending his craft over the line 19 seconds after the last gun, and handicapping her to that extent. At every point of sailing, the defender's superiority was demonstrated. She gained 1 minute and 51 seconds in the windward work to the first mark, 40 seconds on the run to the second mark and 45 seconds on the close reach for home.



CAPT. C. BARR OF RELIANCE.

Soon after 10 o'clock both yachts had arrived at the lightship and cast off their tows. When the committee boat Navigator arrived, at 10.25, the signal was hoisted for a triangular course.

Course a Beat Due South.

The course was a beat due south, then a broad reach or run, as the case might be, off toward the Cholera Banks, and thence home again to the lightship, each leg 10 miles. The spectators watched the jockeying for the start with eager interest. At last, when the starting gun had been fired, and they bounded across the line, close hauled for the thresh to windward, it was seen that the American skipper, by his extremely clever work, had again out-generalled his rival and secured the weathergauge. Not only was the challenger's captain defeated in his effort to secure the windward berth, but he actually failed to cross in time to save a handicap of 19 seconds, this time being a dead loss to him. Barr never relinquished his advantage after the start, holding the challenger under his lee all the way to the first mark. By this time the wind had increased from 7 to 10 knots. The time of turning the first mark was:

Reliance... ... ...12.21.30
Shamrock...... ... ...12.24.45

Shamrock 6 Seconds Ahead.

Because of time allowance and difference in the start, the Shamrock was still six seconds ahead officially.

It was evident that the Yankee boat had won the race, barring accidents. Both captains broke out balloon jib topsails when they squared for the second turn. The wind was so far aft that they quickly discovered that instead of being a broad reach, as intended, the course to the turn was a run. The wind varied from 4 to 10 knots. Staysails were taken in and spinnakers set. Both were heading off their course a bit, in order to make their spinnakers draw well, and they ran that way for half an hour, when the Reliance smothered her spinnaker and set her staysail. During that time she did not appear to have gained an inch, but immediately upon laying her true course she began to draw away. Ten minutes after Reliance the Shamrock also took in her spinnaker and set her staysail. With the wind over their quarters, both yachts made fast time of it, but it was apparent that Reliance was gaining. They made the second turn as follows:

Reliance 1.17.50
Shamrock 1.21.45

The Reliance [illegible] overcome the time allowance, made good the difference at the start, and established a margin to her credit of 31 seconds.

[illegible]

Reliance whirled about the mark, gybed over, trimmed in her sheets, and romped away on a close reach toward the finish line. She was three quarters of a mile away before the Shamrock III. rounded the mark. Both yachts were heeling before a 12-knot wind.

Shamrock III. Came Booming Along.

Reliance on this last leg demonstrated that she is faster than any racing craft ever built. The guide vessel Coastwise was scurrying along ahead of her at full speed, but the Reliance overhauled and passed her. When the Reliance was a quarter of a mile from the finish line the wind died away considerably, but the Shamrock III. came booming along, carrying a splendid breeze and fast overhauled the leader. It looked as though the British boat was going to get within her time allowance, but the finish line was too near, and the Reliance slipped across it with 1 minutes and 19 seconds to spare. The official time:

	Start.	Finish.
Reliance	11.00.36	2.15.30
Shamrock III.	11.02.09	2.20.10
	Elapsed.	Corrected.
Reliance	3.14.54	3.14.54
Shamrock III.	3.18.10	3.16.14

We Did Better To-Day.

After the race, Sir Thomas Lipton said: "You have all seen the results, and the only thing I can say is that we did better to-day than the last race, which is hopeful. I figure my defeat at a little over a minute. If I make as much progress in the next race as I did in this over the last I will be a good bit ahead in the finish in the third. I was more than pleased with the way my boat was handled to-day. It is hard to admit it, but the best boat won. Perhaps with more wind at the finish, the result might have been different. But I don't want to throw any cold water on the victor. It is hard to win every race in such a series, and I hope our turn will come next."

Captain Barr said: "That's No. 2. Now we will get ready for Thursday."

Lord Shaftesbury said: "We are licked. The Reliance is jolly well the best boat."

C. Oliver Iselin said: "I don't suppose anybody ever saw two boats better handled than those two were to-day. It would seem, however, that the Reliance has proved her superiority in all kinds of weather and under all conditions."

WAR SECRETARY SCORED.

Royal Commission Says He Was Guilty of Negligence or Ignorant of Facts re. South Africa.

London, Aug. 26.—The report of the Royal Commission on the South African war, issued yesterday afternoon, refrains from commenting on the conduct of individual officers, strongly condemns the lack of preparations for war, endorses Lord Lansdowne's opinion that such a condition is full of peril to the Empire, and says an unsatisfactory and insufficient safeguard has since been suggested to prevent a recurrence of so serious a scandal.

From the beginning to the end of the war, 448,435 troops were engaged, and owing to the drain caused by the South Africa defence, Great Britain became dangerously weak in 1900. The Commission confirms the necessity for a higher degree of intelligence in the men and a well-educated staff.

Lord Esher, a member of the commission, in a supplementary report, says the unpreparedness in 1899 shows the War Secretary was guilty either of culpable negligence or ignorance of the facts, and urges the reorganization of the War Office, the abolition of the position of Commander-in-Chief, and the appointment of a general commanding the army, separate from the War Office.

CHAIRMAN CHOSEN.

Mr. Robert Reford of Montreal Head of the Transportation Commission.

Ottawa, Aug. 26.—Mr. Robert Reford of Montreal will be Chairman of the Transportation Commission. The position was offered to Sir Wm. Van Horne, who found himself unable to take it. The other members of the commission are Messrs. Bertram of Toronto and Fry of Quebec.

FIFTY-SEVEN PERSONS LOST.

French Steamer Admiral Gueydon Given Up For Lost.

Marseilles, Aug. 26.—The French steamer Admiral Gueydon (of 3,013 tons) has been given up for lost. There were fifty-seven persons on board.

The Admiral Gueydon was last reported leaving Colombo, Aug. 11, for Cochin.

International Cricket.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—When the Americans finished their inning yesterday on 'Varsity lawn they left their opponents 231 runs to get to win, having made 110 during the morning. The Canadians, however, scored only 83, leaving the United States' cricketers victors by 140 runs.

Big Guns in the Grand Trunk Pacific Debate—Sir Richard Cartwright and Hon. J. Israel Tarte Give Their Views—Latter Favors Waterways and Government Ownership—Correspondence Between Chamberlain and Minto.

Ottawa, Aug. 26. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier laid on the table of the House yesterday morning the promised correspondence between the Canadian and Imperial Governments as to the full publication of the proceedings of the Colonial Conference.

On July 31 Mr. Chamberlain cabled Lord Minto as follows: "It was decided at the Conference of Premiers not to publish the full report of the whole of the proceedings in deference to the wishes of Canada. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach asks in the House of Commons that decision should be reconsidered and publication allowed. Kindly inform me by cable whats view your Government hold."

Lord Minto's reply was: "My Ministers, with all due respect, must object to any alteration of report of proceedings as published. They consider that the resolution which was ultimately adopted after the fullest discussion at the time and which was unanimously carried, distinctly indicates the views of the conference."

Chairman Railway Commission.

The Premier also told the House that he expected to fill the office of chairman of the Transportation Commission, and the commission would be issued to-day.

Big Guns in G.T.P. Debate.

Some big guns boomed in the debate on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme in the House yesterday. Sir Richard Cartwright came to the defence of the Government. His speech broke the silence of Hon. J. Israel Tarte, who discussed the transportation question with his old time vigor. Sir Richard Cartwright's speech was a breath from the past. The exodus, which would not be stayed by Tory statesmanship, the hard times intervening between 1878 and 1896. These subjects, which have been specialties with Sir Richard Cartwright for the past 20 years, he made the theme of his speech yesterday. For every minute that he devoted to the glory of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme he devoted ten to the denunciation of the C.P.R. and its originators.

Mr. Tarte made an argumentative speech, emphasizing the importance of our water route, which alone, he declared, can solve the transportation problem of Canada. He paid a high tribute to the principle of public ownership and produced several testimonials setting forth its virtues. There was nothing distinctly one-sided in Mr. Tarte's speech, but he made it fairly clear that he would vote against the Government.

Mr. E. Gus Porter made a strong speech. He was rewarded with vigorous applause from the Opposition benches.

Henri Bourassa rounded off the debate with a rather timid defence of the Government's policy. Mr. Clancy moved the adjournment of the debate.

There are still 35 members to speak on the resolution, of these twenty-one are Conservatives and fourteen Liberals. It has been arranged that the division shall take place on Tuesday next.

RUSSIANS SEIZE JAPS.

Twenty-Eight Officers Detained and 278 Men Repatriated.

Yokohama, Aug. 26.—The Russian authorities have seized a number of Japanese fish-buying vessels at Kamschatkan ports on the charge of illegal trading. Twenty-eight officers of the vessels have been detained and 278 members of their crews have been repatriated.

A PATRIOTIC VIEW.

Many people are led to admire the sturdy independence of those Westerners who, knowing that the transportation problem is the chief one with which they have to wrestle, manfully lift up their voices against the railway deal proposed by Laurier, e'en though, as some of their small-souled contemporaries point out, they may be, by so doing, standing in their own light for the time being. The Westerners, of course, know, as every Canadian knows, that another transcontinental route is a necessity, and they also know that, in good time, it will be built. But the men of the West—most of them, at least, are broad-minded enough and patriotic enough to put aside provincial prejudices and speak plainly and truthfully for the general good of Canada, combatting with might and main a scheme which looks to the squandering of the people's money. In this connection The Edmonton Post has a timely and spirited article, as follows:

> There are those in the West, be it admitted with shame, belonging to both parties who claim that any scheme promising increased railway facilities to the West should receive little criticism from Western men; that we may overlook the means for the sake of the end; that it is of no consequence to us how much of the Dominion finances are squandered so long as our prairies are net worked with railways.
>
> Surely there is a broader patriotism in the West than this. It is not in keeping with the spirit which prompted one Western town of 3,000 inhabitants to send 120 men to South Africa to hear such doctrines preached on its streets. The West needs railways, but neither the West nor the East needs "railways at any price."
>
> The doctrine that a body of men deserve a chattel mortgage on the face value of the country they open up for their own profit has lived its day and should be lain quietly among the false doctrines which have been crushed by the feet of progress.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The British Admiralty are very proud of the fact that a recent discovery, something which will revolutionize sea warfare, has been made by a British officer, who has just sold the same to the British Government. Says the Canadian Trade Review: "Submarine boats heretofore have been stopped from doing much work by the want of space to carry a sufficient quantity of fuel, and the still more important factor the quantity of ventilation that could be made useable for the crew. A man cannot fight unless he can breathe. Both of these problems have been solved. The marines already made can with small cost be utilized upon the port of the enemy. Of course, the admiralty are very careful that the secret shall not leak out. They, however, are more than proud that this is the work of a Britisher and one of the best of the young officers in King Edward's royal navy."

• • •

Laurier must be ashamed of his friend Bourassa, who has again been heaving bricks at the British constitution.

• • •

Judging by yesterday's result, the Shamrock sails better on three legs than she does on two.

• • •

Andrew Carnegie is again throwing fits for fear Chamberlain's imperial preference scheme will become an accomplished fact. Andy is afraid the U.S. people will be so incensed that they will boycott Canada. Let them. They did their worst when they passed the McKinley Bill, and Canada still existed and prospered. By the way, if any better argument in favor of Chamberlain's scheme can be found than the fact that Carnegie and Bourke Cockran, the Fenian, are against it, it is not visible to the naked eye.

• • •

A wireless message from the Chief says he has arrived safely at his old home and is getting so big and strong that he expects to be able to push the steam roller when he gets back, thus saving the corporation the expense of coal. He spends his days drinking in the fresh air, and turning down invitations to drink other things. He delivered a lecture at a reception held in his honor, the subject being "Some sidewalks I have seen." When he described the relics seen on the back streets of this city, the audience with one accord, rose to their feet and exclaimed, "Well, wouldn't that trip you!" The Chief concludes by sending his regards to his comrades on the local force, and hopes they are keeping strict account of all the street lights which go out at night.

• • •

The Toronto Exhibition begins tomorrow, and many people throughout Ontario will go there who have not yet made satisfactory arrangements for next winter's coal. Which is an unfair way of going to the Fair.

Hamilton's big carnival is over, but the papers are still urging their readers to hand in their promised subscriptions. It's one thing to have your fun and quite another to pay for it afterwards. C.O.D. is the best motto, after all.

Hamilton Times: "It seems to hurt the Hamilton Spectator every time it thinks of Hon. Mr. Ross."

We should imagine that, if he has any conscience left, the Hon. G. W. must feel a little hurt himself if he ever gets time to think things over.

The Shamrock, it seems, did better in yesterday's race because she was behind Reliance. But the trouble is she was too far behind.

• • •

English newspapers wonder what Mr. Bourassa means when he talks of Lord Minto being a tool of Chamberlain's. The retort discourteous, which would explain the matter, could be thus expressed: "Bourassa is a fool of Laurier's."

A PARALLEL CASE.

(Montreal Gazette.)

After forty years of fighting, the expenditure of about $200,000,000 and the cost of many lives, the Dutch have finally settled the rebellion against their authority in Achin. From these facts the United States authorities should be able to figure out pretty closely the cost of empire in the Philippines. The ships Dewey smashed in Manilla Bay will come high.

Police Magistrate Flint writes to The Intelligencer:

> My dear sir,—If the courteous gentleman who desires information as to convictions under the License Act, will do me the favor to call upon me, I shall be glad to explain the provisions of the Act to him, as I have so frequently done through the press."

The Intelligencer was quite sure that the Police Magistrate would be willing, and even anxious, to give the information asked for. "A Law-Abiding Citizen" can now, by calling on Mr. Flint, obtain all the information desires.

Col. Ponton to-day showed us his commemorative medal, which was struck and presented to all representatives to the late Congress of Chambers of Commerce. It is a bronze medal, very handsome, and will naturally be highly prized by the recipients.

• • •

Speaking of the Congress recalls to mind the fact that we, at the time, missed one splendid point made by Col. Ponton, to which The Montreal Star made the following editorial reference:

> "Colonel Ponton, of Belleville, made a hit when he remarked that the distinction made by some of the speakers between the Canadian delegates and the delegates from the United Kingdom was unfair. There was no reason why the term "British" should be reserved for the delegates from the Old Country. All the delegates were equally British. The rebuke was administered nicely, and met with the uproarious favor of the Congress."

SAILED BY FOREIGNERS.

We Are Painting

AND

Kalsomining all the Belleville schools, making the schools artistic for school opening We have done and are doing the same in many of the country schools.

We keep from ten to twenty painters and paper hangers and decorators busy all the time—this branch growing very rapidly with us and there are reasons for the remarkable growth of this branch and the reasons are these—

We do our work Promptly,
We use good materials,
We have excellent workmen
We charge modest price,
We aim to and do please
our customers,—

Consequently we are doing the business.

Then, too, we have such a mammoth stock of excellent Wall Paper, everything that heart could desire is shown in our Wall Paper assortment— a stock never less than fifty thousand rolls and a business to keep turning over the stock, so there is no old papers— no cleaner or more artistic stock of Wall Papers can be found in Canada than right here in this store.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality. Handsome illustrated publications sent free on application to J. D. nega an' report it to the right parties. I can't afford the trip."

Abner laughed out at this and then forced a serious look on his face. "That's what you rallly ort to do, Brother Dole," he said. "Them Cæsars over thar ud appreciate it."

Then Mrs. Bishop came out to shake hands with the preacher and invited him to go to his room to wash his face and hands. As the tall man followed his hostess away Abner winked slyly at Pole and laughed under his long, scrawny hand.

"Uncle Ab, you ort to be killed," smiled Pole. "You've been settin' heer the last half hour pokin' fun at that feller, an' you know it. Well, I'm goin' on home. Sally's a-goin' to fry some o' this truck fer me, an' I'm as hungry as a bear."

A few minutes after he had gone Dole came out of his room and sat down in his chair again. "That seems to be a sorter bright young man," he remarked.

"As bright as a new dollar," returned Abner in a tone of warm admiration. "Did you notice that big, wedge shaped head o' his'n? It's plumb full o' brains. One day a feller come down to Filmore's store. He made a business o' feelin' o' heads an' writin out charts at 25 cents apiece. He didn't waste much time on the rest o' the scabs he examined, but when he got to Pole's noggin he talked fer a good hour. I never heerd the like. He said ef his talents had been properly directed Pole ud 'a' made a big public man. He said he hadn't run across sech a head in a month o' Sundays. He was right, you bet, an' every one o' the seven brats Pole's got is jest as peert as he is. They are a-growin' up in idleness an' rags too. I wisht I could meet some o' them durn big Yankees that are a-sendin' the'r money down heer an' buildin' fine schools to educate niggers an' neglectin' the'r own race beca'se it fit agin' 'em. You cayn't hardly beat larnin' into a nigger's head, an' it ud be only common sense to spend money whar it ud do the most good. I ain't got nothin' agin' a nigger bein' larnt to read an' write, but I cayn't stemach the'r bein' forced ahead o' deservin' white folks sooner 'n the Lord counted on. Them kind o' Yankees is the same sort that makes pets o' dogs an' pampers 'em up when pore white children is in need of food an' affection."

"Pole looks like he had natural capacity," said Dole. He was fond of conversing with Abner on any topic except that of religious matters.

"He'd make a bang up detective," laughed Abner. "One day I was at Filmore's store. Neil sometimes, when he's rushed, gits Pole to clerk fer 'im, beca'se he's quick at figures. It happened that Pole had the store to 'imse'f one day when Neil had gone off to cut down a bee tree with a passle o' neighbors, an' a triflin' feller come in an' begun to nose about. An' when Pole's back was turned to weigh up some cotton in the seed he stole a pocketbook out o' the showcase. I reckon Pole didn't like his looks much nohow, fer as soon as the skunk had gone he begun to look about to see ef he'd tuck anything. All at once he missed the pocketbook an' told Neil that night that he was mighty nigh shore the feller lifted it, but he couldn't rallly swear to it. About a week after that he seed the same feller comin' down the road headed fer the store on his gray mule. Me an' Neil was both thar, an' Pole hustled us in the back room an' told us to stay thar. He said he was a-goin' to find out ef the feller stold the book. Neil was afeerd of a row an' tried to prevent 'im, but he jest shoved us back an' shet the door on us. Neil got 'im a crack in the partition, an' I found me a knothole.

"The feller hitched an' come in an' said howdy do an' started to take a cheer nigh the door, but Pole stopped 'im.

"'Come heer to the showcase,' ses he. 'I want to show you some'n'.' The feller went, an' I seed Pole yank out the box 'at had the rest o' the pocketbooks in it. 'Look y' heer,' Pole said in a loud, steady voice—you could 'a' heerd 'im clean to the creek—'look y' heer. The regular price o' these books is fifty cents; that's what we sell 'em fer; but you've got to run yore hand down in yore pocket an' give me a dollar fer one quicker'n you ever made a trade in yore life.'

"'What do you mean?' the feller said.

"'I mean exactly what I said, an' you are a-losin' time,' said Pole, talkin' louder an' louder. 'The price is fifty cents; but you got to gi' me a dollar fer one. Haul 'er out, my friend; haul 'er out! It'll be the cheapest thing you ever bought in yore life.'

"The feller was as white as a sheet. He gulped two or three times 'fore he spoke; then he said: 'I know what you think. You think I took one t'other day when I was lookin' in the showcase, but you are mistaken.'

"'I never said a word about you takin' one,' Pole yelled at 'im, 'but you'd better yank out that dollar an' buy one. You need it.'

"The feller did it. I heerd the money clink as he laid it on the glass, an' I knowed he was convicted.

"'They are only wuth 50 cents,' he said kinder faintlike.

"'You're a liar,' Pole yelled at 'im, 'fer you've jest paid a dollar fer one on yore own account. Now I'll jest give you two minutes to straddle that mule. Ef you don't, I'll take you to the sheriff myself, you thief.'

"'I've always done my tradin' heer,' said the feller, thinkin' that 'd sorter pacify Pole, but he said: 'Yes, an' yore stealin', too, I reckon; you black livered jailbird. Git out, git out!'

"Me an' Neil come in when the feller 'd gone, but Pole was actually too mad to speak. 'He got off too durned light,' he said after awhile. 'I could 'a' sold 'im a big bill o' goods at 100 per cent profit, fer he had plenty o' money. Now he's ridin' off laughin' at me.'"

CHAPTER X.

NEIL FILMORE'S store was about half a mile from Bishop's house, at the crossing of the Darley road and another leading into east Tennessee. Alan had gone down there one day to engage white labor to work in his growing cotton, negroes being scarce owing to the tendency of that race to flock into the towns. With the aid of Pole Baker, who was clerking that day for Filmore, he soon employed the men he wanted and started to walk back home. On the way he was overtaken by his uncle, who was returning from Darley in his wagon.

"Hold on, thar!" the old man called out. "Ef you are a-goin' home, I'll rest yore legs."

Alan smiled as he climbed up into the seat by the old man.

"I shall certainly appreciate it," he said. "I'm tired out today."

"I sorter thought you looked flabbergasted," returned Abner as he swung his whip over the backs of his sleek horses. "Well, I reckon I could afford to give you a ride. I hauled that cuss Dole three miles goin' t'other way. He had the cheek to yell at me from Habbersham's ginhouse an' axed me ef I'd haul 'im. Then he kept me waitin' till he'd helt prayer an' read to the family."

"You don't seem to like him," said Alan. "I've noticed that for some time."

"I reckon I don't to any great extent," said Abner, clucking to his tired horses, "but it ain't raily to my credit. A feller's wrong som'er's, Alan, that allows hisse'f to hate anything the Lord ever made. I've struggled agin that proposition fer twenty-five yeer. All this talk about the devil makin' the bad an' the Lord the good is talk through a hat. Bad things was made 'fore the devil ever jumped from his high estate, ur he'd never preferred a fork to a harp. I've tuck notice, too, that the wust things I ever seed was sometimes at the root o' the best. Manure is a bad thing, but a cake of it will produce a daisy bigger 'n any in the field. Dole makes me gag sometimes, but as narrer as he is twixt the eyes he may do some good. I reckon that hell fire sermon he gave us last August made some o' the crowd sweat out a little o' the'r meanness. I'd 'a' been more merciful on sech a hot day though. He mought 'a' reserved that harangue fer some cold day in December when the stove flues wouldn't work. Ef I'd 'a' been a-goin' to tell about future torment that hot day, I'd 'a' said that every lost soul was made to set on a cake o' ice in a windy spot through all eternity, an' I'd 'a' started out by singin' 'On Greenland's Icy Mountain.' But that ain't what I axed you to git in my wagon fer."

"You didn't intend to try to convert me, then?"

"No, I didn't, fer you are jest my sort of a Christian—better'n me, a sight, fer you don't shoot off yore bazoo on one side or t'other, an' that's the habit I'm tryin' to quit. Ef I could hold in when Dole gits to spoutin', I'd be a better man. I think I'll do better now. I've got a tenpenny nail in my pocket, an' whenever he starts in I'm goin' to bite it an' keep my holt on it till he stops. Yes, you are jest my sort of a Christian. You believe in breathin' fresh air into yore windpipe, thankin' God with a clear eye an' a good muscle an' takin' what he gives you an' axin' 'im to pass more ef it's handy. You know the Lord has sent you a invite to his table, an' you believe in eatin' an' drinkin' an' makin' merry, jest like you'd have a body do that was stoppin' over night with you. Yes, I wanted to say some'n' else to you. As I got to the Widder Snowden's house, a mile this side o' Darley, she came out an' axed me ef I'd object to deliverin' a couple o' smoke cured hams to a feller in town that had ordered 'em. Of course that's what a old bach like me's heer fer, so I let 'er fling 'em in the back end."

"Ef you are a-goin' home, I'll rest yore legs."

The speaker paused and smiled knowingly, and Alan noticed that he slowed his horses up by drawing firmly on the reins as if he feared that their arrival at the farmhouse might interrupt what he had to say.

"Well," said Alan, "you delivered the hams?"

"Yes." Abner was looking straight ahead of him. "They was fer Colonel Seth Barclay. I driv' up to the side gate, after I'd helloed in front till I was hoarse, an' who do you reckon come trippin' out o' the dinin' room? It was her. Ef you hain't never ketched 'er off'n her guard round the house, you've missed a treat. Durned ef I don't like 'er better without a hat on than with all the fluffy flamdoodle that gals put on when they go out. She was as neat as a new pin, an' seemed powerful glad to see me. That made me bless the Widder Snowden fer sendin' me thar. She said the cook was off som'er's, an' that old nigger Ned, the stableman, was in the garden patch behind the house, so she was thar by 'erse'f. She actually looked like she wanted to tote in the hams 'erse'f ruther'n bother me, but you bet my old bones hopped off'n this seat quicker'n you could say Jack Robinson with yore mouth open.

"I was afeerd my team wouldn't stand, fer fellers was a-scootin' by on bicycles, but I tuck the hams to the back porch an' put 'em on a shelf out'n re'ch o' the dogs. Then I went back to my wagon. She follered me to the fence, an' I noticed that some'n' was wrong with 'er. She looked so funny an' droopy about the mouth, an' kept a-talkin' like she was afeerd I'd fly off. She axed all about Adele an' how she was a-makin' out down in Atlanta, an' said she'd heerd that Sis was mighty popular with the young men, an' from that she axed about my craps an' the meetin' goin' on at Big Bethel. Finally she got right white about the mouth an' said kinder shaky that she was afeerd you was mad about some'n' her pa'd said about you, an' I never seed a woman as nigh cryin' as she was without doin' of it.

"I told 'er I was at the fust of it, but I'd noticed how worried you've looked heer of late, an' so I told 'er I'd been afeerd some'n' had come betwixt you two. Then she put her head down on the top rail o' the fence an' helt it thar fer a good minute. After awhile she looked up an' told me all about it an' ended by axin' me ef I thought she was to blame in the matter. I told 'er no, but her old skunk of a daddy had acted sech a fool that I couldn't hold in. I reckon I told 'er jest about what I thought o' 'im, an' the more I raked up agin 'im the better she seemed pleased. I tried to pin 'er down to what she'd be willin' to do in a pinch ef 'er pa continued to hold out agin you, but she was too sharp to commit 'erse'f. It jest looked like she wanted to make up with you an' didn't want no row nuther."

The horses stopped to drink at a clear stream of water which ran across the road on a bed of brown pebbles. The bridles were too tight to allow them to lower their heads, so Alan went out on the heavy tongue between the pair and unfastened the reins. When he had regained his seat, he told the old man in detail all that had happened at the dance at the hotel, ending with the advice he had received from Rayburn Miller.

"I don't know about that," Abner said. "Maybe Miller could call a halt like that an' go on like nothin' had happened. I don't say he could nur couldn't; but it's fool advice. You mought miss it, an' regret it to yore dyin' day."

Alan looked at him in some surprise. He had hardly expected just that stand on the part of a confirmed old bachelor like his uncle. The old man's glance swept dreamily over the green fields on either side of the road across which the red rays of the setting sun were streaming. Then he took a deep breath and lowered the reins till they rested on the backs of the horses.

"My boy," he began, "I'm a good mind to tell you some'n' that I hain't mentioned fer mighty nigh forty yeer. I don't believe anything but my intrust in that town gal an' you would make me bring it up. Huh! Ray Miller says you kin pass 'er over jest as ef you'd never seed 'er, does he? An' go on an' pick an' choose agin. Huh! I wasn't as old as you are by five yeer when the one I'm talkin' about passed away, jest a week after me an' her'd come to a understandin'. I've seed women, women, women, sence I seed 'er corpse that day amongst all that pile o' wild flowers that old an' young fetched from the woods whar me an' 'er used to walk, but ef I live to be as old as that thar hill I'll never forget my feelin'. I kin see 'er right now as plain as I did then, an' sometimes my heart aches as bad. I reckon you know now why I never got married. Folks has poked a lots o' fun at me, an' I tuck it as it was intended, but a lots o' times what they said made me suffer simply awful. They've picked out this un an' that un, from spring chickins to hags o' all ages, shapes an' sizes, but the very thought o' givin' anybody her place made me sick. Then

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves ar unstrung and the whole body give up to wretchedness, when the min is filled with gloom and dismal for bodings, the result of derangement o the digestive organs, sleeplessnes comes to add to the distress. If onl the subject could sleep, there wou be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetab Pills will not only induce sleep, b will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restor to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, th harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. Dav Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "Fo the benefit of others I wish to say few words about Northrup & Lyman Vegetable Discovery. About a ye ago I took a very severe cough, ha a virulent sore on my lips, was be with dyspepsia, constipation and ge eral debility. I tried almost eve conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all t no purpose. I had often thought trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetab Discovery, so I got a bottle and whe I had used about one-half, the so showed evident signs of healing. B the time that bottle was done, it ha about disappeared and my genera health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and ha used quinine and lemon juice with ver little effect. But since using 3 bo tles of the Vegetable Discovery, th biliousness is entirely gone and m general health is excellent. I am years old. Parties using it shoul continue it for some time after the think they are cured. It is by fa the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thun der and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in min that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil ha nothing in common with the impure deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure an really efficacious—relieving pain an lameness, stiffness of the joints an muscles, and sores or hurts, beside being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is fa greater than the pleasure it gives.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so certainly obstructs th perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, tural.

KINGS ARE COMMON.

In the Creek Country Alone There Are Twenty-five.

Kings are very common in the Indian Territory. In fact, they are so common that no attention is paid to them, and their movements excite no comment whatever. In the Creek country alone there are twenty-five real live kings. Nero Drew is a fair sample of them. Each one has a kingdom to look after, and it keeps him busy doing it.

The title does not descend from father to son, as it does in the effete European monarchies. The Indians elect their own kings. The tenure of office is two years. However, whenever an Indian is chosen king and serves his people well he is usually re-elected without opposition. Some of the old kings in the Creek Nation have been at the head of their kingdoms for forty years or more. Nero Drew has been a king for thirty-six years.

The Creek Nation is dividen into twenty-five towns, which is about the same as a township in the states. Each town has a king, whose duty it is to look after the Indians of his town. He has no power to spend their money or to command them to do anything. His powers are somewhat paternal. He looks after the sick and sees that they have medical attention; he cares for the poor and decrepit. When any of his subjects get into trouble he gives them fatherly advice and frequently appeals to the federal authorities to show them mercy. He advises with his subjects on all matters pertaining to their interests. In truth, he is their worldly adviser; sometimes he is their spiritual adviser also, for occasionally the Indians elect a preacher as king.

Indian kings are not very well compensated. They get no salary. It is a labor of love with them. The only possible show they have of getting any money out of the office is through boodling at elections. In this respect the Indians are not behind the times. They boodle the same as other people. Elections sometimes come high to the candidates. Town kings are usually quite influential among the people of their kingdom, and they command a fairly good price for their influence at elections. Most of them are full blood Indians. Some, however, are mixed bloods. —Kansas City Journal.

TIMELY TOPICS

Many people are complaining about the city water. Some say there's a hole in the intake pipe, others say an intake pipe without a hole in it would be a flat failure. Whatever the cause of the trouble is, it is a vexed question just now, and it would be well if the question, and the water, too, could be settled.

Anyhow, the challenger made a gallant showing yesterday. Sir Thomas has easily the second best yacht in the world. Let's take what consolation we can out of that.

* * *

Jockeying at the start of a yacht race which is to say manoeuvering for advantages of position, is vehemently attacked in the current Harper's Weekly by Mr. William Everett Hicks as fertile in producing bad blood and otherwise contrary to the best interests of the sport. The idea seems to be that an attempt to put an opponent in the lurch is unsportsmanlike, and that, anyway, an advantage gained before the start is unfair. Mr. Hicks advocates the assignment of places by lot, as in other sports. Before the article was printed it was submitted to Sir Thomas Lipton, who gave his views on the subject in a brief and pointed manner. The manoeuvering at the start, Sir Thomas asserts, if fairly conducted, is one of the most spirited tests of good seamanship; and he adds that in yacht racing good seamanship is quite as much to be desired and sought for as a fast craft.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS WROTE.

A Letter to a Lady Contemplating a Trip to the Other Side.

An American lady who recently contemplated a trip through Europe thought of including Germany in her itinerary and with this object in view wrote to a German cousin suggesting that in the event of her favorable decision she would like to make the acquaintance of himself and his family.

The reply, written by one of the members of the household whose knowledge of English, although probably more extensive than that of the other members, was nevertheless very much limited by the German-American dictionary, read as follows:

We received your kind letter from the fifteenth of this month, and ordered by my Grandfather Joseph, who had a great joy of it, immediately I take the pen to answer your writing. It is not yet a years ago before I began to learn the English and you can imagine how willingly I catch the opportunity to correspond with you which you offer me so amiably. That we have received your writing so late and therefore also answer late to you is not my debt (schuld) but I hope you will reach still this letter in New York.

Here is terribly hot till thirty degrees in the sun. We make every day in the mornings great excursions into the mountains and amuse ourselves very well. Every day we receive visits from our town which is in the immediatest neighborhood from here. This year we had great projects, we would drive in a bathing place on the Nord-Seacoast. My eldest brother had formerly the decision to go to Paris but he changed his intention and he stays by home. I and my younger brother who passed now his examinations with decorations make from here a journey up the Rhine perhaps and return again to here. That would be a great joy if we could meet you in a little nest on the beautiful shores of the Rhine so quite accidental like. We all were much raptured if you would come and visit our native country. With this expectation and in the hopes that you will receive right my letter in New York, I remain with much regards, yours affectionately cousin, KARL.

—New York Times.

The Only Way.

"I see by the papers," remarked Mrs. Waggles, "that Pike county is so overrun with rattlesnakes that a bounty of a quarter of a dollar is paid for each skin."

"That looks like a rather dangerous way of making money," commented her husband.

"But there must be some safe way of getting the skins."

"Yes; there is, my dear."

"How's that?"

"Wait until the snake sheds them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Fatal Words.

McJigger—Poor fellow! He's terribly cut up because Miss Oldenritch rejected him.

Thingumbob—Rejected him! I thought she'd jump at a proposal.

McJigger—She was going to, but first she asked him if he would love her when she was old, and he absent mindedly replied, "I do."—Brooklyn Life.

Thespian Recollections.

"You do not take much interest in baseball?"

"No," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "I never could understand why it should be so hard to throw a ball straight when it is so easy to send an egg straight to the mark."—Washington Star.

Good Business Sense.

"Is Simpson, the tombstone maker, a good business man?"

"Good! I should say he is! Why, that man's business foresight is simply wonderful. He has just started a quick lunch restaurant by way of extending his operations." — Baltimore News.

Absolutely Reliable.

"I like an employee that I can rely on."

"Is Jones that kind of a man?"

"Well, I should say so. Why, I can rely on his getting the best of me every time he has an opportunity."—Chicago Post.

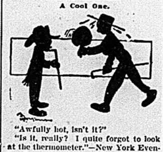
Scorcher.

He—Spindthrift's got himself in hot water.

She—Playing with fire again?

He—Yes; two of his flames met last night.—Woman's Home Companion.

A Cool One.



"Awfully hot, isn't it?"

"Is it, really? I quite forgot to look at the thermometer."—New York Evening Journal.

Quite Correct.

"He says he has a weak heart."

"Well, he's right about it; at least it's brittle if it isn't weak. Why, his heart is broken by three or four girls every summer."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Fortunate Author.

"I hear your new book has gone into a second edition?"

"Yes. The first one was limited, an' I wuz jest rich enough to buy it up."—Atlanta Constitution.

Very Similar.

"That bathing suit is quite a creation, isn't it?"

"Well, it's nearly a creation—made out of almost nothing."—Puck.

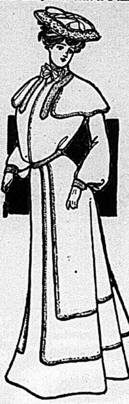
SUMMER FROCKS.

CLEVER IDEAS IN SMART WASHING AND GENERAL UTILITY GOWNS.

The New and the Old In Fashions. Frilly and Flouncy May Be the Chic Woman, but Not Untidily Floppy. Crash and Canvas Costumes.

Summer frocks, already exploited in every imaginable phase, are most alluring. Perhaps we think this every time a change of season comes round with its accompanying change of raiment. Yet there is certainly more than novelty in the attractiveness of our present styles.

By a strange contrariety at the same time that we profess to be searching for the new we are resuscitating the old. Everywhere there is a thirst for the antique. In dress it is called a feeling for the "quaint" or "picturesque."



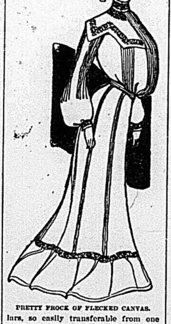
SMART CRASH COSTUME.

Although the full skirts, full sleeves and loose boleros give the idea of untidy floppiness nothing is further from the aim and being of fashion as properly understood. Skirts, however full, must be most carefully fitted round the hips, the upper part of the shoulders and chest must be free from fussy details which interfere with the outlines, and the waist must be trim and neat.

This idea of trim smartness is more generally realized in the sporting, outing and utility frocks, such as the old, and now new, favorites in linen and crash.

Simple as it is, the model of the first cut has a distinct chic. Both the coat and the skirt are in natural colored crash, and the linen piping may be of any color preferred. In very pretty taste, too, is the flecked canvas frock of the second cut, which is trimmed with lace insertion.

Washing gowns are also being cleverly made up to depend for ornament mostly upon the lace shoulder cape collars, so easily transferable from one gown to another, a fact which renders them most desirable.



PRETTY FROCK OF FLECKED CANVAS.

Many a so called washing gown is just a charming bit of deception. As likely as not it will no more wash than a satin will turn.

The mercerized washing stuffs are lovely, and their name is legion.

AMY VARNUM.

Strawberry Pudding Sauce.

One large tablespoonful butter beaten to a cream. Add gradually a cup and a half of powdered sugar and the beaten white of an egg. Beat till very light, and just before serving add a pint mashed strawberries.

The test of a heating system is the warmth of the halls in the early morning. A hot water system will keep a comfortable, even temperature all over the house day and night. Getting-up time finds perfect comfort all over the house. The is the highest development of hot water heating. Other makers come as near as they can or dare to the Oxford idea. That is the standard they try to reach. If you prefer the Oxford idea, insist that you get it in the original not the imitation. This illustration shows the utility of the grate construction. The ash base front is easily removed, repairs made to grate and returned to its place, without the assistance of a specialist.

TROUBLE FOR EUROPE.

Fateful Events Predicted For England, Germany and France.

"Twenty-five years ago," says a noted Chicago astrologist, "I predicted that after the death of a great statesman with nine letters in his name (which indicates Gladstone) there would be a war in Africa, sensational in its features and direful in its results. I now foresee that the days of the present British empire are numbered; that her power is passing away and that her glory will be dimmed. The empire will become dismembered, and the United Kingdom will be for a time at the mercy of the nations which so long have hated and feared her. When the great struggle comes England at first will be victorious, but in the end will be defeated and sink very low in the scale of nations. While going down, however, and despairing she will deliver India and possibly other possessions to the United States, and then America will take England into partnership, and the two great English speaking nations will thereafter march on together, dominating the world, and England will once more regain her prestige."

The same astrologist predicts that the German empire is liable to get into trouble before long, and before the trouble ends France will regain Alsace and Lorraine. Furthermore, Emperor William will not live very long. But the Gallic cock should subdue its anticipatory crowing, for near troubles are also stored away in the stars for that emotional land. They are also prefigured in the Bible, says the astrologist, and the evil influence that overhangs her destiny is the Napoleonite, Prince Louis, now commanding as an officer in the Russian army. Through Muscovite influence, intrigues and aid he will overthrow the French republic and re-establish the empire of his Corsican ancestor. But his reign will not be a long one. "He will lead Europe into a hornets' nest, but he himself will be stung to death. He is 'the man on horseback' that imperialists are looking for, since the so called rightful heir, Prince Victor, has got out of the way. But he will get a fateful fall. These events are not far off."—Successful American.

Arsenic and Gold.

By a singular change of circumstances the gold miners of Hastings county, Ont., who for years were baffled in trying to extract the precious metal from its matrix by the presence of arsenic in the ore, have lately found the arsenic to be more profitable than the gold. This is due at once to the great purity of the Canadian arsenic and to the rapid exhaustion of the arsenic deposits of England and Germany. At the same time the introduction of a successful method of separating the gold increases the profit of working the Canadian deposits, because every ton of the arsenical ore carries from $4 to $60 worth of gold.

Labouchere on Rosebery.

Lord Rosebery's speeches always remind me of the description given by Prince Bismarck of a certain Prussian statesman: "At first he would have an opinion, then he weakened it by self contradiction, then again an objection to the contradiction occurred to him, until at last nothing remained. He was a clever speaker, but not inclined to action; indeed, he resembled an India rubber ball, which hops, hops and hops, but more feebly every time, until it at last comes to a full stop."—London Truth.

Disabling Military Balloons.

Experiments to disable a balloon in the air by rifle or field gun fire have been carried out by the Austrian army. A balloon 7,000 feet high was held at anchor, and the gunners, kept ignorant of the range, were told to disable it. Twenty-two shots were fired before the approximate range was found, and it was only at the sixty-fourth round that the balloon was hit, and that slightly, but the small rupture of the gas bag made it slowly descend.—London Globe.

Bombay Roads.

The streets of Bombay are excellent, as are generally the main roads throughout India. They are thoroughly macadamized or metaled and made smooth by heavy rollers.

An Odd Chandelier.

A chandelier made of human bones adorns the ceiling of a church in Seidlitz, Bohemia.

Paper Mills.

The earliest European paper mills were located at Fairiano, in Italy, in 1150. The Arabs first brought the secret of paper making to Europe, they themselves having learned it from Chinese prisoners of war.

Growth of Hair.

Like most vegetation the hair grows better in light than in darkness because of the stimulating effect of light and sunshine. It has often been noticed in the case of men who sit in offices with one side always turned toward the light that the mustache or beard of that side grows longer than on the other.

One of the First.

"This is a petrified man," said Mrs. Fosdick, who was showing her husband the treasures of the museum.

"His is the original marble heart, I suppose," was Fosdick's comment.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

Broke Into Grit Club Rooms.

Some time during Monday night an entrance was effected into the Liberal Association rooms in the Ashley Block, also into Mr. James Chisholm's apartment in the same flat. Nothing appears to have been stolen. The party or parties amused themselves by burning some paper, leaving the ashes upon the floor. The entrance was gained by climbing upon a flat room in rear of the premises. It is supposed to be the work of boys.

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. CONCERT AND LECTURE ON "SCIENTIFIC PALMISTRY."

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT IN THE CITY HALL LAST EVENING.

Considering the threatening weather, there was a very good audience at the City Hall last night to hear the lecture and concert given by Prof. O'Brien, his talented wife and others. The Professor gave a defence of palmistry, in which he pointed out that it must not be confounded with vulgar fortune telling. Palmistry, he said, was a science, which had been in existence 4,400 years before the Christian era. The lecture proper was highly interesting, the lecturer pointing out, from charts, the different types of hands and their characteristics, as well as the various lines, which, he said, being broken or unbroken, invariably showed the character and tendency towards health or disease.

For the concert, Mrs. Campbell was accompanist, and also contributed a tasteful piano solo. Mr. Robert Bruce Logan, a young fellow with a really fine bass voice, sang "The Sentinel Asleep" and the "Armorer's Song," from "Robin Hood," in a manner which stamped him as a good singer among good singers. Mr. Logan deserved the vociferous encores he received. Madame Bonvini O'Brien, prima donna soprano, certainly exceeded all expectations. She sang Irish, Italian, Scotch and English songs, the cavatina, "Una Voce," from the "Barber of Seville," being undoubtedly the best number, as well as, of course, the most difficult. The Madame's technique is superb, her voice liquid and powerful, her method at once artistic and delightful, while her perfect naturalness and pleasing stage presence speedily makes her a favorite. Local musicians who missed hearing Madame Bonvini missed a rare treat.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The first day's races at Guelph had as entries some of the horses which recently raced here. Glancing over the summary one is struck by a few interesting facts. For instance, Jubilee, which won in the 30 class here, best time 2.29¼, did no better than 2 35 in Guelph. The bay gelding Jim Wilson, which won the free-for-all here, best time 2 21¾, was second in a race in Guelph in which the best time made was 2 30. The half-mile run in Guelph was won by the bay stallion Prince Arthur, best time 55 seconds. Among the field were Lamontagne, Rotha and Glesseg. In this city Lament gne won a half-mile heat in 51½, while Glesseg ran the distance in 50½. Funny, isn't it? Either the Belleville track must be pretty fast or the Guelph track slow.

The Canadian cricketers got a bad licking in Toronto, the Yankees beating them by 140 runs. None of the Canucks played up to form, and seemed to suffer from stage fright or bad luck.

The Shamrock Third was nearly smashed in a hurricane yesterday afternoon, and really it appears—but there, never mind.

Briggs, Toronto's best pitcher, has won 13 straight games. Had he been in form early in the season the club might have stood higher in the race.

BASEBALL

Frankford Defeated Marmora.

A Frankford correspondent writes: A good exhibition of baseball was played here on Wednesday forenoon when Marmora went down to defeat at the hands of the locals. McWilliams and Currie pitched for the visitors, and the latter was very effective, while Latta and Herman were on the rubber for the locals, and both pitched fine ball. The features of the game were a triple play by Fraser from centre, a double by Brett unassisted, and a double by Currie. J. Lowery was behind the bat for the locals and played as good a game as usual. Fraser and Herman at centre caught everything that came their way. An overthrow by Glass was the only bad error which was accountable for three runs for the visitors. The fielding of both teams was first-class.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R
Frankford	5	4	2	0	0	0	3	0	x—	14
Marmora	0	0	3	2	0	0	0	3	0—	8

A NICE POINT IN LAW.

COUNTY ATTORNEY TAKES STEPS TO CHANGE INDICTMENT IN A LIQUOR CASE.

A liquor case, causing considerable interest, was in progress this afternoon before Police Magistrate Flint. Mr. Brown, proprietor of the Albion Hotel, was charged with selling liquor during the prohibited hours of Saturday evening and Monday morning. Upon this charge, through his solicitor, Mr. McMahon, the accused pleaded guilty and the usual fine and costs for a first offence was about to be imposed when the County Attorney appeared upon the scene. He desired to change the indictment to that of a second offence, which means a much heavier penalty. Objection was taken by Mr. McMahon on the grounds that the original charge did not specify a second offence, which should have been done. The case was allowed to stand, and the charge has since been amended, through the Inspector, so as to cover the County Attorney's contention. Yesterday, according to the rules of evidence, Brown was asked by the Magistrate if he had been previously convicted, and, on the advice of his solicitor, refused to answer. The contention of Mr. McMahon is that his client pleaded guilty to the offence with which he was charged and that it could not be afterwards amended. The case is one in which there appears to be considerable law involved.

Canadian Soldiers Used Foot Elm

IN THE LATE SOUTH AFRICAN CAMPAIGN—THEY SPEAK OF IT IN THE HIGHEST TERMS FOR PREVENTING BLISTERING AND CHAFING OF THE FEET.

Through the courtesy of Messrs. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., proprietors of "Foot Elm," 1,000 boxes of this much-prized remedy for the feet went to South Africa with the 1st Canadian Contingent.

Here is how one or two of those who went through the campaign speak of it.

A. MacGregor, Col.-Sergt., 48th Highlanders, Toronto, writes: "The Foot Elm supplied us was appreciated by everyone who used it, as it prevented chafing, eased and rested the feet, and robbed marching of a great deal of misery."

Arch. MacColl, "C" Co., R. C. R., says: "As I had good feet I seldom had occasion to use Foot Elm, but I have found that it allays the burning sensation caused by ill-fitting boots, and accelerates the healing of any raw spots on one's feet."

Foot Elm is 25 cents a box of 18 powders and may be obtained at any drug store.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker ; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts ; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens ; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

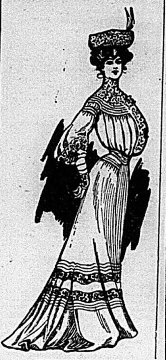
McINTOSH BROS.

MUSLIN AND LACE GOWNS.

Pale Green Muslin Is Very Smart. Elaborate Styles.

Muslin and lace gowns really deserve a page to themselves. A pale green muslin has bunches of orange pomegranates on it and is a complete mass of tuckings, shirrings, etc. A very charming addition is a pelerine of hand worked lawn bordered by green silk fringe. The waist of this frock is enriched by a band of orange panne, which, although it does not sound like a very summery fabric, runs taffeta a close second in the matter of trimmings.



WHITE MULL GOWN.

A very smart gown seen at the races recently was of Limerick lace over an accordion plaited white chiffon underdress, the lace held across with ropes of chenille and tiny jet and paste buckles. The hat intended to go with this was of pale green straw. For trimming it had a single mauve ostrich feather.

Some very smart girls are appearing in fine white silk muslin or mousseline de sole made with a big fichu and a much beflounced skirt. After all there are not many ways of making up muslin. To look well it must be made rather fussily. Severe lines are distinctly out of place.

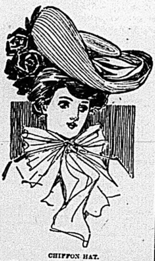
Soft, semitransparent fabrics are ideal for summer and evening gowns, and a most charming effect is obtained by using two or three harmonious colors in tulle or chiffon over a foundation of pale satin. A soft pink satin, first veiled with a pinkish gray chiffon and again with a silvery gray, gives a misty pastel effect which is both dainty and uncommon.

A dainty gown of sheer white mull trimmed with lace is shown in the illustration. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Smart and Simple Gowns—Dainty Hand Painted Muslins.

A very smart yet simple French frock is in a periwinkle blue cloth edged with a cream lace application outlined with black and white chenille braid. This is made in the form of a tunic fastening with early Victorian buttons and finished with a black panne belt, with straps of embroidery decorating the full, rather round skirt, which barely touches the ground all around.



CHIFFON HAT.

In direct contrast to a costume of this sort there are some glorious hand painted muslins on a silky ground. Pompadour designs are of course the favorites, and their beauty is much enhanced by the addition of little coats, either in very fine old fashioned lawn or some real lace. The skirts in such cases are accordion plaited or finely gauged, and most of them are made with a flounce starting below the knees to give the necessary fullness.

The muslins this year are works of art, consisting of masses of tuckings, shirrings, laces and even fine embroidery.

The hat of white, coarse straw trimmed with a single feather is rich, simple and economical, for it may be worn with many gowns.

The hat in the picture is of pale pink chiffon trimmed with roses of a darker shade. JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE LICENSED BARBER.

Under a cool electric fan
The licensed barber stands;
A conversational man is he,
With lather on his hands,
And the muscles of his wagging jaw
Are strong as iron bands.

He was examined yesterday
By an examining board;
A bunch of wise commissioners
His think tank had explored,
And they had found it, seemingly,
Sufficiently well stored.

These questions they had handed him:
"What line of talk would you Employ in shaving business men?"
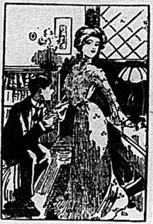
Also, "What would you do
In case a man refused to talk
And rudely snapped, 'Get through!'"

"How many times should you inquire
Of each man whom you shave,
'How do you like this weather, sir?'
And as you deftly lave
His raw, scraped face, do you discuss
The trust dilemma grave?"

These queries and a thousand more
The barber answered right,
And, though his razor grieve you sore,
He's now a licensed knight.
His talk is smooth; as for his work,
That matters not a mite!
—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Gentle Hint.



Miss Sprightly — Er—perhaps we'd better go over that scene again, Mr. Soaper. I—er—really forgot for the moment that we were—er—only rehearsing.

Told Out of School.

The infant terrible is always with us and in making trouble runs a close race with the wagging tongue of scandal. Accompanied by her young hopeful, a woman was calling on a friend who happened to live in one of a row of houses of exactly the same appearance.

"The great objection to living in a row of houses," remarked the hostess, "is the liability of making a mistake. Do you ever have any difficulty, my dear?"

"Oh, no," replied the little fiend, breaking in unexpectedly. "Ma says she can always tell your house by the dirty windows."—New York Times.

Entitled to Respect.

"Who's de ole guy w'at jist went by?" asked the telegraph messenger.

"De ole guy wid de dinky whiskers?" replied the office boy. "Aw, he's de owner of de paper."

"An' who's de guy wid 'im?"

"'Sh! Don't git gay. He ain't no guy. Dat's de sportin' editor."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Her Idea of Identification.

"That bank clerk wouldn't give me the money. He said I'd have to identify myself."

"Did you?"

"I couldn't. None of my linen is marked except my handkerchiefs, and I'd forgotten to bring one with me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Multiplied Revenge.

"See here," cried the cat, "are you really determined to drown me?"

"I am," replied the man. "You killed our canary, and I believe in 'a life for a life.'"

"But you are bent on taking nine lives for a life."—Philadelphia Press.

A Change of Opinion.

"So they named a cigar after you?"

"Yes," answered the sporting man in a dubious tone.

"Quite a compliment."

"I thought so till I smoked one of the cigars. Then I concluded that it was a libel."—Washington Star.

At the Hub.

"Here," cried the irate passenger, "you've took me past Tremont street!"

"Pardon me," replied the Boston street car conductor, "you mean 'taken,' not 'took.' Now, then, sir, move with more expedition, please."—Philadelphia Press.

Labor.

"What's the matter with old Fred?" asks one workman.

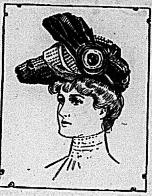
FASHION NOTES.

New Turbans—Long Floating Sleeves on Evening Gowns.

Nothing is smarter at French watering places than the new wide turbans trimmed with red and white currants and their own foliage. They also give a lighter effect to the heavy cloth frocks with which they are sometimes worn.

Tussore silk is being revived, but as a rule it is more practical than becoming. It is very popular for dust coats and useful traveling frocks, for it is inexpensive and wears and washes well.

Immensely long floating sleeves are a feature of nearly all the smart evening gowns. A gray mousseline de sole seen recently was trimmed with lines of the palest mauve velvet. The corsage was finished with the long floating sleeves edged with tiny ruches of chiffon. It is a matter of choice whether these floating appendages come straight from the shoulder or start from a close fitting epaulet and end proportionately short, but however fancy dictates their disposal they are always smart and pretty.



TAILOR MADE TOQUE.

The bolero continues as popular as ever.

Some of the new hats in chip are turned up abruptly at the sides toward the back, where they are simply trimmed with a bow of black velvet and perhaps an ostrich feather. These are smart and at the same time serviceable, for there is nothing on them, if the feather be omitted, to get spoiled by wind or rain. A favorite hat has again come into favor. It is called the "Nell Gwynn." It is very large, takes most becoming lines and is trimmed with beautiful feathers coming out all round from the crown and just overhanging the brim.

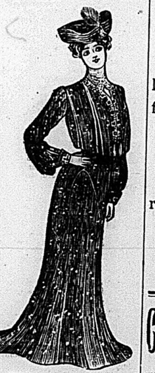
The illustration shows a toque of black straw trimmed with two wings. JUDIC CHOLLET.

USEFUL GOWNS.

Soft Makes of Linen—Tailor Made Check Gowns.

There are a great many soft makes of linen this year, and they are really more serviceable wear because they do not crease so easily and are so much easier to wash and iron even if they do cost a little more at first.

A feature of the early autumn will be checks, red and white, brown and white, green and white and blue and white. They sometimes do the duty of plain cloth in the between seasons and do duty on chilly days. The Parisienne always has a check dress in her wardrobe.



SPOTTED CANVAS COSTUME.

A dress of this description should be tailor made, decorated perhaps, but at the same time neat and useful, with a skirt neither too short nor too long. A charming model was made with narrow box plaits on the hips, down the front and in the center of the back, with a skirt just to clear the ground. The blouse bolero was also box plaited with a shoulder piece of very coarse Italian lace and some incrustations of black velvet. The waistband was of turquoise panne, and there was a suspicion of turquoise chiffon at the neck. Altogether it was an essentially practical gown suitable for many occasions.

The cut shows a costume of spotted canvas, with a box plaited bolero trimmed with embroidery and tassels. JUDIC CHOLLET.

URGE POWERS TO ACTION

A Macedonian Cry For the Restraint of the Turks.

Immense Mass Meeting of Macedonians at Sofia Present Memorial to the World—"A Monument of Sunshine Which Quickly Passed"—Publication of Black-bordered List of 70 Villages Pillaged and Destroyed Causes a Sensation.

Sofia, Aug. 27.—An immense mass meeting of Macedonians took place here yesterday afternoon. They were most enthusiastic. It resolved that a memorial should be presented to the representatives of the great powers at Sofia urging their Governments to take action.

The recent visit of the Russian squadron to Turkish waters was described as "a monument of sunshine, which quickly passed." The speakers impassionately appealed for immediate intervention.

Thankful For Small Favors.

Resolutions were also adopted thanking the publicists who have defended the cause of the Macedonians, regretting the hesitation on the part of Europe to take steps to ameliorate the lot of the Christians in Turkey, demanding the appointment of a powerful Christian Governor, who would ensure security for the country, and inviting all Bulgarians to aid in securing the triumph of the work already commenced.

Vandal Hands in 70 Villages.

The Macedonian Committee has issued a black-bordered list of seventy villages, which have been pillaged and destroyed in the vilayet of Monastir, to which are added instances of revolting outrages on women. The publication has created a sensation.

No news has been received in official circles yesterday from the interior of Macedonia. In a fight which has just occurred in the Kischevo district the insurgents slaughtered a detachment of eighty soldiers.

Wiping Out Bulgarians.

London, Aug. 27.—According to a Sofia telegram to The Times, the Turkish repressive measures in Macedonia have reached the utmost limits of barbarism, and it is evident that it is the intention to accomplish by degrees the total extirpation of the Bulgarian population. Within the last few days, says The Times, twelve more Christian villages have been handed over to fire and sword, and the women, children and the aged have been massacred. Convoys of prisoners despatched to Monastir have been murdered by their escorts. A private letter from Monastir says even the local Turks are disgusted and meditate assassination of the Consuls in order to provoke European intervention.

According to a despatch from Belgrade, Servia, many of the soldiers belonging to the reserves, called out by Turkey, are refusing to join the colors, as the troops in the field have not received any pay for months.

Called to the Colors.

Constantinople, Aug. 27.—The Government has decided to call to the colors all the remaining European reserves belonging to the second and third army corps and a number of other reserves, which will bring the total of the Turkish soldiers in Macedonia up to 350 battalions, or almost double the force utilized in the Turco-Greek war.

Three Hundred Massacred.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 27.—Rumors are current here of serious massacres at Vasilike and Kirk-Kitissh. Three hundred persons are said to have been killed. Details and confirmation are lacking.

Murray Gets His Man.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Aug. 27.—Provincial Detective Murray of Toronto yesterday made an application to the military authorities at Plattsburg barracks to have George H. Stewart, alias Curtis, alias Gudley, turned over to him for extradition to Canada, to answer a charge of swindling immigrants just arriving in that country. Murray chased Stewart several hundred miles through New England, finally arresting him in Troy and turning him over to the United States military authorities as a deserter from the Ninth Infantry.

Output Only $10,000,000.

Vancouver, Aug. 27.—Special despatches from Dawson state that owing to the lightness of rainfall the clean-up for the season is very disappointing. Instead of $18,000,000 or $20,000,000, as it was last year, the Klondike output this year will be less than $10,000,000.

By Auto to North Pole.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Capt. Bernier has just returned from New York and reports that former explorers have all approved his plans. The captain has decided to take four automobiles with him to replace dog sleighs by way of experiment.

OPPOSITION IS IN EARNEST

Obstruction in Sight For the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Counsel of Some Members of the Opposition May Make Session Longer—Fretful and Conscience-Stricken Liberals Are Urging the Closure, But the Government Is Powerless—Five Speeches a Day About the Limit.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—If the House divides next Tuesdgy on the national transcontinental resolution, several members whose names are on the whips' list will not have a chance to speak. Five speeches a day seem to be the limit on this Grand Trunk Pacific Railway scheme. Fretful Liberals are urging the Government to drive the bill through and prorogue Parliament, but the Government is powerless to hasten proceedings.

The Opposition is making a firm stand against the bill. It is determined that the country shall know all about the scheme before it receives the sanction of Parliament. There may be obstruction before the debate is concluded. Many Conservatives insist that it is the Opposition's duty to do its utmost to accomplish the defeat of the bill; they are advocating obstruction, and it is just possible that their counsel will be heeded.

Sir William Mulock was the Ministerial defender of the Government's railway policy yesterday. He supported the scheme with his accustomed vigor. On the Opposition side of the House three good speeches were made. Dr. Roche of Marquette, James Clancy and A. C. Bell of Pictou contributing to the debate.

Mr. Wade of Annapolis moved the adjournment of the debate.

INVESTIGATION BAULKED.

Commission in Yukon Accused of Withholding Official Fyle.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—In the House last night Mr. Borden called the attention of the Government to a telegram he had received from Dawson stating that the commission refused the people's solicitor access to the concession fyle brought from Ottawa, by special official, and that the enquiry was being baulked.

The message further stated that a mass meeting was held at Dawson Tuesday night, and that the people are greatly excited.

Mr. Fielding, in reply, said he had no personal knowledge of the matter, but would cause enquiries to be made.

CANADA AND FRANCE.

Contract For a Steamship Service Likely to Be Signed.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—The likelihood is that a contract will be signed today, under which Messrs. Colombier Bros. of Bordeaux, France, agree to establish a steamship service between that port and Canada. The consideration, it is said, will be $100,000 for eighteen trips, and $133,000 if 24 trips are made. There will be four steamers, and the line will run to Quebec in summer and St. John and Halifax in winter. The steamers will have 80,000 cubic feet of cold storage, and will be equipped with all modern conveniences.

CONGRESS NAMES NINE.

To Investigate East Africa Offer, But Russians Leave Hall.

Basle, Aug. 27.—The debate in the Zionist congress on the British proposal to set apart part of British East Africa. The congress by 225 votes to 177 adopted a resolution to appoint a committee of nine, who should be sent on an expedition to East Africa to investigate the situation. The Russian delegates opposed the project and left the hall as a protest.

For a Temperance Party.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—Two hundred people attended the first meeting of the Temperance Voters' League here last night. F. S. Spence and G. F. Marter addressed the meeting, and afterwards between 75 and 100 signed the pledge to vote and work only for the temperance candidate at next election, and a league was formed for the Parkdale district of the city.

The Democratic Platform.

Columbus, O., Aug. 27.—The Ohio Democratic State Convention assembled in convention at Columbus Tuesday and renewed their allegiance to the Democratic party of the nation, and avowed devotion to the principles of its last national platform. Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland was nominated by acclamation for Governor.

Masked Men Steal $20,000.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 27.—Four masked men Tuesday night held up the watchman of the Featherstonhaugh mines in Atlin, Alaska, and stole nearly $20,000 worth of gold, which had been collected in the sluices during the day. Twenty workmen had just gone to supper, leaving the watchman in charge.

Hundreds of Lives Lost.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 27.—According to mail advices from Shanghai several hundred lives were lost in the great floods at Chee Foo, briefly reported by cable. Over 300 Chinese were known to be dead at Chee Foo alone. No foreigners are known to have been drowned.

Mr. Caldwell Is Better.

Kingston, Aug. 27.—The friends of W. C. Caldwell, M.P.P., of Lanark, are glad to hear that a marked improvement is evidenced in his condition. He is suffering from a heart affection, and this led to the swelling of his limbs. The heart action is being restored.

Building Trades Federating.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 27.—The presidents of seven international building trades organizations, namely, the Hod Carriers' Building Laborers, Structural Iron Workers, Brick Masons, Painters and Decorators, Plasterers and Carpenters and Joiners' began a combined two-days' meeting here, that may result in the organization of a national federation of building trades, for the purpose of supporting each other and arbitrating differences.

"Cap" Sullivan in Ottawa.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Cap. Sullivan arrived in the city last night. He paid an early visit to Room 16, the headquarters of the Liberal members of the House. As he walked into the room he was greeted with a fine round of applause from the assembled Liberal M.P.'s. Later other Liberals strolled into Room 16 and assisted in the demonstration in honor to the valorous Cap. Sullivan.

Burned in East River.

New York, Aug. 27.—The Dutch barque Amsterdam took fire at Pier 12, East River, yesterday afternoon and was towed by fire tugs to Jersey Flats and beached. Three firemen overcome by smoke were sent to the hospital. The barque was being loaded with a miscellaneous cargo, including valuable cut-glass, and the loss is placed at $100,000. The vessel is also badly damaged.

Stationery Engineers.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The stationary engineers concluded their convention yesterday, after electing the following officers: President, H. E. Terry, Toronto; first vice-president, John R. Uttley, Waterloo; secretary, W. Ingles, Toronto; treasurer, J. M. Dixon; conductor, F. W. Sculthorpe, Hamilton; door keeper, J. Ogle, Brantford. It was decided to hold the next convention in Hamilton.

THE THIRD MARINE BATTLE

Shamrock III. and Reliance to Engage for America's Cup.

The Course Will Be to Windward and Return—A Britisher's Grumble About the Closing in of the Excursion Fleet—Hopes There Will Be No Repetition of the Dunraven Incident—Reliance Re-measurement the Same.

New York, Aug. 27.—To-day the big yachts Shamrock III. and Reliance, challenger and defender, respectively, of the American Cup, will engage in the great marine battle in the third race. The course will be to windward or leeward and return, 30 nautical miles, with a time limit of 5½ hours. The past performances of the two boats warrant the prediction that to-day's race will be exciting and none the less interesting. While the Smarock III. did not win the second race, over the triangular course, but missed the little piece of luck which many times at the finish of a close race has turned probably defeat into a victory; still, the cup is not lost yet, as there is many "a slip 'tween the cup and the gaff." The gallant struggle the challenger has made has not come as a great surprise to yachtsmen who should know, considering the magnificent exhibitions she had given when sailing against her consort off Weymouth, and on the Clyde, as well as against Reliance. Severe comment is general here amongst the British spectators, as well as the less biased American sportsmen, over the way the big racers are protected, and the opinion is voiced that the repetition of the Dunraven incident, which occurred in a former contest for the cup, when the British contestant was interfered with by the fleet of boats viewing the race, should not be repeated. A prominent British yacht expert has this to say regarding Tuesday's race:

"I have only one grumble. We don't want to see the excursion fleet kept right down on the horizon, but at the finish of Tuesday's race they had crept perilously near. Captains of the different craft doubtless brought their vessels closer than otherwise would have been the case in order to let their visitors see what at one time looked very likely of accomplishment—Shamrock crossing the finishing line within her time allowance. It was a laudable object, but one which might have seriously hindered her chances, if indeed it did not do so, in a slight degree. Those in charge of the patrol fleet have a difficult task, and have hitherto done their work splendidly. A gentle hint may not be out of place."

To-Day's Weather.

Washington, Aug. 27.—"To Observer, New York:

"The wind over the international yacht course to-day will be light to fresh northeast, shifting in the afternoon to east and southeast, with probably cloudy weather. (Signed,) Frankenfield."

A True Sportsman.

Sir Thomas Lipton said yesterday afternoon in response to a telegram hoping that he would win to-day: "I have not lost hope, and I shall fight and die hard. If I cannot win I will take defeat in the proper spirit."

Shamrock III. stretched her sails at anchor yesterday. On Reliance there was not a move, and Mr. Mower, the club treasurer, simply put the tape to the new gaff and declared it the same length as the old one, so that her measurement was the same as before.

BYE-ELECTION IN SCOTLAND.

Great Difficulties Have to Be Overcome by the Campaigners.

London, Aug. 27.—The first Parliamentary bye-election fought on the fiscal question raised by Colonial Secretary Chamberlain is occurring in Argylshire, Scotland, containing a large number of islands, where there is a vacancy, caused by the death of D. M Nicol, who was a Conservative. The candidates, Charles Stewart, Unionist, and J. S. Ainsworth, Liberal, represent respectively protection and free trade. The polling is being conducted under considerable difficulties. All kinds of craft are being used to convey the voters from the fishing grounds to the polling booths. The candidates had a three weeks' campaign, during which they journeyed in yachts from island to island. The weather was so stormy that they frequently were unable to land and address their waiting audiences. The result will not be known until Friday, owing to the difficulty in collecting the returns.

MANITOBA GOVERNMENT.

Some Changes Contemplated in the Roblin Cabinet.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 27.—It is stated on good authority that Colin H. Campbell is to retire from the Roblin Government, and will be succeeded in the Attorney-Generalship by T. Mayne Daly.

The death of Mr. Campbell's partner, Mr. Crawford, makes it necessary for him to devote his whole attention to his law business.

On account of the illness of John A. Davidson, it is thought that he will not be able to continue discharging the duties of the provincial treasurership, and the rumor in well informed circles is that the Roblin Government will meet the Legislature with Nat Boyd as treasurer.

SPECTACLE BY VESUVIUS.

Stream of Lava Belches Forth From Volcano at Noonday.

Naples, Aug. 27.—The people of Naples and Evirons witnessed a remarkable spectacle at noon yesterday. One thousand feet below the central cone of Vesuvius, the volcano opened like a huge mouth, out of which belched a fiery stream of lava, which ran down the side of the mountain, and at first seemed to manace the observatory, but later it deviated from the building. The eruption occurred without any warning whatever. There was no earthquake detonation or rain of ashes, nothing but a clear stream of lava and red hot stones, which were thrown to a height of 700 feet.

The stream of lava 15 feet broad, at 11 o'clock last night, had covered a distance of 2,700 feet. The eruption seems to be decreasing and it is hoped that no damage will result.

The spectators, far enough away not to be frightened, stood entranced at the spectacle, but those nearer were seized by panic and rushed down from the sides of the mountain tb the villages near by.

ENGINEER'S AWFUL FATE.

Overtaken on Railway Velocipede by Fast Express.

Windsor, Aug. 27.—Seated on a railway velocipede and with certain death rushing upon him from behind, James Hendry, a Canadian Pacific Railway engineer, was unable to get off the machine in time to avert being struck by the fast C.P.R. express in the yard of the company here at 3.20 yesterday morning. Hendry's body was mangled in a horrible manner, and the machine smashed to bits.

Anarchy in the West.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 27.—In St. Boniface Tuesday several men attempted to hold a meeting in the interests of anarchy. It was announced to be a socialistic meeting, but gradually developed into pure anarchy. Then the leaders unfurled a red flag and cheered. At this the French residents hooted, and some of the more infuriated of them hurled stones at the speakers. The police interfered and several arrests followed.

Labrador Expedition Succeeds.

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 27. — The mail steamer Virginia Lake, which arrived from Labrador, reports that the Hubbard exploring expedition, and the expedition under Col. Willard Glazier of Albany, N.Y., are both working in the interior of Labrador, with prospects of good results.

Cotton Famine in England.

Bolton, Eng., Aug. 27.—The cotton trade is in a worse state than for fifteen years past, owing to the shortness of the supply of the cotton. Heavy demands are being made on benefit societies, owing to the large numbers of persons who are idle.

Big Bakery Burned.

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—Kolb's bakery, occupying about half a block in the southern section of the city, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

They Are the Filters of the Body—Danger Signals.

Into everything we eat and drink, no matter how "pure" the food is labeled nor how careful we are, poisons enter. Were we not provided with organs especially designed to look after these poisons, human life would soon perish. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. They catch the poison in the food and expel it from the system. That is, they do these things when they are in healthy and vigorous condition. When they are weak, or overworked, or clogged, or handicapped by the ravages of disease in even a slight degree, they do their assigned work more or less imperfectly, or not at all. When the kidneys are not working well, the poison which should pass from the system is returned to the blood, to circulate through the body. Excess of uric acid in the blood causes inflammatory, muscular or articular rheumatism, for one thing, and those who have suffered from any of the forms of this distressing and dangerous malady will say that this is enough. The best authorities on the subject, however, believe that this is only a small part, and that to kidney irregularities are due a long train of bodily ailments. The kidneys often give warning, though not always and not always in time, of the dangers which menace the body from their abnormal condition. Among these danger signals are weakness of the back, pains or aches in the region of the kidneys, irregularity of the bowels and kidney action, chills, feverishness, puffy eyes, brick dust deposit or cloudiness, and a dropsical appearance of the ankles or wrists. When any of these symptoms appear blood poisoning to a certain extent is undermining the fabric of life. The result of the latest research into kidney troubles and their cure is the vegetable preparation known as Bu-Ju, which is put forth by the Claflin Chemical Co., Ltd., of New York, N. Y., and Windsor, Ont. It may be purchased at any drug store in boxes of 50 pills at 50 cents. It were well to pay no heed to efforts to substitute other so-called remedies for this dangerous condition, as Bu-Ju embodies all that these have with the addition of the latest-upto-date discoveries and enhanced skill in preparation.

OPENED WITH A BULL'S EYE.

O.R.A. Annual Matches Now in Full Swing at Long Branch—The Shooting at Long Branch.

Toronto, Long Branch Rifle Ranges, Aug. 27.—Under lowering clouds, but fine shooting weather withal, the thirty-fifth annual prize meeting of the Ontario Rifle Association commenced here yesterday morning.

Private J. M. Smith, of the 21st Essex Regiment, opened up the meet with a well-centred bull's-eye at 500 yards in the extra series match. He followed up his first good shot with three more bull's-eyes and an inner, totalling twenty-four points out of a possible twenty-five. Smith has entered in several matches.

Canada Company's Match.

The first of the series was the Canada Company match, at 200 and 500 yards, for which the Canada Company of London, England, give 60 individual prizes, amounting to $210, and three team prizes. The match is restricted to members of the active militia and cadet corps in uniform who have not previously won money at any of the association matches, and the highest individual score was made by Lieut. T. V. Anderson of the 14th Prince of Wales' Own Rifles, Kingston, with 46. He won $8 and the O.R.A. Silver Medal. The first team prize was won by the quintette from the Q.O.R., composed of Ptes. A. G. Crysdale, A. M. Rosebatch, W. G. Hunter, C. E. Gardiner and J. R. Foster, who put up a score of 211, the York Rangers being second with 207, and the third place going to the team from the 77th Regiment with a total of 205.

Canadian Club Match.

The Canadian Club match was open to all members of the association. It was shot at 600 yards, ten rounds, and was won by Pte. N. Runchey of the 37th (Haldimand Rifles) with a score of 48. There were 80 prizes in all, totalling $345, in addition to a battalion team prize for teams of five men connected with the active militia. This trophy, valued at $250, was presented by Hiram Walker & Sons of Walkerville, who also donated an individual prize of $25 to the member of a competing team making the highest score. The trophy was won by the men from the 13th Regiment of Hamilton, who made a total of 219, and Pte. Runchey of the 37th Regiment took the individual prize. The Hamilton team was made up of Lieuts. R. A. Robertson and W. L. Ross, Sergt.-Major Huggins, Staff-Sergt. T. Mitchell and Pte. Peter Armstrong.

City of Toronto Match.

Team Prizes.

First prize, ladies' challenge cup (value $150) and $30, won by Guelph Rifle Association; score 384.

Second prize, 13th Regiment, score 381; $25.

Third prize, Royal Grenadiers, score 376; $20.

Fourth prize, Highlanders, score 374; $15.

Fifth prize, Highlanders (second team), score 373; $10.

Cadets' Challenge Trophy Match.

Teams—Gooderham Shield ($150) and $25, won by Harbord Collegiate Institute; St. Alban's Cathedral, 2nd; Hamilton C. I., 3rd.

Sam Parks' Stiff Sentence.

New York, Aug. 27.—Sam Parks, business agent for the Housesmiths' and Bridgemen's Union, was sentenced yesterday to not less than two years and six months, nor more than three years and six months in Sing Sing on a charge of having taken $260 from Joseph Plenty, a Hoboken contractor, to call off a strike. Three other indictments on similar charges are pending against him.

W. A. McClean Dead.

Owen Sound, Aug. 27.—W. A. McClean, ex-Mayor of Owen Sound and a prominent local business man, died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock after an illness of more than three years. In 1896 he refused the nomination for the Dominion House tendered him by the Conservative convention.

Ottawan's Queer Death.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Cleophas Morel, baker, Dalhousie street, stumbled and fell in his yard Tuesday night. Shortly after he exhibited insane tendencies, and it took two policemen to restrain him. Growing calmer he went to bed and yesterday morning was found dead.

350,000 Witnessed Funeral.

Rome, Aug. 27.—The funeral of Menotti Garibaldi was held Tuesday, and evoked a great popular demonstration of sympathy. It is estimated that 350,000 people witnessed the funeral procession.

Mahaffy in Muskoka.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—The Conservatives of Muskoka Riding have unanimously decided on A. A. Mahaffy as their candidate in the pending bye-election, to oppose Dr. Hart, the Liberal candidate.

New York, Aug. 27.—A despatch to The Times from London says the sale at auction of the birthplace of Charles Dickens, on Commercial road, Portsmouth, is announced.

A WONDERFUL PERFORMANCE.

The performance of Lou Dillon at Readville, Mass., on Monday, will long make August 24th a red letter day in the history of light-harness horse racing, seeing that it marks the advent of the long-waited two minute horse. Twenty years ago Maud S. made herself famous by lowering the mile record below the mark which had long been aimed at by breeders and trainers, 2 10. There were those who said then that the limit of speed had been reached, but they were mistaken, for it was not long before the game little daughter of Harold carried it down to 2 08¾. And there it remained for many years. There were no others like the little mare ending her days in well earned rest on Mr. Bonner's Tarrytown farm. Effort after effort was made, but it was not until the sulky at present in use was built, that the mark of Maud S. was eclipsed. To-day, says the Montreal Gazette, it is a somewhat remarkable fact that under the same conditions the record of Maud S. remains the same. To the day of his death Mr. Bonner always maintained that with the same facilities Maud S. would have set a mark that would have remained unbeaten for many years. Sunol, Arion, Nancy Hanks, Alix and Cresceus, the deposed champion, were all materially aided by drawing the modern sulky, with its low centre of gravity, its ball bearings and its pneumatic tires. Just how great this advantage is cannot very well be estimated. We know that in the case of the ordinary trotter it is a matter of at least three seconds, and it should be of greater advantage in flights of excessive speed. Yet remembering this it is difficult to refuse to believe that the performance of yesterday is inferior in any way to that of twenty years ago. There must be something due the performer. Eight and three-quarters seconds must surely compensate for all the advantages Lou Dillon enjoyed over Maud S., with a good margin to spare. The two minute trotter is here. She is as distinctly ahead of the field as Maud S was in her palmy days. It is quite a likely, too, that she will remain as long in undisturbed possession. Lou Dillon is as wonderful a bit of horse flesh as Maud S. was.

TIMELY TOPICS

Now that the Wednesday half-holidays are over, the few remaining fish in our beautiful bay will breathe easier. They must have had a hard time yesterday, dodging all the lines out.

• • •

A fellow needs more than his dignity to wrap himself in, these cool nights.

• • •

"Yes," said a popular school teacher, "I'm glad the holidays are nearly over; I'm anxious to get back to work again." And one of the loose boards flew up and hit him.

• • •

A friend of ours has discovered an inexpensive and unfailing way to kill burdocks. Cut them off close to the ground and put a little salt on the part left in the soil. They never recover from the shock.

• • •

Having won all the prizes in the punt races yesterday, some fellows on the West side are seriously thinking of challenging for the America's Cup.

• • •

Four more days, and the gay and festive oyster will once more be in our midst.

• • •

Too bad the authorities couldn't put the flags at half-mast one day for the late Lord Salisbury. Perhaps they were afraid that Laurier's friend, Bourassa, might object.

• • •

The Stony Lonesome philosopher says that if he were Sir Thomas Lipton he'd give the Shamrock's captain a pound of tea and a passage home in the steerage. As for the rest of the crew, they should be keel-hauled.

• • •

If there is any truth in the report that a certain householder was seen sprinkling the street with a lawn hose during the rain storm on Monday night he certainly should be looked after by the authorities. Old habits, though, become so strong sometimes that people can't break them.

• • •

The Hamilton Spectator man thinks Cap Sullivan should be allowed to sail the Shamrock. Come to think of it, he has certainly helped steer the Ross ship out of many a tight place.

• • •

But if Sir Thomas Lipton really wanted to win he should have arranged to have Mr. J. M. Hurley figure on his time allowance. Then it would have been a cinch for the emerald boat.

Hamilton Spectator: "I'd like to see an Ontario law which everybody could understand the same way."

Is that meddlesome fellow talking about the License Law and the way it is "understood" in this city?

SOME RED-HOT CONVERSATION.
(Algoma Conservator.)

"That he (R. R. Gamey) should be glorified by his fellow townsmen indicates that the moral sense of that section, at least, of this province is numb."—Don in Saturday Night.

Twenty-five thousand people cheered R. R. Gamey at a great demonstration at Toronto, Hanlan's Island—on the 12th inst., some days after Don had thrown the above bouquet at the people of Gore Bay. We are sorry for Don; he evidently spoke too soon.

"Moral sense" is a good phrase, but at no time should it ever be associated with the name of Don. There are good phrases that get sullied by contamination. When you speak of the Don think of graves and worms, of drunkenness and debauchery, of deceit and villainy, of the house of prostitution, of the graves of deceived families. Think of rib-stabbers and traitors who greedily and secretly swallow the price of their perfidiousness, but for heaven's sake never mention the name of Don and "moral sense" in the same paragraph. Yes, we do not mind being lectured on "moral sense," but we would prefer it to be done by some one who has some slight reputation for moral decency.

A "HEATHEN CHINEE."
(N.Y. Herald.)

Your correspondent in the Herald of yesterday, is no doubt correct. The Shamrock is Scotch.

It is hard to say what nationality the Reliance is. She is designed and built by a German, manned by Scandinavians, sailed by an Englishman, and rigged as an English cutter. This bars naturalization papers. On paper she could be a 'heathen Chinee.'

LISTEN TO THE GROWL OF THIS SOREHEAD!

CORRESPONDENT OF ST. MARY'S ARGUS MAKES IMPERTINENT COMMENTS ON ACTION OF BELLEVILLE CONGRESSMEN.

The St. Mary's Argus publishes a letter from a Montreal correspondent, signing himself R. W. Dillon, dealing with the late Trade Congress. The portion of the letter in which we are interested exhibits so unfair a spirit that it will not take sensible men long to discover the trail of the green-eyed monster over it all. The article in question says:

"Of course the man was present who wanted to speak on every resolution. Once his measure was taken the audience made short work of him. In this respect the members of the Belleville Board of Trade were the greatest sinners. They had three delegates present, and had prepared seven resolutions—more than any other Board except Vancouver, which tied them as to number. As Boards introducing resolutions were supposed to move and second them; this would have given every opportunity for fourteen speeches to have been made by three Belleville men, a most absurd thing in a gathering representing all parts of the world. So impatient did the audience become with the constant appearance of Belleville on the platform, that a delegate got up and strongly objected to their inflicting themselves so repeatedly on the meeting. When the chairman was asked whether it was good taste for their appearing so continuously on the platform, he said "that if it had been a matter of order he would have given a ruling, but the question of good taste must be left to the individual members." Lord Brassey, in calling for one of their motions, referred in a quiet but cutting way to the Belleville Board as "a very busy Board." To other Canadian delegates it was matter for regret that Belleville should have been so filled with a sense of its own importance as to endeavor to monopolize entirely the time of so important a gathering, and it is hoped that some of the comment that was made from time to time reached their ears and will prevent a repetition of such conduct at a future gathering. The Toronto World of Saturday ran away with the idea that the resolution referring to Imperial aid to railways was voted down because it referred to Grand Trunk Pacific, whereas that resolution never mentioned G.T.P. It was voted down because it came from Belleville, and the audience was tired of Belleville and its notions. Conglomeration of ideas, as it was, it might have received a hearing had any other than Belleville proposed it. All the Canadians were not Bellevilleites, and to their credit it may be said that they did not inflict themselves unduly on the meeting. They were there to learn and many who could have spoken with advantage to the gathering, refrained from doing so in order that others might have an opportunity. Such self-restraint was greatly to their credit."

ED. NOTE.—The writer of the above, we will risk the opinion, can trace his lineage back to Ananias, with Balaam's Ass as a blood relation. The Montreal papers, which reported the proceedings of the Congress very fully, found no such fault with the Belleville delegates as this unknown scribbler does. Our local men, it would appear, were rather too clever for some of their backwoods contemporaries, and must now pay the penalty in being abused by people who, not rising even to mediocrity themselves, can never forgive others for being more gifted. 'Tis the old, old story.

BURGLARS GOT AWAY WITH VALUABLE BOOTY

LOSS AT THE FENWICK RESIDENCE MORE THAN AT FIRST SUPPOSED.

It appears that the burglars who effected an entrance into Mr. Fenwick's residence, on Saturday night last, secured possession of many valuable articles for their pains. It is estimated that the value of the articles taken is in the neighborhood of $400. The police are working on the case, but at present have no clue as to who committed the burglary.

How Mosquito Got His Revenge

"Do you see the glancing sheen of yonder silvery pond?" inquired the mosquito leader of his faithful followers.

They stared long and earnestly at the object he pointed out.

"We do," they hummed.

"When the shadows fall," the leader went on, "a girl and a guitar will appear at the margin of the shining waters. She will play the guitar, my brothers, but only one note. You know the note. It is that fatal note that the murderous men of science have learned that no mosquito can hear and live. While the maiden plays that note we may not approach the pond. But my soul hungers for revenge against this cruel siren, and I mean to have it. This night I venture to the pond."

"No, no!" hummed the distressed followers.

"Do not seek to dissuade me," cried the mosquito leader. "I must go, but I will return. Keep silence that you may listen. Let some of you gather the filaments of the fuzzy bush and with them fill my ears. Yes, yes; that's the stuff. A little more in the left. There, I am quite deaf. The note cannot harm me. And now for vengeance on the siren."

Two hours later he winged his way back to his anxious followers. He flew slowly, because he was heavy with loot.

"Clear my ears," he huskily cried as he sank upon a poplar leaf. They flew to obey.

"And your revenge, master?" eagerly asked the second in command.

"My revenge is complete," the hero answered, with a hum of triumph. "I bit the siren nine times!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Finished

Yes, Queen Victoria School is finished, ready for school opening, and a prettier job of brick painting cannot be found anywhere. Perhaps you would like your house painted likewise—not necessarily the same color—you might like cream or a less bright shade of red than the school—anyway we can give you anything you want in color, will do your work at reasonable prices—do it promptly, with an excellent staff of workmen, fifteen in number, all good workmen, we can turn out work more promptly than could a small staff.

School Opening.

Not only do we paint all the schools but we sell pretty nearly all the SCHOOL BOOKS and School Supplies and there is a reason for it.

Firstly, we know from fifteen years' experience the needs of the scholars—know where to find the betterlines of supplies, have the agencies of the best bookmakers, control all the best school supplies, sell at lowest prices, because buying in large quantities we secure lower prices;—sell Wholesale and Retail, and have always a mammoth assortment.

A Reminder as to Wall Papers.

On September 1st we commence our fall battle in Wall Papers—we have all ammunition required, have the machinery always moving and usually moving quickly—We will surprice you in prices—Can't afford to have your home anything but attractive for the long winter months when so small a figure will do it—

Then, too, we will continue to give away free bordering with our Wall Papers—two yards with each double roll of Wall Paper.

We'll hang the paper at low prices, too, and hang it properly.

Our picture framing should always ring in your ears—we so often tell you about it. If you are a framing customer of ours you know all about it, if not a framing customer of ours, you are making a great mistake—providing you have framing to do.

never was but one fer me. I may be a fool, but I believe I was intended fer her. Shucks! Sech skip abouts as Miller may talk sech bosh as that, but it's beca'se the Lord never give 'em the glory o' the other thing.

"It larnt me the truth about the after life. I know thar's a time to come, an' a blessed one, ur the Lord never would 'a' give me that taste of it. She's som'er's out o' harm's way, an' when me 'n' her meet I'll not have a wrinkle an' I'll be able to walk as spry an' hopeful as I did when she was heer. Thar ort to be punishment reserved fer hard headed fools that separate lovin' young folks beca'se one ur t'other hain't jest so many dollars tied in a rag. Don't you listen to Miller. I don't say you ort to plunge right in an' make the old man mad, but don't give up. Ef she's what I think she is, an' she sees you ain't a-goin' to run after no fresh face, she'll stick to you like the bark on a tree. The wait won't hurt nuther one of you either. My wait ain't a-hurtin' me an' yore'n won't you. I never seed a young woman I liked better 'n I do the one you selected, an' I've sent up many a petition that you'd both make it all right."

The old man raised his reins and clucked to his horses.

"Uncle Ab," said Alan, "you've made a better man of me. I've had a lot of trouble over this, but you make me hope. I've tried to give her up, but I simply cannot do it."

"She ain't a-goin' to give you up nuther," replied Abner; "that's the purty part about it. Thar ain't no give up in 'er. She ain't that sort. She's goin' to give that daddy o' her'n a tussle."

CHAPTER XI.

ONE morning early in June, as Alan was passing Pole Baker's cabin on his way to Darley, Pole's wife came out to the fence and stopped him. She was a slender, ill clad woman, who had once been pretty, and her face still had a sort of wistful attractiveness that was appealing to one who knew what she had been through since her marriage.

"Are you goin' to town, Mr. Alan?" she asked nervously.

"Yes, Mrs. Baker," Alan answered. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

She did not reply at once, but came through the little gate, which swung on wooden hinges, and stood looking up at him, a thin, hesitating hand on his bridle rein.

"I'm afeerd some'n's happened to Pole," she faltered. "He hain't been home fer two whole days an' nights. It's about time fer 'im to spree agin, an' I'm powerful afeerd he's in trouble. I 'lowed while you was in town that you mought inquire about 'im an' let me know when you come back. That 'd sorter free my mind a little. I didn't close my eyes all last night."

"I'll do all I can, Mrs. Baker," Alan promised. "But you mustn't worry. Pole can take care of himself, drunk or sober. I'll be back tonight."

Alan rode on, leaving the pathetic figure at the gate looking after him. "I wonder," he mused, "what Uncle Ab would say about love that has that sort of reward. Poor woman! Pole was her choice, and she has to make the best of it. Perhaps she loves the good that's in the rascal."

He found Rayburn Miller at his desk making out some legal document. "Take a seat," said Miller. "I'll be through in a minute. What's the news out your way?" he asked as he finished his work and put down his pen.

"Nothing new, I believe," said Alan. "I've been away for two days. Not having anything else to do, I made it my business to ride over every foot of my father's big investment, and, to tell you the truth, I've come to you with a huge idea. Don't laugh. I can't help it. It popped into my head and sticks, that's all."

"Good! Let me have it."

"Before I tell you what it is," said Alan, "I want you to promise not to ridicule me. I'm as green as a gourd in business matters. But the idea has hold of me, and I don't know that even your disapproval will make me let it loose."

"That's a good way to put it," laughed Miller. "The idea has hold of you, and you can't let it loose. It applies more closely to investments than anything else. Once get into a deal and you are afraid to let it go, like the chap that held the calf and called for help."

"Well, here it is," said Alan. "I've made up my mind that a railroad can and shall be built from these two main lines to my father's lumber bonanza."

Miller whistled. A broad smile ingulfed the pucker of his lips, and then his face dropped into seriousness. A look almost of pity for his friend's credulity and inexperience came into his eyes.

"I must say you don't want a little thing, my boy," he said indulgently. "Remember you are talking to a fellow that has rubbed up against the moneyed world considerably for a chap raised in the country. The trouble with you, Alan, is that you have got heredity to contend with; you are a chip off the old block in spite of your belonging to a later generation. You have inherited your father's big ideas. You are a sort of Colonel Sellers, who sees millions in everything you look at."

Alan's face fell, but there remained in it a tenacious expression that won Miller's admiration even while he deplored it. There was, too, a ring of confidence in the young farmer's tone when he replied:

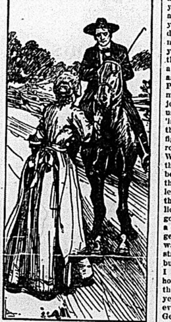
"How much would a railroad through that country, eighteen miles in length, cost?"

"Nothing but a survey by an expert could answer that even approximately," said the lawyer, leaning back in his creaking chair. "If you had the right of way, a charter from the state and no big tunnels to make nor long bridges to build, you might, I should say, construct the road alone—without locomotives and rolling stock generally—for a little matter of one hundred and fifty thousand. I don't know; I'm only guessing; but it wouldn't fall under that estimate."

"I didn't think it would," replied Alan, growing more enthusiastic. "Now then, if there was a railroad to my father's property, how much would his 20,000 acres be worth?"

Miller smiled again and began to figure on a scrap of paper with a pencil. "Oh, as for that," he said, "it would really be worth—standing uncut, unsawed, including a world of tan bark—at least $25 an acre—say a clear half million for it all. Oh, I know it looks as plain as your nose on your face; things always do on paper. It looks big and it shines; so does a spider web in the sunshine to a fly; but you don't want to be a fly, my boy, and you don't want any spider webs—on the brain anyway."

Alan stood up and walked to the door and back. Finally he shrugged his broad shoulders. "I don't care what you say," he declared, bringing his hand down firmly on Miller's desk. "It will pay, as sure as I'm alive. There's no getting around the facts. It will take a quarter of a million investment to market a half million dollar bunch of timber, with the land thrown in and the traffic such a road would secure to help pay expenses. There are men in the world looking for such opportunities, and I'm going to give somebody a chance."



"I'm afeerd some'n's happened to Pole," she faltered.

"You have not looked deep enough into it, my boy," mildly protested Miller. "You haven't figured on the enormous expense of running such a road and the dead loss of the investment after the lumber is moved out. You'd have a railroad property worth a quarter of a million on your hands. I can't make you see my position. I simply say to you that I wouldn't touch a deal like that with a ten foot pole."

Alan laughed good naturedly as he laid his hand on his friend's shoulder. "I reckon you think I'm off," he said, "but sooner or later I'm going to put this thing through. Do you hear me? I'll put it through if it takes ten years to do it. I want to make the old man feel that he has not made such a fool of himself. I want to get even with the Thompson crowd and Perkins and everybody that is now poking fun at a helpless old man. I shall begin by raising money some way or other to pay taxes and hold on to every inch of the ground."

Miller's glance fell before the fierce fire of Alan's eyes, and for the first time his tone wavered.

"Well," he said, "you have the stuff in you that big speculators are made of, and I may simply be prejudiced against the scheme on account of your father's blind plunging and what some men would call overcautiousness on my part. I may be trying to prevent what you really ought to do, but I am advising you as a friend. I only know I would be more cautious. Of course you may try. You'd not lose in doing that; in fact, you'd gain experience. I should say that big dealers in lumber are the men you ought to see first. They know the values of such investments, and they are reaching out in all directions now. They have cleaned up the timber near the railroads."

CHAPTER XII.

MILLER accompanied Alan to the door. Old Trabue stood in front of his office in his shirt sleeves, his battered silk hat on the back part of his head. He was fanning himself with a palm leaf fan and freely using his handkerchief on his brow. He bowed cordially to Alan and came toward him.

"I want to ask you," he began, "has Pole Baker any way of raisin' money?"

"Not that I know of," laughed Alan. "I don't know whether he's got a clear title to the shirt on his back. He owes everybody out our way. My father is supplying him on time now."

"That was my impression," said Trabue. "He wanted me to defend him the other day, but he couldn't satisfy me about the fee, an' I let him go. He first said he could give me a lien on a mule, but he finally admitted that it wasn't his."

"He's not in trouble, is he?" exclaimed Alan, suddenly recalling Mrs. Baker's uneasiness.

Trabue looked at Miller, who stood leaning in the doorway, and laughed. "Well, I reckon he might call it that. That chap owned the town two days ago. He got blind, stavin' drunk an' wanted to whip us from one end o' the place to the other. The marshals are afraid of 'im, for they know he'll shoot at the drop of a hat, an' the butt of it was stickin' out o' his hip pocket in plain sight. Was you thar, Rayburn? Well, it was better 'n a circus. Day before yesterday thar was a sort o' street temperance lecturer in front o' the Johnston House, speakin' on a dry goods box. He had a lot o' gaudy pictures illustratin' the appearance of a drinkin' man's stomach an' liver compared to one in a healthy condition. He was a sort of a snide faker out fer what he could git dropped in a hat, an' Pole was sober enough to git on to his game. Pole stood thar with the rest, jest about able to stan', an' that was all. Finally, when the feller got warmed up an' got to screechin', Pole begun to deny what he was sayin'. As fast as he'd make a statement Pole would flatly give it the lie. The feller on the box didn't know what a tough customer he had to handle or he'd 'a' gone slow. As it was, he p'inted a finger o' scorn at Pole an' helt 'im up fer a example.

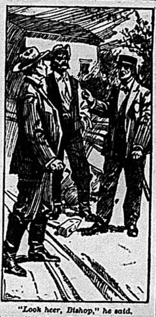
"Pole wasn't sober by a long shot, but you'd 'a' thought he was, fer he was as steady as a post. He kept grinnin', as cool as a cucumber, an' sayin: 'Now you know yo're a-lyin, stranger—jest a-lyin' to get a few dimes drapped in yore hat. You know nobody's stomach don't look like that durn chromo. You never seed inside of a drinkin' man, an' yo're the biggest liar that ever walked the earth.' This made the crowd laugh at the little, dried up feller, an' he got as mad as old Nick. He begun to tell Pole his liver was swelled from too much whisky an' that he'd bet he was jest the sort to beat his wife. Most of us thought that 'd make Pole jump on 'im, but he seemed to enjoy naggin' the feller too much to sp'ile it by a fight. A nigger boy had been carryin' round a bell an' a sign advertisin' Webb's auction sale, an' stopped to see the fun. Pole heerd the tinkle of the bell an' tuck it an' begun to ring it in the lecturer's face. The harder the feller spoke the harder Pole rang. It was the biggest racket ever heerd on a public square. Part of the crowd—the good, church folks—began to say it was a disgrace to the town to allow a stranger to be treated that a-way, sence thar was no law agin public speakin' in the streets. They was in fer callin' a halt, but all the rest—the drinkin' men (an' I frankly state I was one)—secretly hoped Pole would ring 'im down. When the pore devil finally won, I felt like yellin' hooray, fer I glory in the pluck even of a daredevil, if he's a north Georgian an' white. The lecturer had to stop without his collection, an' went off to the council chamber swearin' agin the town fer allowin' him to be treated that a-way. Thar wasn't anything fer the mayor to do but order Pole's arrest, but it took four men—two regulars an' two deputies—to accomplish it.

"The trial was the richest thing I ever attended. Pole had sobered up jest enough to be witty, an' he had no more respect fer Bill Barrett's court than he had fer the lecturer's platform. Him an' Barrett used to fish an' hunt together when they was boys, an' Pole kept callin' him Bill. It was Bill this an' Bill that, an' as Barrett had only been in office a month he hardly knowed how to rise to his proper dignity, especially when he saw the crowd was laughin' at his predicament. When I declined to defend 'im, Pole attempted to read the law on the case to Barrett an' show whar he was right. Barrett let 'im talk because he didn't know how to stop 'im, an' Pole made the best defense I ever heerd from a unlettered man. It kept the crowd in a roar. For awhile I swear it looked like Pole was goin' to cleer hisse'f, but Barrett had to do his duty, an' so he fined Pole thirty dollars, or in default thereof to break rock on the streets fer ten days. You ort to 'a' heerd Pole snort. 'Looky heer, Bill,' he said, 'you know as well as yo're a-settin' cocked up thar, makin' folks say "yore honor" ever' breath they draw, that I ain't a-goin' to break no rock in that br'ilin' sun fer ten days 'ca'se I beat that skunk at his own game!'

"'You'll have to do it if you don't pay out,' Barrett told 'im.

"'Well, I jest won't pay out, an' I won't break rock nuther,' Pole said. 'You've heerd about the feller that could lead a hoss to water, but couldn't make 'im drink, hain't you? Well, I'm the hoss.'

"Yesterday was Pole's fust day on the street. They put a ball an' chain to one of his ankles an' sent 'im out with the nigger gang, but all day yesterday an' today he hain't worked a lick. He's as stubborn as a mule. Thar's been a crowd around 'im all the time. You kin see 'im standin' up as straight as a post in the middle of the street from one end of it to the other. I'm sorter sorry fer 'im; he looks like he's ashamed at bottom, but don't want to give in. The funniest thing about the whole thing is that Pole seems to know more about the law than the mayor. He says unless they force him to work in the specified ten days they can't hold him any longer, an' that if they attempt to flog 'im he'll kill the first man that lays hands on him. I think Bill Barrett likes him too well to have 'im whipped, an' the whole town is guyin' him an' axin' 'im why he don't make Pole set in."



"Look heer, Bishop," he said.

Alan went down the street to see Pole. He found him seated on a large stone, a long handled rock hammer at his feet. He looked up from under his broad brimmed hat, and a crestfallen look came into his big brown eyes.

"I'm sorry to see this, Pole," said Alan.

Pole stood up at his full height, the chain clanking as he rose. "They hain't treated me right about this matter, Alan Bishop," he said, half resentfully, half as if he recognized his own error. "Bill knows he hain't done the fair thing. I know I was full, but I jest wanted to have my fun. That don't justify him in puttin' me out heer with these niggers fer folks to gap' at, an' he knows it. He ain't a friend right. Me an' him has slep' together on the same pile o' leaves, an' I've let 'im pull down on a squirrel when I could 'a' knocket it from its perch, an' I've lent 'im my pointer an' gun many an' many a time. But he's showed what he is! He's got the wrong sow by the yeer, though, fer ef he keeps me heer till Christmas I'll never crack a rock unless I do it by accidentally steppin' on it. Mark my words, Alan Bishop, thar'll be trouble out o' this."

"Don't talk that way, Pole," said Alan. "You've broken the law, and they had to punish you for it. If they hadn't, they would have made themselves ridiculous. Why didn't you send me word you were in trouble, Pole?"

The fellow hung his head and then blurted out:

"Beca'se I knowed you would make a fool o' yorese'f an' try to pay me out. Durn it, Alan Bishop, this ain't no business o' yore'n!"

"I'll make it my business," said Alan. "How much is your fine? You ought to have sent me word."

"Sent you nothin', Alan Bishop," growled the prisoner. "When I send you word to he'p me out of a scrape that whisky got me into, I'll do it after I've decently cut my throat! I say—when you've plead with me like you have to quit the durn stuff!"

At this point of the conversation Jeff Dukes, a man of medium size, dressed in dark blue uniform, with a nickel plated badge shaped like a shield and bearing the words "Marshal No. 2," came directly toward them from a stonecutter's shop near by.

"Look heer, Bishop," he said dictatorially, "whar'd you git the right to talk to that man?"

Alan looked surprised. "Am I breaking the law too?"

"You are ef you hain't got a permit from the mayor in yore pocket."

"Well, I have no permit," replied Alan with a good natured smile. "Have you got another ball and chain handy?"

The officer frowned off his inclination to treat the matter as a jest. "You ort to have more sense than that," he said crustily. "Pole's put out heer to work his time out, an' ef everybody in town is allowed to laugh an' joke with him he'd crack about as many rocks as you or me."

Flies Everywhere
in your food—in your bedroom—making life miserable.
Wilson's Fly Pads
will clear your house of flies in a few hours.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 66 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected cold and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, natural.

Hot Weather Diet.

A great many people pay little or no attention to the kind of diet they should adopt with the varying seasons and hot or cold weather eat food that they should not for the comfort and the welfare of the body. Especially is this true during the summer months, when a proper diet will materially assist in the avoidance of many of the discomforts of the heated term. Avoid heat producing foods, says Cooking Club. With good bread and butter, fruits and vegetables there is no need of overtaxing the system with meat and grease. And do not overeat. Don't force the appetite and overload the system. If you do not crave food there is something wrong with your general system, which requires something besides food. At such times try fasting in a limited degree. Put your stomach on short rations, and give the machinery a little rest. Appetite will take care of itself if the general system is in good condition. A good appetite is indicative of good health.

An Omnipresent Nuisance.

Flies are more detestable than mosquitoes. They mar whatever they touch and do not possess the merit of being sweet singers. A mosquito orchestra is not bad when one appreciates it. The desire of Mr. Fly to settle upon the whitest things in the house is his worst fault. In fly communities white shades are converted into dark blue or bottle green ones before spring is half over. The fly is the only universal beast. It is the unwelcome companion of man in every quarter of the globe and is equally at home in Alaska and the great desert. A ship may leave port without one on board, yet in midocean an unclean spot on deck will attract a swarm. The fly seems to be born for the occasion.—New York Press.

The Face of the Ruler.

In England a subject if he wishes to have a portrait of his majesty must buy one. In France every peasant and artisan is compelled to look upon that of the president each time he votes at an election or marries a wife or registers a birth in the mairie. The first act of the minister of the interior after the election of a new president is to request him to have his portrait taken, that it may be reproduced and exhibited in the 40,000 communes of France and Algeria.—London Chronicle.

World's Fair Motor Chairs.

The roller chair of Chicago fame will not be found at the St. Louis exposition. In its stead will be a light electric motor chair, said to be so simple in its design that it can be easily guided and managed. The most important feature is the guard rail on the sides of the chair. This is connected with the operating mechanism and is so sensitive that the chair is brought to a sudden standstill as soon as the guard rail comes in contact with anything.

TIMELY TOPICS.

"A Law-Abiding Citizen" writes:

Dear sir,—I was surprised to see, in your paper last night, that Police Magistrate Flint invites me to a private interview in order to have the License Act and its workings explained. Very kind and courteous, I am sure. But, my dear sir, this, I think, is not a private matter; many others are interested in it besides your humble servant. If I called on Magistrate Flint and became full almost to bursting with valuable information, how could I disseminate it to others who, like myself, would like to find out how the License Act is respected in this city? I could not hire the opera house and lecture on the subject, for it costs too much, and I am afraid that, taking into consideration the object of the lecture, I could not look for any reduction in the price. No, sir; I was pained and grieved to think that your article reflected on certain officials in this city, among them Police Magistrate Flint, and knowing that he sometimes wrote for the press, I thought it no more than right to urge him to free his skirts from the imputation of allowing people to circumvent the law. Understand me, I make no assertion of that kind myself, but I have heard it so mentioned on the streets. If he does not desire to set himself right, why, then, to slightly alter Shakespeare, "Let the galled jade wince, my withers are unwrung." In closing my letter, I cannot help expressing the pleasure it gives me to see that at last the County Attorney has, judging by an article in last night's paper, awakened to the fact that there are such things provided for in the License Act as second and third convictions. With apologies for trespassing so largely on your space, I am," etc.

As coiners of epigrams, Belleville's delegates to the Trade Congress were, we think, especially happy. In one of his speeches, Mayor Graham thus epitomized the proposed Imperial preference: "Free trade within the Empire, protection against the world." Very neat, that. Mr. J. W. Johnson very happily said: "This is a great debate; infinitely better than the resolution we are debating." The phrase caught the fancy of the congress. In his letter to-day, a sort of an echo of the great gathering, Col. Ponton says: "A more hearty, genial, eager, earnest, alert and level-headed gathering of gentlemen never met to-gether." As a writer of graphic English the Colonel does not need to take a back seat for many people.

Nervous Exhaustion

PROSTRATION AND COLLAPSE ARE PREVENTED AND CURED BY DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

WE WANT YOU TO READ THE FOLLOWING LETTER

WHICH WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED FROM MR. W. T. JACKSON, WHO SUFFERED FOR THREE YEARS WITH LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Kingston, Ont., July 22, 1903.

The O. R. Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen,—It gives me great pleasure to recommend the O. R. Kidney Cure to all who are suffering from lame back, rheumatism or kidney trouble. I have endured the pangs of rheumatism for the last three years. I tried to get relief from doctors' medicine and preparations that I saw advertised, but all failed. I have now taken three bottles of the O. R. Kidney Cure and do not feel an ache or pain. I sleep perfectly and never felt better in my life than I do to-day. So I feel quite satisfied in recommending your preparation, as I believe I am permanently cured. I remain,

Yours truly,

W. T. JACKSON.

Employee of Peter Lowrie, Blacksmith, 50 Queen St., south.

Every bottle of O. R. Kidney Cure contains a full 10 days' treatment. It is put up in a liquid form, quickly assimilates and gives instant relief. Price 50c bottle. O. R. Liver Pills 25c bottle. O. R. Dyspepsia Tablets 25c box at druggists, or write

Curse —OF— DRINK

CURED BY

COLONIAL REMEDY

No taste. No Odor. Can be given in a glass of water, tea, or coffee, without patient's knowledge.

Colonial Remedy will cure or destroy the diseased appetite for alcoholic stimulants, whether the patient is a confirmed inebriate, "tippler," social drinker or drunkard. Impossible for anyone to have an appetite for alcoholic liquors after using Colonial Remedy.

Indorsed by Members of the W.C.T.U.

Mrs. Moore, Superintendent of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Ventura, Cal., writes: "I have tested Colonial Remedy on very obstinate drunkards, and the cures have been many. In many cases the Remedy was given secretly. I cheerfully recommend and endorse Colonial Remedy. Members of our Union are delighted to find a practical and economical treatment to aid us in our temperance work."

Sold by druggists everywhere and by mail.

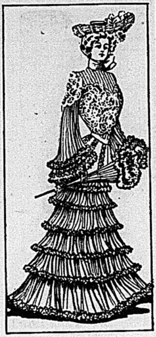
DRESS AND FASHION.

A VARIETY OF ATTRACTIVE GOWNS FOR ARDENT SUMMER DAYS.

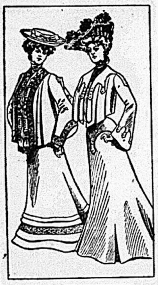
Taffeta Ruchings—Sleeves Full and Hanging—A Plisse Gown—Smart Practical Costumes of Linen and Serge For Vacation Use.

Taffeta ruchings very prettily border flounces and attractively replace strappings on plain skirts. In the dress of yellow gauze here shown every flounce is edged with a ruching of turquoise blue raveled out silk, while the plisse sleeves are treated in the same way. Sleeves are mostly full and hanging, either falling in full folds to the wrist, as here pictured, or else the frill ends at the elbow, whence a baggy lace or muslin undersleeve is continued to the wrist; but, in any case, the sleeve fits the upper part of the arm closely, usually confined by a lace epaulet which is a continuation of the yoke or bolero.



SUMMER GOWN OF YELLOW GAUZE.

Quite in contrast with this delicate confection are the practical costumes of the second cut, but these fill an important place in the wardrobe for the summer vacation season. The first is a blue linen coat and skirt, trimmed with lace and black embroidered edging. A white silk scarf with fringed ends and tiny gold buttons goes well with the linen sailor hat to match. Second is a cream serge bolero and skirt trimmed with stitching and tiny gold buttons. Burned straw, trimmed with poppies and red velvet, forms the hat.



GENERAL UTILITY COSTUMES.

Very fascinating are the pretty white or colored linen dresses made with a simple plaited skirt and a loose but well fitted bolero with shoulder cape. A little embroidery adds to the chic of such a promenade gown, which should just daintily clear the ground.

AMY VARNUM.

Useful Hints.

Many summer cottagers have had the experience of a refractory lamp which persists in smoking in spite of all efforts of reform. Sometimes the evil can be cured by soaking the wick in strong vinegar and drying it thoroughly before returning it to the lamp. Soap rubbed on a complaining door hinge will silence its nerve wearing creak.

Delicious Coffee Sherbet.

A sherbet of coffee, if rightly made, is quite delicious. To a quart of coffee add a quart of heavy cream and twelve ounces of sugar with a few drops of vanilla essence. Then put this in a freezer with salted ice, keep the sides free as fast as the ice begins to cling and when it has reached the proper stage serve in small glasses.

Batter Pudding.

One pint milk, four tablespoonfuls flour, two eggs, a pinch of salt. Stir the flour smooth in part of the milk, add the eggs without beating and beat all together well. Add the remaining milk, stir well, pour into buttered dish, bake half an hour or until the whole top has risen up. Serve with sugar and cream while warm.

The Despised Cattail.

A man in Maine recently shipped to England 200 barrels of "cattails," the well known marsh weed. Over there they use the downy floss of the head for filling fine sofa pillows and cushions. Over here the stuff has no commercial value. Even a weed, it appears, is not without honor save in its own country.

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. Mining Shares to-day are a legitimate business investment when ordinary business caution and enterprise is exercised by those who manage the affairs of the company no other form of business brings in so large returns. One hundred shares in a mining company may not seem much of an investment, yet that number of Quincey or Tamarack shares brings an annual income of $600. One hundred shares of Calumet and Hecla stock

She Must be Stunning.

Here is a tribute of southern chivalry and eloquence to beauty:—"Miss Isabella Huffman, a most prepossessing, vivacious and highly accomplished young lady of Rome, Ga., is visiting the interesting and happy family of her brother, Conductor J. H. Huffman of Gadsden. The fair Miss Isabella is one of those modest, sweet young ladies that look the picture of loveliness, happiness and beauty, and is one of the most radiantly and beautifully luminous figures to be found among her sex; also is the rich and proud possessor of a most fascinating pair of sparkling peepers, supplemented with the most gorgeous, beautiful showers of coal black tresses, which fall so gracefully and nestle so closely, charmingly, admirably and covetously about her neck and shoulders in such rich profusion, and which would make a Grecian beauty or a queen envy could they but see her. Miss Huffman belongs to a distinguished Georgian family of the genuine thoroughbred type, refined, modest, cultured and intellectual, bordering somewhat on gilt-edged aristocracy, while sprightliness is set upon her lips, and in readiness of wit she is unsurpassed. The Mirror wishes for the fascinating and fair Miss Isabella a most deliciously pleasant time during her sojourn in the beautiful Queen City on the Coosa."

Mr. Healy and His Hat.

To the surprise of his fellow-members, Mr. Healy has appeared in the House of Commons in a new silk hat. He has told a correspondent of The Leinster Leader the history of the old hat, with which M.P.'s have grown familiar.

"After the fight in the House of Commons in 1893," he said, "the Mayor and corporation of Alexandria, Louisiana, cabled to me that, reading that my hat was broken in the melee, they had voted me a new hat and hat-case out of the public funds, and requested me to cable the size of my head. They then sent me a new hat, which I undertook, in acknowledging the gift, to wear to the utmost limits.

"The result is that I have been wearing a shabby hat, and I have been so joked about it that, after ten years' wear, with many a pang at parting with an old friend, I decided to discard the gift."

"My dear," said a frightened husband in the middle of the night, shaking his wife, "where did you put that bottle of strychnine?"

"On the shelf next to the peppermint."

"Oh!" he groaned. "I've swallowed it!"

"Well, for goodness sake," whispered his wife, "keep quiet or you'll wake the baby."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Will J. Lampton, the poet, is telling a sweetly poetic story these days, and he insists that it is perfectly true. Once upon a day he was making a driving tour through the country near Harper's Ferry, and stopped at a little wayside inn for refreshment. A sign in the window announced hot oysters in all styles were to be had, and Mr. Lampton ordered a fry.

"Don't you want a stew?" asked the man in charge.

"No," said Mr. Lambton, "I want a fry."

"Raw wouldn't do, would it?" queried the man, who seemed to entertain a prejudice against unnecessary exertion.

"No," repeated the poet, "I want a fry."

The man walked over to the stove and sought the frying pan. It was lying on the floor.

"Here!" said the man, "get out of that pan, Jim; the gentleman wants a fry."

Jim was a harmless, necessary cat.

ADDRESS—

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONT.

We saw a young man with two heads on his shoulders the other day, but did not consider it much of a curiosity. One belonged to his girl.

Dabber—Here's my latest picture, "The Battle." I tell you' war's a terrible thing.

Friend—Oh, I don't think it's as bad as it's painted.

Mistress—Did you tell the lady I was out?

Servant Girl—Yes, ma'am.

Mistress—Did she seem to have any doubts about it?

Servant Girl—No, ma'am; she said she knew you wasn't.

First 'Varsity Man—What was the result of the football match today?

Second Ditto—Oh, we beat them easily. We had only one collarbone fractured, while they had three broken legs and a couple of sprained ankles. They can't play football.

"How's this? You're already advertising again a dog lost. That's the third dog you've lost in a month!"

"Oh, it's just my luck! Since my daughter has been taking singing lessons I can't keep an animal in the place!"

Empress of India's Cost.

Hong Kong, Aug. 27.—The cost of the repairs to the Canadian Pacific Railroad's steamer Empress of India (from Vancouver, B.C., July 27, and Yokohama, Aug. 10, for Hong Kong, which was in collision with, near this port Aug. 18, and sank the Chinese cruiser Huang-Tai, is estimated at $20,000. This is exclusive of the damage to her propeller blades. It is said that the Chinese authorities will take legal proceedings to recover damages for the loss of the warship.

Seven Lives Lost at Sea.

South Norwalk, Conn, Aug. 27.—The two-master coasting schooner Willie L. Howton of Bangor, Me., was capsized six miles east of Green's Reef Light, in Long Island Sound, during the storm of Tuesday night. It is believed that the entire crew, numbering probably seven men, were drowned.

SELECTIONS

CIRCUS PEOPLE LIVE WELL.

They Are Provided With the Best of Everything.

"How do circus men and women live while on the road?" said a circus man. "Why, they live better than ever before. We carry almost 1,000 people, and I doubt if you can find one of that number who is discontented with his or her lot. Several years ago it was customary with the majority of circuses to provide inferior cars for their business staff and performers and compel the laborers to sleep under the big red wagons or the flat car. The passage of time has changed the order of things. Circus folk now travel as well as if not better than the majority of men and women who are constantly moving from one portion of the United States to the other in search of pleasure.

"Our business staff and performers live in spacious Pullman cars. The beds are soft and roomy, and the bedclothing is always fresh and clean. The circus has twelve Pullmans of this kind, and on each one is a porter, whose duty it is to polish the shoes of all the occupants each night, look after the laundry and make the beds and sweep and dust the cars. These cars are vestibuled, and at the head of the train is an extra long dining car, where the majority of the people are fed. This dinner is looked after by a competent steward, with a staff of good cooks and waiters, and breakfast and dinner are served there each day. The performers take their luncheon on the circus grounds immediately after parade.

"The laborers, including the drivers, canvas men, hostlers, property handlers and animal men, are served with three meals on the ground. The food provided is of the best, and there is always plenty of it. Every laborer has a bed. The drivers and hostlers have swinging bunks in the cars directly above their horses; the animal men are accommodated in cozy little staterooms fitted up in the big elephant cars, while the property handlers and canvas men sleep in coaches that greatly resemble tourist cars. Every one has good quarters and splendid food, and in consequence it is seldom that a complaint is heard."—Kansas City Journal.

BEST TROUSER VALUES.

You'll find evidence throughout our entire department that cash has lost none of its, almost magic effect in regulating prices.

BUYING FOR CASH has been one of the points most responsible for getting and retaining our reputation of "Best at least."

It effects all lines. Here is one on which the saving is especially noticeable.

A manufacturer had a quantity of fall Trousers on hand. We happened along and a cash offer for the lot took a goodly slice from the cost.

We offer every man the benefit of our advantage.

Just another evidence of our determination to have in this, as all departments, Lowest prices on dependable goods.

If you are too busy to come in, telephone and we will be pleased to send them for your examination. Such values stand inspection.

—A line of Mens' fine fall Worsted Trousers in very latest designs—perfectly tailored and finished. You have paid much more than we ask for the values $3.95

READY TO WEAR HATS.

The Ready to wear hat is a truly American idea. For the more expensive pattern hats Paris holds the lead, but to New York we go for what is newest and nobbiest for outing wear.

The results of our buyers' visit have arrived. With so many different styles choosing will not be difficult.

When you examine the good qualities throughout and see the excellent workmanship and appearance the price will not stop you.

—Latest New York Ready to Wear Hats.......................$2.75 to $6.00

SCOTCH LINOLEUMS.

"Scotch" never stood for higher quality than when applied to our Linoleums.

Nothing answers here but the best, whether one mile or ten thousand have to be covered in obtaining of the needed.

That's the reason we show Nairn's Scotch Linoleums—they are superior in every way.

New designs are here in abundance for Hall, Dining Room, Kitchen, etc, all with values undefeatable, at every price.

—Nairn's fine Linoleums, at.......................50c, 65c, 75c, 90c, $1.12

—Nairn's Inlaid Linoleums, at.......................$1.15 yd

MEN'S FALL HAT STYLES.

Hat Styles for men will in both stiff and soft varieties be of the wide full brim tendency.

Several new styles have arrived. Every best make is well represented. The natty American idea and more modest English block both are here to meet our fall demand.

There are many reasons why our hat trade increases each season. If you don't know the "why." It's worth your investigation.

Our new fixtures make inspection a pleasure. It will only take a few moments to fit you out. Every Hat guaranteed satisfactory.

MEN'S DRESSING GOWNS.

Have you a dressing gown? If not you do not realize the comfort these bring and the many uses to which they are adaptable.

When you go home, tired from the days work, discard coat and vest, collar and tie and don one of these garments. You'll not be without one once you have tried this.

Handy when taking a bath, handy when the door bell rings at night, handy whenever you are around the house. A mans wardrobe is incomplete without one.

Our new styles have arrived. They are neater in appearance and better in finish than we ever before displayed.

—Men's fine Mixed Tweed Dressing Gowns, neatly trimmed with Braid and cloth strapping .$7.50, $9.50

—Fine Smoking Jackets same cloth............$6.50

PREFERENTIAL REASONS.

Women who have used English flannelettes prefer them to any others. Here are some of the reasons given us daily. The colors are fast—the qualities are heavier—the width is good—they are more serviceable.

We were fortunate this season. By early buying we secured our assortment before the recent price advance.

That means a direct saving. We can sell you flannelette at 10c that others, not so fortunate in their purchasing must ask 12½c for.

This alone will increase the volume of our sales this season.

Repeats will considerably raise the the price. Every advantage is in early choosing.

REVISITING SCENES OF HIS BOYHOOD DAYS.

DR J. V. NEWTON, NOW OF TOLEDO, OHIO, SEES MANY CHANGES IN 32 YEARS.

Dr J. V. Newton and wife, of Toledo Ohio, are in the city visiting relatives. The doctor is a Hastings county old boy. He was born in Huntingdon township, being a son of the late Richard Newton. After an absence of 32 years he is visiting the scenes of his boyhood days and notes many changes and improvements in that time. Like many other Canadians who have cast their lots in the neighboring republic, his abilities were recognized and for several years he was County Commissioner of Lucan County, Ohio, and three years ago was elected sheriff of the same County, which position he now holds. The Doctor is a nephew of Mr. Salyer Vantassel, of Huntingdon, and Mr. W. H. Vantassel and Mrs. S. Clapp of this city. He leaves here Friday morning for Ottawa to attend a large gathering of the International Veterinary Surgeons' association.

SUMMER BABIES.

Their Safety Depends Upon Sensible and Nourishing Food.

The best, cheapest and safest food for infants is Lactated Food, a perfect substitute for mother's milk. Lactated Food makes cross and peevish babies good-natured, healthy and hearty. It is the safest food for infants in summer time, as it contains no cane sugar or uncharged starch to cause soreness of the stomach, irritation or irregularity of the bowels. If mothers would have their little ones securely protected from cholera infantum, dysentery and other hot weather dangers, they should feed them with Lactated Food if you have a sick baby, and have not tried Lactated Food, send your address, and we will mail you free of cost a tin of this life saving food. Echoes of the Great Trade Congress.

COL PONTON CONTRIBUTES AN EXCELLENT AND TIMELY ARTICLE ON THE SUBJECT.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—You have asked me to write a few lines on the recent gathering of representatives from all points of the British compass, who met at Montreal, in order to crystalize into the form of resolutions and recommendations the united opinion and sentiments of those who are endeavoring to serve the Empire by deeds as well as words; by unifying and consolidating it through the silken chains of commerce, as well as by the ties and bonds of British brotherhood.

This, the fifth Congress, was the first ever held out of the Home Land, and the experiment has passed into a successful experience. Successful, not merely on account of the thoughtful and thought-producing speeches made; successful, not merely through the influence of mind on mind, man on man, but also especially successful because before the close we Canadians realized more than ever the great Imperial heritage which it is our privilege and duty to maintain, and we also realized that, while we will be potent factors in that Empire's future, yet we are not the only colony or integral portion of the British Empire on which the sun shines.

Our visiting delegates, our compatriots from centre to circumference of the great national circle, have also realized the potentialities of the future which we have in store in this broad Dominion, if Canada is developed by British population, by British capital and under kindred British laws.

On the first day there were occasional remarks about possible dissolution of the Empire into its original component parts—the isolated atoms to which Mr. Chamberlain speaks—in the event of an inter-preferential tariff not being adopted, but on the last day no such suggestions or words were heard, for all had made up their minds that in dark days as in bright days, with summer skies on summer seas, or in times of storm and distress, all the colonies and dependencies would remain faithful and united, and that patriotism and pride of race had something in them beyond the mere sordid arguments of free trade or protection.

At the same time all admitted that the time for groping had gone past, that progress must now be made, that light must be sought, and that if any advantage could be given by the one to the other, that advantage should be accorded, that we must be drawn closer together, with a firm and independent front shown to the rest of the world.

It has been said that the Englishman sometimes is phlegmatic, the Scotchman sometimes dour, and the Irishman excitable. We did not find these characteristics developed abnormally. We found the citizens of Great Britain to be citizens of the world in the true sense, and a more hearty, genial, eager, earnest, alert and level-headed gathering of gentlemen never, I believe, met together, all animated with one idea, all possessing ideals, but all molded in the practical matrix of a life experience. "ALL FOR EACH AND EACH FOR ALL" is the summing up of what is desired to be attained, but to attain this, some selfish interests must be subordinated, some provincial sensitiveness must be kept in check, and some Bourassa-ism suppressed.

No doubt at some early meeting of the City Council and the Board of Trade, His Worship Mayor Graham and Mr. J. W. Johnson, who both did excellent service for the city and district, will have an opportunity of eloquently expressing their views and their impressions. I have simply, at your request, introduced the subject in cold type, and I now leave it in their hands to develop for our mutual pleasure and profit.

We feel that we represented a district of which we could well feel proud, a district which not merely as the home of the U. E. Loyalists, and as a patriotic centre, but also as the producer and furnisher of so large a portion of the food supply of the Empire, can not be disregarded in any survey of Canada undertaken by these embassadors of trade, who are now for the first time traversing our fertile fields and cementing the ties of friendship and community of interest with Canada's loyal sons.

WILLIAM N. PONTON.

Caught a Maskinonge.

Ellis Reid, Harry Gordon and Gordon Reid, while trolling near Massassaga Park yesterday afternoon, captured a maskinonge which weighed 15 pounds.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

Copies of handsome, descriptive literature relating to this country can be had free by applying to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Grand Trunk Railway, Toronto. 14dlf

RELIANCE WILL WIN DECIDING RACE.

Sailed Away from the Challenger and Ahead by a Large Margin.

British Boat Made Her Poorest Showing of the Whole Series.

New York, August 27.—The wind this morning was very light, about 5 miles an hour, and the prospects were not bright for a satisfactory race

The starting gun was fired at 11 a.m., both boats going over the line nearly together. Shortly afterwards Reliance blanketed the Shamrock, which had to come about. Reliance seemed to gain slightly from the start.

11.08—Boats are on starboard tack, carrying nearly all their canvas.

11.12—Reliance is pointing higher and footing faster than the Shamrock, although this is supposed to be the latter's weather.

11.14—Reliance is more than holding her own.

11.30—Reliance leads by half-mile, wind increasing.

11.45—Reliance seems to be gaining on Shamrock at most surprising rate. Boats now on port tack. Reliance leads by about two minutes.

12 m.—Shamrock is far behind her work of last Tuesday. Reliance now has a clear lead over time allowance. The breeze is now dying down and a haze hides the yachts.

12.31—Wind is freshening again. Reliance about 3 1-4 minutes ahead.

12.46—Reliance is within four miles of turn. She points higher than Shamrock and is still increasing her lead. Wind is now twelve miles an hour.

12.50—The Reliance is making an unexpected gain on present tack.

12.55—Reliance has covered 12 miles of the course.

1.00—Reliance is leading by 8 minutes and is within one mile of the turn.

1.55—Both yachts have turned the mark. The time was:

Reliance 1.42.00
Shamrock........ .... 1.48.30

There is no reason why yachts should not finish in time.

2.45—Shamrock has just been sighted, and is far astern of the Reliance.

3.25—The Reliance is within 4 miles of the finishing line and is leading the Shamrock by about 2 miles. The Reliance will probably finish within time limit.

Just received, a carload of Peaches, Plums, Tomatoes, Melons.—Jas. Wallace & Co.

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of these magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books, with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

DEATH OF AN AGED LADY.

MRS. ANGELINE G. CANNIFF SUCCUMBED THE MAJORITY THIS MORNING.

Mrs. Angeline G. Canniff, widow of the late Mr. Daniel Canniff, died this morning at her late residence, Pinnacle street. Deceased had been ill for ten days with pneumonia. Mrs. Canniff had been for some years a resident of this city, but the greater portion of her life was spent at Canifton. She was in her 76th year. The deceased was an estimable and Christian lady, and had been for a number of years a devout member of the Methodist church, having attended the Tabernacle. The only surviving members of the family are two grandchildren, Messrs. Albert Hughes and Wallace Howe, who reside in Montreal.

THE SAILING RACES.

WIND WAS LIGHT YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, AND TIME MADE SLOW.

The sailing races on the bay yesterday afternoon attracted a goodly number of spectators. Owing to the wind being exceptionally light all the events were not carried out. The yachts did not compete.

In the skiff class the Viva, in order to retain the cup for the season, sailed over the course alone.

Punt Race.

There were five entries for this event, namely, The King of the Waters, Blue Bird, Strathcona, Maple Leaf and Ireland. It was a triangular course, and the craft took considerable time to sail over it. The King of the Waters again proved to be the victor, Blue Bird being second and Ireland third. The other two dropped out of the race after going a portion of the course. The three boats which finished are owned by parties who reside on the west side of the river. There will be no more races this season for the trophies offered for competition.

DEATHS

CANNIFF—In Belleville, on Thursday morning, August 27, 1903, Angeline Gunsolus, widow of the late Daniel Canniff, aged 75 years, 10 months.

The funeral will take place from her late residence, Pinnacle street, on Friday, August 28th, at 3 p.m. Services at the house at 2.30.

THE BATH ROOM.

Best Ways of Keeping Everything Neat and Wholesome.

No more scrupulous task awaits the housemaid than the daily care of the bath room, and as modern sanitation has made her task comparatively a light one, it should be most faithfully performed. The rug, preferably of washable material, should be daily shaken and the floor, if of tile, wiped with a damp cloth. Wooden floors should be dusted with one of the long handled lamb's wool brushes used for floors, especial pains being taken to reach under and behind the fixtures to remove every accumulation.

That everything thus collected should be burned seems obvious, but long and rigorous training is sometimes required to persuade the ignorant not to drop them down the water closet. Nothing is more provocative of plumber's bills than to do so, even bits of soap, harmless as they seem, having a tendency to collect all other solid particles and cause an accumulation which it will cost much to remove.

The interior of the catch basin must be daily cleansed with a long handled, stiff brush, slightly curved at the end. Do not buy a cheap one, as the bristles will fall out.

Avoid the use of sapolio or cleansing powders for cleaning the marble basin and the bath tub. Strong soapsuds, with ammonia or soda, should be used now and then, but for the daily care of these fixtures, as well as the water faucets, the quickest and best cleanser is gasoline. Moisten a small cloth with this, and a quick rubbing will cause the streaks of greasy dirt to disappear as if by magic. All nickel is at once brightened by its use. There are objections to its odor, but fresh air from the windows, opened at the top and bottom, will remove this.

For safety never do this cleansing with gasoline when there is artificial light of any kind in the room, never light a match while it is being done and use only a small bottle for holding it, hanging this outside the bath room window when not using it, with the wire fastened to its neck for the purpose.

For cleansing the overflow holes in the wash basin use a small bristle brush, see that there are no accumulations in the openings where the water runs off and wipe all shelves frequently.

THOS. E. MEPHAM, Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

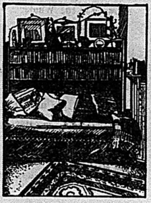
McINTOSH BROS.

A RESTING PLACE.

A Divan With Plenty of Pillows and Books at Hand.

A resting place in the sitting room, with an economical use of the long wall space at one side of the fireplace, is shown in the illustration. The correct number of pillows for a divan of this kind is said to correspond with the days of the week, and the coloring and design may be as varied as the tale of seven days.

The shelves introduced above the lounge are for books and bric-a-brac, and the English ivy trailing over the picture frames adds a graceful as well as an altogether pleasant touch of nature to the room.



A COMFORTABLE CORNER.

This arrangement was the ingenious device of a member of the family who liked to have a book within arm's reach when taking a half hour's rest in the daytime. The brackets to support the shelves were purchased at the hardware store and fastened to the two upright boards that faced the narrow wall space made by the fireplace. The three long shelves were then laid on the brackets. The construction was so simple that no outside help was necessary, only a girl's fingers being employed to make the corner the success in the way it is pictured.

Regular bookcases may be beyond the economy necessary to be practiced in the cottage, but shelves of whitewood stained and shellacked or of pine treated to a paint—in either case the motive being to bring them to the same finish as the woodwork already in the room—may be introduced at a comparatively small expense.—Designer.

The Seam For Wash Linens.

The overlaid seam is worth considering where wash linen gowns are concerned. The "inside out" of the ordinary seam is so hideously shown up by the action of the iron that it is or should be tabooed. So perhaps one of the most practically useful skirts for the purpose has its seams well overlaid and stitched down, a hip yoke piece molded perfectly to the figure receiving the skirt at the top, except in the immediate front, where the smartly cut front gore runs up to the waist itself. An alternative model is the popular box plaited skirt, and here the turnings of the upper part of the seams before the box plaits begin, are trebly stitched on either side and thus give almost the effect of overlaying and resist the deadly efforts of the laundress. The seams of coats and boleros, occurring as they do only on the shoulders and under the arms, are likewise best overlaid and stitched, the sleeve seams only being stitched naturally and bound inside without being pressed open in the usual fashion.

Chicken Pie.

Sift together two and a quarter quarts of flour, two and a half teaspoons of baking powder, half a teaspoon of salt. Rub into the flour a cup of lard and a third of a pound of butter. Moisten with a pint of milk. Place on a board and roll in one and two-thirds pounds of butter in four rollings. Line the sides of the dish and arrange four chickens stewed until nearly tender, with largest bones removed. Cover with the remaining crust; cut an opening in center for the steam to escape. Bake slowly for three hours.

Useful Javelle Water.

Javelle water is one of the most useful of family supplies, especially at this season. Handkerchiefs never get so hopelessly yellow as during the summer, when they are used to wipe perspiring faces and hands, but a bath for ten or fifteen minutes in a weak solution of javelle water will restore them to a clear complexion Javelle water, too, will remove obstinate stains of ink and iron rust. The stained portion should be rubbed in the fluid and then washed thoroughly.

Fashion Echoes.

Black still holds ground, especially when relieved by white or by silver.

Dresses seem too large—bigger in the waist than we should have thought it possible we could wear them a few years ago and much too large in the sleeves for comfort.

Black flowers are having a great following. Mingled with the natural tinted blooms, they enhance the beauty of the latter by contrast.

The short woman may dress her tresses high and the tall woman as blond as she can, so as to counterbalance natural defects or enhance beauties of form or figure.

The bell sleeve is taking many forms and growing fuller from the elbow; the frillings at the edge are as minute as possible, and frequently bordered with black lace.

Self colored soft batistes and crash linens are attractive for summer wear.

Colored lace to correspond to the color of the gauze, voile or mousseline represents a taking idea.

An ostrich feather fan is a fashionable wedding present this season.

COOL DRINKS.

Some Good Notions In the Way of Liquid Refreshment.

Among a number of delicious and refreshing drinks for the heated term, the following are suggested by the Boston Cooking School Magazine:

Lemon Fizz.—Grate the yellow rind from three lemons and squeeze out the juice of six. Pour over this two quarts of boiling water, stir in half a pound of granulated sugar and cover closely. When lukewarm, add half a small cake of compressed yeast that has been dissolved in one cup of lukewarm water. Cover and let stand overnight. The following morning bottle and tie down the cork. Put in a cool place. It is ready for use in a day. When poured into glasses, it effervesces and has a sparkling effect.

Silver Top.—Take the juice of six lemons and the grated rind of three. Boil two pounds of sugar in three quarts of water half an hour. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, add to the sirup while boiling and let cool. Add the lemon. Let stand overnight and strain. Fill glasses half full of shaved ice and add the sirup and a few ripe strawberries or cherries.

Fruit Punch.—Boil a pound of sugar, a pint of water and the thin yellow rind of a lemon ten minutes. Strain, and while hot add a pound of stoned cherries, a pint of currant juice and a grated pineapple. Add two quarts of water, the strained sirup and the juice of six lemons and four oranges. Let stand a few hours before serving. Half fill the glass with ice broken to size of hailstones and fill with the punch

Lime Squash.—Put a tablespoonful of simple sirup (one pound of sugar boiled ten minutes with one pint of water) in a glass. Squeeze in the juice of two limes, and add a tiny pinch of baking soda and two tablespoonfuls of shaved ice. Fill with water, stir and drink while effervescing. This can be varied infinitely. Crushed strawberries or cherries may be added or a few sprigs of fresh borage, which has the flavor of celery.

Iceland Shiver.—Mix the juice of four lemons and two oranges with six tablespoonfuls of simple sirup. Fill a glass with shaved ice. Add four tablespoonfuls of the mixed juice and sirup and sip with a spoon.

Russian Cup.—Make a sirup of two pounds of sugar and three quarts of water. While hot add two large cucumbers, sliced. Let stand two hours and strain. Add a pint of strong tea and the juice of six lemons. Serve with cracked ice.

Parfait Amour (Perfect Love).—Wash some large white grapes, peel and remove the seeds. Half fill glasses with the grapes, then fill with crushed ice. With a spoon press the ice on to the grapes to bruise them and cause the juice to flow. Add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, the same amount of orange juice and a tablespoonful of simple sirup. Let stand half an hour. Give a few stirs with a spoon, add a few strawberries, and fill the glass with water. Serve with a straw.

Peach Cup.—Weigh ten pounds of peaches. Peel, cut in slices and put in layers with sugar. Use one pound of sugar. Let stand two hours. Add two quarts of water and strain through cheese cloth, pressing out all the juice. Add a pint of strawberries, in slices, or raspberries, and a few sprays of bruised mint. Pour this on to a pint of cracked ice.

A Summer Breakfast Dish.

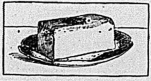
The agreeable acidity of tomatoes makes them good food at this season. An appetizing dish is prepared with these and eggs. Wash as many round, smooth tomatoes as there are persons to be served. Cut a thin slice from the top of each for a cover and scoop out a sufficient space to admit an egg. Put in each a little butter, drop in the unbroken white and yolk, salt and pepper, place a dot of butter on the top of the egg, replace the cover and bake for about twenty minutes, or until the tomato is tender. Grated cheese may be sprinkled over the egg before the cover is put on.

Things to Do For a Burn.

A mixture of limewater and sweet oil, the proportions for which are understood by all druggists, is the best of remedies for a burn. If applied at once it will "take out the fire" and in most cases will prevent blistering. Bicarbonate of soda, too, if sprinkled on a burn as soon as it is received will prevent pain and blister. Some people claim that butter is to be preferred to all other remedies for this purpose, and others cover the place with flour to exclude the air.

A Dainty Dessert.

Decorate the bottom of a chilled mold with candied cherries. Cover with liquid orange jelly and set aside to become firm. Mix one pint of thick cream, three-fourths a cup of sugar and a cup of pineapple juice scalded and cooled. Whip very light. Turn into the mold, filling to overflow.



PINEAPPLE MOUSSE WITH ORANGE JELLY.

Press the cover down over paper and let stand buried in equal parts of ice and salt three or four hours.

For the orange jelly soften half a package of gelatin in half a cup of cold water. Add half a cup of boiling water and one cup of sugar. When the liquid is cool and the sugar dissolved, strain over the juice of a lemon and a pint of orange juice. Less than half the recipe will be sufficient to use in the mold with the pineapple mousse.—Boston Cooking School Magazine.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £25,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * 'Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

YACHTS FAILED TO FINISH

Fourth Race For America's Cup Was Declared Off.

Exciting Struggle of Reliance to Reach the Home Mark Before the Time Limit Gun Was Fired—Lost by a Third of a Mile, With Shamrock III. Two Miles Astern—Capt. Wringe Repeated His Blunder of Tuesday.

New York, Aug. 28.—With Reliance less than third of a mile from the finish and Shamrock III. fully two miles astern of the defender, the fourth race for the America's Cup, yesterday was declared off because of the expiration of the time limit of five and one-half hours.

The Reliance beat the Shamrock hopelessly in the fifteen miles of windward work, rounding the outer mark 12 minutes and 30 seconds ahead of her, a gain in actual time of 11 minutes and 29 seconds, and down the wind she steadily increased her lead. The real race of the day was not against Shamrock, but with the exciting struggle of Reliance in the last half hour to reach the finish line before the Regatta Committee fired the gun which should announce the expiration of the time limit. Had the wind freshened 20 minutes earlier than it did the cup series would have ended yesterday with three straight wins for the defender.

Shamrock Crossed Line Behind.

Fully as discouraging as the sailing qualities displayed by the challenger was the manner in which she was handled. The Reliance skipper again not only out manoeuvred his rival in the battle for position at the start, but worse still for the supporters of Shamrock III., Capt. Wringe repeated his blunder of Tuesday. He crossed the line 51 seconds behind Reliance. Both boats, it is true, went over after the smoke of the handicap gun, but where both are handicapped, it is only the sternmost craft which actually suffers.

It was not a pleasant day on the water, and the observation fleet, which put out to sea to witness the race was hardly more than half as large as on the precedingdays. The course was laid fifteen miles dead into the wind and return from Sandy Hook lightship.

At the end of the first hour Shamrock was beaten, and the interest waned.

The Reliance was a good bit up to windward after the start, while Shamrock III. tried to make up first by footing faster. At the next tack, 25 minutes after the start, Shamrock had lost ground, and as they lay about the same course was a quarter of a mile astern of the American craft. Reliance steadily gained on each tack thereafter, Barr declining all invitations to split tacks, as he had Shamrock beaten. At the turn Shamrock was a mile astern.

For the Run Home.

After rounding the float for the run home, and setting big ballooners, the wind, which had strengthened to six or seven knots on the beat, died down, and the towering clouds of canvas drifted lazily down an ocean lane, a mile wide, between the two divisions of the excursion fleet. Even in the light air it was astonishing how the defender slipped along. The gap between her and the challenger steadily widened until two miles separated them. Half an hour from home, when the spectators had abandoned any idea that the finish line could be reached in time, the wind suddenly freshened and Reliance came bowling down at a merry clip. But the wind had come too late. Summary.

	Start.	Turn.	Finish.

Another Canoe Fatality.

Quebec, Aug. 28.—A distressing accident occurred Wednesday at Seven Islands, by which a young man named Frank McMahon, aged 30, met a watery grave. McMahon was out in a canoe. It capsized, and he was thrown out. The current caught him and he was carried over the rapids.

Hotel Thieves Working.

Guelph, Aug. 28.—Some time during Wednesday night an entrance was affected into the hotel of Ignatius Lehman, at Aberfoyle, and the burglars carried away the till, containing $69, several bottles of whiskey, six boxes of cigars and a bunch of keys.

Persian Shah Threatened.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—The Christian Orient, a German missionary paper, published in Berlin, prints correspondence from Teheran, alleging that the leaders of the Persian Mohammedan Church have served notice on the Shah that unless he purges the country of foreign religious and commercial influences, especially British and Russian, the church will precipitate a revolution.

ROOSEVELT'S PROMPT ORDER

U.S. European Squadron to Proceed to Beirut, Syria.

American Vice-Consul Magelssen Assassinated While Riding in His Carriage on Sunday—Demand Made Upon Turkey For Immediate Punishment of the Guilty Persons—Dead Vice-Consul a Native of Minnesota.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt last night issued orders that the American European squadron, under command of Rear-Admiral Cotton, should proceed at once to Beirut, Syria, in order to be in readiness to support any demand the United States may make on account of the assassination of Vice-Consul Magelessen.

MAGELSSEN MURDERED.

U.S. Vice-Consul Assassinated Sunday While Riding in His Carriage.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The State Department has received a cablegram from United States Minister Leishman at Constantinople announcing that William C. Magelssen, United States Vice-Consul at Beirut, Syria, was assassinated Sunday while riding in a carriage. The American Minister immediately brought the crime to the attention of the Government and demanded action by Turkey.

Acting Secretary Loomis yesterday cabled Minister Leishman instructing him to demand the immediate arrest and punishment of the persons guilty of the murder. No demand for money in behalf of the man's family has yet been made, but that probably will follow.

Magelssen was a native of and was appointed from Minnesota.

U.S. Warships Near.

Admiral Cotton, commanding the United States European squadron, has been cabled by the Navy Department to have his vessels in readiness to move to Beirut, which is on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean Sea, in case the demands of the United States Government upon the Turkish Government are not complied with. The Brooklyn and the San Francisco are at Villeiranche and the Machia is at Genoa.

Magelssen, who was a Scandinavian, was appointed vice-consul at Beirut September 20, 1899, by Consul Gabriel Bieravudal, who is of the same nationality. At the time of his appointment as Vice-Consul he was a Consular clerk in Turkey. He was born at Bratsburg, Filmore County, Minn.

U.S. Will Insist on Punishment.

The American Government will insist that the local authorities be punished if they were derelict in their duty, and that full measure of punishment be given the actual perpetrators of the outrage.

Beirut is a city on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean Sea, and is a place of considerable commercial importance.

Porte Discredits Report.

Acting Secretary Loomis received a remarkable cablegram from Minister Leishman last night, in which the latter stated that he had called at the Turkish office at Constantinople this evening, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs emphatically denied knowledge of the assassination. He also attempted to discredit it.

Express Blown Up.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 28.—The eastbound daily express from Budapest to Constantinople was blown up near Kuleli Burgas, about 25 miles south of Adrianople, early yesterday morning. Seven persons were killed, and 15 were injured. Dynamite bombs were used. Every car was smashed. Apparently the outrage was the work of revolutionists who traveled on the train.

Charged With Outrages.

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—Forty Turkish officers have been ordered to return to Constantinople to answer for the outrages committed at Krushevo.

Ferdinand Doomed.

Vienna, Aug. 28.—It is reported from Sofia that the police have discovered a tunnel leading under the Konak of Prince Ferdinand. It is thirty yards long, and it is believed was constructed with the intention of blowing up the palace.

Salmon Industry Threatened.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 28.—At a meeting of the Fraser River Canners' Association a resolution was ordered to be sent to Hon. R. Prefontaine, Minister of Fisheries, asking for prohibition of all fishing on the Fraser River from Aug. 29 to Sept. 16 inclusive, in order that the balance of the sockeyes remaining outside may be enabled to reach the spawning grounds. Telegrams have been sent to British Columbia members requesting their support of the resolution.

King Peter's Troubles.

London, Aug. 28.—The Daily Mail correspondent at Belgrade says King Peter is determined to suppress the military malcontents with an iron hand. On Tuesday three army colonels, two captains and a newspaper editor were condemned to death for participating in a plot which was discovered and rendered abortive. Despite this, however, says the correspondent, the King is obviously in the hands of the recent regicides, who are causing a veritable reign of terror.

Five Men Fall 30 Feet.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 28.—A scaffold with five men collapsed at the C.P.R. work shops, Hochelaga, yesterday morning, and fell a distance of over thirty feet. Several of the men were badly injured, one of them named Burbois having a fractured skull, and is not expected to recover.

Mr. Gamey at Milverton.

Milverton, Aug. 28.—Mr. R. R. Gamey, M.P.P. for Manitoulin, was a speaker at the Public Library picnic here yesterday. His address was not along political lines, but consisted of a glowing eulogy of New Ontario and a criticism of the judges who acted as commissioners in the investigation of the bribery charges.

Vesuvius Quieting Down.

Rome, Aug. 28.—The eruption of Mount Vesuvius is slowly decreasing. The stream of lava has diminished in velocity, having widened to about 100 feet. Several fissures near the crater are enlarging, some towards Naples being 35 feet wide. A close watch is kept to prevent tourists approaching the dangerous spot.

Death Rate Increased.

Toronto, Aug. 28.—The monthly bulletin of the Ontario Board of Health, just issued, shows that the rate of deaths from all causes was 11.5 per 1,000, as compared with July of 1902, when the rate was 11.3 per 1,000. Smallpox cases show a substantial improvement, and diphtheria a slight increase.

Bloodhounds Seek Murderer.

Windsor, Aug. 28.—The search for Emil Waltz, the alleged Detroit murderer, in Essex County, still continues, but as yet no clue has been found. Wednesday morning, Sergt. Nash of Windsor took several of his bloodhounds in an effort to get the scent, but the attempt was unsuccessful.

Given the Red Hat.

Rome, Aug. 28.—At the Vatican yesterday afternoon the red hat of a cardinal was conferred on Cardinal Herrero Y. Espinosa, Archbishop of Valencia. Cardinal Herrero was at the point of death during the conclave, but has now recovered, though still weak.

THE BELATED COMMISSION

John Bertram of Toronto Appointed to the Chairmanship.

Mr. Reford of Montreal and Mr. Fry of Quebec Are His Associates on the Transportation Commission — Grand Trunk Debate—Mr. Brock in Favor of Government Ownership If It Would Pay.

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The names of the gentlemen who are to compose the belated Transportation Commission were announced by the Prime Minister in the House yesterday. John Bertram of Toronto is to be chairman of the commission. Associated with him are Mr. Reford of Montreal and Mr. Fry of Quebec. This announcement was drawn from Sir Wilfrid by W. R. Brock, who, in the course of a vigorous criticism of the national transcontinental railway project referred to the Government's delay in making the appointments.

Mr. Brock declared himself in favor of Government ownership of railways if Government ownership will pay.

The longest speech of the day was made by Wade of Annapolis. It was one of the strongest arguments in favor of the contract that has yet been made in the House. He went after E. B. Osler of Toronto in respect to the latter's interpretation of two important provisions in the contract. He declared that none of the material used in the construction of the railway will be exempt from customs duties. The exemption would only apply to materials imported directly by the Government, and would therefore not be in force until the railway is handed over to the lessees.

The other speakers were Messrs. Malouin of Quebec Centre, A. McLaren of Perth, Bureau of Three Rivers, E. A. Lancaster, Wm. Ross of South Ontario, D. Henderson of Halton, and Stevens of Kent.

Crops in the West.

Winnipeg, Aug. 28.—The Northwestern Grain Dealers' Association issued their annual report showing their findings on the yield of all grain in the west. Wheat area under cultivation 3,123,663 acres, estimated yield 57,163,032 bushels; average 18.3 bushels.

Oats area under cultivation, 1,101,333 acres; estimated yield 40,418,921 bushels; average 36.7 bushels. Barley, 381,125 acres; estimated yield 10,900,461 bushels; average 36.7 bushels. Barley, 381,125 acres; estimated yield 10,900,461 bushels; average 28.6 bushels. Flax, area 64,639 acres, estimated yield 743,318 bushels; average 11.5 bushels.

Circus Train Bumped.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—The third section of the Barnum and Bailey circus train, composed almost entirely of sleeping cars for the performers, was struck at Wildwood, Pa., on the Pittsburg & Western Railroad early yesterday by a runaway freight train. The forty people on board were shaken up, but escaped serious injury.

Laurier Greets Blair

Ottawa, Aug. 28. — Hon. A. G. Blair was in the House yesterday, after an absence of some days. At the close of the morning's sitting, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and he heartily shook hands and exchanged greetings.

SECOND DAY O.R.A.

Crowe of Guelph Won the Most Exciting Event the Gold Medal of the City of Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 28.—There was a marked improvement in the shooting yesterday at Long Branch on the second day of the O.R.A. meet. The weather conditions were much the same as on the first day, being cool and cloudy, with a steady wind blowing from the east and slightly to the rear of the marksmen. The wind bothered a number of the less experienced men, but there was a nice soft light, and the day was considered most favorable for good scoring.

Good Scores in Extra Series.

A number of good scores were made in the extra series. Staff-Sergeant Bayles of the Grenadiers made a possible at 800 yards—five bull's eyes—and followed them up with three equally as good in shooting off the tie. Capt. Tom Mitchell made a full score in the Austen match at 200 yards, and Orderly Sergeant Phillips did the same at 500 yards in the rapid firing extra series. The 48th Highlanders were especially proud of winning first place in the Toronto match with Private Smith, and the Cornwall and York contest with Private Elliott. The Mulock, Tait-Massey and Gzowski matches will be concluded to-day.

Man From West Wins.

Probably the most interesting contest of the day took place in the Macdonald Match, named after the late Judge Macdonald of Guelph, an ex-president of the association. The conditions called for seven shots at a target which remained exposed but 1¼ minutes and the contestants were not permitted to use magazines. Staff-Sergt. Richardson of Vancouver was highly congratulated on making a possible at this range, 500 yards, and the good scoring was further shown by the four ties at 33 for second place, each of the city regiments having a representative with this mark, and the four prizes after the first were equally divided among them. There were sixty-five prizes in all in this competition, representing a total of $269, including fifteen for tyros, and the lowest score was 25.

Tie For First Place.

The Osler Match was also shot off yesterday morning and resulted in a tie for first place between Col. Sylvester, the successor of the doughty Sam. Hughes in command of the 45th Regiment, and Private Weston of the 13th of Hamilton. This competition is named after President E. B. Osler, M.P., who presented $100 to the purse, which amounts to $258, divided into sixty-five prizes. It is open to active members of the militia, retired officers and men of twelve years standing, and is shot in uniform. The conditions prevented the use of any aids to sight, excepting clear glass spectacles, and the scores were considered very good under the circumstances. After the first two scores of 34, there were six men tied at 33, and eighteen followed with 32 each. Twenty-three scores of 29 were counted out.

Crowe of Guelph Gets It.

The second stage of the City of Toronto match developed a very close and exciting contest. Out of the 50 men left in the competition from yesterday, three tied for first place, and it was necessary to shoot off for the gold medal presented by the city, which finally went to Staff-Sergeant Charles R. Crowe of the 30th Regiment, Guelph. Private J. S. Smith of the 48th Highlanders won first place in the match, Sergeant-Major Huggins of Hamilton second, and Sergeant Crowe third, but these positions were reversed in the contest for the medal.

Cornwall and York Match.

The afternoon was chiefly taken up with the Duke of Cornwall and York match, named in commemoration of the visit of the Duke and Duchess, now the Prince and Princess of Wales, in October, 1901. The first prize of $25, and a silver medallion of Their Royal Highnesses was won by Pte. W. A. Elliott of the 48th Highlanders, with a score of 68 out of 70, he having made a possible at the 800 yards range. The second prize, $20, with a similar medallion in bronze, was captured by Staff-Sergeant Crowe of Guelph. Other prize winners were: Pte. J. Drysdale, 3rd V.R., 67, $15; Capt. W. Brown, 12th, 66, $10; W. H. Forrest, B.C.R.A., 65, $10.

Manitoba Team For Ottawa.

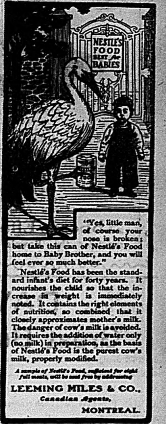
Manitoba's rifle team for Ottawa comprises the following: Capt. Wynne, Capt. C. W. Mitchell, Sergeant-Major Morley, Col.-Sergeant Youhill, Col.-Sergt. Simpson, Col.-Sergt. Tinney, Pte. H. Sturgeon, Pte. Fleming (Brandon), Sergeant Doherty, Pte. Durrand. They leave to-day.

Death Result of Injuries.

Hamilton, Aug. 28.—After lingering at death's door for nearly three weeks, Mrs. Freeth, wife of John Freeth, contractor, passed away last evening at 8 o'clock. Two weeks ago Sunday night she tried to get off a radial car at the corner of Gore and Catharine streets, but the car started before she could alight and she was thrown violently on her head on the pavement. She was picked up unconscious, and never regained her consciousness. Her skull was fractured.

DURING THE WARM WEATHER.

Even during the warmest weather Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is pleasant to take, and agreeable to the stomach. For this reason it is the ideal remedy for consumption. Made of odorless and tasteless petroleum, glycerine, and hypophosphites, it is better in every way than emulsions made of fish oils or other fats.



NESTLE'S FOOD BEST for BABIES

"Yes, little man, of course your nose is broken; but take this can of Nestlé's Food home to Baby Brother, and you will feel ever so much better."

Nestlé's Food has been the standard infant's diet for forty years. It nourishes the child so that the increase in weight is immediately noted. It contains the right elements of nutrition, so combined that it closely approximates mother's milk. The danger of cow's milk is avoided. It requires the addition of water only (no milk) in preparation, as the basis of Nestlé's Food is the purest cow's milk, properly modified.

A sample of Nestlé's Food, sufficient for eight full meals, will be sent free by addressing

NORTH SHORE ARMED.

Annual Repetition of the Nova Scotian Excursionists in the Amusement of Alarming North Shore Settlers.

Port Arthur, Aug. 28.—From what can be learned of the row which took place at Chapleau between the farm laborer excursionists and the town constables, it appears that several participants were more or less injured.

A general fight followed the efforts of the constables to prevent the looting of stores by the harvesters from the Maritime Provinces. The harvesters drew knives and revolvers in an effort to escape arrest, and succeeded in beating off the constables. One constable was seriously injured by being struck with a bottle, and another received a slash from a knife. One harvester got a scalp wound from a flying bottle.

For the past three years the people along the north shore have been compelled to protect their lives and their stores with firearms from the attack of excursionists from Nova Scotia.

KILLED IN A RUNAWAY.

Young Farmer Named Hood Meets Death Near Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 28.—A sad accident occurred in Sydenham, eight miles from Owen Sound, Wednesday morning, by which Joseph T. Hood, a promising young farmer, lost his life. He was driving a team of horses down a hill near the Rish block when some boards on the top of the load slipped forward, striking the animals, which ran away. Hood was caught in between the wheel and terribly crushed, his ribs being driven into his lung. He was conscious long enough to tell his story, but died at 9 o'clock. The young man is a son of James Hood, who resides in the second concession of Sydenham, near Garry.

Fire Engines Dislodged the Fathers.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The expulsion of the Redemptorist Fathers from their monastery at Les Sables d'Olonne, Department of Vendee, was carried out yesterday after an exciting experience.

The barricaded building was surrounded at 3 o'clock in the morning by soldiers, police and firemen. The bells summoned a crowd of people to its defence. Missiles were thrown out of the windows, and several of the besiegers were injured.

After four hour's siege the barricades were forced and the fathers retreated to the roof, where they continued their defence, until dislodged by streams of water from a number of fire engines. Many arrests were made.

Fatal Ship Collision.

Stonington, Conn., Aug. 28.—The three-masted schooner John Booth from Long Cove, Maine, for New York, was run into and sunk during Wednesday night by the Metropolitan Line steamship H. M. Whitney of Boston just west of New Haven harbor, and five members of the crew and one passenger were lost. Captain Thomas of the Booth was rescued by the Whitney, while one of the crew, Carl A. Hessel, colored, was picked up by the steamer Maine of the Stonington line.

THE LIBERAL "PREFERENCE" FOR GREAT BRITAIN.

It has been the fashion for Grit journals to speak much and often about the "preference" which Laurier is supposed to have given Great Britain in matters of trade. It will be remembered that so great a writer as Kipling even was humbugged by it, his poem, "Our Lady of the Snows," being the outcome of his admiration for the "unselfish" action of Laurier and his friends. Conservatives have many times pointed out that the so-called "preference was a hollow mockery—a gilded figure of speech, which would deceive no ordinary man of business. But the Grit papers still kept up their pretence, and in the end, perhaps, believed it themselves. As to how this "preference" has been working out lately, a study of the trade returns for the twelve months ending last June plainly shows, for during that time our purchases from the United States increased much more rapidly than our imports from the Mother Country. Last year's imports for consumption were valued at $233,787,000. Of this no less than $137,605,000 came from the United States, Great Britain shipping only $58,893,000 or not nearly half so much. In the same period Great Britain bought $131,202,000 worth of Canadian goods and the United States $71,783,000. We bought from Great Britain less than half as much as Britain bought from us, while we bought from the United States almost twice as much as that nation bought from us.

The situation does not improve. We find in the current issue of Bradstreets a statement based on Canadian returns which show that in 1896 the Canadian imports from Great Britain were 29.8 per cent. of the whole Canadian imports, while 52.9 per cent. came from the United States. It was the habit of the Liberal leaders to blame the Conservative tariff for this. But in 1897 the proportion of British imports was 26.4 and since then it has not been higher than 25.2. Meanwhile the percentage of imports from the United States has increased from 52.9 to 59. So much for the "preference."

The Shamrock seems to have been handled worse than ever in yesterday's race, and her start, the despatches say, was the poorest ever made by a cup challenger. Why didn't Sir Thomas get that old chap who used to handle the Britannia to sail this boat. Nobody got the best of him at the start or at any other time.

The impression seems to prevail in some quarters, both in the United States and Canada, that Sir Thomas Lipton is not trying very hard to win the America's cup for fear he may lose prestige with those who lift the Yankee tea cup. This we believe to be a foolish insinuation against an honorable sportsman. Sir Thomas is not responsible for the faults, real or imaginary, of his vessel or crew. And there is just about one chance in a thousand of his winning yet. Here's hoping he may.

NO IRISH FLAG FOR LIPTON

DECLINED TO SIT BENEATH BANNER WHICH DID NOT BEAR BRITISH CROWN.

New York Herald: Joseph Greaves, manager of the Oriental Hotel at Manhattan Beach, was busy yesterday explaining the reason for the sudden substitution of a British flag for the flag of Ireland as a part of the decorations in the dining room in honor of the presence of Sir Thomas Lipton, who was present at a dinner party at the hotel on Sunday night.

Over the dining table were crossed the Stars and Stripes and the green flag of Ireland, bearing the usual harp. As the party entered the dining room Sir Thomas glanced at the decorations and suddenly stopped.

"Pardon me, but I fear I cannot sit under the flag," he said, indicating the pennant bearing the harp.

"Why! it is an Irish flag, is it not?" asked an American member of the party.

"True," answered the knight, with a smile, "but it does not bear the British crown. No Irishman loyal to his king will recognize an Irish flag without that token of allegiance. I beg that a change be made."

The American members of the party acknowledged the mistake, and Mr. Greaves sent for the proper flag. None bearing the crown could be found, but when the British Union Jack was brought, Sir Thomas said:—"I prefer this a thousand times to the one that was there first."

In the meantime the party had waited an hour for the change to be made.

NERVOUSLY EXHAUSTED.

Sleepless, poor digestion, easily tired blue as indigo, that's how you feel. Do you want to feel strong, make plenty of blood, enjoy buoyancy, strength and vim. You can do so by using Ferrozone. How it sharpens the appetite and imparts a feeling of buoyancy, strength and vim! Improves the appetite, digestion, assimilation, sleep. How surely Ferrozone does this, you can ascertain by using it. Ferrozone is a blood builder, nerve strengthener and brain invigorator. Sold by all druggists.

Mining in Hastings County.

Kingston, August 23.—The Col. Harrison pyrites properties at Bogart, near Tweed, have been taken under lease and option by C. E. Smith, of Brockville, acting with an American Syndicate. They have already been developed to some extent, and promise several extensive deposits of high grade pyrites. Development work will be resumed during the first week in September, with a large gang of men, and the work pushed rapidly forward, so that underground work can be continued during the winter. This syndicate is acquiring several other mining properties in the Hastings district which it intends to open shortly.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

In the Justice Shop.

Drunks.

Alfred Brickman and Charles McDonald, two strangers, were charged with being intoxicated. Both were discharged.

An auctioneer was charged with neglecting to take out his necessary license. The charge was dropped, as the party had made arrangements to pay the license fee.

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. YACHTING.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Sensible Talk.

New York, August 27.—In an article on "My efforts to win the America's Cup," in the Cosmopolitan, Sir Thomas Lipton says that should he lift the cup and the United States send a challenger across, it would be "a real boat," if he has anything to say about it. If Shamrock III. fails she will go to the scrap heap, he declares.

In the article, which reviews his yachting career for the past sixteen years, Sir Thomas says:

"And what if I should win the cup? If I should, I think I know what I would do. American yachtsmen would have to build a different kind of a boat from either Shamrock III. or Reliance to bring it back again. The cup challengers and defenders are dangerous for any one who stands upon their decks as one sails, and at any minute a spar may fall or a sail may fall, or a piece of metal may fall. Yes, racing yachts are dangerous and useless. If the cup goes to Ireland, England and Scotland, the challengers must build an honest boat, a healthy boat, a real boat, to meet the defender on the other side, if I live, and have any voice in the matter. Of what use to mankind, and of what use to commerce, are these beautiful white swans? They are of no use at all. They are a menace. Do they aid the science of shipbuilding, and do they teach any lesson to thousands of men who earn their livelihood upon the seas? They do not. They are mere racing machines, nothing more, and nothing less."

Sir Thomas also denounced the gambling on the yacht races.

TROTTING.

The Mare That Broke the Record.

Lou Dillon, the new champion trotter is a small chestnut mare, five years old, sired by Sidney Dillon, son of Sidney, 2.19 3-4, dam Lou Milton, by Milton Medium, son of Happy Medium. She was bred by the late Henry Pierce, of Santa Rosa, Cal. and was bought by her present owner, C. K. G. Billings, of Chicago, last May, at auction, for $12,500, several other horsemen who wanted her retiring from the bidding because they believed her of too erratic a temperament to be a reliable trotter. She is trained and driven by Millard Sanders, who has had charge of her since she was a two-year-old, and who was so confident that she would beat Cresceus' record of 2.02 1-4 that when she was sold he offered to train her this season for nothing if he did not drive her to a record faster than that held by the son of Robert McGregor. Her new record is two minutes flat and will likely stand for some years.

Kingston, Aug. 28.—The danger point has been passed in the condition of W. C. Caldwell, M.P.P., Lanark, and his recovery is now fully expected.

VALUABLE TIME SAVED.

Slight injuries often disable a man and cause several days' loss of time and, when blood poison develops, sometimes result in the loss of a hand or limb. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is an antiseptic liniment. When applied to cure bruises and burns it causes them to heal quickly and without maturation, and prevents any danger of blood poison. For sale by all druggists.

Finished

Yes, Queen Victoria School is finished, ready for school opening, and a prettier job of brick painting cannot be found anywhere. Perhaps you would like your house painted likewise—not necessarily the same color—you might like cream or a less bright shade of red than the school—anyway we can give you anything you want in color, will do your work at reasonable prices—do it promptly, with an excellent staff of workmen, fifteen in number, all good workmen, we can turn out work more promptly than could a small staff.

School Opening.

Not only do we paint all the schools but we sell pretty nearly all the SCHOOL BOOKS and School Supplies and there is a reason for it.

Firstly, we know from fifteen years' experience the needs of the scholars—know where to find the better lines of supplies, have the agencies of the best bookmakers, control all the best school supplies, sell at lowest prices, because buying in large quantities we secure lower prices;—sell Wholesale and Retail, and have always a mammoth assortment.

A Reminder as to Wall Papers.

On September 1st we commence our fall battle in Wall Papers—we have all ammunition required, have the machinery always moving and usually moving quickly—We will surprice you in prices—Can't afford to have your home anything but attractive for the long winter months when so small a figure will do it—

Then, too, we will continue to give away free bordering with our Wall Papers—two yards with each double roll of Wall Paper.

We'll hang the paper at low prices, too, and hang it properly.

Our picture framing should always ring in your ears—we so often tell you about it. If you are a framing customer of ours you know all about it, if not a framing customer of ours, you are making a great mistake—providing you have framing to do.

"You are a durn liar, Jeff Dukes," said Pole angrily. "You are a-makin' that up to humiliate me furder. You know no law like that never was enforced. Ef I ever git you out in Pea Vine destrict, I'll knock a dent in that egg shaped head o' yor'n an' make them eyes look two ways fer Sunday. You know a gentleman like Alan Bishop wouldn't notice you under ordinary circumstances, an' so you trump up that excuse to git his attention."

The two men glared at each other, but Pole seemed to get the best of that sort of combat, for the officer only growled.

"You can insult a man when you are under arrest," he said, "beca'se you know I am under bond to keep the peace. But I'm not afeerd of you."

"They tell me you are afeerd o' sperits, though," retorted the prisoner. "They tell me a little nigger boy that was shot when a passle o' skunks went to whip his daddy fer vagrancy stands at the foot o' yore bed ever' night. Oh, I know what I'm talkin' about!"

"Yes, you know a lots," said the man sullenly as his eyes fell.

To avoid encouraging the disputants further, Alan walked suddenly away. The marshal took willing advantage of the opportunity and followed him.

"I could make a case agin you," he said, catching up, "but I know you didn't mean to violate the ordinance."

"No, of course I didn't," said Alan, "but I want to know if that fellow could be released if I paid his fine."

"You are not fool enough to do it, are you?"

"That's what I am."

"Have you got the money in yore pocket?" The officer was laughing, as if at a good joke.

"I have."

"Well"—the marshal laughed again as he swung his short club round by a string that fastened it to his wrist—"well, you come with me, an' I'll show you a man that wants $30 wuss than any man I know of. I don't believe Bill Barrett has slept a wink sence this thing happened. He'll be tickled to death to git off so easy. The town has deviled the life out of him. He don't go by whar Pole's at work—I mean, whar he ain't at work—fer Pole yells at 'im whenever he sees 'im."

That night when Alan reached home he sent a servant over to tell Mrs. Baker that Pole was all right and that he'd be home soon. He had eaten his supper and had gone upstairs to go to bed when he heard his name called outside. Going to a window and looking out, he recognized Pole Baker standing at the gate in the clear moonlight.

"Alan," he said softly, "come down heer a minute. I want to see you."

Alan went down and joined him. For a moment Pole stood leaning against the fence, his eyes hidden by his broad brimmed slouch hat.

"Did you want to see me, Pole?" Alan asked.

"Yes, I did," the fellow swallowed. He made a motion as if to reach out his hand, but refrained. Then he looked straight into Alan's face.

"I couldn't go to sleep till I'd said some'n' to you," he began, with another gulp. "I laid down an' made a try at it, but it wasn't no go. I've got to say it. I'm heer to swear that ef God 'or some'n' else don't show me a way to pay you back fer what you done today I'll never draw a satisfied breath. Alan Bishop, yo're a man—a man from yore outside skin to the marrow o' yore bones, an' ef I don't find some way to prove what I think about you I'll jest burn up! I got into that trouble as thoughtless as I'd play a prank with my baby, an' then they all come down on me an' begun to try to drive me like a hog out'n a field with rocks an' sticks, an' the very old Harry riz in me an' defied 'em. I reckon thar wasn't anything Bill could do but carry out the law, an' I knowed it, but I wasn't ready to admit it. Then you come along an' rendered a verdict in my favor when you needed the money you did it with. Alan, ef I don't show my appreciation it 'll be beca'se I don't live long enough. You never axed me but one thing, an' that was to quit drinkin' whisky. I'm goin' to make a try at it, not beca'se I think that 'll pay you back, but beca'se with a sober head I kin be a better friend to you ef the chance ever comes my way."

"I'm glad to hear you say that, Pole," replied Alan, greatly moved by the fellow's earnestness. "I believe you can do it. Then your wife and children"—

"Hang my wife an' children!" snorted Pole. "It's you I'm goin' to work fer—you, I say!"

He suddenly turned through the open gate and strode homeward across the fields. Alan stood looking after him till his tall form was lost in the hazy moonlight, and then he went up to his bed.

Pole entered the open door of his cabin and began to undress as he sat on the side of his crude bedstead, made of unbarked poles fastened to the bare logs in one corner of the room. His wife and children slept on two beds on the other side of the room.

"Did you see 'im, Pole?" piped up Mrs. Baker from the darkness.

"Yes, I seed 'im. Sally, say, whar's that bottle o' whisky I had the last time I was at home?"

There was an ominous silence. Out of it rose the soft breathing of the children. Then the woman sighed. "Pole, shorely you ain't a-goin' to begin agin?"

"No; I want to bu'st it into smithereens. I don't want it about; I don't want to know thar's a drap in the house. I've swore off, an' this time she sticks. Gi' me that bottle."

Another silence. Suddenly the woman spoke: "Pole, you've swore off as many times as a dog has fleas. Often when I feel bad an' sick when you are off, a drap o' whisky makes me feel better. I don't want you to destroy the last bit in the house jest beca'se you've tuck this turn, that may wear off be fore daylight. The last time you emptied that keg on the ground an' swore off you got on a spree an' helt the baby over the well an' threatened to drap 'er in ef I didn't find a bottle, an' you'd 'a' done it too."

Pole laughed softly. "I reckon yo're right, ole gal," he said. "Besides, ef I can't—ef I ain't man enough to let up with a bottle in the house I won't do it without. But the sight or smell of it is hell itse'f to a lover of the truck. Ef I was to tell you what a little thing started me on this last spree, you'd laugh. I went to git a shave in a barber shop, an' when the barber finished he soaked my face in bay rum, an' it got in my mustache. I kept smellin' it all mornin' an' tried to wipe it off, but she wouldn't wipe. All the time I kept walkin' up an' down in front o' Luke Sellmore's bar. Finally I said to myself, 'Well, ef you have to have a barroom stuck under yore nose all day like a wet sponge, old man, you mought as well have one whar it 'll taste better, an' I slid up to the counter."

The woman sighed audibly, but she made no reply.

"Is Billy awake?" Pole suddenly asked.

"No; you know he ain't," said Mrs. Baker.

"Well, I want to take 'im in my bed." Pole stood out on the floor in the sheet of moonlight that fell through the open door.

"I wouldn't, Pole," said the woman. "The pore little feller's been toddlin' about after the others, draggin' bresh to the heap tell he's tired. He drapped to sleep at the table with a piece o' bread in his mouth."

"I won't wake 'im, God bless his little heart," answered Pole, and he reached down and took the limp child in his arms and pressed him against the side of his face. He carried him tenderly across the room and lay down with him. His wife heard him uttering endearing things to the unconscious child until she fell asleep.

CHAPTER XIII.

In the middle of the following week some of the young people of Darley gave a picnic at Marley's spring, a beautiful and picturesque spot about a mile below Bishop's farm. Alan had received an urgent invitation to join the party, and he rode down after dinner.

It was a hot afternoon, and the party of a dozen couples had scattered in all directions in search of cool, shady nooks. Alan was by no means sure that Miss Barclay would be there; but, if the truth must be told, he went solely with the hope of at least getting another look at her. He was more than agreeably surprised, for just as he had hitched his horse to a hanging bow of an oak near the spring Frank Hillhouse came from the tangle of wild vines and underbrush on a little hillside and approached him.

"You are just the fellow I'm looking for," said Frank. "Miss Dolly's over there in a hammock, and I want to leave somebody with her. Old man Morley promised me the biggest watermelon in his patch if I'd come over for it. I won't be long."

"Oh, I don't care how long you are," smiled Alan. "You can stay all day if you want to."

"I thought you wouldn't mind," grinned Frank. "I used to think you were the one man I had to fight, but I reckon I was mistaken. A feller in love imagines everybody in creation is against him."

Alan made no reply to this, but hurried away to where Dolly sat, a new magazine in her hands and a box of candies on the grass at her feet. "I saw you riding down the hill," she said, with a pretty flush and no little excitement. "To tell the truth, I sent Frank after the melon when I recognized you. He's been threatening to go all the afternoon, but I insisted on it. You may be surprised, but I have a business message for you, and I would have made Frank drive me past your house on the way home if you hadn't come."

"Business," Alan laughed merrily. He felt very happy in her presence under all her assurances of welcome. "The idea of your having a business message! That's really funny."

"Well, that's what it is. Sit down." She made room for him in the hammock, and he sat beside her, his foolish brain in a whirl. "Why, yes, it is business, and it concerns you. I fancy it is important. Anyway it may take you to town tonight."

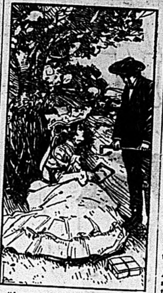
"You don't mean it," he laughed. She looked very pretty in her light organdie gown and big rustic hat, with its wide, flowing ribbons.

"Yes, it is a message from Rayburn Miller about that railroad idea of yours."

"Really? Then he told you about that?"

"Yes. He was down to see me last week. He didn't seem to think much of it then, but"—she hesitated and smiled as if over the memory of something amusing—"he's been thinking of it since. As Frank and I drove through the main street this morning—Frank had gone in a store to get a basket of fruit—he came to me on his way to the train for Atlanta. He hadn't time to say much, but he said if you were out here today to tell you to come in town tonight without fail, so as to meet him at his office early in the morning. He'll be back on the midnight train. I asked him if it was about the railroad, and he said it was; that he had discovered something that looked encouraging."

"I'm glad of that," said Alan, a thrill of excitement passing over him. "Rayburn threw cold water on my ideas the other day, and"—



"I saw you riding down the hill."

"I know he did, and it was a shame," said Dolly warmly. "The idea of his thinking he is the only man in Georgia with originality! Anyway, I hope it will come to something."

"I certainly do," responded Alan. "It's the only thing I could think of to help my people, and I am willing to stake all I have on it—which is, after all, nothing but time and energy."

"Well, don't you let him or any one else discourage you," said the girl, her eyes flashing. "A man who listens to other people and puts his own ideas aside is unworthy of the brain God gave him. There is another thing"—her voice sank lower and her eyes sought the ground—"Rayburn Miller is a fine, all round man, but he is not perfect by any means. He talks freely to me, you know; he's known me since I was knee high. Well, he told me—he told me of the talk he had with you at the dance that night. Oh, that hurt me—hurt me!"

"He told you that!" exclaimed Alan in surprise.

"Yes, and it actually disgusted me. Does he think all men ought to act on that sort of advice? He might, for he has made an unnatural man of himself, with all his fancies for new faces, but you are not that kind, Alan, and I'm sorry you and he are so intimate; not that he can influence you much, but he has already in a way, and that has pained me deeply."

"He has influenced me?" cried Alan in surprise. "I think you are mistaken."

"You may not realize it, but he has," said Dolly, with gentle and yet unyielding earnestness. "You see, you are so very sensitive that it would not be hard to make you believe that a young man ought not to keep on caring for a girl whose parents object to his attentions."

"Ah!" He had caught her drift.

There was a pause. At the foot of the hill a little brook ran merrily over the water browned stones, and its monotonous lapping could be heard distinctly. Under the trees across the open some of the couples had drawn together and were singing:

"I see the boat go round the bend,
Goodby, my lover, goodby."

Dolly had said exactly what he had never hoped to hear her say, and the fact of her broaching such a subject in such a frank, determined way sent a glow of happiness all over him.

"I don't think," he began thoughtfully, "that Rayburn or any man could keep me from"—he looked into her full, expectant eyes and then plunged madly—"could keep me from caring for you, from loving you with all my heart, Dolly, but it really is a terrible thing to know that you are robbing a girl of not only the love of her parents, but her rightful inheritance, when—when"—he hurried on, seeing that an impulse to speak was urging her to protest—"when you haven't a cent to your name and, moreover, have a black eye from your father's mistakes."

"I knew that's what he'd said!" declared the girl, almost white with anger. "I knew it! Oh, Alan, Rayburn Miller might be able to draw back and leave a girl at such a time, but no man could that truly loves as—as I believe you love me. I have known how you have felt all this time, and it has nearly broken my heart, but I could not write to you when you had never even told me what you have today. You must not let anybody or anything influence you, Alan. I'd rather be a poor man's wife and do my own work than let a paltry thing like my father's money keep me from standing by the man I love."

Alan's face was ablaze. He drew himself up and gazed at her, all his soul in his eyes. "Then I shall not give you up," he declared—"not for anything in the world. And if there is a chance in the railroad idea I shall work at it ten times as hard now that I have talked with you."

They sat together in blissful ignorance of the passage of time till some one shouted out that Frank Hillhouse was coming with the watermelon. Then all the couples in sight or hearing ran to the spring, where Hillhouse could be seen plunging the big melon into the water. Hattie Alexander and Charlie Durant, who had been perched on a jutting bowlder high up on the hill behind Dolly and Alan, came half running, half sliding, down, catching at the trees to keep from falling.

"Better come get your teeth in that melon," Hattie said, with a knowing smile at Dolly. They lived next door to each other and were quite intimate.

"Come on, Alan." Dolly rose. "Frank will never forgive me if I don't have some."

"I sha'n't have time if I go to town tonight," replied Alan. "I have something to do at home first."

"Then I won't keep you," Dolly smiled, "for you must go and meet Rayburn Miller. I'm going to hope that he has had good luck in Atlanta."

The world had never seemed so full of joy and hope as Alan rode homeward. The sun was setting in glorious splendor beyond the towering mountains, above which the sky seemed an ocean of mother of pearl and liquid gold. Truly it was good to be alive. At the bars he met Abner Daniel with a fishing cane in his hands, his bait gourd under his arm.

"I know right whar you've been," he said, with a broad smile as he threw down the bars for Alan to pass through. "I seed that gang drive by in all the'r flurry this mornin', the queen bee in the lead with that little makeshift of a man."

Alan dismounted to prevent his uncle from putting up the bars, and they walked homeward side by side.

"Yes, and I've had the time of my life," said the young man. "I talked to her for a solid hour."

"I could see that in yore face," said Abner quietly. "You couldn't hide it, an' I'll bet she didn't lose time in lettin' you know what she never could hide from me."

"We understand each other better now," admitted Alan.

"Well, I've certainly set my heart on the match—on gittin' her in our family," affirmed Abner. "Durned ef—I declare, sometimes I'm afeerd I'm gone on 'er myse'f. Yes, I want you an' her to make it. I want to set an' smoke an' chaw on yore front porch an' heer her back in the kitchen fryin' ham an' eggs, an'"—the old man winked—"I don't know as I'd object to trottin' some'n' on my knee to sorter pass the time betwixt meals."

"Oh, come off, Uncle Ab!" said Alan, with a flush. "That's going too far."

The old man whisked his bait gourd round under his other arm. His eyes twinkled and he chuckled. "'Tain't goin' as fur as havin' one on each knee an' both pine blank alike an' exactly the same age. I've knowed that to happen in my day an' time, when nobody wasn't even lookin' fer a increase."

CHAPTER XIV.

The next morning Alan found Rayburn Miller standing in the door of his little office building waiting for him.

"I reckon my message surprised you," Miller said tentatively as he shook hands.

"It took me off my feet," smiled Alan. "You see, I never hoped to get you interested in that scheme, and when I heard you were actually going to Atlanta about it I hardly knew what to make of it."

Miller turned into his office, kicked a chair toward Alan and dropped into his creaking rocker.

"It was not due to you that I did get interested," he said. "Do you know, I can't think of it without getting hot all over with shame. To tell you the truth, there is one thing I have always been vain about. I didn't honestly think there was a man in Georgia that could give me any tips about investments, but I had to take backwater, and for a woman. Think of that—a woman knocked me off my perch as clean and easy as she could stick a hairpin in a ball of hair. I'm not unfair. When anybody teaches me any tricks, I acknowledge the corn and take off my hat. It was this way. I dropped in to see Miss Dolly the other evening. I accidentally disclosed two things in an offhand sort of way. I told her some of the views I gave you at the dance in regard to marriage and love and one thing and another, and then, in complimenting you most highly in other things, I confess I sort of poked fun at your railroad idea."

"I thought you had," said Alan good naturedly. "But go on."

"Well, she first read me a lecture about bad, empty, shallow men, whose very souls were damned by their past careers, interfering with the pure impulses of younger men, and I'll swear I felt like crawling in a hole and pulling the hole in after me. Well, I got through that in a fashion because she didn't want me to see her real heart, and that helped me. Then she took up the railroad scheme. You know I had heard that she advised her father in all his business matters; but, geewhilikins, I never dreamed she could give me points, but she did—she simply did. She looked me straight in the eye and stared at me like a national bank examiner as she asked me to explain why that particular road could not be built and why it would not be a bonanza for the owners of the timber land. I thought she was an easy fish at first,

To be continued.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so actively obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of 'catching cold.' Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected cold, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, natural.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

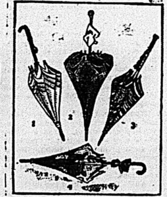
All soiled linen should be daily removed and fresh cloths and towels put in its place. This daily care, the occasional use of a good disinfectant and a frequent flushing of all openings with hot water will impart a comfort and well being to the household not rivaled in any other department, except perhaps the kitchen.—House Beautiful.

Sunshades of the Season.

The specimens shown of fashionable sunshades include:



SMART SUNSHADES.

1. A fancy cotton sunshade in chine design on a white ground, with a white striped border of various colors, a gilt frame and a natural stick.

2. A smart sunshade of new shape in rich grosgrain silk of any shade, trimmed with fancy ribbon of contrasting color.

3. A fancy striped silk in any color, the stick acacia with a chased gilt cap.

4. A black moire, with applique of ecru lace—very smart.

Preserved Currants.

To ten pounds of sugar add seven pounds of currants, press the juice from the other three pounds and when the sugar is made into hot sirup put in the currants. Boil until thick and rich.

Fruit Balls.

Spread boiled rice on a cloth, then a layer of berries; tie up closely and steam until the fruit is tender. Serve with thick cream and sugar well beaten.

Household Brevities.

Avoid using any rubber bands or rubber in any form around silver. It will tarnish the metal and make a mark almost impossible to remove.

Artists tell us that bric-a-brac has two important uses in decoration—"the massing of color and the breaking up of stiff, ugly outlines."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Well, we've got another chance yet at the cup, but it's a forlorn hope.

• • •

Sir Thomas ought to insist on three-legged races; they're his best hold.

• • •

However, up to the hour of going to press, Sir Thomas' confidence in Shamrock had not been shaken. He is the daddy of all the optimists.

• • •

It must have been tantalizing to the Reliance people to get within one-third of a mile of the finish and then have to quit.

• • •

And the Band stepped right into line with "Hiawatha" last night; which will now proceed to shove "The Good Old Summer Time" into the back ground.

• • •

The Band concerts still draw. A triple compound mustard plaster is nothing to them.

• • •

There is a large consolation in that, too. When the girls are down listening to the band they are not playing the piano.

• • •

A pamphlet bearing the title "A National Policy," being the reprint of a speech delivered at Gravesend, Eng., by Sir Gilbert Parker, has been received by the editor and placed in the Public Library, where all who desire to do so can read it. It is a strong utterance in favor of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's Imperial preference scheme.

Regular Ideal Summer Resort.

Basle, Switzerland, Aug. 28.—The territory that Great Britain has offered for Jewish colonization is an elevated tract 200 miles long on the Uganda Railway between Mau and Nairobi. This region is described as almost unparalleled in tropical Africa, being admirably watered, fertile, cool, covered, and as healthy for Europeans as Great Britain.

Elgin Loan Company.

St. Thomas, Aug. 28.—The London & Western Trusts Company, liquidators of the Elgin Loan Company, announce that the first dividend of 25 cents on the dollar will be paid to depositors of the company on Monday next. The liquidators also announce that a further dividend of 25 cents will be available in about thirty days.

Liberals of Shelbourne.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 28.—At a convention of the Liberals of Shelburne, held yesterday, Geo. A. Cox, merchant, was nominated to contest the county to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Thomas Johnson.

Wade, Rowell, Duff.

London, Aug. 28.—The appointments for the junior counsel on the Alaskan Boundary Commission are F. C. Wade, N. W. Rowell and L. P. Duff, the latter representing British Columbia.

I.C.R. Clerk's Demands.

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—A deputation of clerks employed on the Intercolonial Railway are here to ask for an increase of salary. They come from Halifax, St. John, Levis and Moncton.

Lady Minto Going to Japan.

Winnipeg, Aug. 28.—Lady Minto will be in the city Sept. 1, on her way to Vancouver, en route to Japan, via Empress of China. Her two daughters will accompany her.

Healthful Action of The Bowels

IS ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL TO GOOD HEALTH — DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

By increasing and invigorating the action of the liver and thus securing a good flow of bile—nature's own cathartic—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills ensure regular and healthful action of the bowels. This is the only means by which constipation can be actually cured and a host of serious derangements prevented. Disease can find no lodgement when the kidneys, liver and bowels are kept regularly active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box. 10

"ROYAL MUSKOKA."

"The Royal Muskoka" Hotel is the largest and most magnificent summer hotel in Canada. Location unsurpassed in the centre of the famous Muskoka Lakes District, Highlands of Ontario (1000 feet above sea level), about six hours' journey north of Toronto. The grounds include an area of 130 acres, containing pine and hemlock groves and many beautiful walks and points commanding lovely views. There are tennis, golfing, bowling, fishing, bathing, croquet, bowling green and many enjoyable water trips. First-class in every respect. Excellent transportation service.

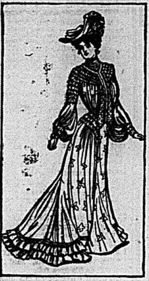
A SUMMER FROCK.

Points In the Making Up of Muslins, The Gauged Effect.

The softer and the thinner the material of a frock the more seductive is the favorite gauged effect. In the muslin model here shown we have a skirt with a plain front panel, the all round gauged skirts have a tendency, alas, to detract apparently from one's height. The skirt is gauged round the hips and back, the rows of gauging taking a somewhat upward direction, while two flounces, the upper one with a gauged heading, edge the hem, starting from the front gore. The bodice is charmingly simple and smart withal, the very long sloping shoulders, by means of which the juncture of the sleeves and bodice is made absolutely invisible, as the bodice gauging runs right over the arm in an unbroken line, sufficing to give it a decided note of distinction. Any white muslin or lace, plain, tucked, or fagot stitched, would be the natural medium of the vest, while guipure or embroidery fashions the collar with its smart stole ends.



A MODEL FOR MUSLIN.

The Apple In Jelly Making.

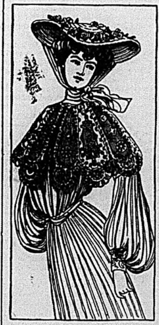
The jellying properties of sour apples are much greater than those of berries, grapes and other fruits excepting currants, says an exchange. Apple jelly is the easiest jelly to make, as it always jellies and requires three-fourths of a pound of sugar to one pint of juice instead of the usual pound. If any one fails in making grape, raspberry, blackberry or plum jelly let the experiment be tried of melting the thin jelly and adding one or more pints of strained apple juice, according to the amount of jelly—perhaps one pint to six tumblers. Let the mixture boil, try a teaspoonful in a saucer, pour it into glasses, and thick, firm jelly will result without a change in flavor or any evidence of apple juice. This is one of the secrets of the canning factories, where much so called fruit jelly is made out of apple juice colored and flavored and sweetened with glucose. Beware of cheap jellies.

Nasturtium Sandwiches.

Butter the bread and then lay on one of the slices a medium size nasturtium leaf, spreading over it the thinnest layer of mayonnaise dressing. Fold the slices of bread together, cut out the sandwich in the shape of the leaf and let the stem stick out. Only the least bit of mayonnaise should be used, as the nasturtium has a great deal of flavor of its own. This is one of the oddest and daintiest of sandwiches.

Lace For the Shoulders.

No woman is equiped for the season of 1903 unless she has a good collection of the several lace shoulder adjuncts now essential to a good appearance. They give quite different aspects to the same gown, enhance the beauty of a rich one, and give a dressy aspect to a somber one. The accompanying illustration exhibits one phase of the fashion.



A LACE CAPE COLLAR.

This is a cape collar made alternately of filet lace and canvas edged with Italian lace. The lappet form of the several divisions is becoming to the lines of the figure and is quite the height of the fashion.

MEASURING OF THOUGHT.

Now another wise inventor ambles gayly to the center, and the sage experimenter tells us proudly what he's got—Says he's figured out a treasure for our profit and our pleasure; that he's fixed a scale to measure every fluctuating thought.

Bring along your great invention; we will give it due attention, and a list of thoughts we'll mention that it may be turned upon.
Will it bound our meditation and our strident cogitation when we get the information that the servant girl has gone?

Can it catch our rapid thinking when our heart is swiftly sinking, and we wonder if our winking at the soda water man
Will apprise him that we're thirsty, that the midnight laws we've cursed; he may not tumble right at first; he knows we cannot rush the can.

Does it show in feet and inches all a fellow's mental flinches when a corn or bunion pinches and he's calling on his girl?
Will it record all the pitches of the lady whose blond switch is coming off and showing which is artifice and which true curl?

And can it compute our curses and the wrath which us immerses when we struggle with our verses in the effort for a rhyme,
Or will it do as it ought to, count our wonders when the auto zips upon us with its motto, "Let Us Help All Men to Climb?"

If it will do this and does it, fetch it hitherward and buzz it, what a lot of fuss and fuzz it will create if it can roll Off a chart that shows the heated thoughts which ever are repeated when we run across receipted bills for our last winter's coal.

—Chicago Tribune.

Reformed.

"I'm glad to hear that you have turned over a new leaf," said the man with a bunch of tracts. "I have your solemn promise that you will never commit another burglary?"

"You have," answered the occupant of the cell.

"No doubt you have been brought to this change of heart by the tracts I gave you."

"It wasn't the tracts so much as the newspapers. There's no use in breaking open a man's house to get his money. The thing to do is to work out a neat little get-rich-quick game, open an office and let him bring his wages to you."—Washington Star.

Too Much Self Restraint.

"What a stick that Mr. Willikins is."

"Do you think so? I always thought he was quite witty."

"He and I were out alone in a boat for half an hour night before last, and he never even suggested that he would like to steal a kiss from me if it hadn't been so moonlight."—Chicago Record-Herald.

FOR WOMEN

Much That Every Woman Desires to Know

About Sanative Antiseptic Cleansing

And about the Care of the Skin, Scalp, Hair and Hands.

Too much stress cannot be placed on the great value of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent in the antiseptic cleansing of the mucous surfaces and of the blood and circulating fluids, thus affording pure, sweet and economical local and constitutional treatment for weakening ulcerations, inflammations, itchings, irritations, relaxations, displacements, pains and irregularities peculiar to females. Hence the Cuticura remedies have a wonderful influence in restoring health, strength and beauty to weary women, who have been prematurely aged and invalided by these distressing ailments, as well as such sympathetic afflictions as anæmia, chlorosis, hysteria, nervousness and debility.

Women from the very first have fully appreciated the purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy which have made the Cuticura remedies the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Millions of women use Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for annoying irritations, and ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Most people have no doubt asked themselves at some time or other what part of the world's history would have been best worth living in; it is a favorite topic, on which the superlative degree is often exercised. Mr. Justin McCarthy, the eminent Irish historian, has been heard to vote for the period of Dr. Johnson and Mrs. Theale. Years ago, when Mr. Gladstone was alive, the Grand Old Man and a group of friends were discussing this same question at Hawarden Castle. Mr. Gladstone, without any hesitation, decided from the intellectual point of view, and expressed the opinion that he would describe as the greatest day in the world's history a day in ancient Greece, when Athens was at the summit of its glory. Another member of the group chose the day of Pentecost. The effect on Mr. Gladstone is still remembered vividly by those who were present. The intellectual gave way at once to the spiritual, and the aged statesman, "seeming rather ashamed of himself," according to one who was present, asked leave to withdraw his former choice, and to say, "A day with the Lord."—"Leslie's Weekly."

Two Irishmen were arguing who was the cleverer. "Well," said Pat, "I'll bet you can't tell me what keeps bricks together." "Shure," said Mike, "it's mortar." "No," said Pat, "you are wrong; that keeps them apart."

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of these magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books, with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

It Happens So.

She was matter of fact and commonplace,
A slim little brown eyed thing;
She had neither beauty nor wit nor grace,
She couldn't recite nor sing
Nor do anything much, except knit lace,
With a sailor hat tipped over her face.

She had never learned how to row or swim,
And it bored her, she said, to dance,
And if any one asked her to walk with him
She lifted her tranquil glance
And said her little decided nay
In the most indifferent sort of way.

Yet of all the maids in that big hotel
Who flirted and prinked and posed
She found a stylish and wealthy swell
Who promptly to her proposed
And married her promptly because (that's what)
She didn't care whether he did—or not!

Literary Notes

The Methodist Magazine and Review for September has an admirably illustrated article on "Norway," by Professor Coleman, and one on "Spain." Canadian interests are emphasized in the "Romance of the Red River Settlement," and "The Underground Railway," by the Editor, and "Canada's Destiny," by Rev. F. A. Wightman. Short and serial stories furnish a lighter element. Toronto: William Briggs. Montreal: C. W. Coates. Halifax: S. F. Huestis. $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months.

CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

The Editor of The Canadian Magazine in the September number complains that Canadian writers are prone to be scholarly and dull. The accusation is true in the main, as Canada has produced only one notable humorist. Yet this particular issue of The Canadian Magazine contains much bright reading, and almost gives an answer to the Editor's criticism. Aside from the particular merits of style and brightness, the chief article of the issue is "Preferential Trade in Its Relation to Canada and the Empire," by the Hon G. W. Ross. The illustrations of the number are very fair.

General O. O. Howard, who commanded one of the wings of Sherman's army on the famous march to the sea, and who bore Lee's first shock at Gettysburg, was once interviewed on the subject of answers to prayer. In his famous fight with Stonewall Jackson the Union forces were defeated, so he was asked: "You prayed before that battle?" "Yes," he answered. "And Jackson was a praying man. He prayed also?" "Yes," he assented. "Then how was it he gained the victory? Did that mean that the Union cause was wrong?" Very gently the good old general replied: "Both our prayers were answered. Jackson prayed for immediate victory and I for the ultimate triumph of our cause. We both got what we prayed for."

Mark Twain had a peculiar experience when he attended his first great London banquet, at which there were between eight hundred and nine hundred guests. "The lord mayor, or somebody, read out a list of the chief guests before we began to eat," he says. "When he came to prominent names the other guests would applaud. I found the man next me rather a good talker. Just as we got to an interesting subject there was a tremendous clapping of hands. I had hardly ever heard such applause before. I straightened up and set to clapping with the rest, and I noticed a good many people round about me fixing their attention on me, and some of them laughing in a friendly and encouraging way. I moved about in my chair, and clapped louder than ever. 'Who is it?' I asked the gentleman on my right. 'Samuel Clemens, better known in England as Mark Twain,' he replied. I stopped clapping. The life seemed to go out of me. I never was in such a fix in all my days."

Do Your Feet Get Sour

Sour, sweaty, ill-smelling feet cause many people a great deal of discomfort, annoyance and shame. Wash your feet as you may, the bad odor still persists. You can easily get rid of it, though, and have your feet sweet and dry by the use of FOOT ELM.

It destroys the disagreeable, sweaty odors, whether of armpits, feet or any part of the body. Prevents and cures scalding and chafing, relieves sore, hot, tired, burning feet, and gives you comfort with your feet you never knew before. Foot Elm is 25 cents a box of 18 powders, at druggists or by mail. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Should Have Sung the Doxology.

Picton Times: It was a jolly party that drove from Belleville to the Sandbanks on Thursday, Aug. 20. Arnold S. Doxsee, of St. Louis, Mo.; Horace E. A. Doxsee, of Syracuse, N.Y.; and Egerton R. Doxsee, of Albert College, Belleville; with their wives and families made up the company. On their return from the Banks they stopped for supper at the residence of Mr. Kurtz Doxsee where they were right royally entertained. Mr. Doxsee although in his 92nd year, sat at the table and entertained his guests, and with a bright eye and kindly smile told many a tale of years gone by. Beside the visitors there were sons, daughters and grandchildren of Mr. Doxsee, making altogether a company of 23. After an evening spent in pleasant social intercourse, the company separated with the thought that such family gatherings are bright spots in the ordinary routine of life.

A NICE TRAVELLING COAT.

An Old Relic.

Several weeks ago a very interesting discovery was made near the Ducks by a gang of men in the employ of the Dominion Fish Company, of Kingston. When one of their nets was pulled in, there was found in the bottom of it an old flint-lock musket. During the war of the American Revolution, 1776, an American gun boat from Rochester with a crew of seventy-five was wrecked on the Ducks. The men escaped to the bare rocks, but one by one starved to death, and their graves can be still seen. This incident is a matter of history and is related by several writers in their early work on the history of Canada. The musket, which was recovered, belonged to the wrecked gun boat.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH EVER BUILT IN CANADA.

STILL STANDING AFTER OVER ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF SERVICE.

The following, which recently appeared in the Montreal Star, will be read with interest by many people in this section:

The first Methodist Church built in Canada still stands. The old edifice, now used as a granary and a storehouse for agricultural machinery, belongs to Mr. Platt, a prosperous farmer of Adolphustown, Ont., and is located on the shores of Hay Bay, an off-shoot of the far-famed Bay of Quinte. Plain and unadorned, it served its purpose well in its day and generation. Plain and modest were the church and its surroundings—if its few conveniences may be so termed; plain was the preacher and plain the story that he told to willing ears. In such an edifice, and under such conditions, were the doctrines of devout Methodism first propounded in Upper Canada. And that was over 111 years ago, or in 1792.

Though considerably over a century has elapsed, the old building, like the house in the parable that was founded upon a rock, still stands.

How did it come about that a Methodist church was established on the Bay of Quinte's beautiful shores so long, long ago? It must be remembered that the great majority of United Empire Loyalists who came to Canada settled in that district, and particularly along the shores of the bay. Hence the locality was more thickly settled, while round-about still stood, for the most part, "the forest primeval." Perhaps no district in Canada presented a fairer and more hopeful field for the missionary labor. The harvest was ready, and the gleaner came.

It was at the meeting of the New York M. E. Conference, held in Albany, in 1791,—says a late resident of the Bay of Quinte region, who wrote largely and faithfully upon the early history of Methodism in Canada—that William Losee, a young man yet on probation, was first appointed to Upper Canada. He was the first of the itinerant preachers in this country. He had been visiting friends in Adolphustown and some other parts of the country the year before, and preaching with a great deal of acceptance in such places as he had the opportunity.

He is said to have come through the wilderness from Albany to the St. Lawrence on horse back, and to have crossed the river for his new field of labor as soon as the ice became strong enough to enable him to do so. Very soon he had organized three classes. The first of these, we are told by a reliable writer, was formed in Adolphustown in the house of Paul Huff, on the shores of Hay Bay. This was done on Sunday, February 20th, 1792.

The preaching places in the township at that time were Paul Huff's log dwelling and Casper Vandusen's tavern at Adolphustown village, about five miles distant. Classes have always continued in the locality since, and many descendants of the original members are now among the present adherents. William Moore, also a local preacher, was the first class leader. He was a carpenter and finished the first church, and later on built the first church in Prince Edward County—at Conger's Mills.

Previous to this time an irregularly formed class was in existence in Augusta, on the St. Lawrence River, east of Brockville, where Paul and Barbara Heck had located in 1778, together with John Lawrence and his wife and several others. They had been Methodists in Ireland and made up the first Methodist congregation in America, in New York, about 1760. There had also been a class formed at or near Niagara, the result of the labors of George Neal, a local preacher, but neither of these had been regularly organized by an authorized minister.

At that time, says Thomas W. Casey, who had thoroughly studied the question, there were said to have been two Episcopal missionaries in Upper Canada—Rev. Dr. Stuart, of Kingston, and John Langhorn, of Ernesttown and Fredericksburgh; and one Presbyterian, Rev. Mr. Bethune, of Lancaster, the father of the late Bishop Bethune, of Toronto, and of Rev. Dr. Bethune, of Montreal. With the possible exception of a missionary in the western part of the province, the people were without the preaching of the gospel by Protestants.

It was on February 3rd, 1792, that a subscription list was started with the laudable object of building a church on Hay Bay, on both sides of which were settled U. E. Loyalists who had not seen a preacher or heard a sermon in seven years. There appears to have been twenty-two subscribers, whose offerings ranged from £1 to £10, and aggregating in all £107. This was deemed sufficient, and the work began. According to the terms of the subscription paper, the new church was to be thirty-six by thirty feet, two stories high, with a gallery in the upper or second storey. Said house to be built on the northwest corner of Paul Huff's lot of land, No. 18, third concession of Fourthtown. The neighboring settlers freely lent their aid, and the building was up early in the summer of that year, shingled with rough, split shingle, enclosed with undressed boarding and supplied with a floor of unmatched boards. The seats were composed of rough boards resting on blocks. Here the countryside worshipped until about 1809, when the church was furnished and re-seated. About 1830 it was considerably enlarged, a new pulpit and new seats put in and well painted. It was then one of the largest and neatest Protestant churches in the province. About thirty years ago a new and larger edifice was erected at a more convenient point, and the old building fell into the hands of Mr. Platt, a well-to-do farmer. The frame is still strong and good.

During the war of 1812-14 the church was used for several months as a barracks for soldiers. At an early period of the province, we are told, it was arranged that the courts for the Midland District should be held alternately at Adolphustown and Kingston. No court house was ready at first, and an application was made for the use of the church for that purpose. It was so used. One of the officials made objection at the time that the "house of prayer" should not be made "a den of thieves." That objection was overruled, however. The narrator takes care to explain that the objection referred to the prisoners—not to the lawyers. One of the first lodges of Good Templars formed in Canada held its sessions in the church for a couple of years, the galleries being used for that purpose. Just a few rods west of the old building stands yet a part of the foundation of the home in which Sir John A. Macdonald spent his early boyhood days. His father kept a small country store there for years.

The church was built more than a quarter of a century before any Methodist church was erected in Toronto, Kingston or any other of the present centres of population in Ontario, where such large and stately edifices now rear their tall towers towards the sky.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

A Weighty Question.

Kingston News and Times: A local merchant is very anxious to know where the merchants of the city will have to send their scales when repairs are necessary. In his letter, which was a long and comprehensive one, after stating the fact that the local Liberal Executive were afraid on account of factional trouble to go ahead and insist upon the appointment of the man they recommended, namely, Thos. Gallagher, he asks the question is it necessary to send our scales to Belleville, as we did years ago, in order to have them tested. At the present time there is no local inspector of weights and measures, and apparently the Government is afraid to appoint one.

Rough House on the Street.

At a few minutes after 6 o'clock last evening there was a lively time on Pinnacle street, just below Dundas street. Albert and Fred Clapper had a disagreement and the result was they came to blows. Neither were able to land a knock-out blow owing to the interference of some spectators. The affair will probably be ventilated in the police court.

THIS READS LIKE GOOD, SOUND SENSE.

TORONTO PAPER THINKS NO OTHER BRITISH BOAT SHOULD COME AFTER CUP TILL RULES ARE ALTERED.

Mail and Empire: It seems to be practically impossible for a boat built on the other side of the Atlantic to win the America's Cup under the present conditions. While everyone must admire the Homeric struggle Sir Thomas Lipton has made to lift the trophy, further persistence could scarcely add to his reputation as a sportsman. All that English skill and money can do has been done, and, broadly speaking, at no time in fifty years has the cup been in danger. Only once, as has been previously noted, has a challenger won a single race, let alone a series. Surely only the most ignorant of patriotic Americans believes that the relative positions of challenger and defender in the history of cup races represents the relative skill of English and American designers. Yet, just such an erroneous belief is encouraged by these contests. The great handicap which every British yacht must assume before starting in a race on this side of the Atlantic should not be lost sight of. The challenger, according to the deed of gift, must cross the ocean on her own bottom. She must travel three thousand miles, after having been keyed to racing pitch, and sustain a thousand jerks and strains every mile. Only those who understand what a dainty and delicate piece of mechanism a racing craft is can appreciate what this means. Under ordinary conditions it means defeat, inevitable and sure. For this reason America's Cup races are no criterion of the relative skill of English and American yacht-builders. If they prove anything, that thing might be represented by saying that no British boat can give the best American boat ten minutes start over a 30-mile course. The Englishmen are simply unable to pick up their handicap and win. Nor do these contests which have become to be regarded as the greatest sporting event of the year, serve the original purpose of yacht races. They do nothing to suggest improvements for the Merchant Marine. Not the slightest practical good comes from them. A modern racing machine is useless for all purposes but one—racing, and in racing is supreme in only one branch—sailing into the wind.

It is probable that there will be contests for the America's Cup as long as yachting is a sport. England will continue to challenge, and one day will win. But why should not an English yacht club offer another valuable trophy, which might tempt United States sailors across with boats like Reliance, Columbia and Constitution? Then it would be seen if our neighbors to the south do "beat creation" at this game. If they should win this second cup let us take off our hats to them and quit the seas. Until they are able to demonstrate that they can struggle under disadvantages to which English yachtsmen have been condemned, and win, we must respectfully decline to admit that they are supreme in the sea's great sport.

The "News" New Home.

An event of interest in the newspaper world in Toronto last week was the occupation by the News of their new building at the corner of Yonge and Adelaide streets in that city. The latest and most serviceable mechanical equipment in every line has been installed by the News, including a Hoe sextuple press. This is the largest newspaper press in Canada and it has a capacity of 48,000 12-page papers per hour. An invitation is extended to all News readers—in fact to all Exhibition visitors to the city—to call and inspect the News building and plant. The mammoth press can be seen in operation between 3 and 5 o'clock each afternoon.

THOS. E. MEPHAM, Local Manager, and Provincial Representative of the Exchange.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

Bowser's Latest

He Goes Out Into the Country to Discuss the Bee Industry and Gets Laid Up For Repairs

[Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.]

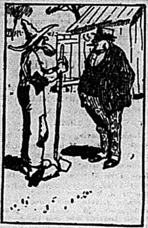
When Mr. Bowser sat down to his cigar the other evening he produced a newspaper from his pocket and began to peruse it with such apparent interest that Mrs. Bowser's curiosity was aroused. She waited for ten minutes, but as he made no explanations she finally asked:

"Isn't that something new you have there?"

"Yes; it's the Beekeeper's Journal," he replied as he looked up. "I got it through the mail today."

"But why should any one send it to you?"

"I don't know, but I thank him, whoever he was. It's put an idea into my head that I should never have thought of. What do you suppose the yearly profits are on a single hive of bees?"



"WHY DON'T YOU CALKERLATE ON BEES HATCHIN' OUT CHICKENS?"

"Three or four dollars, perhaps, but for goodness' sake don't take up that fad! To keep bees"—

"Fad, fad! Is it a fad to make $40 clean profit in four or five months from a single hive of bees? You are always crying 'fad,' but I never had one in my life. I go in for straight business and to make money."

"But you couldn't keep bees in town, you know."

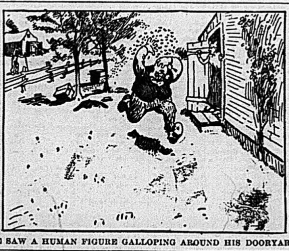
"I don't see why I couldn't. We have a back yard large enough for at least twenty hives. They would return a clear profit of $800 and take care of themselves. By John, but I'm going to investigate this matter! If I can add $800 a year to my income, why not do it?"

"Don't you see anything but profits?" protested Mrs. Bowser as she realized that she ought to have kept still. "Each hive will cost you $5 to start with. You may have seen a beehive years and years ago, but you know nothing of bees. You don't even know that they swarm once a year."

"But I can learn, can't I?" he replied.

"Perhaps, but it would be all nonsense. The bees would be an awful nuisance here, and the police would probably interfere. The honey would not sell for much unless it was clover, and where would your bees find clover in a city?"

"Let 'em go to the country for it. Right here it says that bees often fly five or six miles after material. They won't be half the nuisance that cats and dogs and parrots are. It'll be just like finding money in the road."



HE SAW A HUMAN FIGURE GALLOPING AROUND HIS DOORYARD.

Mrs. Bowser spent the next half hour making figures and advancing arguments, but Mr. Bowser's enthusiasm was not to be dampened. There was $40 clean profit to a hive of bees, and twenty times forty made $800. He settled it that he would take a run out into the country next day and investigate the bee question from a practical point of view, and Mrs. Bowser was obliged to be content with that. He was up bright and early and prepared for his trip and was more sanguine than ever.

"I said twenty hives and $800 profit last night," he remarked at the breakfast table, "but why not make it forty hives and $1,600? There is no use going into any fifteen cent speculation. If I had a hundred hives I would go out of all other business and attend to bees. However, I'll let you know all about it when I return. I propose to thoroughly post myself."

Mrs. Bowser had nothing to say in reply, and at 9 o'clock Mr. Bowser was off for the country and the land of bees. On the way out on a suburban car he figured it out to his satisfaction. His back yard was big enough to contain at least 500 hives. The bees wouldn't have to be fed or watered. There would be enough clover within five miles to supply them. It was no business of the police whether he kept parrots or bees. The profit on one hive was $40, on ten $400, on twenty $800, on fifty $2,000, on 500 $20,000. It would be absolutely criminal on his part not to go into the honey business and reap a fortune.

He had to walk two miles beyond the terminus before he came to a farm with a couple of beehives on a bench under a cherry tree. The farmer was at home, and Mr. Bowser lost no time in stating that he had come out to discuss the bee question.

"You ain't thinkin' of keepin' bees in town, are you?" asked Uncle Reuben.

"Yes. Why not?"

"Waal, I dunno. You look like that kind of a man, however."

"What kind?"

"Why, like a man who'd expect to raise a crop o' corn in his cellar. Have you figgered out the profits on your honey?"

"Forty dollars to a hive."

"Um! Why don't you calkerlate on your bees hatchin' out chickens?"

"I came here to ask you a few civil questions," said Mr. Bowser, "but if you don't want to answer them I'll go on. You seem to think this bee question calls for sarcasm."

"I shouldn't wonder if it did, but I hain't time today to bother with it. There's my two hives up there, and you'd better go and learn things for yourself. You can see the bees goin' and comin' and workin', and you will know more when you git through. If you want to buy two hives I'll give you a bargain on 'em. I'm rayther goin' out o' bees and into onions."

Mr. Bowser sauntered up to the hives. It was a warm, sunny day, and the bees were out and doing business. The farmer watched him for a moment and then shouldered his hoe and started for the cornfield. He had reached it and hoed a score of hills and was thinking of back yards and $40 profits when a series of yells alarmed him. Looking up, he saw a human figure galloping around his dooryard and cutting all sorts of antics, while his wife began blowing the dinner horn from a kitchen window as a tocsin of alarm.

"He's gone into bees, I guess," said the farmer to himself as he started for the house, "but I kinder think he'll be disapp'inted in the profits."

Three hours later Mrs. Bowser was summoned to the front door by a ring, and the man she found on the steps ducked his head to her and asked:

"Have you got a husband, ma'am?"

"Yes."

"Is he short and fat and baldheaded?"

"Rather so."

"Interested in bees, ain't he? Thinks he can make a profit of $40 a hive and keep 'em in his back yard?"

"Has—has anything happened to him?" she exclaimed.

"Yes, ma'am, there has. He tipped up one of my beehives about three hours ago to look for beeswax, and the doctor has picked forty stingers out of him and is lookin' for fifty more. He'll be as big as a bar'l for the next three days, and then he'll come home. No cause to worry, ma'am. Me and the old woman will poultice him up and tell him that any idiot would have known better, and I guess he'll come home to drop bees and go to raisin' oysters."

Safe.

"What do you think of my new novel?" said the industrious author.

"You are safe in one respect," said the inconsiderate friend. "There is nothing in it good enough to put you under the suspicion of plagiarism."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

SALMON CANNERS APPEAL

Want Short Close Season For Sockeyes on Fraser River.

Railway Debate Wears Wearily Along, and Members Talk to Empty Chairs—Discussion of the Bill Becomes More and More a Perfunctory Proceeding—It Is Expected the Division Will Be Taken on Wednesday.

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—In the House yesterday morning Thomas Earle (Victoria) read an appeal from the Fraser River Canners' Association, asking the Government to protect the fisheries by proclaiming a short close season for sockage salmon. Aulay Morrison did not, however, believe there was cause for alarm, and said he had despatches from men in the industry that the salmon are running good and that to interfere would be a reprehensible action on the part of the department.

John Charlton said from information he had gained in the department he believed it was impossible for fish to get up to the spawning grounds. The mode of fishing in the Fraser River threatened to extinguish the industry in a few years.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine said he had telegraphed the Fishery Commissioner for a report, and after some further discussion the matter was dropped.

The Railway Debate.

A bare quorum of members is listening to the debate on the national transcontinental railway resolution. Interest in the debate appears to have ebbed to the point of positive indifference and the continuance of the discussion becomes every day more and more a perfunctionary proceeding.

Harry Ward of Durham energetically attacked the scheme yesterday afternoon.

T. O. Davis of Saskatchewan spoke vigorously on behalf of the West. It would relieve the West to have the G.T.P. It was not Senator Cox, he said, but the West that could not wait.

Mr. Richardson favored Government ownership and recited the example of India, where the passenger rate was half a cent per mile.

Mr. Holmes (West Huron) devoted three-quarters of an hour to a general endorsation of the Government plan.

Mr. Clare (South Waterloo) found fault that the Government did not give its supporters a chance to discuss with an open mind the transportation question. He favored the Government ownership principle and endorsed Mr. Borden's scheme.

In the Evening.

The evening session was occupied by speeches from Mr. Archambault, Mr. Berthier, Mr. Boyd, Mr. MacDonald, Manitoba; Mr. Johnson, West Lambton.

Mr. Boyd estimated that the Grand Trunk Pacific would cost the country $174,110,000, including interest. Mr. Boyd concluded with the following amendment to Mr. Puttee's Government ownership amendment: That all the words in the amendment after the word "policy" in the third line be left out and the following substituted: "Of extending and developing our system of government railways and of placing the operation thereof entirely beyond the influence of party politics."

The debate was in progress when the House adjourned at midnight.

Division on the Government is expected early next Wednesday morning.

Cooksville, Aug. 29.—The condition of Sir Melville Parker, who suffered a stroke of paralysis a few days ago, has slightly improved and no immediate danger is anticipated.

VICE-CONSUL WAS NOT HIT

But Unknown's Bullets Passed Very Close to Him

Vali of Beirut Has Visited Mr. Magelssen and Expressed Regret For the Outrage and Has Ordered Measures For Arrest of Outrager—President Roosevelt Will Not Countermand Order to Send Ships to Turkey.

Constantinople, Aug. 29.—It transpires that the report that Vice-Consul Magelssen was killed is incorrect. An unknown individual fired at him, and the bullets passed close, but did not touch the Vice-Consul. The Vali of Beirut afterwards visited Vice-Consul Magelssen and expressed his regrets for the outrages, and ordered measures for the arrest of the outrager.

The error in stating that Vice-Consul Magelssen had been killed arose from a mistake in a cipher telegram.

To Demonstrate Anyway.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 29.—President Roosevelt has received through the American State Department confirmation of the Associated Press despatches from Constantinople and Beirut, which show that the assassination of Vice-Consul Magelssen is an error.

President Roosevelt will not countermand the order to Rear Admiral Cotton to proceed with the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco, and the gunboat to Turkish waters. The warships left Villefranche Thursday.

The attack on Mr. Magelssen is regarded as an incident which points to the necessity of a demonstration which will have the effect of insuring the protection of Americans in the Turkish Empire.

DOCTORS WILL ASK AID.

Will Meet in B.C. Next Year If Government Is Good.

London, Aug. 29.—The session of the Canadian Medical Association, which commenced in this city on Tuesday, came to a conclusion yesterday forenoon when the annual meeting was held. About fifty candidates for membership were all unanimously elected. Dr. Powell of Ottawa submitted the report of the Nominating Committee. In the election of officers Dr. J. S. Tunstall, Vancouver, B.C., was elected president; general secretary, Dr. George Elliott, Toronto; treasurer, Dr. H. B. Small, Ottawa.

Executive Committee, Dr. W. J. McGuigan and Dr. Lefevre, Vancouver, and Dr. Gibbs, Victoria.

Dr. Reardon, of Toronto, medical superintendent for the G.T.R., in referring to the fact that the next year's meeting of the association is to be held in Vancouver, B. C., thought that the association would be justified in asking the Dominion Government for financial aid.

A committee was appointed to interview the Government in connection with the matter.

It was suggested that a committee be formed at Toronto to invite the British Medical Association to hold their meeting in that city in 1905.

THE UNFINISHED RACE.

Weather Prognostications For To-Day's Race—The Weather at Midnight.

New York, Aug. 29.—Thursday's unfinished race will be started to-day, 15 miles to windward or leeward and return.

The local Weather Bureau has issued the following special forecast:

"The wind over the international yacht race course to-day will be fresh and mostly easterly, with unsettled, showery weather."

The wind off Sandy Hook at midnight was east northeast with a velocity of 32 miles. It was raining and thick off shore, with a heavy sea running.

Thinks He Has Done Enough.

To Sir Horace Toser, Sir Thomas Lipton said yesterday:

"I can't design a boat myself. I can't sail her, once she is afloat. I've done everything else that any man in all this world can do—everything. And I think I've done enough."

Destroyed 160 Houses.

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 29.—A private letter from Grand Cayman, British West Indies, states that the hurricane which passed over those islands, destroyed 160 houses and 27 vessels. The British three-masted schooner Governor Blake, which it was feared was lost, arrived safely, after encountering the hurricane. The schooner Bentley, the crew of which were drowned with the exception of the first mate, is reported to have been saved by the schooner Sea Gull at Little Grand Cayman, and where loss of life is reported, besides great loss of property.

Mommsen's Great Powers.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Prof. Theodore Mommsen, the historian, who was born in 1817, read a paper yesterday before the Royal Academy of Science on the inscriptions found among the ruins of Baalbek, Syria. This was regarded as remarkable, and as showing the professor's powers and unimpaired analytical faculties. From inscriptions the professor identified a statue found in the Romancamp as being one of Velius Rufus.

Threw Himself Out of Window.

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—Thomas Potter, a man about 40, while in a fit of insanity, threw himself out of a window on Dalhousie street last night, and is now lying in the Water Street Hospital in a badly wrecked condition.

Judge of Welland.

St. Thomas, Aug. 29.—George M. Wells, K.C., of Simcoe, has been appointed County Judge of Welland, to succeed Judge Fitzgerald, who recently resigned owing to ill-health.

Accident Spoiled Royalty's Plans.

Rome, Aug. 29.—A disastrous railway accident cut short the festivities and demonstrations in honor of the King and Queen at Udine, where the sovereigns had gone to view the grand army manoeuvres. At 10 o'clock Thursday night, a train overflowing with soldiers collided with a freight train and sixteen soldiers were killed and over sixty injured. King Victor Emmanuel visited the hospital in person later to see the victims of the accident.

Investigate a Stranding.

Quebec, Aug. 29.—An investigation into the stranding of the S.S. Manchester Trader at South Point, Anticosti, a few weeks ago, was opened in the Admiralty Court yesterday afternoon. Capt. Salmon is presiding and is assisted by Capt. Temple and Capt. Rouse of the S.S. Moeris, as nautical assessors, and Mr. Gordon as secretary.

Edward Harton Dead.

St. Thomas, Aug. 29.—Edward Harton, the oldest barrister in this city, died in the Amasa Wood Hospital Thursday night from heart failure and pneumonia, having been ill but a couple of days. He was a brother-in-law of Judge Richardson of Regina, N.W.T., formerly of Woodstock, and of Judge Hughes of this city. Deceased, who was 74 years old, was Mayor of this city in 1884 and 1885, and resided here sixty years. A widow survives.

One Against Many.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 29.—Before a great audience, Caleb Powers spoke for two hours Thursday night in his own defence, declaring his innocence of connection with the Goebel murder, and pleading for his acquittal. Powers charged the officers of the commonwealth with political persecution. He said that a $100,000 reward offered by the State had been used to secure his conviction.

THE FAILURES OF THE WAR

Three Blue Books, Just Issued, Teem With Evidence of Them.

Opinions of Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Lord Wolseley and Other Generals Give Various Reasons For the South African Mistakes—Sir Redvers Buller Says He Was Hampered by War Office—Lord Lansdowne's Reply.

London, Aug. 29.—The evidence given before the Royal Commission on the South African war was issued yesterday in the form of three blue books, containing 1,700 pages. Field Marshal Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Field Marshal Lord Wolseley and other generals give various reasons for the failures of the war.

Lord Roberts considered the initial error of strategy was practically irretrievable. He criticized the War Office with regard to the general preparations and equipment, the first plan of campaign, the under-estimating of the enemy and ignorance as to the geography and extent of the country and the lack of artillery and mounted infantry.

General Sir Redvers Buller said he was hampered by the refusal of the War Office to accept his plans and the failure on the part of the War Office to give him definite instructions and information.

Lord Kitchener said the officers in many cases were not qualified for their work, and expressed the opinion that the juniors were better than the seniors. He praised the men, but said the chief difficulty was lack of training of reservists and volunteers.

Lord Wolseley in a memorandum complains that the commander-in-chief has become the fifth wheel to the coach and that the Secretary of State for War is the actual Commander-in-Chief.

Replying to this criticism Lord Lansdowne, War Secretary during the early part of the South African war, and Mr. Brodrick, his successor, suggested that Lord Wolseley was ignorant of many of the powers of a Commander-in-Chief, or failed to use them.

The whole publication teems with evidence of mistakes and failures at home and in the field.

BRITISH M.P.'S ARRIVE.

Reached Quebec at 7.30 Friday Evening—Will Be Given Reception.

Quebec, Aug. 29.—The members of the British parliamentary party coming to Canada to make a tour of the country arrived in this city at 7.30 o'clock last evening by the S.S. Dominion. An address of welcome will be presented to them at the City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning by the Mayor and afterwards a picture of the party will be taken on the steps of the City Hall. In the afternoon the distinguished visitors will visit the harbor in company with the members of the Quebec Harbor Commission, and the members of the Council of the Board of Trade. Sunday afternoon they will visit the Shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre and coming back will stop at Montmorency Falls to be the guests of the City Council at a luncheon. Monday they will visit the city, and its surroundings. At 8 o'clock p.m. Monday they will honor by their presence at the official opening of Quebec Auditorium. They will leave by the 11 o'clock train the same evening for Montreal.

Light on Municipal Ownership.

Toronto, Aug. 29.—The Provincial Secretary has prepared and is sending out to municipal corporations of the cities, towns and villages in the province blank forms in order that a return may be made to the department in respect to municipalities undertaking such as waterworks, gas, etc. This information is being obtained for the assistance of the select committee of the House appointed at the last session of the Legislature for the purpose of considering the question of municipal ownership in the operation of public utilities. The committee will probably meet in Ottawa.

Monument to a Son of Bruce.

Port Elgin, Aug. 29.—The monument erected here in memory of Gordon Cummings, who was killed in South Africa on Dec. 13, 1900, was unveiled last evening by Colonel Lord Aylmer, adjutant-general. John Tolmie, M.P., and A. T. Thompson, M. P., also took part in the proceedings. The unveiling was followed by a patriotic concert.

Nearly Broke Away.

Port Arthur, Aug. 29.—General jail delivery at Port Arthur was frustrated yesterday by officers. A prisoner called Hume, sentenced to five years in Penitentiary, had almost drilled his way from his cell to the outer wall, when he was detected. All the prisoners knew of what was under way, but held their peace.

Cyclone Moved Houses.

Connellsville, Pa., Aug. 29.—A cyclone passed over this section yesterday. People were lifted off their feet and houses were moved off their foundations. The storm lasted just five minutes, Mrs. Lizzie Levowitz was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

THOSE FISCAL PROPOSALS.

Chamberlain Would Put a Duty of Two or Three Shillings on Wheat and Heavier One on Flour.

London, Aug. 29.—The Daily Mail has obtained what purports to be an outline of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain fiscal proposals.

They are said to be as follows:

A duty of two to three shillings on wheat and a heavier duty on flour; small duties on meat and eggs and dairy products, and equivalent remissions on tea, sugar and tobacco, also two scales on manufactured products, 10 and 20 per cent., with a view to the security of a reciprocity treaty with foreign nations, the proceeds of those duties to be devoted to a relief of the income tax or further remissions of the duties on tea, sugar and tobacco.

Australian Approval.

Melbourne, Victoria, Aug. 29.—The Inter-State Conference of Protectionist Associations, under the presidency of Sir William Lyne, Minister for Home Affairs of the Australian Federal Government, has cabled to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, announcing that the conference is in favor of preferential trade on the basis of the existing tariff, without interfering with colonial protection.

LIBERAL DOWNED UNIONIST.

Chamberlain's Candidate Overwhelmed by Big Majority in Argyllshire.

London, Aug. 29.—The Liberals yesterday gained a notable victory in Argyllshire, where on Wednesday last was held the first Parliamentary bye-election fought on the fiscal question raised by Colonial Secretary Chamberlain.

J. S. Ainsworth, the Liberal candidate, who represented free trade, was elected by the great majority of 1,586, over Charles Stewart, Unionist, who stood for protection.

At the previous election the Unionist majority was 600.

DEATH IN DIVERS FORMS.

Seven Men Fatally Scalded—Drowning Horrors.

Bremen, Aug. 29.—The North German Lloyd steamer Hecker, bound for Baltimore, Md., while off Terschelling, in the North Sea, Thursday burst her main steam supply pipes, which scalded the third and fourth engineers and seven stokers. The two engineers and five out of the seven stokers scalded died from their injuries.

Pittsburg, Aug. 29.—While a party of young people were driving home from a social gathering near Evergreen early yesterday, their vehicle went over a high embankment into Girty's Run, and three young women were drowned.

Gibraltar, Aug. 29.—Eleven Spaniards, engaged in salvage work on the wreck of the Spanish steamer Irurak-Bat, near Tarifa, Spain, were drowned yesterday during a sudden squall.

Nodaway, Iowa, Aug. 29.—In an attempt to rescue the family of William Sanborn, consisting of father, mother and four children, who had taken refuge on their house-top, the raft overturned, drowning Mrs. Sanborn and two children.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 29.—Mrs. Alexander Winton, wife of the president of the Winton Automobile Company, committed suicide early yesterday by throwing herself into the lake.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—Facing his divorced wife, who had married again two days after the decree was entered two weeks ago, Herbert O. Shaffer Thursday night lifted a vial of carbolic acid to his lips and said: "It is your fault, Minnie; good-bye." He died.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 29.—Edith White, former wife of John A. White, general agent for the Deering division of the International Harvester Company, died of starvation in the Klondike country, and her body probably has been devoured by wild beasts. Mrs. White was a graduate of the Dental School of the State University, and was practising dentistry in Dawson City two years ago. Letters and a dairy found tend to show that Mrs. White perished from cold and hunger, while trying to make her way unaccompanied to an interior camp in the Copper River country.

Kingston, Aug. 29.—A 12-year-old son of M. J. Kennedy, messenger of the Kingston Penitentiary, was thrown violently off an electric car in Portsmouth. He struck on his head. He is unconscious yet.

Killed by a Train.

Blenheim, Aug. 29.—About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon while coming to town E. White of Charing Cross was struck and killed by southbound train on Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway. The body was horribly mangled and rig destroyed, but the horse escaped injury.

Leave Quebec To-Day.

Quebec, Aug. 29.—Their Excellencies and party who are now at the Citadel intend to leave town to-day for Ottawa. They will leave the capital on Wednesday morning for the Pacific coast. The distinguished party will consist of His Excellency and the Countess, Lady Ruby and Capt. Bell. From Vancouver Her Excellency and party sail for Japan Excellency and party sail for Japan the week after next.

Must Appear Sept. 10.

Montreal, Aug. 29.—The indictment against Morris Bachrack, David Levy, William Blaikley, Toronto merchants, charged with conspiracy to defraud the creditors of George Margolius, is the first case to be heard at the September term of the Court of King's Bench, which opens on Sept. 10.

WEAK AND EXHAUSTED.

OUR RIFLEMEN.

Close of the O.R.A. Meeting—Friday's Scores Spoiled by Stiff Wind—President's Luncheon.

Toronto, Aug. 29. — The Ontario Rifle Association's rifle shooting contests at the Long Brgnch ranges were concluded yesterday with the most unfavorable and disagreeable weather that has ever been encountered in the history of the meet.

The wind blew steadily from the east and southeast all day and the atmospheric conditions were most decidedly unfavorable to good shooting. The best marksmen on the ranges were unable to locate targets safely, and in many cases ridiculously low scores were the result.

The tie for second place and the bronze medallion in the Duke of Cornwall and York competition between Staff-Sergeant C. A. Crowe of Guelph and Private John Drysdale of Montreal was shot off and was won by the latter.

Elected Representatives.

The semi-annual meeting of the association was held at 1 o'clock, with a very large attendance. Officers were appointed to represent the association on the council of the Dominion Rifle Association.

A resolution expressing the deep sorrow of the association at the death of Major J. J. Mason of Hamilton, and the warmest sympathy with Mrs. Mason, was passed after eulogistic speeches.

A number of suggestions were made in regard to the conditions governing different matches, and the Match Committee will consider them prior to the annual meeting.

President's Luncheon.

After the meeting a select company adjourned to the president's tent and partook of a very fine luncheon on the invitation of Mr. Osler.

Tait-Brassey Match.

The chief event of the day was the Tait-Brassey match, in which there were 125 individual prizes, amounting to $535, seven team prizes worth $225 and two cups, one presented by Sir Peter Tait, valued at $250, and one by the late Sir Thomas Brassey, valued at $125. The scores:

Pte. J. C. Smith, Highlanders, 93, $20; Sergt. G. Mortimer, Grenadiers, 93, $15; Pte. F. N. Allan, 7th, 93, $10; Col.-Sergt. Parkhill, 13th, 93, $10. Other winners took from $8 to $3 each with scores ranging from 93 to 73.

Sergeant Simpson's Success.

The first of the extra series to be decided was the Austen match, nam- after J. E. Austen, the military tailor, who donated clothing to the value of $50 to be selected by the winner as first prize, and the association added $124, divided in 25 prizes. J. H. Simpson, Grenadiers, with a score of 50 won the coveted first prize of $50, and others ranged from $15 to $3 with scores from 50 to 48.

The Old Chum Match.

The Old Chum match was shot at 800 yards and there were no fewer than 14 possibles made and 12 24's were counted out. The first prize was 20 pounds of tobacco, after which the match was named. There were but 25 prizes, but the close marking necessitated the division of the money into 31 amounts. Staff-Sergt. T. S. Bayles, Grenadiers, won the first prize with a score of 25.

The Mulock Aggregate Match—1, the Elkington Cup (value $125), N. R. A. silver medal, badge and $15, Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe, 30th Wellington Rifles, Guelph; 2, Governor-General's silver medal, badge and $10, Pte. J. C. Smith, 48th Highlanders, Toronto; 3, Governor-General's bronze medal, badge and $8, Pte. S. J. Perry, 6th D.C.O.R.

Colts' Revolver Match—First prize, revolver, value $25, Lance-Corp. W. Cook, Royal Grenadiers, Toronto.

El Padre Match—First prize, 500 Needle cigars, Staff-Sergt. Thomas Mitchell, 13th, Hamilton.

ANOTHER ARGUMENT AGAINST FREE TRADE.

It will be wonderful, indeed, if, in the face of all the arguments, facts and figures they have at their command, the friends of protection in Great Britain do not some day succeed in persuading John Bull to turn his back forever on "the fetich of free trade." The latest knock-down blow which English Free Traders have received is thus pointed out by the London Boot and Shoe Trade Journal:

> Those who have prated about the wonderful position of the workingman and referred to his enormous savings, in comparison with the workers of other nations, in order to show how much better off he is, and how much cheaper he lives, and therefore, better able to save, received a rude shock last week, when the official figures were published, showing the savings of all nations, and when it was found that the British werkman was not at the top, but at the foot of the list, and was either the least thrifty or the least able to save money out of his slender earnings. Even such an accepted authority as Lord Goschen was quite at sea with his figures. His want of real knowledge led him to wax quite eloquent upon the supposed superior position of the British workman; but his hopeless errors and his consequent hopeless deductions should be taken as a tip by the man in the street not to accept these so-called authorities too readily. If it has been possible for Lord Goschen to deceive himself in the matter of national thrift, it is easy to understand how easily he could bluff others into believing in free trade and disbelieving in Mr. Chamberlain's more sensible and business-like proposition. In case some of our readers may not have seen the figures to which we refer, they may see them herewith. The returns are preceded by the strangely erroneous remarks of Lord Goschen, who speaking on free trade in the House of Lords, said:
>
> "Let me point to another very satisfactory symptom—the deposits in the savings banks. I have the figures extending over fifteen years. The deposits in the savings banks and the trustee savings banks, which in 1887 were £100,000,000, in 1901 amounted to £107,030,000. Now, these savings come from the lower middle and the poorer classes, and do not in any way represent the savings of the rich."
>
> Had His Lordship taken the trouble to find out, he would have discovered that many others besides the workers put their money into the Post Office Savings Bank, which offers unquestionable security and pays a fair interest on small investments. There are thousands of widows and spinsters who could not be called poor with the limit of £200 standing to their credit.

An Infant's Inheritance.

Dr. Frederick Tracy, lecturer on philosophy in University College, Toronto, at the Presbyterian summer school, in speaking of "An Infant's Inheritance," said the period of infancy is longer in the higher series of beings, shorter in the lower. The lowest have no infancy. The higher the civilization the longer the period of infancy and tutelage. The significance of this is that the human infant has great possibilities. Prof. Tracy defines an educated man as one who is prepared for all emergencies, the man who rises to the occasion. Education, therefore, is the process of fitting him for his environment, to enter upon his inheritance. His inheritance is fivefold: (1) Material, scientific, nature; (2) literary—all that has been left by his forefathers in the form of literature; (3) aesthetical—art, music, etc; (4) social—institutional; (5) religious; the Church must become more efficient than it has been if the child is to enter into his special inheritance. Dr. Tracy pointed out that, among the changes, some move toward a better state of things. It is only in man that the word "better" has an ethical bearing. Man's culture is for man's own sake, and this cannot be said of anything else on earth. Education is given a child because he has God's image, an end in himself. All education has its end in some form of human character.

Had to Leave School.

THE PITIABLE STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL.

Every Mother of a Growing Girl Will be Interested in the Story as Told by the Young Lady.

Miss Laura Dumontier is the daughter of a well-to-do farmer in St Cuthbert, Quebec. The circumstances under which she was forced to discontinue her studies and leave school will be of interest to all mothers of growing girls, and Miss Dumontier consents to make them public for the benefit her experience may be to others. She says: "At the age of twelve I was sent to a convent school in this parish. At that time I was as healthy as any girl of my age. At the end of a couple of years, however, I felt my strength leaving me. My appetite grew poor, and I suffered from severe headaches. I nevertheless continued my studies until October, 1901, when I became very ill and was forced to leave school. The headaches that had bothered me became almost constant. I suffered from pains in the back and stomach and the least exertion would leave me almost breathless. A doctor was called in and he said I was suffering from anaemia, and was in a very dangerous condition. He treated me until February without the least beneficial result. Then another doctor was called in, but no better result followed his treatment. My parents were now thoroughly alarmed and two doctors from St. Barthelemi were called in, and after consultation their verdict was that my trouble had reached an incurable stage. I was greatly disheartened and did not expect to live long when one day one of my friends asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had lost confidence in all medicines, but was willing to try anything that might help me and my father got me a supply of the pills. When I had used a couple of boxes it was very plain that the pills were doing me good, and after I had taken them a couple of months I was once more enjoying the blessing of good health. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved my life and I gladly give my experience in the hope that it may be of benefit to some other young girls."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a blessing to young girls and women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the blood and nerves, invigorate the body, regulate the functions and restore health and strength to the exhausted patient when every effort of the physicians prove unavailing. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing to the Dr Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont. Remember that no other medicine can take the place of these pills, and see that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, is on the wrapper around every box.

A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliance of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the church, theatre, any place or time. Complete outfit $1. Small sizes 25c. SALMON CHANGE THEIR WAYS.

At Least Some People Have a Theory That They Do.

The salmon fishing has been only fairly good this year, says an end of July correspondent at Gaspe Basin.

Anglers have been doing well up the rivers with rod and line. Indeed, some of the finest fish seen for years have been taken this season with the fly.

But about here that is not known as fishing. The fisherman who is a professional means netting when he speaks of fishing, and it is the netting of salmon which supplies the markets of inland cities and leaves money with the fisherman.

Some of the old hands give a whimsical kind of reason for the failure, comparatively speaking, of the fishery.

"It's a change of religion as has come over the fish," growled one old salt. "It used to be that the salmon had some kind of a notion of keeping the Sabbath day holy, but now I'm blest if they haven't all turned Seventh Day Baptists."

It would be mentioned that, according to law, all nets at the mouths of salmon rivers must be lifted at night fall on Saturday, and not put down again until daybreak on Monday.

"Just get up on the bank where you can look down into the water on Sunday and see the shoals of big fellows a-breaking of the Sabbath by crowding on all sail and getting as far up the river as possible," the old salt went on. "It's my belief as the biggest of the fish just hold Sunday school all week, off the mouth of the river, and only travel on Sunday."

Inquiry shows that the idea is prevalent that the lordly salmon is gradually learning better than to persist in poking his aristocratic nose into nets, to his own undoing. Experiments made by restless lads also go to show that the big fish do congregate at the mouths of streams before sailing in, and some little success has been met with in ground fishing for them with crabs and young lobsters.

This will be news to those who know the salmon best, for it is pretty well understood that this fish abstains from all food from the time it tastes fresh water until it reaches the sea again, after its summer outing.

The flies wherewith anglers beguile salmon to come to gaff are probably taken from sheer light-heartedness or from a collector's rage for pretty things. But if it should prove that the fish loiter about the mouths of fresh water openings and may be coaxed to take bait there, there will be great rejoicing on the part of the great army of anglers who cannot afford to hire a salmon river, but will be glad to take chance of getting fast to one of these noble fish in the open sea.

Finished

Yes, Queen Victoria School is finished, ready for school opening, and a prettier job of brick painting cannot be found anywhere. Perhaps you would like your house painted likewise—not necessarily the same color—you might like cream or a less bright shade of red than the school—anyway we can give you anything you want in color, will do your work at reasonable prices—do it promptly, with an excellent staff of workmen, fifteen in number, all good workmen, we can turn out work more promptly than could a small staff.

School Opening.

Not only do we paint all the schools but we sell pretty nearly all the SCHOOL BOOKS and School Supplies and there is a reason for it.

Firstly, we know from fifteen years' experience the needs of the scholars—know where to find the better lines of supplies, have the agencies of the best bookmakers, control all the best school supplies, sell at lowest prices, because buying in large quantities we secure lower prices;—sell Wholesale and Retail, and have always a mammoth assortment.

A Reminder as to Wall Papers.

On September 1st we commence our fall battle in Wall Papers—we have all ammunition required, have the machinery always moving and usually moving quickly—We will surprice you in prices—Can't afford to have your home anything but attractive for the long winter months when so small a figure will do it—

Then, too, we will continue to give away free bordering with our Wall Papers—two yards with each double roll of Wall Paper.

We'll hang the paper at low prices, too, and hang it properly.

Our picture framing should always ring in your ears—we so often tell you about it. If you are a framing customer of ours you know all about it, if not a framing customer of ours, you are making a great mistake—providinff you have framing to do.

and I gave her plenty of time, but she kept peppering me with unanswerable questions till I lay down on the bank as weak as a rag. The first bluff she gave me was in wanting to know if there were not many branch roads that did not own their rolling stock. She said she knew one in the iron belt in Alabama that didn't own a car or an engine, and wouldn't have them as a free gift. She said if such a road were built as you plan these two main lines would simply fall over each other to send out cars to be loaded for shipment at competitive rates. By George, it was a corker! I found out the next day that she was right, and that doing away with the rolling stock, shops and so forth would cut down the cost of your road more than half."

"That's a fact," exclaimed Alan, "and I had not thought of it."

"She's a stronger woman than I ever imagined," said Miller. "By George, if she were not on your string, I'd make a dead set for her. A wife like that would make a man complete. She's in love with you, or thinks she is, but she hasn't that will-o'-the-wisp glamour. She's business from her toes to her finger tips. By George, I believe she makes a business of her love affair. She seems to think she'll settle it by a sum in algebra. But to get back to the railroad, for I've got lots to tell you. What do you reckon I found that day? You couldn't guess in a thousand years. It was a preliminary survey of a railroad once planned from Darley right through your father's purchase to Morganton, N. C. It was made just before the war by old Colonel Wade, who, in his day, was one of the most noted surveyors in the state. This end of the line was all I cared about, and that was almost as level as a floor along the river and down the valley into the north end of town. It's a bonanza, my boy! Why that big bottle of timber land has never been busted is a wonder to me. If as many Yankees had been nosing about here as there have been in other southern sections, it would have been snatched up long ago."

"I'm awfully glad to hear you say all this," said Alan, "for it is the only way out of our difficulty, and something has to be done."

"It may cost you a few years of the hardest work you ever bucked down to," said Miller, "and some sleepless nights, but I really believe you have fallen on to a better thing than any I ever struck. I could make it whiz. I've already done something that will astonish you. I happen to know slightly Tillman Wilson, the president of the Southern Land and Timber company. Their offices are in Atlanta. I knew he was my man to tackle, so when I got to Atlanta yesterday I ran upon him just as if it were accidental. I invited him to lunch with me at the Capitol City club; you know I'm a nonresident member. You see, I knew if I put myself in the light of a man with something to sell, he'd hurry away from me, but I didn't. As a pretext I told him I had some clients up here who wanted to raise a considerable amount of money and that the security offered was fine timber land. You see that caught him; he was on his own ground. I saw that he was interested, and I boomed the property to the skies.

"The more I talked the more he was interested, till it was bubbling out all over him. He's a New Englander, who thinks a country lawyer without a Harvard education belongs to an effete civilization, and I let him think he was pumping me. I even left off my g's and ignored my r's. I let him think he had struck the softest thing of his life. Pretty soon he begun to want to know if you cared to sell, but I skirted that indifferently, as if I had no interest whatever in it. I told him your father had bought the property to hold for an advance; that he had spent years of his life picking out the richest timber spots and buying them up. Then he came right out, as I hoped he would, and asked me the amount you wanted to borrow on the property. I had to speak quick, and, remembering that you had said the old gentleman had put in about $20,000 first and last, I put the amount at $25,000. I was taking a liberty, but I can easily get you out of it if you decide not to do it."

"Twenty-five thousand! On that land?" Alan cried. "It would tickle my father to death to sell it for that."

"I can arrange the papers so that you are not liable for any security outside of the land, and it would practically amount to a sale if you wished it, but you don't wish it. I finally told him that I had an idea that you would sell out for an even hundred thousand."

"A hundred thousand!" repeated Alan, with a cheery laugh. "Yes, we'd let go at that."

"Well, the figures didn't scare him a bit, for he finally came right out and asked me if it was my opinion that in case his company made the loan you would agree to give him the refusal of the land at $100,000. I told him I didn't know, that I thought it possible, but that just then I had no interest in the matter beyond borrowing a little money on it. He asked me how long I was going to stay in Atlanta. I told him I was going to a bank and take the night train back. 'The banks will stick you for a high rate of interest,' he said jealously. 'They don't do business for fun, while really our concern happens just now to have some idle capital on hand. Do you think you could beat 5 per cent?' I admitted that it was low enough, but I got up as if I was suddenly reminded that the banks close early in the afternoon. 'I think we can make the loan,' he said, 'but I must first see two or three of the directors. Can't you give me two hours?' I finally gave in and promised to meet him at the Kimball House at 4. I went to a matinee, saw it half over and went in at the ladies' entrance of the hotel. I saw him looking about for me and dodged him."

"Dodged him?" echoed Alan. "Why"—

Miller laughed. "You don't suppose I'd let a big fish like that see me flirting my hook and pole about in open sunlight, do you? I saw by his manner that he was anxious to meet me, and that was enough. Besides, you can't close a deal like that in a minute, and there are many slips. I went back to the club and threw myself on a lounge and began to smoke and read an afternoon paper. Presently he came in a cab. I heard him asking for me in the hall and buried my head in the paper. He came in to me, and I rose and looked stupid. I can do it when I try, if it is something God has failed at, and I began to apologize.

"He didn't seem to care. 'If it had been a deal of your own,' he said, with a laugh, 'you'd have been more prompt,' and I managed to look guilty. Then he sat down.

"'Our directors are interested,' he said confidentially. 'The truth is, there is not another concern in America that can handle property as cheaply as we can. We happen to have a railroad about that length up in east Tennessee that has played out, and you see we could move it to where it would do some good.'

"As soon as he told me that I knew he was our meat. Besides, I saw trade in his eye as big as an arc light. To make a long tale short, he is coming up here tonight, and if your father is willing to accept the loan he can get the money, giving only the land as security—provided we don't slip up. Here's the only thing I'm afraid of. When Wilson gets here, he may get to making inquiries around and drop on to the report that your father is disgusted with his investment, and smell a mouse and pull off. What I want to do is to get at him the first thing after breakfast in the morning, so you'd better bring your father and mother in early. If we once get Wilson's twenty-five thousand into it, we can eventually sell out. The main thing is the loan. Don't you think so?"

"I certainly do," said Alan. "Of course a good many things might interfere. We'd have to get a right of way and a charter before the road could be built, and I reckon they won't buy till they are sure of those things."

"No; it may take a long time and a lot of patience," said Miller, "but your father could afford to wait if he can get his money back by means of the loan. I tell you that's the main thing. If I had offered to sell Wilson the whole thing at $25,000 he never would have come up here, but he is sure now that the property is just what he is looking for. Oh, we are not certain of him by a long jump! It all depends on whether he will insist on going over there or not. If he does, those mossbacks will bu'st the thing wide open. If he comes straight to my office in the morning, the deal may be closed, but if he lies around the hotel talking, somebody will spoil our plans, and Wilson will hang off to make his own terms later—if he makes any at all. It's ticklish, but we may win."

"It is a rather ticklish situation," admitted Alan, "but even if we do get the loan on the property, don't you think Wilson may delay matters and hope to scoop the property in for the debt?"

To be continued.

OF INTEREST TO MOTHERS.

A SAFEGUARD FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH IN HOT WEATHER.

The time when children are cutting teeth is always an anxious one for mothers, and when this occurs during the hot weather solicitude, often deepens into alarm. So many ills that often result fatally are liable to ensue that every mother will be interested in a medical discovery that robs this period of many dangers. Mrs. R. Ferguson, of 105 Mansfield street, Montreal, Que., gives her experience for the benefit of other mothers. She says: "My baby has always been small and delicate, and suffered so much last summer with his teeth that I did not think he would live. The medicine the doctor ordered for him did not do him much good. Then he was attacked with dysentery and a very hot skin and cough. I sent for Baby's Own Tablets, and they did him a wonderful amount of good and he is now getting on splendidly."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent post paid, at twenty-five cents a box, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

WOMEN IN FACTORIES.

A Digest of the Report of Miss Carlyle, the Inspector—The Piecework System and Its Serious Evils.

According to the report of Miss Carlyle, inspector of factories and shops for Ontario, there are about 50,000 female employes in the factories of the Province. Although the collection of accurate statistics is a comparatively recent departure, it is evident that this record shows a marked increase during the last few years. That the future will bring equally rapid increases may fairly be predicted, for the growth of manufacturing industries is assured, and women desiring employment show a preference for the factories. The conditions in the factories of the Province are, on the whole, quite satisfactory, and the inspector finds very little cause for adverse criticism. Factories are generally clean, and there is but very little overcrowding, the only complaint that is at all frequent being in regard to ventilation. One of the changes that has greatly improved industrial conditions is the substitution of electric lighting for gas. The gas flame helps to vitiate the air of a factory or other building, and at the same time tends to increase the temperature. The change has made working conditions more comfortable in many factories, although that result was not directly contemplated. Employers, however, are generally willing to do everything necessary to insure the safety and comfort of employes. In dealing with the movement for a Saturday half-holiday, Miss Carlyle gives it a strong endorsation, and takes a decided attitude against overtime for women workers. It is a matter involving the health of a large number of employes, and the views of the inspector are entitled to the fullest consideration.

The effect of introducing the piecework system is discussed at considerable length. The rapid pace and severe nervous strain which have resulted from it are made the basis of an argument in favor of further restricting the hours of work. Time is really the essence of all contracts between employers and employes. Where piecework is introduced the rate for each stint of work is determined, not by its ultimate price, but by the time it will take to do it. By experience in day work employers learn to estimate the time required for the various operations in which the piecework system is introduced, and thus have a basis for estimating the rates of payment. Employes are stimulated by the piecework system to greater effort, every increase in their output meaning a corresponding increase in their returns. Working under pressure means comparatively large weekly wages. This is noted by managers and directors, and generally leads to a reduction in the piece rates. The result is a speed and pressure which led Miss Carlyle to question how long the nerves of the workers could withstand the strain. The wide variation in wage rates shows that factory employment for women is still in an unsettled condition. Employes in boot and shoe, tobacco and cigar, woollen and knitting factories receive better pay than those working in other industries. In the many branches of wearing apparel manufacture the rate of wages varies so materially that it would be impossible to venture on the average wage which would not be liable to contradiction. The entrance of women into light manual occupations is among the accomplished changes of modern industrial conditions. It would be futile to discuss the advisability of the inevitable, and it only remains to minimize any resultant evils that may develop.

The Kilt in Canada.

The retention of the kilt as the dress of the Scottish regiments is not to be made an election cry in Canada after all. It would not have been the first time that the Garb of Old Gaul has figured as a "plank" in a political platform. The Highlands have been more than once agitated over the mere suggestion that the philabeg should make way for the trews on the soldiers from the north. Controversy, indeed, has always been more or less busy with the kilts, and one of the few things which have been placed beyond dispute is that it is a healthy garb. When the Fraser Highlanders landed in North America in 1757 it was proposed to change the dress on account of the cold winters and hot summers. The officers successfully opposed this, and were ultimately justified by the Highlanders being the healthiest soldiers in the army. In the campaign in Holland in 1794 some regiments lost as many as three hundred from disease, but the Black Watch, which had three hundred recruits in its ranks, had only twenty-five casualties, including the killed in battle.—London Chronicle.

Rest Your Feet.

The feet really need far more rest than it is usual to grant them in these days of hurry and scurry and tight shoes. Few people have any idea how injurious to health and temper, to heart and brain, an uncomfortable feeling about the feet is. Indeed, in warm weather, the wearing of sandals would be best for both old and young. The feet of children should never be cramped. They may be injured mentally and physically for life by such a practice. Make a rule never to wear heavy soles or boots. Always keep a pair of nice soft house shoes, and get into them as quickly as possible after you return from walking or cycling. If you have an hour to spare in your own room, take off your shoes and stockings both, and bathe the feet in cold or warm (never hot) water, whichever is most agreeable to the feelings. Keep the feet naked while you rest on a sofa, read your paper, and sip your coffee. The best stockings or socks are lambs' wool, and they should fit as well as a glove. Never have them too loose or too tight. If you can always keep your feet nice and comfortable you will add years to the term of your life.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, natural.

Up in Stratford they fine a man twice as much for getting drunk on the Sabbath as on a week day. That will be a good precedent for other places to follow.

• • •

It didn't rain much last night, and we seem to be in luck that it didn't snow.

• • •

People in this city will sympathize with their neighbors across the bridge, who last night got a severe scorching. It seems most unfortunate that, under the circumstances, the local firemen were not able to take over a fire engine, as the Rossmore people begged them to do. The trouble, it seems, was that there was no civic official in this city who had authority to loan the engine, both the Chairman of the Fire Committee and the Mayor being absent, and neither, so far as can be learned, having provided a substitute. However, too much praise cannot be given the Belleville firemen, who went across the bridge and worked like Trojans. It was lucky for Rossmore the wind was not blowing in another direction.

DON'T YOU THINK

That it would be nice if coal would drop to $6 a ton.

That as a "smooth" piece of road, Front street is "the limit?"

That some sort of "doings" should be got up for Labor Day to keep people at home?

That people who walk on back street wooden sidewalks should wear shin pads?

That city officials who go out of town should put on "Subs?"

That a certain yachting authority in this city could easily take the Shamrock and beat Reliance?

That the Grits would like to crucify Tarte if they could?

That Sir Thomas Lipton should quit now and give some coffee man a chance?

That hot beef tea should be more popular than ice cream this weather?

That icemen and summer hotel keepers may have a deficit this fall?

That with Tarte and Blair against them the Grits are going to have a hard row to hoe next election?

That it wouldn't hurt the Board of Education to have a little new blood in it?

That the electors as a whole should take a little more interest in the above matter?

That the average male parent will use strenuous language when he sees the list of new school books he has to buy next week?

That it is about time Ross brought on those bye-elections and took his medicine?

That it is about time that promised senatorship drifted Thurlow way?

That Mr. J. M. Hurley would about average up as a member of the Laurier Cabinet?

Twenty Years Ago To-day.

The eyes of not only the Methodists of the world but of every other denomination was centered on this city twenty years ago to-day and for the subsequent three weeks. On the 29th of August, 1883, the Methodist Church in Canada assembled in Bridge Street Church to decide whether or not it would unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Primitive Methodist Church and the Bible Christian Church. The result everybody knows.

Weak Heart, Sudden Death

MANY FALLING BY THE WAY BECAUSE OF THIN BLOOD AND WEAK HEART ACTION.

Scarcely a newspaper but contains the report of some sudden death resulting from heart trouble. With the blood in proper condition the heart repairs its own waste and throbs on day after day and year after year. By enriching and purifying the blood Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents and cures palpitation of the heart, irregular beating, weak heart action and all similar derangements. It ensures healthful and vigorous action of all the vital organs. Note your increase in weight while using it. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase are on every box. 11

ROSSMORE VILLAGE BADLY SCORCHED.

Four Houses Burned and Many Others Had Narrow Escapes From Destruction.

Belleville Firemen Did Yeoman Service—The Losses and Insurance.

The Village of Rossmore, situated on the south shore of the bay, opposite this city, and in Prince Edward County, was last night visited by a disastrous conflagration, which at one time threatened to wipe out the place.

When the fire broke out, and during its progress, a strong southeast wind was blowing, and it was owing to the quarter in which the wind was that more buildings were not destroyed.

At a few minutes after 8 o'clock fire broke out in Mr. Sylvester Thompson's residence, and no person being in the house at the time, the flames had gained considerable headway when discovered. So rapid was the progress of the destroying element that scarcely anything was taken out of the building.

An unoccupied frame building, in close proximity to Mr. Thompson's, became ignited, as did also two other frame buildings, all unoccupied.

By this time the villagers were alarmed and a bucket brigade was formed, and all worked with energy endeavoring to check the devouring element.

The four buildings were totally destroyed.

The three unoccupied residences were the property of a Mrs. Carr, who resides in the village.

Whilst the fire was at its height word was sent over to the city asking for assistance, and a request was made for the loan of one of the city's fire engines, but it appears that no official could be found who was in a position to order the sending of an engine to the scene of destruction.

Mayor Graham is out of the city, as is also the Chairman of the Fire Committee, Ald. McFee. The Chief of the Fire Department is ill and the Assistant Chief, Mr. James Cummins, stated that he would not take the responsibility of taking an engine out of the city.

However, a number of the local firemen drove over to Rossmore and did what they could, and the people of that village are loud in their praise of the assistance rendered by our fire fighters.

During the progress of the fire a number of buildings became ignited and it was only by heroic efforts that the destruction of others was prevented.

The actual loss sustained is not very heavy, except in Mr. Thompson's case, who can ill-afford his loss. He had an insurance of $300 on building and $200 on contents, but this will by no means cover his loss. We were unable to ascertain the loss or insurance, if any, carried by Mrs. Carr.

An unfounded rumor became circulated that, if permission to send over an engine had been granted, it would not have been allowed to cross the bay bridge. There was no truth in such a rumor, as both Dr. Sprague, owner, and the lessee of the bridge were only too anxious to have an engine go to the scene.

A large number from the city visited the fire last night, and all assisted in the work of saving property.

When the fire was at its height the city was brilliantly illuminated by the reflection of the flames.

A GOOD UMBRELLA.

Call at the Oak Hall and ask to see our $1 umbrella. If it is not as good or better than anything you ever saw at $1.25, we will say "don't buy." This is umbrella weather, and you know your old one is pretty shabby. When you come in about your umbrella you might ask to see some of our stylish raincoats.

WE WANT YOU TO READ THE FOLLOWING LETTER

WHICH WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED FROM MR. W. T. JACKSON, WHO SUFFERED FOR THREE YEARS WITH LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM.

Kingston, Ont., July 22, 1903.

The O. R. Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen,—It gives me great pleasure to recommend the O. R. Kidney Cure to all who are suffering from lame back, rheumatism or kidney trouble. I have endured the pangs of rheumatism for the last three years. I tried to get relief from doctors' medicine and preparations that I saw advertised, but all failed. I have now taken three bottles of the O. R. Kidney Cure and do not feel an ache or pain. I sleep perfectly and never felt better in my life than I do to-day. So I feel quite satisfied in recommending your preparation, as I believe I am permanently cured. I remain,

Yours truly,
W. T. JACKSON.

Employee of Peter Lowrie, Blacksmith, 50 Queen St., south.

Every bottle of O. R. Kidney Cure contains a full 10 days' treatment. It is put up in a liquid form, quickly assimilates and gives instant relief. Price 50c bottle. O. R. Liver Pills 25c bottle. O. R. Dyspepsia Tablets 25c box at druggists, or write

UNIQUE CHARACTER DEAD.

SALOON-KEEPER WITH A CONSCIENCE DIED OF HEART FAILURE.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 27.—John A. Showles, better known as "Judge" Showles, the honest saloonkeeper, is dead of heart failure.

"Judge" Showles had been in the liquor business in Milwaukee for more than thirty years, and during that time had established the reputation of conducting a saloon in the most upright manner it is possible to run such a place and stay in the business.

He was a man of remarkable appearance, well educated, a Mason of high degree well informed on topics of the day. Outside of associating with the frequenters of his place of business, he was alone in the world so far as known.

He never sold a mixed drink, declined to sell more than three drinks to a man, and if he knew a man's family suffered because he frequented Showles' place, no price could buy a drink.

"No beer for you, my friend," he would say. "Take your money home to your family. I do not want it; they need it." And he adhered to this rule.

Six o'clock was his closing hour, and when the hands of the clock approached the perpendicular he grew uneasy, and when the clock struck his best customer was told that business was over for the day.

"Judge" Showles was 72 years old when he died, and up to three weeks ago had experienced the best of health. At that time he suffered from his first attack of heart failure.

PRESENTED WITH ADDRESS AND SILK UMBRELLA

WARDEN OF CHRIST CHURCH, ON BEHALF OF CONGREGATION, PRESENTS TOKEN OF ESTEEM TO REV. PROF. HOWARD.

To-morrow will be the last Sunday in Belleville for Rev. Prof. Howard, who for some months has been taking Rev. W. B. Heeney's place in Christ Church. By his scholarly preaching and evident love for things evangelical, the Rev. Professor has, during his stay in this city, made many friends, who will regret to hear of his departure and wish him godspeed on the journey of life. Among these, The Intelligencer begs to be numbered.

This afternoon the following address, beautifully illuminated, accompanied by a handsome silk umbrella, was sent to the Rev. gentleman:

Rev. Prof. Oswald W. Howard, B.A., B.D.

Dear Sir,—It gives me intense pleasure to represent a congregation who in turn represent your many sincere friends and admirers, who have listened to your well thought out and earnestly delivered sermons, and on their behalf to ask you to accept this address and accompanying umbrella as a very slight token of their appreciation of your services.

You have earnestly taught us God's word, visited and comforted our sick, and bestowing marked attention to our Sunday Schools.

We feel that you have the assurance that "Duty faithfully performed crowns the hours with flowers."

Signed on behalf of the congregation of Christ Church, Belleville,

ALD. L. B. COOPER,
Warden.

Death of Mrs. Case.

After an illness of some months, Mrs. Mary Case, widow of the late Mr. E. W. Case, died last night at her late home on Pinnacle street. Deceased was born in Switzerland in the year 1835, but the greater portion of her life was spent in Belleville. Mrs. Case was a member of the Anglican church. The surviving members of the family are four sons, E. W., of Nanaimo, B.C.; John F., of Buffalo; Charles and Edward, of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. Handley and Miss Annie, also of this city.

Methodists in Convention.

The annual financial meeting of the Belleville Methodist district was held in the Tabernacle in this city yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Dr. Crothers, Chairman of the district, presided, and Rev. M. Thomas, of Plainfield, was the secretary.

The most important business was the arranging for a services of spiritual conferences in four parts of the district during the last days of September and the first of October. These meetings are to be a continuation of the anniversary services in connection with the birth of John Wesley, after which evangelistic meetings are to be held in every church in the district during October.

Only Common Assault.

Whitby, Aug. 29.—John Lennox, the Oshawa painter employed by McLaughlin Manufacturing Company, who has been lying in jail here for the past two weeks on a charge of rape on a 14-year-old girl of the same town, received his trial here at the County Judge's Criminal Court. The prisoner is a married man, with two children, who, with his wife, were in the court room. After the evidence for the prosecution was heard the charge was changed to one of common assault. To this the prisoner pleaded guilty, and was fined $100 and costs or one year in jail with hard labor.

Charles M. Hays Reticent,

Montreal, Aug. 29.—General Manager Charles M. Hays returned yesterday from England, but would not discuss Grand Trunk Pacific matters. "When the whole question is removed from the arena of politics, when it is all disposed of by those who have the right to dispose of it, why then, I will be glad to go into particulars, but at this moment, when the matter is still being debated in Parliament, I feel that I should not say a word on the subject."

In Case of Fire.

On retiring to rest place a handkerchief under the pillow. On being awakened by smoke or cry of "Fire!" thrust it in water, tie it around head, over mouth and nostrils, and you can walk erect through the densest smoke you meet. The nightly practice of placing the article will make you less nervous in the hour of danger.

On Faith and Honor.

The Danish folkething passed a bill abolishing oaths in legal procedure and substituting declarations "on faith and honor."

Smallest British Coin.

In the British crown colony of Hongkong a coin is in circulation known as the mil. This is a tiny copper coin with a hole in the center intended to take the place of the Chinese cash, which is one fifty-third of a penny and is in general use among the coolies in the colony.

How Iron-ox Tablets Cured a Well-Known Guelph Man of Catarrh of the Stomach.

The Guelph Waterproof Clothing Co., Guelph, Ont.

December 12, 1902.

Through your Iron-ox Tablets I have received a great blessing. For years I was troubled with my stomach. I doctored with several good doctors and they told me I had dyspepsia, but I was sure it was not that which ailed me. At last I found out it was catarrh of the stomach, and they told me I could not be cured. It got so bad at last that my stomach had ulcers, and I suffered something awful. Being a commercial traveler I received a box of your Iron-ox Tablets free last winter. I took them right along and I noticed, when away from home and staying at hotels, eating different food, it did not hurt me as it always did before; so when that box was empty I bought two more and have since had two more, and I must say my stomach is fully restored to its old-time work. I never leave home without a box of Iron-ox Tablets with me, as I believe them to be the best thing for the stomach ever made. I have recommended them to a very great number of people. As I travel from one end of the country to the other I am well known. I am a member of the above firm and do the travelling for them, and everyone that knows how I suffered with my stomach knows the difference now. I would have written sooner, but waited to make sure it was lasting, and I feel sure it is. I must say it is the best remedy I have ever used, and I would not be without it. Hoping your Iron-ox may cure many as it has me, I am yours sincerely,

W. F. PAYNE.

Steel Pens.

In 1849 steel pens were such a heterodox innovation in Germany that when a teacher named Weckerle, at Wollstein, ordered their adoption in his school he was publicly censured.

Half and Half.

Some inquiries as to the meaning of the term "half and half" as applied to a drink recalls an anecdote of Thackeray. On hearing of the death of a bibulous friend the satirist observed: "He was a man. Take him for half and half, I shall not look upon his like again."

Pine Bark Bread.

Bread made from pine tree bark is eaten in Finland and is almost the only food that can be obtained by the poorer inhabitants.

Slavery In Africa.

Ninety per cent of the inhabitants of western and central Africa are Mohammedans, and every man of note in central Africa owns slaves, his station in life being rated by the number of slaves he owns and the wives he possesses.

Lebanon Cedars.

It is stated that there are more specimens of the cedar of Lebanon in the gardens round London than on Mount Lebanon itself.

Hand to Mouth Chinese.

In nearly all Chinese cities a large percentage of the inhabitants live in a sort of hand to mouth fashion, buying food from restaurants. Hot water is sold from stands by people who make a business of providing it. The great necessity for economy in fuel seems to be the primary cause of this mode of living.

Eudoxus.

Eudoxus, born 406 B. C., was the first man known to history to explain planetary motion and to make a map of the heavens with the planets and fixed stars marked.

The Original Mince Pie.

The original mince pie was made of mutton and baked in the shape of a manger.

Tobacco and Cholera.

Experiments made in the hygienic institute in the Berlin university have shown that cholera bacilli die more quickly on dry tobacco than on dry glass plates, that they do not multiply, but quickly die on moist tobacco and that tobacco smoke quickly kills them.

A Short Christmas.

Christmas day at Tornea, in Finland, is very brief—in fact, less than three hours in length.

Defraction Disks.

By the use of defraction disks formed by light waves around bright points, such as particles of gold, a microscope has been given a magnifying power of 50,000 diameter.

Cholera Infantum

There is no danger whatever from this disease when taken in time and properly treated. All that is necessary is to give

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy after each operation of the bowels more than natural and then castor oil to cleanse the system. It is safe and sure. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Fuel economy is an important feature in a range. Almost as important as good cooking facilities. Every housewife wants to do good cooking but she doesn't want it to cost her too much in fuel. The good cooking qualities of the are enhanced by its great fuel economy. The big scuttle of coal of other style ranges is replaced in Imperial Oxford homes by a smaller scuttle less often used.

The fire-box is evenly proportioned to the size of the oven, so there is no more fire needed than the size of range demands—no waste heat. The arrangement of flues and drafts concentrate the heat in the stove—it doesn't lose itself up the chimney.

LIGHT FANCY WORK.

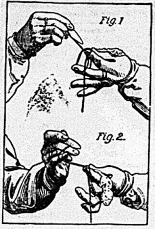
THE REVIVAL OF TATTING AND A NEW DECORATIVE NOTION.

The Great Vogue of Lace and Needlework Trimming In Dress—Requisites For Tatting—How to Do It—An Easy Embroidery Design.

There never was a time when lace was so much in request, and there is a renaissance of some of the older kinds, such as netting, crochet and tatting. The only requisites for tatting are a bone shuttle, a crochet hook and coarse thread. In choosing the shuttle select one which has the two halves coming together at the points so as not to let the thread escape while working, and also so that it shall not catch in the work. The two parts should just meet, so that the thread in pushing through should cause a slight click.

The two illustrations of the hands show the way the thread is passed round the hand and how the shuttle should be held. Having filled your shuttle with thread, take it in your right hand between thumb and first finger, take the end of the thread with your left and hold in position firmly with thumb and fore finger and pass the thread outward around the fingers, which should be spread out, and bring it round to the end and hold both with finger and thumb firmly, as in Fig. 1; pass the thread over to the left and bring the shuttle down on the right side of the thread held pretty taut by the spread fingers, carry it under the thread and bring it up on the left side between the taut thread and the shuttle thread (which was thrown over from the finger and thumb). This will make a single knot.

The spread fingers must now be relaxed and the shuttle thread held taut to bring the knot into position and so that the thread round the hand shall be over the shuttle thread and allow the latter to be drawn back and forth through the middle of the knot. This so far is only a single knot. Now let the shuttle thread hang loose on the right side of the thread around hand and pass the shuttle on the left under the thread and bring up on the right, as in Fig. 2; relax the fingers, tighten the shuttle thread and carefully draw up close to the other single knot. Now you have a double knot. See that the shuttle thread comes through the middle; otherwise when you have got all your knots made the thread would not draw, and it would therefore be no use.



THE HANDS IN TATTING.

I remember when a child picking up the stitch, but instead of making the knots with the thread round the fingers over the thread in the shuttle I kept the thread around the fingers too tight and made the knot with the shuttle thread over it instead of vice versa. The consequence was I could make one hole and draw it with the end of the thread, but of course could make no more.

When the shuttle is passed under the thread round the fingers the fingers must be spread and the thread held tight round them. The moment the shuttle comes up on the other side the fingers must be relaxed and the shuttle thread held tight. All the time, of course, the circle of thread round the hand is held firm by the finger and thumb. The only way to do it is to try over and over again. Having once mastered this initial difficulty, the rest is easy.

For a simple trimming which can be used on the edge of tucks or ruffles stitch two rows of machine stitching about a quarter of an inch apart and the same distance from the edge. Then with a contrasting color or the same color as the goods of Roman floss or heavy mercerized cotton run the threads diagonally through every other machine stitch, which should be long in order to permit the thread to run through easily.—Good Housekeeping.

EASILY MADE TRIMMING.

A Very Pretty Dessert.

For raspberry or blackberry pudding cut a pound of sponge cake into rather broad strips and spread thick on one side with the fruit, sugared if necessary, or with jam. Put one over the other in a log cabin pattern, and cover with a rich custard. Then beat the whites of the eggs stiff with as many tablespoonfuls of sugar, flavor with lemon and heap high over the whole.

A New Treatment For Cancer

A CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY WHICH HAS SUPERSEDED OPERATIONS.

The old methods of treating cancer by means of the knife or by pasts and plasters, while cruel and painful in the extreme, by no means effected a cure, as they only removed the surface indications of the disease and did not reach the cancer germs in the blood.

The new constitutional treatment does away with the pain and danger of operations, and while pleasant to take and harmless to the most delicate system, it is most prompt and effectual in destroying every cancer germ and clearing away every trace of cancer poison from the system. Send two stamps to B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., for full particulars.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S TRIP.

Every Wednesday during August, the Grand Trunk Railway System, in connection with the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Nav. Co., will afford the public the opportunity of a day's trip through the 1000 Islands via Kingston at very low rates. This is one of the most delightful trips imaginable. SCHOOL SUITS.

School opens next week. The end of vacation always finds the boys "out at knees and elbows." New outfits of wearing apparel must be bought—this week. Quick & Robertson have by far the largest stock of Boys' School Suits in this city; all new and up-to-date in style and strictly reliable in material and make. Special values, too, in Boys' furnishings, hats and caps.

Wanted.—A youth to learn the printing trade, one with slight experience would be accepted. Apply to The Intelligencer Office. 25-2td

WORKING AWAY MERRILY AT THE ROLLING MILLS.

IN ABOUT FOUR WEEKS' TIME, ACCORDING TO THE MANAGER, THEY WILL BE IN OPERATION.

In conversation with Mr. J. F. Wills, business manager of the Rolling Mills, The Intelligencer ascertained a few interesting facts.

It was learned that, on Monday next, three expert rolling mills men will arrive in the city from Montreal, who will at once proceed to overhaul the machinery and get it ready for active operations. For some time past a staff of 20 men has been employed.

"We want the best men we can get," said Mr. Wills, "but of course, being a Canadian myself, I prefer to hire our employees in Canada if possible."

"Have you any idea when active operations will begin?" he was asked.

"Well," was the reply, "we are open now to buy scrap, and have also taken steps to place contracts for coal. I think that in four weeks, or possibly five, we will have the works running. At any rate, as soon as possible."

"Are you going to use the nail plant?" said the inquisitive newspaper man.

Mr. Wills looked slightly surprised. "Going to use the nail plant?" he said; "well I should rather think so. We expect that nails, bolts, railway spikes, etc., will contribute about the largest part of our output."

The scribe, rather nonplussed, mentioned that, on the streets, it had been stated that the nail plant was obsolete and could not be run at a profit.

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Wills, emphatically. "My dear fellow, you can hear anything on the street. I have been assured by experts that the nail plant is all right and as good as any in Canada, though perhaps a trifle slower than later types of nail making machinery. Oh! yes. The nail plant will be one of our principal features."

"What do you think about the yacht races?" said the newspaper man.

But Mr. Wills was too busy to talk about frivolous things.

NERVOUSLY EXHAUSTED.

Sleepless, poor digestion, easily tired blue as indigo, that's how you feel. Do you want to feel strong, make plenty of blood, enjoy buoyancy, strength and vim. You can do so by using Ferrozone. How it sharpens the appetite and imparts a feeling of buoyancy, strength and vim! Improves the appetite, digestion, assimilation, sleep. How surely Ferrozone does this, you can ascertain by using it. Ferrozone is a blood builder, nerve strengthener and brain invigorator. Sold by all druggists.

The Late Mrs. Abrahams.

As mentioned in our issue of yesterday, Mrs. Eliza Abrahams, widow of the late Mr. James Abrahams, died at the family residence on Church street. The deceased was 77 years of age and had been a resident of this city for many years. She was a member of St. Michael's Church and a lady who was respected by all who knew her. Mrs. Abrahams had been ill for some time. A family of one son, Thomas, and two daughters, Misses Mary Ann and Josephine, survive. They all reside in the city.

WEAK BACK AND SPINAL PAINS.

Pains in the back number their victims in thousands. Only very powerful and penetrating remedies will reach these distressing complaints, but Polson's Nerviline is as sure to cure them as anything in this world can be sure. Prof. Wm. Brown's Death.

Australian papers received contain announcements of the death on May 12th last of Prof. Wm. Brown, at his residence in Ascalvale. On going to Australia in 1886, Prof. Brown was appointed to the chair of agriculture in the Dookie Agricultural College, and remained there until his appointment to the college at Longerenony. He was born on April 14th, 1833, at Turriff, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. He received a thorough scientific and practical education, particularly in relation to agriculture and forestry. For some years he was factor to Col. Farquharson, of Invercault, Braemar, but Canada presenting better prospects for his family of three sons and three daughters, he emigrated in 1871, and bought a farm near Orillia, and in addition to farming acted as Provincial Land Surveyor. He was appointed to the charge of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Farm in 1875. Prof. Brown was author of various important publications in regard to live stock, and was a lecturer of repute. His brother is Government Conservator of Forests for South Australia.

A Vanished "Kirk."

Canadian Presbyterians wi[illegible] with regret that the decision [illegible] tear down the old St. Gabriel Street Church, Montreal, has been carried out, and that nothing now remains of that historic structure but the records and memorials of its existence. It has made way for an extension of the court house, and thus the first landmark of Presbyterianism, and, indeed, of Protestantism, in Montreal has been removed. It was built in 1792, and for more than a century some of the most solid citizens of this eastern metropolis worshipped within its walls.

COMMITTEE DELIGHTED.

EVERYTHING ABOUT THE SCHOOLS IN APPLE PIE ORDER FOR TUESDAY NEXT.

The Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon visited the different schools of the city, in order to personally see that the repairs, etc., ordered had been properly made. The Committee, after viewing what had been done, expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied and unanimous in the opinion that the schools had never looked better at the opening of any teaching season. A member of the Committee informs us that the painting and kalsomining was, in particular, highly satisfactory.

YACHTING.

Says Reliance is the Best Boat.

New York, August 28.—Sir Thomas Lipton said last night: "I have no illusions about my boat. I know that I am licked. Every inch that she sails is an inch nearer defeat. I had the greatest confidence in her. I was as sure as one can be of an uncertainty that I should win.

"The Reliance is a better boat. That 2,000 square feet of canvas she carries gives her power, and Shamrock cannot hold her. Reliance is 2,000 square feet of sail better than my boat.

"I have done all that I can to lift the cup. I have come over here three times with the best boat that I could get. I cannot design a boat myself. I cannot sail her after she is built. I am neither a naval architect nor a racing skipper.

"I have done all that I can. I think I have done enough."

The Ingenious Magpie.

The magpie is nothing if not ingenious. He always barricades his bulky nest with thorn branches, so that to plunder it is by no means an easy matter, but when circumstances oblige the "pie" to build in a low bush or hedge—an absence of lofty trees being a marked feature of some northern localities—he not only interlaces his home, but also the entire bush, in a most formidable manner. Nor does he stop here. To "make assurance double sure" he fashions a means of exit as well as entrance to the castle, so that if disturbed he can slip out by his back door, as it were.

A Trying Position.

Clubberly—What's the matter? Is that widow I've seen you with troubling you?

Castleton—Yes, on my nerves. I can't make up my mind whether she is going to marry me or not.

Hard to Head Off.

Wantanno—I wonder if Gabsky will recite for me at my little party this evening?

Dunno—He will unless you know some as yet undiscovered way to prevent him.

Good Natured.

"What would you do if I were to offer you work?"

"It 'u'd be all right, mister," answered Meandering Mike. "I kin take a joke as well as anybody." — [illegible]

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

PEN PICTURES OF PEOPLE YOU MEET

ON A BELLEVILLE STREET.

MR. W. P. HUDSON, EX-M.P.P.

Few pleasanter-looking, or more popular men, are seen on our streets than William Parker Hudson, whose genial smile is ever ready to do business and beam on everybody. For whole-souled friendliness, the celebrated sunny smile of Laurier is "not in it" with that which, on the slightest provocation, breaks out on the countenance of Mr. Hudson, who, though quite a prominent politician for many years, is still able to bestow his smile on political friend or foe alike, with the certainty that in every case it will be appreciated, if not returned. Yes, indeed, "The smile that won't come off" is one of Mr. Hudson's characteristics, and a mighty good one it is. They do say that, some years ago, during a provincial election, his smile was in temporary eclipse for a time, when the wicked Grits, in their efforts to defeat him, stole certain ballot-boxes and hid them under sidewalks; but they couldn't beat Mr. Hudson, and when, in spite of the work of the Grit machine, he was declared triumphantly elected, our good friend's smile emerged from its retirement and was soon at work harder than ever. One thing in particular can be honestly said of Mr. Hudson, namely, though he has for many years been a strong political worker, and has left no stone unturned to gain success, he has never forfeited the respect of political friend or foe. He lacks the plausibility and palaver which distinguishes some Grit politicians whom one could hit with a brick without having to travel more than a hundred miles, but he also lacks, what some of them possess, a reputation for gaining his ends by unscrupulous methods. Mr. Hudson was twice elected to the local Legislature, as member for East Hastings, and probably could have been there yet had he not declined the nomination. Hearing Mr. Hudson speak the first time, the writer thought he had a North of Ireland accent, but that turned out to be pure fancy. He is of English descent, and was born in Thurlow in 1841. He received his education in that Township and learned the trade of a blacksmith with his father, who is supposed to have been the original village blacksmith, "Under a spreading chestnut tree," you know. Perhaps it was from that tree that the hero of our sketch gathered some of the chestnuts he beguiles dull moments with around election times—but that's merely a supposititious case, you understand. Before entering provincial politics Mr. Hudson cut quite a wide swath in Township affairs, being elected Deputy Reeve four times, three times by acclamation. He was treasurer of the Township of Hungerford Agricultural society for many years, and also treasurer of the East Hastings Agricultural Society for ten years. They do say there isn't a thing connected with a county fair that he isn't capable of judging, from a thoroughbred horse to a baby show. He is a Presbyterian, and since moving to Belleville has been a pillar in St. Andrew's Church, in which congregation he is an elder. Mr. Hudson has been for several years a member of the Board of Education, and it is very seldom his fault if there is no quorum on a meeting night. We forgot to say that Mr. Hudson is a Conservative, but, after hearing so many of his good qualities enumerated, you probably would have guessed that long ago. To sum his character up briefly, the subject of our little sketch is a plain, straightforward man, whose word is as good as his bond, whose whole-souled and genial presence will be surely missed when he is seen no more on Belleville's streets, and who will leave a place hard to fill.

DOCTORS' BLUNDERS.

What Legal Methods Applied to Medical Practice Would Uncover.

"Now that I am through with medicine I can speak of the profession in a fashion that I would not if I was still in the practice," said a gentleman who has been known as a successful physician in New York for years as he sat at luncheon in the Lawyers' club.

"Of course I don't care to have my name mentioned, for I have lots of good friends in the profession, but the fact is that the profession of medicine would be nearly ruined if it had to be conducted as you gentlemen of the bar practice your calling.

"We have a great advantage over you, for you in your cases are subjected to the extremest publicity, while we in our cases have the utmost concealment. Just suppose that in our cases we had a judge who knew as much as or more than we did presiding over our actions and, worse than that, had another physician, whose interests were not ours, watching and criticising us at every step and blazoning every error that we made. Dear me, such a prospect as that would frighten the best physician who ever lived the moment he entered a sick room, and yet that condition is just what you men of the law have to face in every case that you try.

"What sort of a figure would a lawyer cut floundering around in court without any knowledge of his case? But a physician can flounder mentally in a sick room without a second person being the wiser, though the patient may suffer; but, then, 'dead men tell no tales.'

"Under such circumstances of doubt, which is usually ignorance, the physician can look wise, put something into the patient's stomach, go to his office, decide what line of experiment he will follow, return the next day, hoping to find that nature is working the cure that he doesn't know how to effect, and being ready and willing to take all of the credit that comes his way.

"Why, the very first thing that nurses are taught is to observe the utmost secrecy about doctors' blunders. If they told what they know there wouldn't be much confidence in physicians where they are heard. Ask a nurse of experience about this when you have the opportunity.

"Yes, sir, I repeat that the publicity and chance for criticism in your profession, if applied to medicine, would result in the discovery of a small amount of science as compared with the large amount of empiricism."

A Quick Witted Partridge.

Nesting upon the ground, the partridge is likely to be disturbed. A bird of this species was once startled by a plow passing within a yard or so of its nest. Destruction was almost a certainty, as the plow must pass entirely over it in the next round, and the laborer wondered how the partridge would act. The time necessary for going around the field was about twenty minutes, yet in that almost incredible period the parent birds had effected the removal of some twenty-one eggs to a safe spot. Careful search led to the discovery of the bird calmly seated upon her treasures in the bottom of the hedge out of reach of the plow. Nineteen partridge chicks were eventually hatched and duly escaped unmolested.—London Tit-Bits.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consid[illegible] —more so than most people imagine.

VICTIMS OF VESUVIUS.

Pompeii and Herculaneum Not the Only Cities It Has Buried.

The road out of Naples toward Vesuvius is the same route that one follows to reach Pompeii. When intending to go up the mountain the tourist leaves the Pompeii road at Resina, the modern city which overlies Herculaneum. Apropos of these two ancient towns, it is remarkable how many people speak of them as the only buried cities in the vicinity. In fact, there are many, and it may not be uninteresting to mention them. Next to the two familiar ones, the one whose name is most frequently heard is Stabiæ. Then there are Cumæ, the oldest Greek colony in Italy; Baiæ, a watering place, resort of the Roman swells in the first year of our Lord; Parthenope, Palæopolis and Neapolis, three buried cities lying under modern Naples, from the last of which it took its name; Dikearchia (later called Puteoli, now Pozzuoli), another Greek city of large wealth and with much commerce; Capua, one of the great military posts of ancient Rome, now covered by a modern city, also a garrison, and Suessola, whose medicinal springs held high repute among the gouty epicures of the Roman time.

Cataclysmic have been the earth's throes around that laboring monster Vesuvius, for some of these buried cities, which were great seaports 2,000 years ago, are now far inland. On the other hand, offshore at Baiæ you may look down from a boat when in smooth water and discover ancient houses and streets far below you at the bottom of the sea. Some of these buried cities were much larger and more important places than either Pompeii or Herculaneum, yet to many travelers their names seem unfamiliar.

EDUCATING OYSTERS.

Training Schools In Which the Bivalves Are Taught Some Sense.

"A school for oysters," said a dealer in fish, "is an institution that you would swear could not exist, for oysters are notorious for their stupidity. It is, however, a fact that there are many oyster schools. I will explain them to you in such a way that you will believe in them. An oyster's intelligence is limited, but still it has intelligence. Years ago certain wise fish dealers discovered that if you take an oyster suddenly from its subaqueous bed it opens its shell, whereupon the life giving water inside it all escapes and the oyster dies. But if you expose an oyster to the air gradually, lifting it out of the water for a few minutes and then returning it again, it gradually learns that to keep its shell closed when out of the water is the best thing for its health. These investigators found that they could take two oysters, one trained and one untrained, and the trained oyster, keeping its shell closed while out of the water, would live a long time, while the untrained one, opening its shell, would die in a few hours. Therefore training schools for oysters were established. The schools are in appearance nothing more than reservoirs full of water. Oysters are put in them, and the water is drained off and then returned again. It is kept off for a few minutes at first, then for ten minutes, then for half an hour and so on. Oysters in these schools learn that they will live longest and keep healthiest out of water if they hold their shells tight shut. As soon as they learn this they are graduated and go out into the world."

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

They Are the Filters of the Body—Danger Signals.

Into everything we eat and drink, no matter how "pure" the food is labeled nor how careful we are, poisons enter. Were we not provided with organs especially designed to look after these poisons, human life would soon perish. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. They catch the poison in the food and expel it from the system. That is, they do these things when they are in healthy and vigorous condition. When they are weak, or overworked, or clogged, or handicapped by the ravages of disease in even a slight degree, they do their assigned work more or less imperfectly, or not at all. When the kidneys are not working well, the poison which should pass from the system is returned to the blood, to circulate through the body. Excess of uric acid in the blood causes inflammatory, muscular or articular rheumatism, for one thing, and those who have suffered from any of the forms of this distressing and dangerous malady will say that this is enough. The best authorities on the subject, however, believe that this is only a small part, and that to kidney irregularities are due a long train of bodily ailments. The kidneys often give warning, though not always and not always in time, of the dangers which menace the body from their abnormal condition. Among these danger signals are weakness of the back, pains or aches in the region of the kidneys, irregularity of the bowels and kidney action, chills, feverishness, puffy eyes, brick dust deposit or cloudiness, and a dropsical appearance of the ankles or wrists. When any of these symptoms appear blood poisoning to a certain extent is undermining the fabric of life. The result of the latest research into kidney troubles and their cure is the vegetable preparation known as Bu-Ju, which is put forth by the Claflin Chemical Co., Ltd., of New York, N. Y., and Windsor, Ont. It may be purchased at any drug store in boxes of 50 pills at 50 cents. It were well to pay no heed to efforts to substitute other so-called remedies for this dangerous condition, as Bu-Ju embodies all that these have with the addition of the latest-upto-date discoveries and enhanced skill in preparation.

REVERSE FOR INSURGENTS

1,000 Bulgarians Killed at Smilovo on Friday by Turks.

The Turkish Losses in the Engagement Were Insignificant—Four Thousand Albanians Pillaging Villages in Okrida and Krushevo—The Turkish Forces on the Frontier Have Been Largely Increased—New Risings.

Salonica, Aug. 31.—The Bulgarian insurgents sustained a severe reverse at Smilovo, Friday, 1,000 of them being killed. The insurgents to the number of 3,000 occupied a position on a height, which was stormed by six battalions of Turkish troops, commanded by Servet Pasha. After losing 1,000 of their number, the Bulgarians fled in the face of the heavy Turkish artillery fire. The Turkish losses were insignificant.

The insurgents have blown up the lighthouse at Vasiliko, and now occupy all the principal points along the Black Sea coast. The barracks at Demokita, near Adrianople, have been blown up and the garrison killed. Four thousand Albanians are pillaging the villages in the districts of Okrida and Krushevo. The latter district is deserted by the population, who have joined the insurgents in the mountains. The Turkish forces in the frontier districts have been largely increased.

New Risings Reported.

Sofia, Aug. 31.—Despatches received yesterday from Constaninople, Salonica, Monastir and Adrianople reveal an unsatisfactory condition of affairs in Macedonia. From Salonica come reports of new risings. At Monastir, the insurgents are said to be masters of the situation. Telegrams from Adrianople declare that the insurgent bands are continuing their ravages.

A new outbreak is reported to have occurred in the environs of Salonica, and several skirmishes have taken place between Gievgyeli and Salonica, and there has also been a fight near Fdidjevarda, both sides losing heavily. In the district between Kastoria and Storina, south of Monastir, the insurgents have destroyed all the fortified residences of the wealthy Beys. A notorious brigand named Abdul Medjid recently delivered a harangue to the inhabitants of Tetovo, telling them to prepare themselves to slaughter all the Bulgarians upon the first appearance of revolutionary bands in the neighborhood.

Turkish Troops Discouraged.

Many wounded Turkish soldiers have been brought into Salonica from Uskub, Seres and Monastir. The Turkish troops are reported to be greatly discouraged, and many deserters have been thrown into prison. According to the Dnevnik, the hodja (teachers attached to a mosque) in the Vilayet of Kossovo are preaching that the time for a holy war has come and that the people must be ready to kill the Christians in the vilayet. Insurgent bands are said to be in complete control of the districts of Demirhissar and Kitschevo, and the chief mountain passes in the Vilayet of Monastir. The total strength of the bands in the Vilayet of Adrianople is estimated at 6,000 men. The insurgents have blown up the barracks at Chioktepe, near Malkoternovo, killing sixty soldiers. They also attacked and set fire to the Turkish camps at Egripalanka, Kratovo and Kotcheni. A great panic ensued, the troops firing into each other. The Bulgarian Government has sent another regiment to strengthen the frontier forces in the neighborhood of Kostendi.

Merely a Wedding Party.

London, Aug. 31.—The Sofia correspondent of the Times telegraphs that it is explained that the Beirut affair was merely a wedding party indulging in a feu de joie, and the shots were not directed with design against the United States Vice-Consul, Mr. Magelssen.

Highwaymen Active in Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 31.—Highway robbery has been growing to an alarming extent the last few weeks. Several hold-ups in the downtown sections have been reported and one case of where two daring desperadoes entered the store of a Queen street dealer with drawn revolvers. The last two cases of daring holdups occurred on Saturday night. The victims were knocked down with the butt end of a revolver and relieved of $15 and $13 respectively.

Gunboat Founders.

Cadiz, Spain, Aug. 21.—The Austrain gunboat Sherla, has foundered off this port. Eleven of her crew were saved by a French trans-Atlantic steamer.

MR. TARTE AT BERTHIERVILLE

Ex-Minister of Public Works Against the Government.

Asserts That Since Premier's Health Began to Fail the Direction of Affairs Had Passed Into the Hands of Men Who Are Serving Their Own Ends—Declares Strongly For Increased Protection.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 31.—The Conservative demonstration held at Berthierville yesterday was a great success, there being present over four thousand people from all parts of the district as well as from Montreal and other points. Speeches were made by Mr. Tarte, Hon. Mr. Casgrain and others.

Against the Government.

Mr. Tarte was the speaker of the day and in a speech of considerable length came out against the Government. He pronounced strongly for protection. The Premier, he said, was not hostile to tariff reform but the majority of the members of the Cabinet were against it, and since Premier's health had began to fail the direction of affairs had passed into the hands of men who were serving their own ends. The Government knowing that defeat stared them in the face was trying to make a new lease of power. Mr. Tarte declared for increased protection. He declared that if the elections were held at once and the Government was successful, Sir Wilfrid Laurier would not be Premier two months and the tariff would at once be amended. The Premier's departure from politics, he said, could not be long delayed as he required absolute rest. Mr. Tarte appealed to all to work for fiscal reform.

Mr. Tarte also condemned the Government for what he claimed was the indecent haste in trying to put through the G. T. Pacific bill.

STRATHCONA DAY.

Canada's High Commissioner Leading Personage in Five Functions in One Day—Opened Dominion Exhibition.

Toronto, Aug. 31.—After an all-night journey from Montreal, Lord Strathcona, the venerable High Commissioner, was on Saturday the leading personage in five functions in as many parts of the city, and was actively engaged literally from early morning until midnight, when he returned to Montreal by special train. He delivered five addresses, all of considerable length. He greeted scores of old friends and made many new acquaintances. He was entertained at luncheon at the Exposition for two hours, delivered a twenty minute address in opening the Exhibition, was then driven direct to the University of Toronto, where he was invested with his degree, and in the evening at the National Club, replied to the toast of the occasion in his best humor, remaining at the banquet board for four hours, and then, holding a last informal reception at the King Edward prior to retiring to his sleeping coach, laughingly assuring the committee the while that he considered it almost a shame to retire so early in the evening.

Cable to the King.

The following cablegram was sent by Lord Strathcona to the Secretary for the Colonies on Saturday:

Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, Colonial Office, London:

Canadian National Exhibition successfully opened to-day.

The president and directors desire that you will be good enough to convey their sincere thanks to His Majesty for his gracious recognition.

The royal exhibit has evoked great enthusiasm and profound gratitude amongst his Canadian people.

STEAMER BURNED DOWN.

And Disappointed Members of Crew Are Being Suspected.

Windsor, Aug. 31.—The steamer Pittsburg of the Gegorian Bay Navigation Company's fleet was burned to the water's edge while tied up at a dock in Sandwich yesterday morning. This boat, which was valued at about $60,000, is a total loss. Insurance covers the loss but partially. Incendiarism is suspected. The boat was tied up a few days ago. Some of the members of the crew, it is said, experienced difficulty in getting their wages, when the Pittsburg tied up. Eight men stayed aboard to lay her up for the winter. At 2 and again at 4 o'clock yesterday morning they got up when they heard noises aboard, but failed to find anything wrong after carefully searching the boat. At 6 o'clock they were awakened again and barely had time to escape with their lives.

Broke His Thigh.

Toronto, Aug. 31.—George Moin, an employe of the G.T.R from Winnipeg, was brought to the Emergency Hospital Saturday night suffering from a broken thigh. While employed repairing the fire box of an engine at the foot of Spadina avenue, severla freight cars were shunted along the track, striking the engine. Moin was doubled up by the moving engine and beside the break it is thought he has sustained serious internal injuries.

Grasped a Live Wire.

Hamilton, Aug. 31.—Frederick Bibby, a young man from Dundas, and Miss Tyson had a shocking experience Saturday evening about 9.15. They were driving on Gore street when a live wire fell on the horse, which was killed instantly. Mr. Bibby got out of the rig to make an investigation, took hold of the wire and got a severe shock. Nearly the whole breast of the horse was torn away.

Anthrax Near Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Anthrax dreaded by cattle owners and fatal in most cases, if it obtains a foothold in the human frame, has been reported to the Health Department as having broken out in a herd of cattle on a stock farm near Palatine, in this county. The department has taken steps to protect the milk supply of Chicago.

Four More Election Petitions.

Winnipeg, Aug. 31.—Four more election petitions have been filed by the Liberals against the return of Hugh Armstrong as member for Portage la Prairie; Robert Rogers, for Manitou; John Ruddell, for Morden, and David Wilson, for Gladstone. Disqualification of Rogers is also asked for.

Twenty Were Killed.

Rome, Aug. 31.—All the persons injured in the railway accident near Uline Thursday night, when a train crowded with soldiers collided with a freight train, have been brought here. They number fifty-seven. The condition of twelve is serious. Twenty persons were killed in the disaster.

Powers Sentenced to Death.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 31.—Caleb Powers was Saturday found guilty of the murder of Governor Goebel. After a declaration of the prisoner: "I am not guilty, judge," the court fixed Nov. 25 as the date for the execution. The attorneys for the defendant secured the granting of an appeal for the case to the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

ALASKA BOUNDARY DISPUTE

Canadian and United States Commissioners Now in London.

Briefs Will Go in on Thursday, and Then Commission Will Announce a Day For Hearing Oral Arguments—Centre of the Controversy Is Said to Be Canada's Effort to Secure an Outlet to the Sea.

London, Aug. 31.—United States Secretary of War Elihu Root; ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster, Hannis Taylor and Judge John M. Dickinson arrived at Liverpool on the Celtic yesterday for the meetings of the Alaskan Boundary Commission, which will open in London, Sept. 3. The party came directly to London. The Canadian commissioners are also here.

United States Ambassador Choate has arranged to give a dinner in honor of Secretary Root, at which all the American and British representatives will be present.

The commissioners are already familiar with the facts of the cases on both sides, which were filed several months ago. At the first meeting of the commissioners next Thursday, the Americans and Canadians will submit their briefs, which will be a condensation of the facts and arguments regarding the interpretation of the treaty. The commission will then announce the day on which the oral arguments will be heard.

Centre of the Controversy.

The documents have not yet been made public, but the whole controversy centres upon Canada's effort to acquire an outlet to the sea. It is known authoritatively that the Canadian agent asserts that under the Russo-British treaty of 1825 the line properly crosses numerous inlets, including the head waters of the Lynn Canal. The contention seems to be that the inlets less than six miles wide, situated in the disputed region, belong to Canada. United States Counsel Foster vigorously opposed this view, following the sinuosities of the coast, and thus separates Canada from all the ocean and puts Porcupine Creek and the gold district under American jurisdiction.

The commissioners expect that the complete consideration of the entire case will take less than two months, and should the commission fail to render a majority award, the facts will be clearly established. This will lead to an easier settlement in the future.

Brakeman Killed.

New Hamburg, Ont., Aug. 31.—A freight train going east met with an accident early yesterday morning while coming down a grade approaching the bridge crossing the River Nith. It is supposed that an axle on one of the box cars laden with coal broke, and upon reaching the bridge five of the cars were thrown off the track. The auxiliary crew from Stratford cleared the track. Brakeman James Wise of Hamilton, who was sent out to flag the express train, coming from Stratford, was run over by the express and killed.

Chamberlain Refuses Jamaica Aid.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 31.—Consternation was caused here yesterday afternoon by the receipt of information that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain had refused to sanction the proposal of Governor Hemming to raise a loan of $2,500,000 to assist the ruined planters and provide relief work for persons who are destitute and without employment because of the recent hurricane. Mr. Chamberlain says he fails to appreciate the necessity for such a step.

Oil Train Wrecked.

Wallaceburg, Aug. 31.—Morning passenger trains on the Erie and Huron division of the L., E. & D. R. Railway were delayed until noon Saturday, caused by the wrecking of a freight train between Wallaceburg and Tupperville. The axle of a loaded oil tank car broke, the oil caught fire and the two tank cars and two cars of hay were burnt and considerable track destroyed. No person was injured.

Ships Taxed to Pay Quarantine.

Panama, Colombia, Aug. 31.—The National Government has approved the recent decree of the Governor of Panama, placing a tax of $100 on all steamers and sailing vessels entering the ports of Panama or Colon, while the danger of introducing bubonic plague lasts. These taxes will be devoted to defraying expenses of the quarantine stations.

Drowned at Beaverton.

Toronto, Aug. 31.—John Doyle, the eighteen-year-old son of B. J. Doyle, 77 Ann street, Toronto, who is excise officer at Gooderham & Worts distillery, was drowned on Saturday at Beaverton, where the family was summering. He was trying to save his younger brother, who was in a canoe drifting out into the lake.

Peace Czar's New Battleship.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 31.—The battleship Slava, which is one of the largest vessels in the Russian navy, was launched Saturday at the Baltic yard, in the presence of the Czar and the royal family. The Slava, which was laid down in 1901, is of 13,600 tons displacement, 16,000 horse-power and 376½ feet long.

TOO MUCH WIND.

No America's Cup Race on Saturday—Prob. Not Good For To-Day.

New York, Aug. 31.—For the first time in the history of the America's Cup contest a race has been postponed because of too much wind. Saturday the third of the present series of races was to have been sailed. Following the futile attempt of Thursday, when there was not enough wind to complete the race within the time limit, ten hours after that day's drifting failure a storm broke over the cup course and raged about Sandy Hook. The wind blew with a velocity estimated between 40 and 50 miles. At 7 o'clock the regatta committee met at the New York Yacht Club house and decided to postpone the race for the day.

The committee of the New York Yacht Club named Monday as the day for the next race. It also decided to hold the races every day thereafter until the international contest is decided.

Race To-Day Improbable.

The local Weather Bureau received the following despatch from Washington at 10 o'clock last night: The wind over the international yacht race course Monday will be brisk to high and mostly northeast, with cloudy and possibly rainy weather.

CAPTAIN LOSES CERTIFICATE.

No Effort Made to Stop the Leak of the Mersey.

Quebec, Que., Aug. 31.—The finding in the case of the steamer Mersey, which foundered near Point Outward on Aug. 12, five lives being lost, was handed down Saturday. The court finds that the Mersey was in a seaworthy condition when she left Quebec, that the boat furnished the Mersey was sufficient had the master used the material at his disposal to increase its buoyancy, to save all the lives, but that no effort was made to stop the leak, and that the vessel was abandoned by the only experienced men on board, leaving five helpless landsmen to drown.

Gagnon, master, and Barras, mate, were highly censured, the conduct of the former being declared brutal and inhuman and that of the latter cowardly. Lamothe, engineer, was declared guilty of being accessory to the desertion, but less to blame than the others, owing to his age. Captain Gagnon's certificate was cancelled, and the court recommended that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries deal with the mate's certificate.

ALSO AFTER FRAUD.

Original Instructions to Treadgold Commissioners Were Widened.

Ottawa, Aug. 31.—The orders in council authorizing enquiry into the Treadgold and other hydraulic mining concessions in the Yukon, which have just been published, show that the instructions to Commissioners Britton and Bell were enlarged so as to empower them to enquire into charges that several of these concessions were obtained by fraud and misrepresentation.

500,000 Barrels of Apples.

Halifax, Aug. 31.—"The apples shipped to England from Halifax last year amounted to only about 80,300 barrels. The coming season the shipment from this port will be close to 350,000 barrels." Such is the statement made by James Hall, manager at Halifax for Furness, Withy & Co., who has returned from a trip through the fruit-growing country. The Furness, Withy Company will run weekly steamers from Halifax. Mr. Hall spoke of the likelihood of 350,000 barrels offering for shipment via Halifax. The total crop of apples, an enormous one, is estimated at 400,000, or even 500,000 barrels.

Ex-President Steyn.

London, Aug. 31.—A rumor has reached England from Paris to the effect that ex-President Steyn is going to embrace the Roman Catholic faith. Mr. Steyn, whose health has improved, is being looked after by Roman Catholic Sisters of Mercy. His head and body have regained their mobility, and speech has returned. He can walk a few steps without help; his arms and fingers are still stiff, but give hope of complete recovery; but his eyesight is defective.

Same Old Story.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—The German South Pole expedition, which sailed from Kiel on the steamship Gauss, Aug. 11, 1901, under the leadership of Prof. Ehrich von Drygalski, has arrived at the Island of St. Helena. It was a failure.

Long Strike Was Futile.

A $10,000,000 Decision.

Butte, Montana, Aug. 31.—Judge Clancy, in the District Court Saturday, rendered his decision in the Nipper Mine case, which involved mining property valued at $10,000,000, giving the plaintiffs, F. Angus Heinz, and others, everything they asked against the Washoe Copper Company and the Anaconda Copper Company.

"Bobs" Can't Come.

New York, Aug. 31.—The Tribune's London correspondent cables that he is authorized to make the announcement that Lord Roberts will not be able to go to America this year.

Bishop Took an Overdose.

Hamilton, Aug. 31.—Bishop Grant of Philadelphia took an overdose of medicine yesterday morning, and is a very sick man. He is on his way to the Ontario conference of the A.M.E. Church, which will meet next Wednesday in Toronto.

He Walked on the Track.

Renfrew, Aug. 31.—Joseph Lambert of Admaston was instantly killed Saturday on the Canada Atlantic Railway track, about five miles west of here. He was walking on the track, and being very deaf, did not hear the train coming.

Charged With Murder.

Montreal, Aug. 31.—Bert Kent, son of Isaac Kent, a well-known contractor, who is building the Bout De Lile bridge, is under arrest on a charge of killing a young Englishman named Grierley. The shooting occurred Saturday, and the young man died yesterday.

Robbers Took No Chances.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Without a word of warning, two men killed and two others wounded by hold-up men at the barns of the Chicago City Railway Company at an early hour yesterday. The shooting was done by three men, who escaped after securing $3,000.

Two Were Killed.

Toledo, Aug. 31.—A freight wreck occurred in the yards of the Nickel Plate Railway at Bellevue, Ohio, yesterday in which Engineers James F. Rodenburg, of Bellevue, and J. G. Bartholomew, of Conneaut, Ohio, were killed.

Daily Intelligencer.

THE WORTHLESS CENSUS.

The Public Accounts Committee has finished its inquiry into the taking of the last census. The evidence showed that the work was managed in a most disgraceful manner. The census has cost over $1,300,000 to date. Witnesses responsible for large expenditures admitted on oath that they had allowed accounts to be stuffed and certified as to their accuracy. These fraudulent practices were brought home to leading supporters of the Government, one of the worst offenders being an ex-member of Parliament, whose name readers of The Intelligencer will not need to be told. The Minister of Agriculture has not taken steps to make those who robbed the country return their ill-gotten gains. But perhaps the worst feature of the census is, that after spending such an enormous sum of money, Mr. Fisher has hardly a scrap of information that can be relied upon. Not only has the enumeration of the population been made in a loose way, but the statistics concerned with agricultural pursuits have been so tortured that they are worthless. Schedules numbers four and five were found to disagree in hundreds of cases, whereas the figures should have been identical. In order to correct the discrepancies which were found at every hand, changes were made right and left without further inquiry. The result is that the census is useless for practical purposes. It is wholly unreliable, yet it has cost more than twice as much as any previous census.

TIMELY TOPICS

It's a wonder some of the city ministers didn't take a few verses about Noah and the ark for a text yesterday,

• • •

Everything seems to be wonderfully advanced this year. One farmer told the writer that his threshing, this year, was finished just one month sooner than it was last year. Can it be possible that winter is going to get a sprint on and get here a month ahead of time. Let's hope not, though it felt on Saturday night that we might see the frost on the pumpkin almost any night now.

• • •

In another column "A Lover of Wild Animals" makes a timely plea for the preservation of the black squirrel now almost extinct. All sportsmen should warmly second his motion.

• • •

A Toronto paper on Saturday published a despatch from New York in which Sir Thomas Lipton is quoted as saying:

"If the day ever comes when Britain produces a Herreshoff, then I will challenge for the cup again. It will not be until then. It is unpleasant to be compelled to admit it, but the brains in boat-building are on this side of the water."

It may reasonably be doubted if Sir Thomas Lipton ever made the remarks attributed to him above. If he did, then disappointment must have soured the milk of human kindness which he mixes with his tea. It is acknowledged by the leading experts that the conditions under which the cup races are sailed are unfair to challengers. That in order to make the ocean voyage a British boat must be built in a way which adds to her strength while deducting from her speed. Why, then, blame British designers for something over which they have no control.

• • •

It may well be asked, how have the Yankee races performed in British waters, when taken over there to compete? It is not long since the Vigilant, after defeating a cup challenger in three straight races, went across the Atlantic and succeeded in winning but three out of twelve races sailed; one of the three races was won because her opponent got stuck in the mud. That did not look as though all the "brains in boat building were on this side of the water." And the boat which defeated Vigilant—the Britannia—was not considered good enough to challenge for the America's cup. It may be admitted, of course, that it is well nigh hopeless for an Old Country boat to challenge for the America's cup, but the fault does not lie in the lack of brains among British yacht designers, it lies in the lack of principle among those who hold the cup and make regulations which enable them to keep it.

• • •

A minister in Asbury Park, N.J., earnestly requested the lady members in his congregation to put their hats on when they came to church. The cause of this, it is stated, was because the ladies, having left off their hats, were beginning to show symptoms of trying to introduce seaside costumes in church. Having to draw the line somewhere, the good minister started at the top.

• • •

In Hamilton on Saturday a man was fined for selling on the market "faced" fruit. That's the technical word for an old fraud—putting good fruit on top and inferior below. Wonder whose duty it is to look after that sort of thing here. From what is said he would find plenty to do.

• • •

The City minister who was presented with an umbrella on Saturday is wonderfully struck with the fitness of things.

• • •

Hon Mr. Tarte in his speech at Berthierville yesterday, seems to have burned his bridges after him. His remarks about the bad gang which rules the Premier contain, it would appear, more truth than poetry.

• • •

TIME'S REVENGES.

(Hamilton Times.)

Now the War Office that treated Buller so shamefully is condemned for the conditions under which it compelled the gallant old general to fight. Good!

Licensed victuallers in Hamilton will reduce the size of their beer glasses. And all the rest of Ontario waits with bated breath to hear the roar which will shortly come from the Ambitious City. Niagara Falls will be like a lovesick maiden's sigh compared to it.

Testing the City Water.

SAMPLES NOW IN TORONTO FOR ANALYSIS—BETTER BOIL IT, THE MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER SAYS.

Since the remarks on page 4, concerning the city water, were printed, we learn from Dr. Ross, Medical Health Officer, that steps have been taken to have the water properly analyzed, and that a sample, for that purpose, is now in Toronto. It is expected that a report in connection with it will shortly be received.

The Medical Health Officer says that at present the city is singularly free from typhoid, and that he does not think the water contains any fever-breeding poison. However, until a report has been received from Toronto it would, in his opinion, be well for people to boil their water before drinking it. There is not, however, anything much to be alarmed at, as the offensive taste of the water probably comes from the "blossom" which usually is to be found in the bay water at this time of the year.

A WELL KNOWN ALBANY MAN.

Recommends Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

About eighteen months ago Mr. W. S. Manning, of Albany, N. Y., widely known in trade circles as the representative of the Albany Chemical Co., was suffering from a protracted attack of Diarrhoea. "I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," he says, "and obtained relief. cheerfully recommend this medicine to those similarly afflicted." Sold by all druggists.

Literary Notes

"Our hired girl would be a perfect gem for the Post Office Department," Mr. Simpon says, in proffering her services to Postmaster-General Payne, in an open letter, in the September number of Wilshire's Magazine. "She is not to say swift, but she can poke around for two days and leave more rubbish hid under the cellar stairs than a stranger would imagine about the place. When it comes to white-washing she is a jewel of the first water. Why, General, she one time white-washed the back fence and made it so white and shiny that the roof of the cow-shed curled up all round the edges, thinking it was the light of the moon."

The September Review of Reviews has a characteristic paper by Dr. Lyman Abbott on "The Race Problem in the United States," and is followed by a statement of "The Negro Problem in South Africa" from the pen of an English writer, Mr. Arthur Hawkes. The latter contribution is especially interesting as showing, for the benefit of American readers, that the negro question is a vital one in other lands than ours.

Reliance vs. Shamrock.

YACHTS RACING AGAIN TO-DAY—YANKEE BOAT HAS ALL THE BEST OF IT.

New York, August 31.—The Reliance and Shamrock started this morning in the third race for the America's cup. The starting gun was fired at 11.45. The start was thus timed:

Reliance 11.45.02
Shamrock 11.45.24

In 45 minutes sailing the American boat leads by at least half a mile. The wind, which at the start was 8 knots, has now fallen to 4, and the chances are now poor for finishing in time.

New York, 2.40 p.m.—At one mile from the turn Reliance is leading bt two miles. Wind 5 knots. Does not look as though race will be finished in time.

A TRUE NERVE TONIC acts not so much upon the nerves themselves, as upon the digestive functions and the abundant formation of rich, red blood. The nerves cannot be fed on medicine. They can be fed and strengthened by digested and assimilated food. Ferrozone's marvellous action arises from its power over the digestive and assimilative functions of the body. You take it, the blood grows richer, redder. You feel strength and vigor, digestion ceases to be noticed, for it has become good. Work is easier, for you have the strength to do it. In a short time you have health. Use Ferrozone.

Finished

Yes, Queen Victoria School is finished, ready for school opening, and a prettier job of brick painting cannot be found anywhere. Perhaps you would like your house painted likewise—not necessarily the same color—you might like cream or a less bright shade of red than the school—anyway we can give you anything you want in color, will do your work at reasonable prices—do it promptly, with an excellent staff of workmen, fifteen in number, all good workmen, we can turn out work more promptly than could a small staff.

School Opening.

Not only do we paint all the schools but we sell pretty nearly all the SCHOOL BOOKS and School Supplies and there is a reason for it.

Firstly, we know from fifteen years' experience the needs of the scholars—know where to find the better lines of supplies, have the agencies of the best bookmakers, control all the best school supplies, sell at lowest prices, because buying in large quantities we secure lower prices;—sell Wholesale and Retail, and have always a mammoth assortment.

A Reminder as to Wall Papers.

On September 1st we commence our fall battle in Wall Papers—we have all ammunition required, have the machinery always moving and usually moving quickly—We will surprise you in prices—Can't afford to have your home anything but attractive for the long winter months when so small a figure will do it—

Then, too, we will continue to give away free bordering with our Wall Papers—two yards with each double roll of Wall Paper.

We'll hang the paper at low prices, too, and hang it properly.

Our picture framing should always ring in your ears—we so often tell you about it. If you are a framing customer of ours you know all about it, if not a framing customer of ours, you are making a great mistake—providing you have framing to do.

"He might," Miller smiled, "if he didn't want to move that railroad somewhere else, and, besides, your father can keep the money in suitable shape to pay off the note in any emergency and free himself."

"I don't know how to thank you, old man," answered Alan. "If you had been personally interested in this, you could not have done more."

Miller threw himself back in his chair and smiled significantly. "Do I look like a man with nothing in it?" he asked.

"But you haven't anything in it," retorted Alan wonderingly.

"That's all you know about it," Miller laughed. "If the road is built, I'll make by it. This is another story. As soon as I saw you were right about putting a railroad into the mountains I began to look around for some of that timber land. I didn't have long to wait, for the only man that holds much of it besides Colonel Barclay—Peter Mosely, whom Perkins fooled just as he did your father—came in. He was laying for me. I saw it in his eye. The Lord had delivered him to me, and I was duly thankful. He was a morsel I liked to look at. He opened up himself, bless you, and bragged about his fine body of virgin timber. I looked bored, but let him run on till he was tired; then I said:

"'Well, Mosely, what do you intend to do with your white elephant? You know it's not just the sort Barnum is looking for.'

"He kind o' blinked at that, but he said: 'I've half a notion to sell. The truth is, I've got the finest investment open to me that I ever had. If I could afford to wait a few years, I could coin money out of this property, but I believe in turning money quick.'

"'So do I,' said I, and watched him flirt about in the frying pan. Then I said, 'What is the price you hold it at?'

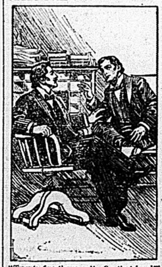
"'I thought,' said he, 'that I ought to get as much as I paid.'

"'As much as you paid Abe Tompkins and Perkins?' I said, with a grin. 'Do you think you could possibly sell a piece of land for as much as those sharks? If you can, you'd better go in the real estate business. You'd coin money. Why, they yanked two thousand out of you, didn't they?'

"'I don't really think Perkins had anything to do with it,' he said. 'That's just a report out about old man Bishop's deal. I bought my land on my own judgment.'

"'Well,' I said, 'how will fifteen hundred round wheels strike you?'

"'I believe I'll take you up,' he said. 'I want to make that other investment.' So we closed, and I went at once to have the deed recorded before he had a chance to change his mind. Now, you see, I'm interested in the thing, and I'm going to help you put it through. If your folks want the loan, bring them in in the morning, and if we can manage our Yankee just right we'll get the money."



"Twenty-five thousand! On that land!"

CHAPTER XV.

AFTER supper that evening the Bishops sat out on the veranda to get the cool air before retiring. There was only one light burning in the house, and that was the little smoky lamp in the kitchen, where the cook was washing the dishes. Bishop sat near his wife, his coat off and vest unbuttoned, his chair tilted back against the weatherboarding. Abner Daniel, who had been trying ever since supper to cheer them up in regard to their financial misfortune, sat smoking in his favorite chair near the banisters, on top of which he now and then placed his stockinged feet.

"You needn't talk that a-way, Brother Ab," sighed Mrs. Bishop. "Yo're jest doin' it out o' goodness o' heart. We might as well face the truth. We've got to step down from the position we now hold, an' present way o' livin'. An' thar's Adele. Pore child! She said in 'er last letter that she'd cry 'er eyes out. She was bent on comin' home, but 'er Uncle William won't let 'er. He said she'd not do any good."

"An' she wouldn't," put in Bishop gruffly. "The sight o' you an' Alan before me all the time is enough to show me what a fool I've been."

"You are both crossin' bridges 'fore you git to 'em," said Abner. "A lots o' folks has come out'n scrapes wuss'n what you are in, ten to one. I ain't never mentioned it, but my land hain't got no mortgage on it, an' I could raise a few scads to he'p keep up yore intrust an' taxes till you could see yore way ahead."

"Huh!" snorted his brother-in-law. "Do you reckon I'd let as old a man as you are, an' no blood kin, stake his little all to help me out of a hole that is gittin' deeper an' wider all the time—a hole I deliberately got myse'f into? Well, not much!"

"I wouldn't listen to that nuther," declared Mrs. Bishop, "but not many men would offer it."

They heard a horse trotting down the road, and all bent their heads to listen. "It's Alan," said Abner. "I was thinkin' it was time he was showin' up."

Mrs. Bishop rose wearily to order the cook to get his supper ready, and returned to the veranda just as Alan was coming from the stable. He sat down on the steps, lashing the legs of his dusty trousers with his riding whip. It was plain that he had something of importance to say, and they all waited in impatient silence.

"Father," he said, "I've had a talk with Rayburn Miller about your land. He and I have lately been working on a little idea of mine. You know there are people who will lend money on real estate. How would it suit you to borrow $25,000 on that land, giving that alone as security?"

There was a startled silence, and Bishop broke it in a tone of great irritation.

"Do you take me fer a plumb fool?" he asked. "When I want you an' Miller to dabble in my business, I'll call on you. Twenty-five thousand, I say! If I could exchange every acre of it fer enough to lift the mortgage on this farm an' keep a roof over our heads, I'd do it gladly. Pshaw!"

There was another silence, and then Alan began to explain.

While he talked Mrs. Bishop sat like a figure cut from stone, and Bishop leaned forward, his elbows on his knees, his big face in his hands. It was as if a tornado of hope had blown over him, shaking him through and through.

"You been doin' this to he'p me out," he gasped, "an' I never so much as axed yore opinion one way or another."

"I'd rather see you make money out of that purchase than anything in the world," said his son, with feeling. "People have made fun of you in your old age, but if we can build the road and you can get your hundred thousand dollars some of these folks will laugh on the other side of their faces."

Bishop was so full of excitement and emotion that he dared not trust his voice to utterance. He leaned back against the wall and closed his eyes, pretending to be calm, though his alert wife saw that he was quivering in every limb.

"Oh, Alan," she cried, "don't you see how excited your pa is? You ought not to raise his hopes this way on such an uncertainty. As Mr. Miller said, there may be some slip, and we'd be right back where we was and feel wuss than ever."

Bishop rose from his chair and began to walk to and fro on the veranda. "It ain't possible," they heard him saying. "I won't git out as easy as that—I jest cayn't!"

"Perhaps it would be wrong to expect too much," said Alan, "but I was obliged to tell you what we are going in town for tomorrow."

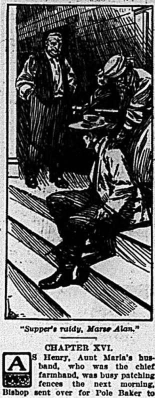
Bishop wheeled and paused before them. "Ef Wilson puts up the money, I'd have enough to lift the mortgage an' a clean $20,000 besides to put in some good investment."

Aunt Maria, the colored cook, came out and timidly announced that Alan's supper was on the table, but no one heard her. She crossed the veranda and touched the young man on the shoulder.

"Supper's raidy, Marse Alan," she said, "en it's gittin' col' ergin."

He rose and followed her into the dining room and sat down in his accustomed place at the long table. When he had eaten, he went back to the group on the veranda.

"I think I'll go up to bed," he told them. "My ride and running around at Darley have made me very tired. Father, get all your papers together and let's take an early start in the morning."



"Supper's raidy, Marse Alan."

CHAPTER XVI.

AS Henry, Aunt Maria's husband, who was the chief farmhand, was busy patching fences the next morning, Bishop sent over for Pole Baker to drive the spring wagon. Alan sat beside Pole, and Abner and Bishop and Mrs. Bishop occupied the rear seats.

Alan knew he could trust Pole, drunk or sober, and he confided his plans to the flattered fellow's ears. Pole seemed to weigh all the chances for and against success in his mind as he sat listening, a most grave and portentous expression on his massive face.

"My opinion is the feller 'll be thar as shore as preachin'," he said. "But whether you git his wad or not—that's another question. Miller's as sharp as a brier, an', as he says, if Wilson gits to talkin' about that land to any o' these hill Billies they'll bu'st the trade or die tryin'. Jest let 'em heer money's about to change hands, an' it 'll make 'em so durn jealous they'll swear a lie to keep it away from anybody they know. That's human natur'."

"I believe you are right," said Alan, pulling a long face, "and I'm afraid Wilson will want to make some inquiries before he closes."

"Like as not," opined the driver. "But what I'd do ef I was a-runnin' it would be to git some feller to strike up with 'im accidental-like an' liter'ly fill 'im to the neck with good things about the property without him ever dreamin' he was bein' worked."

The two exchanged glances. Alan had never looked at a man so admiringly. At that moment he seemed a giant of shrewdness as well as that of physical strength.

"I believe you are right, Pole," he said thoughtfully.

"That's what I am, an', what's more, I'm the one that could do the fillin' without him ever knowin' I had a funnel in his mouth. If I can't do it, I'll fill my hat with saft mud an' put it on."

Alan smiled warmly. "I'll mention it to Miller," he said. "Yes, you could do it, Pole, if any man on earth could."

Driving up to Miller's office, they found the door open, and the owner came out with a warm smile of greeting and aided Mrs. Bishop to alight. "Well," he smiled when they had taken seats in the office. "We have gained the first step toward victory. Wilson is at the hotel. I saw his name on the register this morning."

The elder Bishops drew a breath of relief. The old man grounded his heavy walking stick suddenly, as if it had slipped through his inert fingers.

"I'm trustin' you boys to pull me through," he said, with a shaky laugh. "I hain't never treated Alan right, an' I'm heer to confess it. I 'lowed I was the only one in our layout with any business sense."

"So you are willing to accept the loan?" said Miller.

"Willin'? I reckon I am. I never slept one wink last night fer feer some'n' 'll interfere with it."

Miller reflected a moment and then said: "I am afraid of only one thing, and that is this: Not one man in a million will make a trade of this size without corroborating the statements made by the people he is dealing with. Wilson is at breakfast by this time, and after he is through he may decide to nose around a little before coming to me. I'm afraid to go after him; he would think I was overanxious. The trouble is that he may run upon somebody from out in the mountains—there are a lot in town already—and get to talking. Just one word about your biting off more than you can chaw, Mr. Bishop, would make him balk like a mean mule. He thinks I'm favoring him now, but let him get the notion that you haven't been holding that land for at least a hundred thousand and the thing would bu'st like a bubble."

Alan mentioned Pole Baker's proposition. Miller thought it over for a moment, his brow wrinkled, and then he said: "Good—a good idea, but you must call Pole in and let me give him a few pointers. By George, he could keep Wilson away from dangerous people anyway."

Alan went after Pole, and Miller took him into his consultation room in the rear, where they remained for about fifteen minutes. When they came out, Pole's face was very grave. "I won't forget a thing," he said to Miller. "I understand exactly what you want. When I git through with 'im, he'll want that land bad enough to pay anything fer it, an' he won't dream I'm in cahoot with you nuther. I can manage that. I ain't no fool ef I do have fits."

"Do you remember my description of him?" asked Miller.

"You bet I do—thick set, about fifty, bald, red faced, sharp black eyes, iron gray hair, an' mighty nigh always with a cigar in his mouth."

"That's right," laughed Miller. "Now do your work, and we won't forget you. By all means keep him away from meddlesome people."

When Pole had left the office and Miller had resumed his revolving chair, Mrs. Bishop addressed him, looking straight into his eyes.

"I don't see," she said in a timid, hesitating way and yet with a note of firmness dominating her tone—"I don't see why we have to go through all this trickery to make the trade. Ef the land is good security fer the money, we needn't be afeerd of what the man will find out. Ef it ain't good security, I don't want his money, as fer as I'm concerned."

"I was jest thinkin' that, too," chimed in her husband, throwing a troubled glance all round. "I want money to help me out o' my scrape, but I don't want to trick no man, Yankee or what not, into totin' my loads. As Betsy says, it seems to me if the land's wuth the money we needn't make such a great to-do. I'm afeerd I won't feel exactly right about it."

The young men exchanged alarmed glances.

"You don't understand," said Miller lamely, but he seemed to be unprepared for views so heretical to financial dealings, and could not finish what he had started to say.

"Why," said Alan testily, "the land is worth all Wilson can make out of it with the aid of his capital and the railroad he proposes to lay here. Father, you have spent several years looking up the best timbered properties and getting good titles to it, and to a big lumber company a body of timber like you hold is no small thing. We don't want to cheat him, but we do want to keep him from trying to cheat us by getting the upper hand. Rayburn thinks if he finds out we are hard up he'll try to squeeze us to the lowest notch."

"Well," sighed Mrs. Bishop, "I'm shore I never had no idea we'd resort to gittin' Pole Baker to tote anybody around like a hog after a yeer o' corn. I 'lowed we was goin' to make a open and shut trade that we could be proud of an' stop folks' mouths about Alfred's foolish dealin's. But"—she looked at Abner, who stood in the doorway leading to the consultation room—"I'll do whatever Brother Ab thinks is right. I never knowed 'im to take undue advantage of anybody."

They all looked at Abner, who was smiling broadly.

"Well, I say git his money," he replied, with a short, impulsive laugh—"git his money, and then, ef you find he's starvin', hand 'im back what you feel you don't need. I look on a thing like this sorter like I did on scramblin' fer the upper holt in wartimes. I remember I shot straight at a feller that was climbin' up the enemy's breastworks on his all fours. I said to myse'f, 'Ef this ball strikes you right, old chap, 'fore you drap over the bank, yo're one less agin the Confederacy; ef it don't, you kin pop away at me.' I don't think I give 'im anything but a flesh wound in the back, bees'se he jest sagged down a little an' crawled on, an' that's about the wust you could do fer Wilson. I believe he ort to hold the bag awhile. Alf's hung on to it till his fingers ache an' he's weak at the knees. I never did feel like thar was any harm in passin' a counterfeit bill that some other chap passed on me. Ef the government, with all its high paid help, cayn't keep crooked shinplasters from slidin' under our noses, it ortn't to kick agin our lookin' out fer ourse'ves."

"You needn't lose any sleep about the Southern Land and Timber company, Mrs. Bishop," said Miller. "They will take care of themselves. In fact, we'll have to keep our eyes peeled to watch them even if we get this loan. Wilson didn't come up here for his health."

"Oh, mother's all right," said Alan, "and so is father, but they must not chip in with that sort of talk before Wilson."

"Oh, no, you mustn't," said Miller. "In fact, I think you'd better let me and Alan do the talking. You see, if you sit perfectly quiet he'll think you are reluctant about giving such big security for such a small amount of money, and he will trade faster."

"Oh, I'm perfectly willin' to keep quiet," agreed the old man, who now seemed better satisfied.

Pole Baker left the office with long, swinging strides. There was an entrance to the Johnston House through a long corridor opening on the street, and into this Pole slouched. The hotel office was empty save for the clerk, who stood behind the counter looking over the letters in the pigeonholed key rack on the wall. There was a big gong overhead which was rung by pulling a cord. It was used for announcing meals and calling the porter. A big china bowl on the counter was filled

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Never be afraid of doing little because you can't do much.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating, unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The emulation of the wise is the life of science.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

The price which sin demands is far greater than the pleasure it gives.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, Children like it.

The best way to get even is to forget.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

All trails are long to the lazy.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

A pessimist is a man who is always looking for worms in chestnuts.

A good man is one whose goodness is part of himself.

Nothing so certainly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected cold, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

It never injures an orchard to manure it.

Judicious annual pruning is essential with the peach.

Low headed trees resist the wind better, and the fruit is more easily picked.

In grafting a large tree it is best not to try to graft the whole tree in one season.

Budding on certain slow growing and somewhat incongruous stock, is the best way of dwarfing.

In most cases the cause of moss appearing on the stems of apple and other fruit trees is wet, cold, undrained land.

The soil for roses should be rich and of such tenacity that it will hold together when pressed. Sand and clay mixed is good.

All wood that is more than two years old should be cut out from the currants and gooseberries. They will produce more fruit, even if the vines are not so large.

An Economical Mother.

Small Katherine, who had been forbidden to touch the ink bottle, had accidentally spilled its contents not only all over her mother's desk, but on the rug, several chairs and her own apron. Her mother, on discovering the state of affairs, had expressed more surprise than pleasure. When the father of the family returned at night his little daughter met him at the door and asked:

"Papa, how much does a bottle of ink cost?"

"Oh, about 5 cents."

"Five cents!" exclaimed the aggrieved youngster in a tone of deep disgust. "And to think that mamma would make all that fuss about one little bottle of ink!"—Lippincott's.

Mrs. John Peters was the mother of a family of restless children, and she found difficulty in reducing them to quiet when the moment came for asking a blessing at the table. So her course of procedure was something in this fashion:

"Alice, be still! Eddie, not another word! Maud, don't you see your father is waiting? There—now, John; now!"

TIMELY TOPICS.

The wind did a lot of blowing yesterday, but it didn't blow many people to church.

• • •

One of our leading medical men met the Topics man this morning, and said: "Say, I'm worrying a good deal about the city water." The newspaper man was mildly surprised. The disciple of Esculapius in question, though an excellent judge of water, is popularly supposed to have tastes which drift towards cold tea and buttermilk, rather than Adam's Ale. The medical man went on, and in terse and vigorous language, expressed his opinion of the City Fathers for not as he put it, taking steps to protect the public health.

• • •

"I have not the slightest doubt," said our medical friend, "that if the present state of things continues there will be an epidemic of typhoid. These complaints about the water have been going on for some time, now, but, so far as I know, no steps have been taken to order an analysis. If the city gets into legal difficulties the Council gets the opinion of its solicitor and, if that is not sufficient, thinks nothing of spending a tidy sum for the opinion of some Toronto lawyer with a gilt-edged reputation. Here is a matter which affects the life and death of large numbers of our citizens, and the Council take no steps, so far as can be learned, to either have the water analyzed or improve it. You can take my word for it that no time should be lost in looking after this matter."

• • •

It would be well for the Council to look into the above matter without delay. There is no doubt at all that the city water is dirty and offensive. Whether it would, under present conditions, breed typhoid or malarial fever can only be surmised, but there is no chance for an argument over the widely-expressed opinion that the City Council should, without delay, take steps to provide a betterment of existing conditions, and spare no reasonable expense which may be necessary. The possibility of an epidemic of typhoid fever is not to be trifled with.

Itching Piles or Pin Worms

AILMENTS WHICH ARE OFTEN CONFUSED—BOTH CURED BY DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Itching in the rectum is the common symptom of these two distressing and often torturing diseases. Dr. Chase's Ointment brings almost instant relief and if used regularly effects a cure. It is the standard ointment throughout the continent, and has been endorsed by more first-class people than any preparation you can mention. Your physician will tell you that there is no more effective treatment available for itching skin diseases. 60 cents a box at all dealers. 12

A BIT OF SCOTLAND IN CANADA.

At a point 145 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, is reached one of the most magnificent districts in the Highlands of Ontario, known as the Lake of Bays District. The region comprises a series of connected lakes, over which large steamers are navigated. What greatly adds to the Lake of Bays' value as a health giving and sportsman's resort is the unmatched purity of the air one breathes upon its heights. The visitor forgets his ills under its reviving influence in less than a week, and sees life's problems in a smoother light, enjoying the good things in this life which Nature and Providence have prepared for him. Its bracing morning breeze, which rivals the celebrated atmosphere of Pike's Peak, Col., imparts new lung power and fresh vitality.

JOCKEYS IN TRAINING

KEEPING THE WEIGHT DOWN IS NOT A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Fattening Foods Are Avoided, and Judicious Exercise Is Courted—As a Rule, Riders Last a Dozen Years and as a Class Are Not Saving.

"It is a popular belief," a well known trainer said to a reporter recently, "that a jockey has to resort to all sorts of injurious practices in order to keep his weight within required limits. The idea, however, is a far stretched one. Of course a jockey has to go through certain exercises each day and has to be very much more careful regarding what he puts in his stomach than most people in order to keep his weight down and from acquiring a superfluity of flesh, but he certainly does not starve himself, as is generally supposed. If he did so he would break down entirely in a very short time. A jockey must also be in the best possible physical trim and have his wits about him before a race, and to attain that he must be careful how he uses his constitution.

"There are two very important things a jockey has to consider in studying his dietary. He must see to it that his food is of the best quality and that it contains practically no flesh forming properties. All such fattening foods as, for instance, soups, beef, pork, potatoes, puddings and pastries a jockey must deny himself. Coffee, tea or other drinks are only taken very moderately, as all liquids help more or less in putting on flesh.

"Although a jockey has to eschew such foods, there are many other varieties which he gets just as much pleasure in eating and which at the same time are equally as good and strengthening for his constitution. A few days before a race a jockey who has a mount in it will not stint himself—provided he has no fear of overtipping his proper weight for the race—in anything which he thinks will not interfere with his digestive apparatus.

"Some jockeys, of course, take on and lose flesh quicker than others. I have known one or two who were particularly anxious to ride in certain races, but for which they were perhaps as much as eight or nine pounds too heavy, who reduced that weight in the same number of days. To accomplish that, however, they have to resort practically to a 'starving diet,' leaving as little as the strain on the vitality will permit without breaking down and trying to reduce their overweight by certain sweating exercises. It is needless to say that no jockey could stand too frequent repetitions of such severe measures to subtract from his weight without danger of permanently injuring his health and even sacrificing his life; still, many willingly resort to such 'get light weight quick' methods where they see good opportunities of making a name or a pile of money for themselves.

"It must be remembered that by nature jockeys as a whole are not of substantial physique or imposing in height, although they are as tough as whipcord. If they were, therefore, to indulge every day in the heavy bill of fare that the average business or working man partakes of it is not probable that they would increase much in weight or height. You often see jockeys in the big hotels and restaurants at the various racing sections after a race tucking in big and expensive dinners with a gusto and relish that would give a chronic dyspeptic an appetite for hard tack.

"Walking, running, cycling, punching the bag and hurdle jumping are favorite exercises among jockeys to keep their weight down. On going out for a walk or run they wrap themselves in the thickest of woolen sweaters and other heavy clothing, no matter how high the temperature may be, and the exercise is kept up for a distance perhaps of eight or nine miles, or, as we say, until you are 'drowned in sweat.' Turkish baths are also frequently indulged in by many, and they must wear excessively warm clothing after, and also when going for a gallop, no matter if the weather be boiling hot.

"I should say that ten or twelve years is the average of a jockey's active turf life. The length of his career, however, depends a great deal on his riding ability and luck.

"Jockeys are not of a saving class, and with but few exceptions I know of none who has ever managed to put enough money away to keep him in even half decent comfort after retiring from the turf. The majority, however, succeed in scraping up a bank roll of sufficient dimensions to start in some business. Like retired pugilists, they have a fondness for the liquor business, and I know a few one time jockeys who are prospering in that trade in different parts of the country. Others, again, become 'bookies,' poolroom keepers and enter into such businesses as enable them to gratify their inveterate love for gambling. I know of only one ex-jockey who is an exception to this rule. He retired some years ago with $50,000 to his credit, and he immediately went into the real estate business in New Jersey. Today he is doing well. He was fortunate enough, however, to receive a good common school education in his early boyhood days—and that's a thing jockeys very rarely get. Outside of their knowledge of horsemanship the great majority are as ignorant as red Indians."

Money Talks.

"I suppose Dumley likes to argue as much as ever and is continually worsted as usual."

"No; he's more successful now since he got wealthy."

"What has his wealth to do with it?"

"Well, when he sees he's losing he just offers to 'bet a hundred,' and that settles it."—Philadelphia Press.

PENITENTIARY BIRDS—WHY THEY CONTINUE TO REMAIN SO.

Out of Prison With Joy After Long Terms, They Soon Find Themselves Back Again—A Burglar's Story That May Have More Than a Germ of Truth in It—Society's Doing and Undoing.

The guards of the Kingston Penitentiary say that the emotion betrayed by men who have just completed long terms is betrayed by throwing up their hats for pure joy and shouting on reaching the big outside gate.

In some cases the very men, who, after a cell experience of fifteen or twenty years, and the most profound protestations of good resolutions, are under arrest in a few months again for similar offences, writes G.C. Porter in Toronto Sunday World. Not infrequently they are returned to this prison. Then they tell the guards they are glad to get back; that they were unable to earn a living honestly on the outside; that they had been so long immured that they could not compete with the world of which they had not been a part for so long. Here is a typical experience, as related by a man who had spent 11 years of a 15-years' sentence for shooting a man while robbing his house:

Story of a Burglar's Life.

"I was 37 years of age when I was released; could read, write and had a common school education. I had a practical knowledge of boiler-making. This I had acquired in the prison. A young man when I entered prison, I had resolved to starve before I would live a criminal life when released. My early training had not been good, and I had become a burglar before I was 18. I first robbed drunken men around saloons and then began bolder work. It was in trying to escape from a residence one night I shot a man. He would have killed me had I not fired. I believe this is the rule with burglars—not to shoot to avoid arrest, but to use a revolver when their victim is about to shoot. Anyway, that was my way. I left the prison in the winter with $15, a ticket to Windsor. I was well clothed, but did not have an overcoat. My first thought was to go to the far west, change my name and apply for work. I stopped in Kingston at a cheap boarding house. While looking around I secured work for two weeks in the local machine shops. They knew I was a discharged convict, but they needed men. Just as soon as the rush was over, I was discharged. Concluding to cross into the States, where I was less likely to meet police officers who knew me, I sold my ticket for $4. I went to Syracuse, N. Y. I had $14 when I got there. The first week I got a position paying $2.75 a day in the car shops, operating a nut and bolt machine. I got along well. My boss asked me where I had worked before employing me. I had a story all prepared.

Had a Story Ready.

"From an American in prison I had learned much of St. Louis shops; also that it was not customary to ask for letters of character in the States. I had wanted to get further away from the scene of my imprisonment, but I got this job and I took it. So I told this boss of the shops that I was from St. Louis; that my name was King and that I had come from the Steel & Iron Co.'s works. I remained there seven weeks, and had saved two-thirds of my salary. My work was good, and I had been advanced to a position of more responsibility. One day the foreman of my room sent me to the shop boss and I was told to get my 'time.' I asked why, and was merely told, 'Yo know why, you d—— convict.'

"I never made any reply. I did not know for several days how they had secured the information. Then I learned that at my boarding house there was a workman who had an acquaintance at Kingston. He visited the boarding house and saw and recognized me. I did not see him. They told the police and they reported to the shop where I was employed. I then learned that the Syracuse detectives had been watching me for a week.

Started for the West.

"I had $35, so I bought a ticket to Chicago. An officer in plain clothes was waiting for me. They had watched where I bought my ticket and sent a telegram ahead. The officer said: 'The captain wants to see you.' That's a genteel way they have of saying 'Come along; I want to lock you up until the police captain of the district can talk to you and look you over.' I was taken to a police station and charged with vagrancy. I was in jail seven days before spoken to. Then the captain sent for me. He had written to the penitentiary for my full record.

"He said: 'You can't live in my district, and you can't live in Chicago; better go back to Canada.' I told him I wanted to work and proposed to work and be honest. He shrugged his shoulders and replied: 'Well, you can't work here. I will give you 24 hours to leave.'

"That meant if I was found in Chicago after one day I would be arrested again. I had $7 left. I went down on the lake front and made a deal by which I could work my way to Duluth, but the next morning when I went aboard of the freighter the mate called me a 'd—— Canadian convict,' and told me to clear out. I begun to feel mighty nasty by that time. I was rapidly losing any resolution I ever had to let my old criminal friends alone. I had not yet met any of them, but I knew where to find them if I wished. But was not quite ready. I made one final effort and—failed.

Sank to Old Level.

"I concluded to go to Milwaukee. The fare was $5. I bought a scalper's ticket for $4, thinking I would save a dollar. I got on the train. The conductor took one look at the ticket, punched it and said: 'You can't ride on my train with no ticket like that; it's an excursion ticket and is just a year old.' I examined it. Sure enough the ticket read good in March of the previous year. I had only glanced at the month and not the year. I made as strong a bluff as I could, but the train was stopped at a platform away out in the suburbs and I was ejected. I made up my mind the company owed me a trip to Milwaukee, and I was going to get it. I got on a freight train that night and crawled in a box car. When I woke up I found the car sidetracked away down in Southern Illinois. I had gone in the wrong direction. It made little difference, however. It would have been the same at Milwaukee, I suppose. I worked several days for a farmer.

"Then I started to walk to a village a few miles away. I met two other tramps, and we went into town together. A policeman came up and began to question us. Suddenly my two companions ran and the officer grabbed me. He shot at the other men, but they escaped. Then I found that a house had been broken into the day before in an adjoining town by two tramps. I was kept in jail for three months, awaiting trial. I was released without any ceremony. I was ready for any job then. Just what happened, I will not say, but it was enough to start me for Canada, hot foot. I landed at Windsor, and found a couple of pals. They were just the men I wanted to meet. That fall we traveled all over the country, doing little jobs, and in the winter I was caught with some stolen property. A friend had made a touch and given the stuff to me. My record alone was enough without the stuff I had, and I got eight years. I am better off right here in prison. If it is not this it is something worse. I don't believe I would escape to-night if I could."

The officers say that nine-tenths of the men prove by their careers here the truth of the adage, "Once a criminal, always a criminal."

NOW ON TO CANADA.

An American Paper Incites an Invasion of Our Northern Country.

The real call to the wilds hails from the Canadian lakes and rivers. The Muskoka region is absorbing a lot of Yankees these days. Up there, on lakes that are easily reached, but which are little known, New York State folks are settling in old cabins and in tents and under brush lean-tos, and in dugouts and scows, and from the rocks and on the bank are getting good fishing. Off, back of Toronto, is the Muskoka region, as full of lakes and streams as a yellow lily is full of punkies. Go to any of those lakes or streams and you cannot fail to get fish. Catch them yourself and then clean them and take them to a fire on the top of a rock and broil them while they are still flopping, and you will think you never before tasted a real fish.

But wherever you go don't take too much duffle and tackle with you. It won't be hard to find somebody who has been on the sort of a trip you may be planning, and such a man can tell you in five minutes more about what to take and what to leave at home than all the hunting and fishing magazines would tell you if you should read them till you were too old to see a bobber pulled under the surface of a mill-pond by a two-inch pumpkinseed. When you know where you are going, find some one who has been in such a region and from him get a list of the traps you will need. A man who has fished once knows what he had that he did not want and what he did not have that he needed, and if he is the right kind he will tell you all about it—Buffalo Express

Bounty of a Barren Shore.

In bygone times it was the practice of the Newfoundland coast folk to appropriate everything they secured, but this lawlessness had to be sternly repressed. Now the unwritten rule is that they get "half their hand," or 50 per cent. as salvage. In portable and valuable articles, such as silverware, there is still a strong temptation to keep the whole, but the punishment is severe. Champagne, liquors, cabin stores, and the like have also a trick of disappearing, and in the poorest fisher's cottage you will come upon rare china, dainty napery, silverware of price, and wines to tempt an epicure. The salvors are reckless and unthinking, and as they gather in hundreds every man pre-empts what he can. In the rush there is much destroyed. When the "Herder" was lost in 1882, they burnt whalebone worth $15,000 a ton to have leather costing twenty cents a pound. In the "Emmeline" wreck of 1900 they trampled crates of costly glassware to get at four cases of French prayer-books valued at twenty-five cents apiece. On one occasion two salvors had got ashore a piano, and were adopting the Solomon-like expedient of sawing it in half, when a shrewder chum bought it from them for a bottle of whiskey looted from the captain's cabin. When the "Grasbrook" went ashore in 1890 every man on the shore provided himself with a German concertina, of which instruments of torture she had a large consignment, and to secure them packages of much more costly freight were thrown overboard. When the "Orion," from Baltimore for Copenhagen, struck the back of Cape Race and went to pieces, she had a large consignment of bicycles on board, and they were auctioned in St. John's and disposed of all over the island. The "Abbeymore's" lading in 1898 included some cases of splendid English rifles for Canada, and these are now to be seen adorning every fisher's cottage along the shore.—P. T. McGrath.

The Mighty Britisher.

"The Barr colonists were going west in detachments while I was en route, and, naturally, furnished material for stories, which were going the rounds—with fanciful embellishments, no doubt.

"'Guard,' said one of these newcomers as he stepped on the platform at a north shore station, 'old the train for ten minutes; I'm going across the way to get something to heat.' And, taking the conductor's as sent for granted, he proceeded—and got left."

Art Encouragement.

English Plum Pudding.

Britain exports 200 tons of plum pudding a year.

A German Superstition.

It is believed in Germany that the oxen are endowed with speech on Christmas eve at midnight. But to hear them it is necessary to put fern leaves in one's boots.

Citron.

The citron from which candied peel is chiefly made is in shape like a lemon, but three times as large.

One Horse's Appetite.

Six pounds weight of bullets, three pieces of steel, a nail, a hairpin, some glass and small stones were found in the stomach of a horse which had died suddenly at Ferntree Gully, Victoria.

London's Money Center.

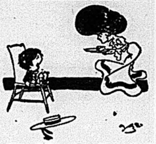
The money center of London is the City, which is the heart of England's capital. In its square mile of territory are great stores of wealth. Its population during hours of business is more than a million. During the night the number of its residents is insignificant.

Dealer Was Wise.

Brown—Why do you want me to pay in advance? Are you afraid I won't bring the horse back?

Liveryman—No, no; not at all. But, you see, the horse might come back without you.

His Lips Are Sealed.



"Now, Willie, what will you say if I give you a piece of cake?"

"Please, ma'am, I don't know what to say, 'cause ma told me I wasn't to ask for a second helping."

Where Friendship Ceases.

"That girl with Johnson there—a friend of his, I presume?"

"Nope: used to be, though."

"So? Had a falling out?"

"Not exactly. He married her."—Baltimore American.

BURGLARIOUS STARS.

Planets and Suns May Pick Up Minor Solar Bodies.

Jupiter is much the biggest member of the family of stars which revolve around our sun; consequently the power of his attraction is greater than that possessed, for instance, by the earth. Jupiter's exploits as a burglar have caused very considerable annoyance and inconvenience to astronomers in the days before his powers were fully recognized.

In 1770 there appeared a fine comet, which was found to have an elliptical orbit round the sun of so comparatively small a size that Mr. Lexell, its discoverer, calculated it would return in five and a half years, but in 1775 telescopes were vainly focused on the spot where it was expected to reappear, and again in 1781 it disappointed all observers. Mr. Lexell plunged into fresh calculations and after much research found that Jupiter was the culprit. The unfortunate comet had been rash enough to plunge into the sphere of the giant planet's attraction, with the result that it had been completely diverted from its former orbit and flung off into quite a different one of a twenty year period. It has never been seen again by any one on this earth and probably never will be.

Jupiter was also responsible for the delay which occurred in the return of that splendid visitant known as Halley's comet. Halley found that he was not the first discoverer of this big comet. It had appeared at least twice previously, once seventy-five years before and again seventy-six years before that. The astronomer concluded that there would be a further delay in its third return and predicted that its next appearance would be 518 days later. He did not live to see it. But in 1758, the year he had prophesied for its reappearance, astronomers were waiting for it.

HUMORS OF MUSICAL LIFE.

Amusing Pranks the Erratic Types Played With a Composer.

Miss Maude Valerie White, author of numerous popular songs, has told a number of anecdotes, many of them at her own expense. I suppose, she once wrote in the Cornhill Magazine, all composers have had a laugh over the extraordinary mistakes which sometimes occur in the first proofs of their songs. I remember years ago writing a very sentimental song, in which the line occurred—

> I've never once regretted the vow I made that day.

My feelings may be imagined when I found they had printed—

> I've never once regretted the row I made that day.

Miss White also told about an amusing mistake which occurred in the programme of one of her concerts: A well known singer and very good friend of mine was down to sing my two songs, "To Marry" and "Crabbed Age and Youth." But the newspaper announced something very different. Not content with drawing up a programme of my concert, it drew up a programme of my future, for I read as follows:

Mr. Blank
To Marry Maude Valeria White
Crabbed Age and Youth.

As I am a good many years older than the friend in question, the coincidence struck me as particularly funny, and I cut the programme out of the newspaper and sent it to him. By the first mail next morning I received an identical cutting from him, with an inquiry whether he was to take this as a formal announcement of our engagement and expressing a mild surprise that he had not been consulted in the matter.

He Knew Sir Walter Scott.

In a booklet called "Sir Walter Scott and His Country" published in Edinburgh the author quotes this reminiscence from an old man he met who had known the romancer:

"Aye," he minded Sir Walter fine. "I seen him driving out in his carriage and pair, wi' Tom Purdie on the box seat. He had on a shepherd's tartan plaid and a glengarry cap wi' twa black ribbons hanging doon the back. I mind his dowg tae—Maida, he ca'd it—and an awfu' work he made ower the beast. But he was as pleasant a man as you could speak to, though he wasna thought muckle of as a pleader when they made him shirra o' Selkirk. Is it his buiks you're speiring on? Ou, aye, ye'll find a' his buiks ben the hoose."

Carved on the Tomb of Ingalls.

This extract from Ingalls' essay on "Grass" is carved on the glacial bowlder which marks his last resting place: "When the fitful fever is ended and the foolish wrangle of the market and forum is closed grass heals over the scars which our descent into the bosom of the earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead."

Cash Before Fame.

"Why don't you try to write your name on the scroll of fame?"

"My friend," said Senator Sorghum very earnestly, "I have never yet seen anybody tearing leaflets out of the scroll of fame and getting them cashed at the bank."

An Amateur.

Young Bride—I'm so nervous. I'm actually shaking.

Matrimonial Veteran—You'll get over it, dear. Why, when I first began getting married I thought I should never stop having altar fright.

When a man meets his wife in a railroad station he never knows whether to kiss her before all the people or to pretend that he is just a friend of the family.

VERY REMARKABLE CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who was cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all druggists

Street Fighting.

On Saturday evening a lively fight occurred on Mill street, in which a number were engaged. The police were called to the scene, but upon the approach of the officer the scrappers were warned and made a hasty departure. The names of some of the participants were secured and they will be summoned before the P. M. to answer for their conduct.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

"WORK AND PLAY."

The biggest summer resort within easy reach of civilization is what is commonly termed Muskoka, a district in the "Highlands of Ontario," about 100 miles north of Toronto, including an immense tract of country bordering on the Georgian Bay. The district is composed of lakes and rivers innumerable and is situate 1000 feet above sea level. Good fishing and hunting are assured. Ample hotel accommodation at all points on the lakes is provided to suit the purses of everyone. Excellent transportation service.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP

John Street.

The pastor of the above church, Rev. Mr. Drumm, was the preacher of the day yesterday. At the evening service he delivered a striking discourse from the text found in Luke, xiv., 15:

"And when one of them that sat at meat with Him, heard these things he said unto Him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the Kingdom of God."

Our Saviour, the preacher said, hated cant, as any sincere man must hate it. What is cant? Religious talk, true in the abstract, but not the sincere belief of those who uttered it. Every minister met with it, because some people thought that, when talking with a clergyman, they must introduce the subject of religion. The parable of the great supper, which Jesus related after the Pharisee had uttered the words of the text, was evidently an allegory; the supper was the Kingdom of God, and the people who were hidden to it the people of this world. The Master of the Feast sends out His servants to bid people to come; the invitation was wide and urgent. They began to make excuses; then the command was compel them to come in. There was no excuse for anyone to stay out. The invitation to the great supper was declined by preoccupied people, by people whose minds were set on business, by people whose social cares kept them away. Oh! that men should allow things like these to keep them from the Kingdom of God! It was a sad, sad thing, but it was so everywhere; it was so even in Belleville. He implored his hearers to ask themselves, was this the case with them? If they could stand aside from this world and see how men were refusing the invitation of God and allowing their souls to starve would it not seem strange to them? Jesus was calling. Would they allow earthly things to prevent their accepting his call. He prayed that God would help them to choose the good part, which could never be taken from them.

During the offertory a solo was rendered by Mrs. James Grant.

Christ Church.

Rev. Prof. Howard, who has for some time occupied the pulpit of this church, yesterday preached his farewell discourses. During the morning services he referred to his stay in this city, which had been a most pleasant one to both himself and wife. They had met many friends and had been kindly remembered and treated by the congregation. In the evening the Rev. gentleman's text was from Isaiah, 55th chapter and 1st verse:

"Ho! every one, that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat, yea, come buy wine and milk without money and without price."

Baptist.

Rev. A. H. Scott, missionary-elect to India, yesterday occupied the pulpit of this church. In the evening his text was from Isaiah, 6th chapter and 8th verse, his discourse being in reference to the work which he will shortly be engaged in:

"Also I heard the voice of the Lord saying, whom shall I send and who will go for us? Then said I, here am I, send me!"

Bridge Street.

"The Backward Look" was the subject discussed by the Rev. Dr. Crothers last evening. His text was taken from St. Luke, 17th chapter and 32nd verse:

"Remember Lot's wife."

The Rev. gentleman drew from this narrative and passage a number of important lessons, the chief of which was that, having once made a profession of religion, we should neither turn to the right or left or even look back, but pursue the straight course which leads to eternal happiness.

During the service Miss Mabel Vermilyea sang, very sweetly and effectively, a solo entitled "If I Forget Thee, O Jerusalem."

St. Thomas.

The Rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish, officiated and preached at both services yesterday, and his discourses were able efforts. In the evening the Rev. gentleman's text was a portion of the 26th verse of the 4th chapter of 2nd Kings:

"Is it well with thee?"

There were very good congregations, considering the inclement weather, the choir being exceptionally well represented. The singing was excellent.

Tabernacle.

Rev. Dr. Couch, of Brooklyn, N.Y., yesterday morning preached in this church and his discourse was an able effort. His text was from St. Matthew, 15th chapter and 7th verse:

"Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you."

In the evening the pastor occupied the pulpit.

St. Andrew's.

The Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean, preached at both services and his discourses were earnest and profitable. In the evening his text was from Zechariah, 4th chapter and the latter portion of the 6th verse:

"Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

CLAIMED BY DEATH.

RESIDENTS OF THIS CITY WHO HAVE JOINED THE GREAT MAJORITY.

Miss Annie Thompson.

Miss Annie Thompson, daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Thompson, died on Saturday evening at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Robert Boyle, Dunbar street. The deceased had been ill for some time. She was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, and had been a resident of this city since she was 15 years of age. Miss Thompson was an estimable lady, respected by all who knew her. She was a member of Christ Church. A large circle of relatives survive.

The funeral took place this afternoon. The bearers were six nephews of the deceased.

Henry J. Luscombe.

In the death of Mr. Henry J. Luscombe, which occurred this morning, a popular young married man passed away. Deceased was the third son of Mr. John Luscombe, and was born in England 25 years ago, but had resided in this city the greater portion of his life. His illness had been of considerable duration and his demise was anticipated. Deceased was married to Miss Grace Cunningham, of this city, nearly two years ago. To the young bereaved wife and other members of the family will be extended the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends. Mr. Luscombe was a member of Oxford Lodge, Sons of England, and also belonged to Unity Lodge, Woodmen of the World, of Hamilton. Representatives of these societies will attend the funeral on Wednesday afternoon. Deceased was a member of the Baptist Church.

Miss Jennie French.

Miss Jennie French died yesterday at the Dominion Hotel. Deceased was a sister of the late Mrs. James Mackie and was 68 years of age. She had been residing in Belleville, for a number of years and was well and favorably known. Deceased had been ill for some time. Miss French was a member of St. Michael's church.

CATARRHAL POISONS AND THEIR REMEDY.

The poisonous secretions from catarrh are dangerous because they affect the stomach and bowels, giving rise to an unhealthy condition of these organs. Catarrh is the source of much ill-health and was considered practically incurable until it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the medical profession that by the use of Catarrhozone any case of nasal or throat trouble can be permanently and quickly cured. Catarrhozone by its unusual merit has enlisted the support and endorsement of the most prominent medical authorities, who freely state that any one giving it a trial is sure to receive permanent benefit. WANTS TO PROTECT THE BLACK SQUIRRELS.

PLEA FOR THEIR PROTECTION FROM POT HUNTERS.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—The black squirrel is protected by our game laws. The red squirrel is not. Some years ago the black squirrel was very plentiful throughout all our woodlands. Their plumy tails waving as they bounded from tree to tree was not only a delight to the sportsman but the wayfarer as well. But the senseless custom which then prevailed of annual shooting matches caused them to be slaughtered in thousands and many varieties of the feathered tribe as well. Sides were chosen and upon a certain day some fifty or sixty men would shoot almost every wild thing in sight. At the evening the winners, that is, those who made the highest score in the indiscriminate slaughter, were entertained at a supper provided by the losing side, at some country tavern, generally winding up with a night's debauch. And they called this sport.

By this indiscriminate slaughter, together with the destruction by the red squirrel, their most deadly enemy, the black squirrel has become almost extinct.

The same process of extermination was once carried on in the western counties of this province. But a few years ago the sportsmen there conceived the idea of killing off the red squirrel and protecting the black ones. For two or three years they hunted the red squirrel and let the black ones go. Ammunition was furnished to the farmer's boys wherewith to shoot every red squirrel about the farms. The result is they now have plenty of black squirrels which afford them good sport during the open season. I would strongly urge our sportsmen in country, town and village to adopt this plan. The black squirrel will multiply in peace for a year or two on our Oak Hills, in the woods along the Trent River above Chisholm's Rapids and elsewhere. Our sportsmen would be well repaid for their trouble and forbearance. Shoot off the red squirrels but save the black ones.

Will Remain in Winnipeg.

Miss Edna H. Browne, who has been spending the summer in Winnipeg, has decided to remain there, and has opened a musical studio. This news will be received by many of our citizens with regret, as Miss Browne has a host of friends, who admired her for her musical abilities and her intrinsic worth. She will be much missed at all our concerts and at the City Mission, to which philanthropic work she devoted herself. The Intelligencer wishes her much success, and which she will no doubt have.

DEATHS

FRENCH.—At the Dominion Hotel, Belleville, on Sunday, August 30, 1903, Jennie French, sister of the late Mrs. James Mackie, aged 68 years.

FINED FOR SECOND OFFENCE.

POLICE MAGISTRATE FLINT HANDS DOWN WRITTEN JUDGMENT IN THE CASE OF KING VS. R. T. BROWN.

King vs. R. T. Brown.—An unsigned information drawn out by myself, charging the defendant with the committing of an offence, and alleging a prior conviction, prepared at the instance of the Crown Attorney, and under a written memo signed by the Inspector, was produced at the trial. The summons issued charged but one offence, and did not refer to any prior conviction. Defendant appeared and confessed guilt, and was convicted. Immediately after conviction, at request of prosecutor, I asked the defendant if he had been convicted of a prior offence under the License Act. The defendant refused to reply, upon advice of counsel, who contended that the prior offence could not be enquired into, as no such prior offence was mentioned in the summons, and defendant having confessed the charge for which he was summoned, the Magistrate could proceed no further, but must proceed to pass sentence. There are many legal points involved. I hold the confession waived all irregularities (if any existed) in the information and summons. The summons was based on the information, and the defendant had by the summons notice of the information. Holding the information good, I look at it and see that it charges both a subsequent offence and a prior conviction. It becomes then an imperative duty for me to proceed to enquire as to the conviction of the prior offence charged in the information. The evidence given proved the prior offence, and I must, therefore, give judgment against the defendant for the penalty of $40 and $5.29 costs to be paid forthwith, in default fifteen days in jail. The information being held to be good obliges me to pursue the Statutory course laid down in the License Act. It is a question of considerable importance whether the summons should contain the assertion of a prior conviction in every case where it is sought to convict defendant of a second offence. I lean strongly to the view that the summons should inform the defendant that he is charged with the committing of a second offence. If it does not contain the assertion then the defendant might reasonably believe that all that it was sought to do was to convict him of a first offence. After pleading guilty to the first offence he is asked whether he was convicted of a prior offence, and if he answers truly that he was so convicted, he is immediately mulcted in a penalty of double the amount he expected to be awarded against him. I shall hereafter follow the practice of inserting both charges in the summons, as I think such a course is fair and reasonable.

The great advantage to local investors in placing their business with the Metropolitan consists in the fact that they have contracts with this strong financial institution itself, instead of with a local broker; thereby eliminating entirely the risk which may be involved in the question of a local broker's financial strength. Each commitment exists upon its individual merit, and cannot be affected by the short comings of the holders of other contracts nor even of the local manager. The local manager is the servant of this exchange, and the exchange is bound by his acts; consequently, the investor having the evidence that he has paid to a given point, his commitment is good to that point no matter what happens; and this is a valuable consideration—more so than most people imagine.

McINTOSH BROS.

Q. HOPE JONES

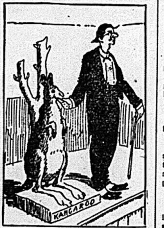
He Returns to the Show Business and Delivers a Lecture

[Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.]

"CITIZENS of Bull's Ferry—I had the honor of informing you by yellow posters pasted on the walls of your historic and picturesque town that I would open my show in this hall this evening, and I am before you. Three years ago, while traveling about the country with an unparalleled aggregation of dead and living wonders, which included an Egyptian mummy made in Chicago and a what-is-it that ate raw beef before the audience and played poker with me behind the scenes, I became possessed of the idea that I could do more for humanity by selling my show and going into the windmill business. Time has shown me my mistake. Not that every succeeding windmill erected in this country does not tend to make humanity happier and more content, thereby adding to the general goodness, but the business has so many opportunities of skinning Uncle Reuben that conscience compelled me to abandon it. This show business is on the square. It goes when the wind blows, and it goes without any wind at all. You pay for what you get, and you get what you pay for. There is nothing to conceal and no extra charges to dispute about when the show closes. I can take your money at the door and then look you in the eye from the platform without feeling that I have robbed you.

"Do not get the idea that this is a side show or a branch menagerie. It is a combination show and lecture. While I strive to attract the eye by exhibiting some curiosity, I also strive to attract the ear by delivering a lecture and seeking to arouse you to new aims and ambitions. In my modest way, at 10 cents admission, I am doing more for the moral standard of America than any session of congress. No matter whether you are steeped in depravity or have yet to steal your first harvest apple, my combination cannot fail to turn your thoughts to higher channels.

"I now call your attention to this plaster of paris bust of Christopher Columbus on the one hand and to the stuffed kangaroo on the other. You may infer that both are dead, but the ambitions that swayed them during life live on and are lanterns to guide your footsteps. I shall not insult this large and intelligent audience by supposing that there is one single person within sound of my voice who has got Christopher Columbus and Julius Caesar Burrell mixed up together. Christopher stands by himself, like a brick house in a ten acre lot. You can't mistake him for any one else, and you can't go around the corner and lose him. Like me, Columbus wasn't satisfied to hang around the village post office and chew tobacco and talk of crops. He had a feeling within him that he had to soar and overcome. Obstacle after obstacle bobbed up to discourage him, and men laughed his ambition to scorn, but he hung on by his teeth, and his time came at last. He went into the show business, the same as me, though on a bigger scale.



"WE NOW COME TO THE KANGAROO."

"Pause and ask yourself what effect his discovery of America has had on the world. What would the world be today without her? I know that my next stopping place is Taylorsville, but when Columbus set out he didn't know whether he would bring up in hades or Halifax. In his own mind he was convinced that there was another continent to the west. He had the courage, the fortitude and the ambition to sail in search, and we who are here tonight are profiting by it. No man can detract from his greatness, and no man can wish for a nobler example to guide him. I may incidentally observe that the nose and one ear of this bust have been broken, and the left eye is gouged out, but do not let those trifles have any effect in sizing him up as a man. He was not noted for his beauty, and his ways were of the slipshod order, but we must look at him mentally instead of physically. I wish to be looked at that way myself. There are no more Americas left for me to discover, but I have the same aims and ambitions that surged back and forth in this great man's soul as he sat on his doorstep and thought of the future.

"We now come to the kangaroo. Having been dead for the last fifteen years and being stuffed with hay, he has lost much of his natural artfulness, but he is here to point a moral and can do it dead as well as living. When nature had created all other animals she decided to bring forth something that could jump twenty-seven feet without touching the grass. The kangaroo, which up to that time was a bobtailed animal walking about on four legs, offered himself to be experimented upon. He had aims and ambitions and aspirations. He wanted to rise above the hog and the hyena. Nature took him in hand and made him over as you see him tonight.

"He is all hind legs and tail, and his beauty is nothing to brag of, but where on the face of this earth is a thing on legs that can outjump him? He holds the record, and it will never be taken from him. You don't grow hind legs like his, and you must be content with jumping a four rail fence, but the moral lesson should not be lost upon you. He that would rise will rise. He that would soar will eventually push his way to the front and head the procession. As I stepped off the cars this afternoon I observed seventeen men whittling away at shingles in front of a grocery, while a jackass stood looking on and nibbling at a roadside thistle. There appeared to be no swelling ambitions, no high aspirations, no sighing for fame. But the world turns, and men turn with it, and who shall say to what heights that crowd of eighteen may not attain when my combination reaches Bull's Ferry again?

"Citizens all, I am glad to have met you. I am glad to have taken in $2.30 at the door. I am glad to have incited you to greatness, and I trust that in making your way out of the hall you won't break the backs off any chairs or smash any kerosene lamps."

M. QUAD.

Unofficial Criticism.

Mr. Hogg—What d'ye do with these pictures when you've finished 'em?

The Artist—Oh, I try to sell them.

Mr. Hogg—Yes, but what if you can't sell 'em?

The Artist—Then I hang them up in my room.

Mr. Hogg—Gad, you must have a deuce of a roomful!

Where She Drew the Line.

He had been reading to his wife—she had auburn hair and a ready tongue—a lot of hot weather advice. As he repeated the various items that were said to be conducive to personal comfort with the thermometer at 90 she nodded her head approvingly.

"That's all right," she said.

Then he looked back at the paper and added, "Good temper is also a great factor in hot weather happiness."

"What idiotic nonsense!" she cried and would hear no more.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Extravagance.

"Madam, can't you gimme a nickel?" asked the tramp, with his eye on the brindle pup.

"Why, sir," exclaimed the lady of the house, "I gave you a dime yesterday. What did you do with it?"

"I bought a auttimubble, leddy," replied the migratory genius. "But now I needs a nickel t' pay de fambly of a gentleman wot I run over in my keerless ways."—Baltimore News.

Real Reform.

"My husband doesn't gamble now as he used to."

"Reformed, has he?"

"Yes, he doesn't go to the race track at all any more. His worst dissipation now is swimming, I think. At any rate, he says he only goes to the pool rooms."—Philadelphia Record.

Knew of One.

"What is the favorite drink of tropical countries?" asked the caller in search of information.

"Can it be possible," said the answers to correspondents editor rather crossly—for it was a hot day—"that you have never heard of the negus of Abyssinia?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Dangerous Item.

"I see that choice Bengal tigers have been marked down to $1,000 each."

"For goodness' sake, don't let my wife read that paragraph! Here's my knife; cut it out. If those tigers are on the bargain counter she'd want at least two."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Progressive Victory.

Mrs. Pince-nez—I can congratulate myself that all my daughters have married well.

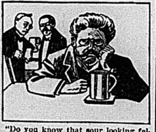
Mrs. Lorgnette—H'm! All my daughters have married well twice.—Life.

Wary.

Mrs. Farmer—Here, poor man, are some cold sausages.

Weary Willie—Scuse me, mum, but don't your sign say "Beware of the Dog?"—Judge.

Life a Serious Business.



"Do you know that sour looking fellow sitting there alone?"

"Oh, yes. But don't try any of your tricks on him. He's the editor of a comic paper and can't take a joke."

THE ATHLETE'S HEART.

In the Rowing Man It Is Strong and Well-Developed.

A prominent member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania Medical school has made a study of the heart action of athletes. He has examined a large number of men in athletics, especially rowing men, and he has come to the conclusion that no man in perfect health who has been properly trained is injured by rowing, but that, on the contrary, his heart is so strengthened that, with a moderate amount of exercise after he has finished his rowing career, there is no reason, so far as the heart and lungs are concerned, that he should not live to a very old age.

"The heart," said he, "is both a very delicate and a very strong organ—that is, if it is well developed it will stand an enormous amount of strain without any permanent injury, but if it is not well developed it is very easily weakened. Violent exercise, like rowing, places a great deal of strain on the heart because when the body is being exerted it requires so much more pressure to force the blood through the body. Like any other muscle that is worked, the heart under the added labor becomes larger, and most athletes have extra large hearts, just as they also have larger muscles throughout the body.

"If the strain is put upon the heart suddenly it dilates—it becomes larger, but not more muscular—and that is the danger in athletics. If a man exercises gradually then his heart also increases in size gradually because the muscles become larger, and this is a perfectly normal condition. It simply means that the athlete has a stronger heart than the average and can cope with the extra strain that is put upon it. A man needs a larger heart to row a race, and if gradual exercise has so provided him with one then he can safely undergo the most severe tests.

"It is the same way with the lungs, and they must be developed gradually until they can undertake the extra work. A man with his heart and lungs well developed is in no danger, no matter how hard the race. He may completely keel over at the end of the race, but it will likely be from sheer exhaustion, and his heart is so strong that the effect is not at all injurious. He will be as good as ever in a few moments."

APHORISMS.

The heart gets weary, but never gets old.—Shenstone.

The only way to have a friend is to be one.—Emerson.

What we learn with pleasure we never forget.—Mercier.

Opposition inflames the enthusiast, never converts him.—Schiller.

True merit is like a river—the deeper it is the less noise it makes.—Hazlitt.

The eye of the master will do more work than both of his hands.—Franklin.

Experience takes dreadfully high school wages, but he teaches like no other.—Carlyle.

Kindness is the only charm permitted to the aged; it is the coquetry of white hairs.—Feuillet.

If we had no failings ourselves we should not take so much pleasure in finding out those of others.

A Brilliant Retort.

After dinner speaking is an art, and, like many other arts, its excellence has much to do with the mood of the artist. Some of the best of our after dinner speakers sometimes fail, but it is not often that failure results in the enrichment of the world's store of epigram, as it did in the case of Lord Erskine many years ago.

When Lord Erskine was made a member of that highly honorable body, the Fishmongers' Company of London, he made an after dinner speech on the occasion of his first appearance among them as a member. Upon his return he said to a friend:

"I spoke ill today and stammered and hesitated in the opening."

"You certainly floundered," was the reply, "but I thought you did so in compliment to the fishmongers."

The Prattle of a Bright Child.

At times it cannot be denied the questions of children become irksome, but who would wish a child to ask no questions? Julius Sturm tells in one of his pretty fairy tales how a grandfather, driven into impatience by the constant questionings of his grandchild, exclaimed, "I wish your tongue were out of joint!" But when unexpectedly his wish was fulfilled and the child became dumb how he joyfully exchanged one of the two years which an angel had prophesied he was yet to live for the privilege of hearing the little one's prattle again!

Speechmaking.

"What do you think of my speech?" said the aspiring young orator.

"Not bad," said the cold man of experience.

"I devoted a great deal of thought to it."

"Yes, that's a mistake young men are apt to make. You put thoughts into your speeches instead of telling the audience stories."

Even at That.

Gus—The idea of his saying I had more money than brains! Quite ridiculous!

Jack—That so?

Gus—Of course. Why, I haven't got a cent.

Jack—Well?

Comes High.

Knicker—Experience is the best teacher.

Bocker—Well, aren't we always raising her salary?—Harper's Bazar.
